 him back: he doeth as him listeth, and dymgeth so passe what he wylt. Herte wylt he in to my bosome, & many other thynges mo-doeth he, as he maye by his power. This is y^e cause, that I stynke at his presence, so that when I confide him, I am a frayed of him.
 For in so much as he is God, he maketh my herte soft: and seynge that he is Allmyghtie, he purtcheth me in feare. Thus can not I get out of darthenesse, the cloudes hath so couered my face.

The XXXI. Chapter.

Consideringe then that there is notyme byd from the Allmyghtie, how happeneth it, that they which knowe him, wylt not regard his dayes: For some me there be, that remoue other men longe martires: that robbe them of their carell, and kepe the same for their owne: that dryte awaye the as-se of the sacherlesse: that take y^e wylt dooers ope for a pledge: that they wylt the poore out of the waye, & opresse the symple of the wylt.

de together. Beholde, the wilde asses in y^e deserte go by tymes (as their maner is) to spoyle: see the verye madnesse ministred foode for their children. They reape the come felde that is not their owne: and gather the grapes out of his vineyard, whom they haue oppressed by violence. They are the cause of so many men are naked and bare, haue no clothes to cover them and kepe them from colde: So that when they shewers in the mountaynes haue rained vpon them, & they be all wet, they haue none other succure, but to kepe them amonge the rocks.

They spoyle the suckinge fatherlesse children, and puerbe poore in prison: Juste moche that they let them go naked withoute clothinge, and yet they y^eingie beare the sheeces.
The poore are made to labour in their oyle mylles, yet they are made in their reyne presses, and yet they are made to chaffe. The whele criceth into the LORDE with sighinge, the soules of the layne make their complaine: But God destroyeth them not for all this, where as they nor w^ording are rebellious and disobedient enemies: which likee not his light and waye, nor turne a gayne in to his path. Tymely layne make their complaine: to murmur the simple and poore, & in the night they go a helinge.

The eye of the vngodly is like the abou-terer, that wa yrech for the darknesse, and fa-yeth thus in himself: To sh, there shal no mase me, so he belisteth his face. In the night reason they reach the houses, and hyc them selues in the daye tymes, but wil not come y^e light. For as soone as the daye breaketh, the shadowe of death commeth vpo^r them, and they go in horrible darknesse. The vngodly is very iuynt: O y^e his poais also vpo^r earth were swyfter then y^e runninge water, which suffere not y^e shipma to beholde the saye & pleasur wyntard. O y^e they, for the wickednesse which they haue done) were drawen to the hell, sooner the snowe melteth at the hea-te. O y^e all of compassion vpon the were forgore: y^e their daynties were woinco: that they were cleue put out of remembrance, & utterly haue downe like an vnfruce full tre. For they name me the barren, & make them y^e they can not beare, & vnto wyddomes they do no good. They place the downe the mighte w^o their power, & when they them selues are gotten vpo^r, they are neuer withoute feare, as longe as they liue. And though they might be safe, yet they wil not recorne it, for their eyes loke vpon their owne wayes. They are exalted for a litle, but shortly are they gone, brought to extreme powerte, & take one of the wayes: y^e utterly pluce of as the eares of come, & it is not so: Who wil the r^ouipous me as al-taye y^e my wordes are nothinge wound:

The XXX. Chapter.

Then answered Baldad the Saban, & sayde: Power & stature is with him aboue, that maketh peace (seeinge) in his byncisse, whose men of warre are inma-table, and whose lighte ariseth ouer all. But how maye a man compared vnto God, be as-fied? O, how can he be done, that is boue of a woman? Beholde, the Moone shyneth in thinge in comparison to him, & the starras are vncleue in his sighte. How much more the m^o, that is but corrupcion: and the forme of man, which is but a worme:

The XXXI. Chapter.

Ob answered, and sayde: O how had I pest thou the weate: what comfoun-dement thou vnto him that hath no strength: Where is y^e counsell y^e thou shaldest geue him, which hath no wisdomer: What thou so shewe thine excellent rightnesse?
Before whom hast thou spoken these wor-des? Who made the beach to come out of y^e mouth: The graunces & warchies are of layne, & the vnder y^e woulde of their copanions: yet & all they which dwell beneath in the hell are not hyd fro him, & the very destruction self can not be kepe out of his sighte. He strecheth out y^e north ouer the emperie, & laugh-y^e earth vpo^r nothinge. He byndeth y^e wate in his cloudes, that they fall not downe roge-ther. He holdeth back his stole, that it can be seue, and spredeth his cloudes before it.

He hath copaseth the waters w^o certayne boundes, & w^oll the daye & night come to an ende. The very pilers of heauē tremble & que-re at his reioyse. He sillech the see with his power, & the storm his wyrdome hath be-fith y^e woulde. With his spere hath he per-shed the heauē, & with his hande hath he wounded the rebellions ferpet. This is now a shorte summe of his doynge. But who is able sufficiently to rehearse his wertes: Who can perceaue and vnderstande y^e con-dite of his power? The XXXII. Chap.

Ob also proceeded and wote forch in his communication, saydege: As an-ly as God lyueth (which hath taken awaye my power from me) & the Allmightie, that hath wred my mynde: My lippe shal talke of no vanite, and my yonges shal speake no disceate, whyle my beeth is in me, and as longe as the wynde (that God hath giuen me) is in my nostrils.

God saye to the, that I shalde graunte you cause to be righte. As for me, wchill myne one come wil I neuer goe from myne innocency. My righteous dealinge wil I kepe fast, and not forsake it: for my conscience reprochech me in all my conuersation. Therfore my secretes shalbe sounde as the wigobly, and he of which parce agaynst me, as the vnrighteous. What hope hath yf of proce, though he haue greater good, and though God geue him riches after his hartes desire: Doch God heare him the sooner, wher he crieth vnto him in his necessite. Hath he such pleasure to dye in the Allmightie, that he darre allwaye call upon God: I wil teach you in the name of God, and the thinge that I haue of yf Allmightie, wil I not kepe from you. Beholde yf some in yo' owne conceite, as though yknow all thinges. What fore then do ye go aboute w' such wayne wordes, sayyng: This is the portion that the wicked shall haue of God, and the heritage that T raiuizes shal receave of yf Allmightie. If he see many children, they shal perish w' the greatte, and his pouer shall haue scarcenesse of bred. Lote wher he leauech behinde him, they shal dye and be buried, and no man shall haue pic of his wisdomes. Though he haue as much me-ches as the dust of the earth, it raiuizet as rebys as the claye, he maye well prepare it: but the goodly shal put it upon him, and the inu-de shal deale out the money. His house shal more as the rock, and as a rocke that the wachman maketh. When the rich man dyeth, he carich nothinge with him: he is gome yf twinclyng of a fane eye. Destruction taketh holde vpon him as a water floude, and yf they stelech him awaye in the night season. A wehment wynde caricheth him hence, and departeth: a storme plucketh him out of his place. T raiuizeth in upon him, and spareth him not, he maye not escape from the power thereof. Than cla ppeteth the hodes at him, and iust of him, wher they loke vpon his place. The XXXVIII. Chapter.

Here are places where silver is molten, and where golde is cryed: where yron is dyged out of the ground, and stones resolved to metall. The darcties shal once come to an ende, he can seeke out the grounde of all thinges: the stones, the darctie, and the heuible shadowe. w' the ryuer of water pateth he a soude of the straunge people, yf knoweth no good neighbourhede: such as are led, vnnaturally and boyfous. he bringeth soote out of the earth, and yf which is vnder, conuertyth he w'ich fyre. There is founde a place, whose stones are cleue Saphiro, and where yf clottes of the earth are golde. There is a waye also that the bydes knowe not, that no w'chman eye hath sene: wherin yf prou-de and he mynede walke not, and where no yon commeth. There yf p'cech he his bonde vpon the stony rockes, and eneth howe the moun-taines. A yuers floude out of the rockes, and loke what is pleasaunt, his eyes shal see. Out of diappes bringeth he great floude together, and the thinge that is hyd bringeth he light. How commeth a man then by wynde me: Where is the place that men fynde vnderstondeing: Verely no man can tell how woichy a thinge she is, neher is she folde in the lode of sheyl yu'ng. The depe sayeth: she is not in me. The see sayeth: she is not w'ich me. She can not be gotten for the most fy-ne golde, neher maye the pryce of her be boughte with any money. No weiches of golde of Ophir, no precious Onix stones, no Saphiro maye be compared vnto her. No, neher golde ner Chailall, neher fawce o-boure ner gold in plate. There is noching so woichy, as soe colde, as onco to be named vnto her: for partea' wysdome geeth farre beyonde the all. The Topas that cometh out of Ind, maye in no wyse be likened vnto her: yf no maner of a p'parell how pleasaunt and saye so cur it be.

From wher then commeth wysdome: and where is the place of vnderstondeing: She is hyd from the eyes of all men, yee z f'it the sonde of the aye. Destruction z deatch fales we haue her de'cell of her w' oure eares. But God styeth his waie, and knoweth hir place. For he beholdeth the endes of the world, and lo-keth vpon all that is vnder the heau'. When he weyed the wyndes, and measured yf waters: when he set the raine in orde, and gaueth the mightie floude a laue: Then yd he se her, the declared he her, prepared her and f'ne-med her. And vnto man he saye: Beholde, to fere the LORDE, is wysdome: and to forsake euill, is vnderstondeing. The XXXIX. Chap.

Job proceeded and wote forth in his communication, sayyng: O yf I were as I was in the monethes by-past, and in the dayes wher God p'f'ured me: when his light shyned vpon my heade: wher I wente a ster the same light z shyne eu' chorow the darctnesse. As it stode w' me, wher I was welthy z had ynough: wher God p'f'ered my house: when the allmightie was w'ich me: when my bouthe folde folde aboue me: wher my wayes raine ouer w' bucer, and when the stony rockes gaue me ryuers of oyle: when I wente thowme the aire vnto the gate: whē they steeme a chayne in y^e streete: whē they yonge me (as soone as they saue me) by the silues, & when the aged arose, & stode vpon me: whē the princes left of the it call vnto, & laied their habes on their mouth: whē the ingduricte pte still their voyce, and whē their tonges cleued to the roofe of their mouthes. When all they y^e herde me, called me happye: & when all they y^e sawe me, wys-shed me good. For I deliuered y^e poore: whē he cried, & the fatherlesse y^e waied helpe. & y^e shuite haue bene lost, gaue me a good we-de, & y^e widewes here praised me. And whē?

I put vpon me righte iustices which couerid me as a garment, & requite was my crowne. I reared an eye vnto the skye, & a foot vnto the lame. I was a father vnto the poore, & w^e I knewe their cause. I founde it out diligēt-ly, I hate the chastise of y^e wronghteous, & placeth the people out of their chere.

Gen. 14.6

C Herfor, I thoughte verely, y^e I shulde haue dyed in my nest: & y^e my dayes shulde haue bene as many as the sonnes of the see. For my rote was spred ouer by the waters syde, & the etowls lay vpon my coms. My house encrea-sed more & more, and my bones was cuer the stronger in my hande. Vnto me men gaue care, me they reuered, & w^e I sene they taried for my counsell. If I had spoken, they wolde haue in none other waye, my wordes were so well taken amonge the. They waied for me, as the earth doth for the raine: & gaue vpon me, as the troude doth to receaue the latter shower. When I laughed, they knewe well it was not carnell: & this testimony of my cōsolation pleased the nothinge at all.
When I agreed vnto their waye, I was the chefe, & far as a kynge amonge his seruantes: as one that cōfesseth such as be in honye.

The XXX. Chapter.

A Now they that are my inferiours & yonger then I, haue me in derision: yea, and they, these fathers I wolde haue thoughte foule to haue sit w^e the dogges of my carle. The power & strengthe of the it haue more do me no good, & as for their age, it is past awaye without any profit. For w^e y^e misery & hunger, they wente a-boute in the wilderness like w^e chere & beg-gers, placyng vpon herbes from amonge the bushes, & the Iumpers rote was their mea-te. And when they were daymen feare, men cried after them, as it had bene a fier a chere.
The hear dwelling was beside foule bodes, yea in the caues & vnto the earth. Vpon the daye heeth w^e they aboue cryenge, & in the beeme halles they gathered them together. They were the childe: en of folkes & w^el-w^ech, which are deuo awaye fro the woulde. I am I their songe, & am become their re-ge stocke. they abhorre me, they be farr from me: & stayne my face w^e speale. For I had bath opined his quarry, he hath by me put a byde in my mouth. Vpon my righte de they rose together agaynst me, they haturie my see, made a waye to destruye me, & my path haue they cleue marred. I was so easy for them so do me harme, that they deed no man to helpe the. They sell vpon me, as it had bene y^e breakeinge in of waters, & me in by hapnes to destruye me. Secular is turned agaynst me. Myne honours is taken awaye more swifly then wynde, & my prosperities departeth like leaue as it was a cloude. Therefore is my mynde perished of heuynesse, & y^e dayes of trouble haue all helde vpon me. My bones are perished renew in y^e night season, & my strength is rest. With all their power haue they changed my garment, & gyved me therewith w^e a coate. I am w^e as it were daye, am become like a fishes & dust. Whē I went to the, then doest not heare me: & though I stonde before the, yet thou regardest me not.

Thou art become myne enemye, & w^e y^e wille haue theu takest parte agaynst me. I am past thou dost set me vpon as hye, as were aboute y^e winde, but now hast thou gaue me a very sore fall. Sure I am, y^e chanceldeliuer me vnto death: it here as a lodgynge is prepared for all me lynnge. It was me to do violence vnto the, y^e are destruyed ready: but w^e here here is done, there is the helpe. Where I wepe in y^e tyme of trouble: had not my soule cōpassion vpon y^e pore: yet neuer thelesse I w^e as I loled singe. It had happened vnto me: and w^e I waited for lighte, there came darke-nesse. My be w^eld steech w^e in me & take no rest, for y^e yes of my trouble are come vpon me. My z lo my came I in, yea & without any surre: I stode vpon y^e cōgregacion, & cō-ued with the. Sure now, I am a cōspayred ding gons, & a fellowe of the stricken. My pne vpon me is turned to blacke, & my bene as bite w^e heate: my harpe is turned to my pipe to weepinge. The XXXI. Chap.

I Made a covenante w^e mine eyes, I wolde not loke vpon a dāsell. I greate a porciō shal I haue of fro aboute: what enheritance shal I take on hie: & as for the w^e goyle, & he himselfe of cōpany of w^e chere

Jure be it from God, that he shulde med with wickedness: and sacre be it from the Almighty, yf he shulde meble wch unrightnous dealinge: but he rewardeth the wor-des of man, and causeth every man to fynde according to his wayes. For sure it is, that God doth not mete no man wrongeously, and the iudgme of the Almighty is not unright-wous. Who ruleth the earth in his steade: Whom hath he set to gouerne the whole worlde: To whom hath he geuen his herre, for to drewe his spere and breth vnto him: All steh shal come together vnto naught, & all that shal turne agayne vnto earth. If thou wouldest vnderstande, heare what I saye vnto herren: to the voyce of my wordes.

Manye ha be made whole, that loueth no right. If thou were a very innocent man, shouldest thou then be punished: for he is e-uer the same, yf knowest he the rebellious kynges, & sayest thou prince: Ungodly men are ye whiche ha no respect vnto the persones of y kingly, & regardeth not the rich more the poore, for they be all the worke of his handes.

In the trowling off an eye: shall they be saye: and ac my naught, when the people & gentylmen rage, then shall they perishe, ad be taken awaye with our handes. And why theye loke vpon the wayes of man, and he synn all his goynges. There is no darcknes without shadowe, yf can hyde the wicked dees from him. For no man shall be suffred to be into iudgme with God.

Many one, yee innumerable both he pun-nysh and stretch other in their steades. For he knoweth their euill & darcke wayes, therfore shall they be destroyed. They that were in synne of Seero, deale like vngodly me.
 Therefore turned they backe reuolously and without fully sye hi. & wolde not receaue his wayes. In so much that they haue caused y wyce of the poore to come vnto him, & now he heareth the complaine of such as are in the crosse. If he deliuer & graunte payde, who will luge or condemne: But yf he hyde awaye his countenance, who wil turne it above agayne, whether it be to the people or to my man: For the wickednesse & synne of y people, he maketh an ypostrate to reigne ouer the. In so much then as I haue begonne to talke of God, I wil not hynde the. If I hauer gone amysse, enforme me: yf I haue done wronge, I will leaue of. Wilt thou not ge-me a reasonable answer: Art thou astrayed of enching, is myge thou beguist first to speake, & not I: For do the men of vnderst-anding misdoine that haue herde me, mighte saye: What cast thou speake: As for Job he hath neither spoken to the purpose nor wryly. O father, let Job be well cryed, because he hath turned himselfe to y wicked: yee do ue his synnes he hath blasphemed, which offence he hath done euen before vs, in yf he stryuech agaynst God with his wordes.

The XXXV. Chapter.

Liu speaks mouer, and sayde: Think: Is thou it right that thou sayest: I am righteous before God: Singe thou sayest so, how dost thou knowe it: What thinge hast thou more of celler, the I yf am a synner: Therfore will I geue an swere vnto the & thy frende: loke vnto the heauen, & beholde the celsidie yf cloues, how they are hyer then thou. If thou synnest, what dost thou vnto him: If thine offence be many, how gettest thou his fauoure: If thou be righteous, what geuest thou him: Or, what receauest he of thy handes: Of such an vngodly performe as thou, & of yf some of man that is righteous as thou presentest to be: there is a greate crye & complaine made by the that are oppressed with violence, yee every man complayneth vpon the cruell arme of tyrantes. For loch one ringer sayeth: Where is God that made me: ad yf synneth vpon vs, that we mighte prayse him in the night: Which geueth vs more vnderstandge then he doth the beastes of the earth, and teacheth vs more then the foules off heaue.

If any such complaine, no man geuech an-swere, and yf because of the wickednesse off proude tyrantes. But yf a man call vpon God, both not he heare him: Dost not the Almightye accept his crye: Whiche thou pratest thou, shulde not he pardon the, yff thou open thy selfe before him, and pacethyrueth in him: Then wyl he no violence in his wrath neither hath he pleasure in curions and depe iniquitions. Therfore hath Job opened his mouth but in vayne, ad foolishly hath he made so many wordes.

The XXXVI. Chapter.

Liu pro- raded forth in his talkinge, & sayde: holde the still a litle, and I shall heare the, what I haue yet to speake on Gods behalfe. I wil open vnto yf yet more of myne vnderstandinge, and proue my maker righteous. True are my wordes, & no lye: and the knowlege wherewithall I argue agaynst the, is perfecte. Beholde, God casteth not awaye yf mighte, for he hath suffis mighte in power and wisdom.

As for the ungodly, he preferreth the not but helpech the poore to their right. He turn-eth not his eyes awaye from the righteous he seareth vp bynges in their Trone, and cō-furneth them, so that they allwaye syc cher in. But yf they be layed in pisen and chye-nea, or bounde with the bondes of pōnerie: then sheweth he them their woikes ad bebes and the synnes wherw they haue used cruell violence.

B He with pynshinge and nurturinge off them, rownerch them in the cares, warneth them to leaue of from their wickednesse, and to amende. If they now will take hede and be obedient, they shall weere out their bayes in prosperite, and their yeares in pleasure ad ioye. But yff they will not obeye, they shall go thow to the iudgement, & perish, or euer they be awarre. As for such as be sayned, dyssem-blere and ypocrytes, they heape vp wrath for them selues: for they call not vpon him, though they be his prisoners. Thus their soule perisheth in foolishnesse, and their lyfe w^e y^e condēned. The poore deliuereth he out of his straitnesse, and comforteth such as be in needesse and trouble. Wen so shall he ke-pe the yf thou wilt be content: from chee doe comesse pyrate that is beneth: & yf thou wilt holde the quye, he shal fyl thy table with plenteousnesse.

C Trewerchlesse, thou hast condēned the iudgment of the ungodly, yee euen such a iud-gment and sentence shalte thou suffice. For then shal not thy cause be filled with crac-tie, nor pacified with many gyses. Each God ordened eigh, that the glorious life off the all such mightie men shulde not be pur downe: Prolonge not thou the tyme, all chere come a night for the, to sic other people in thy steade. But beware that thou enrie noe afyde to wickednesse and synne, which bycher to chee haif choyn more then mekenesse. Be-holde, God is of a mightie hye power: Where is there such a gyde and lawe gener as he:
Who wil reproue him of his waye: who wil saye vnto him: thou hast done wronge?

D Considre how grate and excellent his woikes be, whom all men loue and praye: yee wornde at him, and yet they se him but a farr off. Beholde, so grate is God, that he passeth our knowledge, necher are we able to come to yf experiee of his yeares. Secur-neth yf water to smal droppe, he dryueth his cloudes together for to raine, so that they poure downe and droppe vpon men. He can spede our the cloudes: a couerynge off his tabernacle: and canse his light to shyne vp them, and to couer the botome of the sea.

By these thinges gouerneth he his people and geteth che abundance of meate. In yf turnyng of a hande he hydeth the light, & at his commaundement it cometh agayne.
The rasinge up thero of the weste heo his frentes and to che east.

The XXXVII. Chapter.

A This my heart is afformed, and maued out of his place. Heare then the sōnde of his voyce, and the noyse yf goeth out of his mouth. He gouerneth eu-ry thinge vnder the heauen, and his light reacheh vnto the ende of the worlde. A raringe voyce solometh him: for his glorious magesty gaueh such a thōnde clappe, that (though a man heare it) yet maye he nee proceane it afterwarde. He getteth an health sōnde, when God sendeth out his voyce: grate thinges doth he, which we cannot pichende. When he commaundeth the sa-we, it falleth vpon the earth: As some as he getteth the raine a charge, Immediately the showers haue their strength and fall downe he sendeth feare vpon euery man, that they might knowe their owne woikes. The impious crepe in to their demnes, & take their rest.
Out of the south cometh the tempest, and colde out of the north.

As the bieth of God, the frost cometh: the waters are fished abrode. The cloudes be their laboure in geuyng moystnesse, the dūdes poure downe their raine. He distri-buteh also on euery syde, according as it plea-seth him to deale out his woikes, that they maye do, what so euer he commaundeth: there is the whole worlde: whether it be in pynshyng lōde, or to do good vnto them, that seke him.

Hearken vnto this (o Job) stande still, and considre the wonderous woikes of God. In thou of conuil with God, when he doth the se thinges: When he canseh the light to come forth of his cloudes: A reuolue of his cell, when he spredeth out the cloudes: And thou the perfect knowledge of his wornde and how thy clothes are warme, when the deie still the so the south wynde: hast thou helped him to spred out the beaumen, which to loke vps, as it were cast of cleare metall.
Teach vnto what we shal saye vnto hi, for we re vnto mee because of thy demnes. Shal I be de him, what I saye? Shal I be a man speak-or shal I be kepte in backe? For euery man nor the light, yf he kepeth cleare in the deie, which he denfeth when he maketh the wynde to blowe. Golde is brought out of the with, but the playse and honoure off Gods face commeth frō God himself. It is net we can fynde out the allmightie: for in power, grace, and righteousness he is byer then can be expressed. Seinge then that every body feareth him, why shulde not all wyse men also fynde in feare of hi? Chap. XXXVIII.

When spake the LORDE unto Job out of the storme, and sayde: what is he, that by speech his mynde with foolys wyddes. Wyde up thy loyres like a mā, for I will question the, se thou geue me a byecre answer. Where wast thou, when I layed y foundations of the earth? Tell plainly yff thou hast vnderstantinge. Who hath measured in, knowest thou? Or, who hath spied y hys vpon it? Where vpon shōde the pilers of it? Or, who layed y corner stone: where wast thou when the morninge starres gaue me plesse, and when all the angels of God reioyced?

Who shutt the six wether doores, when ic hūte forth as a childe cur off his mothers wombe? When I made the cloudes to be a coveringe for it, and I stobed it with y darce?

When I gave it my commaundement, makinge doores & barres for it, sayenge: Shutte vnto thū thou come, but ne further, and here shall thou laye downe thy proude and hie wanes. Hast thou geue the morninge his charge, as thou wast borne; and the wether day springe his place, y it mighte be the holder of the corners of the earth, & y the vngodly mighte be shakē out? Their robes & mantles hast thou turned like claye, & se the they agayne as the chaunginge of a garment.

For thou hast spoiled the vngodly off their myght, & broked the arme of the proude. Camest thou out into the girdle of the este, Or, hast thou walked in y lowe corners of y deepe? Has the gates of death bene opened vnto the, or hast thou sene the done of everlastinge treasure?

Hast thou also perceaued, how biode y earth is? Trow yf thou hast knowlege of all, se the we me where light dwelleth, and where darcknes is: yf thou mayest bringe vs vnto ether quaterre, yf thou canst tell the waye vnto ether howle. Ancest thou when thou wast borne: how elde thou shuldest be?

Wannest thou euer in the treasures off the heuē, or hast thou sene y secreete places of the balmech? I haue prepared agaynst the tyme of trouble, agaynst the tyme of baill we me. Why what waye is the light parter, & the beate dralle our vpon earth? Who wyddeth the abundance of waters in taryers, or who maketh a waye for the stormy wether. y it watereth y moystureth y drye when y moueth to make the grasse growe in place: where he wyddeth, & in the wil-dernes where no mā remaineth: Who is the father of rayne? Or, who hath begot the droppes of dew? Out of whose bowels came the yse: who hath gernded the coldnes of y ayre: y the waters are as hard as stones, & he congeleth aboute the deepe. Hast thou broughte y wy starres together? Or, art thou able to breake the Circle of heauē: Canst thou bringe forth the inonyngie starre, or the eveninge starre at conuenient tyme, & conyere the heme agayne? Nōmōst thou the cause off heauē, yf thou mayest see vpon the ordinaunce thereof vpon earth? Moicuer, cast thou lyste vpon thy voyce to y' cloudes, yf they maye poure downe a great rayne vpon the: Canst thou chōse also yf they maye go their waye, & be obedient vnto the, sayenge: here are we? Who geuech surety for doime, or stedfast vnderstōdinge: who nomberech the cloudes in wysdome: who stilleth yf vberment waters of the heauē: who turneth the clothes to dust, & the to be clothes agayne? Canst thou the playe se the Lyon, or sebest thou his whelpes lye gein their dines, & lurkinge in their couches?

Who piueyberth meate for the rauen, whē his yonge ones crye into God, and se aboute for want of meate? Chap. XXXIX.

When thou seest the tyme when the wilde goates hitge forth their yōge amonge the stony rockes? Or, layest thou maye when the hinde vnto the fenne? Kest nest thou the moneth as a fetter the yugende, yf thou knowest the tyme of their bearinge? Or, when they lye downe, when they cast the ir yonge ones, & when they are deliuered off their exanyle, & pwayne? How their yōge comes come vpon & wate greates thowm good stin ge: who lettech the wilde asse go frō, or who lowseth the bēdes of the Mele. Ouro whē I haue geuen the wyldernes to be their house, & the vntilled londe to be their dwellinge place. That the ymaye geue no force for the multitude off peple in the cire, neither to regarde the criunge of the byuer: but to seke their pasture aboute the moctauens, & to folowme vpon the grene grasse. Will the vnicome be so tame as to do yf seuyre, or to abyde still by thy cribe: Canst thou bynde yf yed aboute him in thy fyoores, to make him plowme a fetter thein yf valles? Canst thou truste hi because he is strōger, or cōmice thy labo vnto hi? Canst thou belene hi, yf he will be ge heme yf come, or to carry any thinge vnto yf barne. The le strich whose fetters are for yf ter the yf nyngus of the sparow haute: whē he hath layed his egges vpon the greunde, he lucteth them in the dust, and feiggeth them: so that they mighte be treden with fyte, or broken with yf some wilde beast.

So haue he vnto his yong ones, as though they were not his, and laboureth in wayne without any feare. And that because God hath taken wisdom from him, & hath not geuen him vnderstandinge. When his tyme is, he flyeth vp an hie, and catcheth neether for hoise nor man.

C Hast thou seen the hoise is strength, or learned him to bowe downe his neck with feare: that he leaueh him selfe be dryuen south like a grethopper, where as the floute neyenge that he maketh, is scarfull the bicaketh yf grounde with the haffes of his feete deareful y in his strength, and rammeth to meeze the barnest men. He layeth asyde all feare, his stomack is not abated, neether starteth he a back for any sworde. Though the quyners rattle vpon him though the speare and shilde glistrey: yet tuffeth he in fearely, and beateh vpon the grounde. He feareth not the noise of the trompettes, but as soone as he heareth the sharmes bloure, tuffeth (sayeth he) for he smelleth the battell afarre of, yf noyse, the captaynes and the sheutinge.

D Commeth it thowow thy wyf deme, that the go shalbe flyeth towards the south? Doe the Zele mounte vp & make his nest on hye: as they commaundment: He abydeh in the stony roces, ad vpon the hie toppes of sharde mountaynes, where no man can come, from thence maye he beholde his playe, and loke farre aboute with his eyes. His yong ge ones are fed with bloude, and where any dech body lyeth, there is he immediatly.

Mat. 14. 6

Moreover, God spake vnto Job and sayde: Canst thou stryueh with the Almightye, be at rest: Shulde not he which dispureth with God, geue him an answer: Job answered the LORDE, sayyng: Beholde, I am to wyle a personne, to answer the, therefore will I laye my hande vpon my mouth. Once or twayse haue I spoken, but I will saye no more.

The XL. Chapter.

Lhen spake the LORDE vnto Job out of the storme, and sayde: gyude vp yf loynes like a man, and tell me what he ge that I will aze the. Wilt thou disanulle my iudgmente? Or, wilt thou condemne me, yf thou thy self mayest be made righteous? To thine arme then like the arme of God: I takeh thy voyce such a soude as his doeth: Then arme thy self with thine owne power, vp depe the in thy toly or aye, poure out the indignacion of thy wrath: that thou cast downe all yf proude, take well, that thou makest all such as be stubborne, to obeye: reade all the vngely vnder thy feete, cast the de-me into the mye, and couer their faces with darcknesse: Then will I confesse also, that thine owne righe hande hath saued the.

Beholde, the cruell bestie, whom I make w' the which catcheth haye as an ox: is how stronge he is in his loynes, and what power he hath in the nauell of his body. He spredeth out his tale lyke a Cedre tre, all his yong ones are stiff. His shyemes are like pipes of brass, his rygge bones are like staves of yf. Just when God made him, he ordered the wylderesse for him, yf the mountaynes had be geue him graffe, where all the besties of the silde sake their pastyme. He lyeth amonge the redes in che Mosses, the stames yf you him with their shadone, and the wysones of the brode couer him rounde aboute. Lo, with any labour mighte he drynde out the myke floude, and suppe off Jordan with any trauaile. Who darre laye hande vpon him penly, and vndertake to catch him: Or, who darre put an hoke thowow his nose, ad laye a snare for him?

Darrest thou bidde me out Zenith with an angle, or bynde his tongue with a snare? Canst thou put a ynge in the nose of him, a bore his chafte thowow such a name: Will he make many saye wotes with the thy best thou? or flatter the: Will he make a commaunt with the: Or, art thou able for to compell him to do the contraryall femyer: Wilt thou take thy pastyme w' him as with a bynde, or geue him vnto thy maydens, that thy company ones maye hew him in pecces, with parced amonge the marchaunt men: Canst thou fyll the nett w' his shyemes, or yf shynyer with his head: Darrest thou laye hande vpon him: It is better for the to confesse what harme mighte happed the chere thowow and not to touch him. For when thou thy best to haue holde vpon him, he shall be hie the: Euer y man also that seeth him, shall ge backe. And why: there darre none bidde be, as to take him vp.

The XLI. Chapter.

Who is able to stand before me: Who hath geuen me any thynge? For hande, that I am bounde in ward to him agayne: All chynge vnder heuven are myne. I feare him not, whiche he thicaten or speake saye. Who shal seeth him and stripeth him out of his clothes, or who taketh him by the byre of his byrdle: Who openeth the doore of his face: for he hath no ribbethe rounde aboute. His body is covered with scales as it were with shylden, as in, kepe, and well close together. He is loyded to another, that no aye can co me in. See one hangeth so upon another, and faste together, that they can not be sunde red. his meynge is like a glisteringe frye, and his mouth like the morninge thync. Out of his mouth goe touches and frye bianches, out off his nostrils there goeth a smoke, like as out off an hote seeringe poete. His breth maketh the coales burne, the flame goeth out of his mouth. In his necke remaineth strength, and be fore his face sorrowe is turned to glad nesse. The members of his body are formed so stryde one to another, and cleve so faste to gether, that he can not be moved.

his hart is as harde as a stone, as fast as the stony yet that the hammer man smyteth upon. When he goeth: the mightiest off all are strayed, and the waxes heuy. If he drawe out the sinewes, there maye neither heare nor burst place abyde him. He stretch it with a strawe as by yis, and as much by a roccer stone as by metall. He starteth wch anye for: him that bendeth the borne, & a full syng stone. He careth as much for his helle as for his chyn. He counteth the ham mer not better then a strawe, he laugheth him as none that hath the speare. He treateth the golde in the nyre like yf sharpe pot terye. He counteth the depe co seeth and boy lides part, and stretcheth the se together like an ornament. The waye is lighte after him, the depe is his walkinge place. Upon earth is there no power like unto his, for he is so made, that he feareth not. If a man will co nter all bye thinges, this same is a kynge o ver all the chyldren off payde.

The XLII. Chapter.

Job answered the LORDE, and sayde: I knowe that thou hast po wer of all thinges, and that there is nothinge hidde unto the. For who can kepe his counsell so secreete. but it shall be knowen. Therefore haue I spoken unwysely, I feare these thinges are so bye, and passe my understandinge. O hearken thou unto me also, and let me speake: answer me unto the thinges that I will saye the. I haue heare dili gently: and now I see I was wronge with my eyes. Wherefore I gene myne orne self yf blame, and take repentance in the dust and ashen.

Now whil the LORDE had spoken these wordes unto Job, he sayde unto Eliphaz yf Themanite: I am displeasid with the & thy two frenodes, for ye haue not spoken the thin ge yf is righte before me, like as my seruants Job hath done. Therefore take wyse men seven names, and go to my seruante Job offre up also for youre sinnes a burnt offringe ge, and let my seruante Job praye for you that you maye be accepted, and not deale with the LORDE after youre foolishnesse: in that ye haue spoken yf thing which is righte, like as my uant Job hath done.

So Eliphaz the Themanite, Bildad Subite and Sophar the Naamathite, they re their waye, and did a cordyng as the LORDE commaunded them. The LORDE also ac cepted the personie off Job, and the LORDE turned him unto Job, whil he payed for his frenodes: see the LORDE gaue Job twofold more than he had afore.

And the came there unto him all his brethren, all his sisters with all them that had bene off his acquaintance afore, and acco mpanyed with him in his house, wondringe at him, and consouringe him ouer all the trouble that the LORDE had broughte upon him. And the LORDE gaue him a shepe and a Jewell of gelycke. And the LORDE made Job richer than he was before: for he had sijn. viij. shepe. vi. camelis, a thousand oxen, and a thousand had children also: viij. sonnes and iij. daughter ters. He firste called Dauid, the second power: the thirde, All plenceousnes. In the londe were noue soundes so fayre, as the daughter of Job, & their father gaue them an heritaunce amonge their brethren.

After this lyued Job xl. yeres, so that he sawe his children, & his chylders children on to the fourth gene ration. And so he dyed, beinge olde & of a full age.

The ende of the boke of Job.

The Psalter

The first psalme.

Blessed is yf man yf goeth in the counsell of yf vngodly yf a vytych noe in the waye of hymers, & stretcheth noe in yf re of the countessull. But lyeth in the lawe of yf LORDE, & erer himself in his lawe both daye and night.
 Gods ma is like a tre plantid yf de, yf bringeth forth his fructe in the season.

The Psalter.

This leues shall not fall off, and loke what ser he doeth, it shall prosper. As for the wly, it is not so with them: but they are like dust, which if wynde scattereth a wa-on of the grounde. Therfore the vn god all not be able to stande in the iudgme, the synners in the congregacion off iusthous. For the LORDE alexcech y of the righteous, but the waye of the dy shall perse.

The I. A psalme of Dauid.

Why do the heathē grudge? why do the people ymagyn wayne thinges?
 The kynge of the earth stode vp, he rulers are come together, agaynst LORDE ad agaynst his anoynted. Let heake their bondes a sunder, and cast awaye their yacke from vs. Turnethesse, that o welleth in heauen, shall laugh the o come: yee eam the LORDE him self shall haue them in derision. Then shall he spea-knto them in his wrath, and vexe them in foie displeasare. Yet haue I set my kynupon my holy hill of Sion. As for me ill preach the lawe, wherof the LORDE shayde vnto me: Thou art my sonne, is daye haue I begotten the. Desyre off as, and I shall geue the the heben for the enheritance. See the vnto most partes of woilde for thy possession. Thou shalt rub them with a rodd of yron, and breake the pecces like an earthen vessell. We wyse no er foue, o ye kynge) be warned, ye that are dges of the earth. Serue the LORDE ish feare, and reioyse before him with reunce. A vyse the sonne, lest the LORDE be an-ie, and so ye perish from the righte waye, or his wrath shall be kindled shouly: blessed l they that put their trust in him.

The II. A psalme of Dauid.

Why are they so many? (o LORDE) y trouble me? a grante multitude are they, that rise agaynst me. Yet one there be that saye off my soule: is no helpe for him in God. Sela hein (o LORDE) art my defender, my wore, ad the lifter vp of my heade. I call the LORDE with my voyce, and he bra-me out of his holy hill. Sela I layed downe and slepe, but I rose vp agayne, the LORDE susteyned me. I am not as a for the vnder of the people, that cōspnne rounde about. Up LORDE, and helpe my God: for their synnest all myne eneupon the chel. Lones, and breake the y of the v. godly. Helpe belongeth vnto the LORDE, therfore let thy blessinge

The v. psalme.

be upon thy people.

The III. A psalme of Dauid.

Hear me when I call, o God of my right tuousnes, thou that comfortest me in my trouble: haue mercy vpon me, and hearken vnto my prayer. O ye sonnes of men: how longe will ye blaspheme myne name: why haue ye such pleasure in wayne sette after I year? Sela A nowe this, saye the LORDE beateh maruelously with his saynt: and when I call vpon the LORDE, he heareth me. Be angrie, but sone nac-come w' youre owne herces vps v' beddes, z remembre yo' silnes. Sela. O ffice of iustfice of righteousnes, z put yo' trust in LOR-DE. There be many y saye vnto god do any good: wheras thou (o LORDE) hast wed vs the light of y countenance. Thou reioyestt in me herce, though their enebe greate both in coine z wyne. Therfore wil I laye me downe in peace, z take my for thou LORDE only settest me in a sure delyng. The V. A psalme of Dauid.

Hear my wordes (o LORDE) confesse my callinge. O marke the voyce of my prayer, my kynge z my God: for vnto the royl I made my prayer. Hear my voyce by tymes (o LORDE) for earlye morn-ninge wil I gett me vnto the, yett y' w' be-gece. For thou art not the God of hath plasure in wickednesse, therfore maye no vn-personne dwell with the. Seda as becom maye not stonde in thy sight, thou art an mic vnto all wicked doers.

Thou dost reioyse the lyers: the LORDE abhorrah the bloudethourne and detestfull.
 Dur as for me, I wil come into thy house, en upon the multitude of thy mercye: ad in thy feare wyll I worship to warde thy holy temple. Rede me (o LORDE) in thy righteous-nesse, because of myne enemyes, ad make thy waye playne before me. For there is no faithfulnessse in their mouthes: they dissi-ble in their heeres: their chote is an open palchre: with their conges they disceane.
 Punyssh them: o God: what they maye persh in their owne ymaginacione: cast them out because of the multitude of their vngodly-se, for they rebell agaynst the. Agayne, is all them that put their trust in the, reioyye let them ener be geuyng of thankes, because thou defendest them: what they maye lone thy name, maye be ioynill in the. For thou LORDE geuesth thy blessinge vnto the righteous: and with thy favourable tydonthou defendest him, as with a shield.

The Psalter.

The VI. A psalme of David.

LORDE, rebute me not in thine anger: Oh chaste me not in thy heuy displeasure. haue mercy vpon me (o LORDE) for I am weake: o LORDE heale me, shall my bones are vexed. My soule also is in greates trouble, but LORDE how long: Turn the (o LORDE) & deliuer my soule: Oh salue me, for thy mercies sake. For in death man remembreth thee: Oh who wil geue thee thanks in the hell: I am weery of gromyngheney night wail the Iury bedde, & water my coache with my teares. My conscience is changed for very inwarde griefe. I consume away, I haue so many enemies. Away from me all ye wicked doers, for the LORDE hath heard the voyce of my weeping. The LORDE hath heard myne humble prayer: the LORDE hath receaued my prayer. All my enemies thou hast confounded & soe vexed: yet they shall be turned backe and put to shame, and that right soone.

The VII. A psalme of David.

LORDE my God, in y do I trust: saue me fro all thy persecutione, & deliuer me. Lett he hanche vp my soule like a lyon, & reare it in peace: whyle thou is some helpe. O LORDE my God, yff I haue done any such thinge: yf there be any unrighteousnes in my habes: yff I haue rewarded euill vnto thee y' deale friendly w' me: whate this y' w' out any cause are myne enemies: Then let myne enemy persecute my soule, & take me: yet let hi create my life downe in the earth, & laye myne hono' in the dust. Gode. Gode vp (o LORDE) in y' wraich, list w' thyn self ouer the furious indignacion of myne enemies: arise vp: for me in the vengeance which thou hast promysed. That the congregation of the people maye come aboute the son ther: (asethen soule list w' thy self againe. The LORDE is iudge ouer the people. Amonge me then (o LORDE) accordinge to myne innocencie. Oh let the voice of the vngodly come to an ende: but increase the lust, thou righteous God, y' trust the very heere & the royne. My helpe is com of God, which preferreth them of nature of heere. God is a righteous iudge: & God is euer chasteeninge. If men will not turne, he hath wher his swerde: he hath his bowe & made it ready. He hath prepared him the weapons of death, & ordained his arrowes to destroye. Beholde, he is ready w' his myghte, he hath concealed his wrath, and broughte forth a lie. He hath grauen and vttyged up a pyre, but the shal fall himself into y pyre y he hath made. For his unhappynesse shall come vpon his owne heade, & his wickednes shall fall vpon his owne part. As for me, I will geue thanks vnto the LORDE for his righteousnes sake, and wil praise the name of the LORDE the most hyest.

The VIII. A psalme of David.

LORDE oure gouernour: how wonderfull is thy name in all the world: how excellent is thy glorye aboue the heuens! Out of the mouth of the very babies & sucklings thou hast ordered praise, because of thine enemies, y thou mightest destroye the enemy and the auenger. For I consider thy heuens, & the earth, the wood off thy fingers: the Moone and the starres which thou hast made. Oh nacio man, y thou art so myndfull of him: either the founte of man that thou visitest him: A fewe thou haddest for a season made him lower the angels, thou crownedest him with hono' & glory. Thou hast set him aboue the waters off thy bondes: thou hast put all thynges in subiecti on vnder his feete. All shepe and oxen, yea and the beasts of the fildes. The foules of the ayre: the fish of the see, and what so wil keth thow the wayes of the see. O LORDE oure gouernour, how wonderfull is thy name in all the world.

The IX. A psalme of David.

Will geue thanks vnto the (o LORDE) with my whole herte, I wil speake of all thy maruelous woites. I wil be glad & reioyse in thee, yea my songes wil praise of thy name, o thou most hyest. Because thou hast drye myne enemies abacke, they were discomfited, & perished at thy presence. For thou hast maneyned my righte and my cause: thou sittest in the Throne that art the true iudge. Thou rebuldest the sea ben, and destroyest the vngodly, thou purrest out their name for euer and euer. The enemies which doo are com to an ende, thou hast ouerthrowen their cities, their memoriall is perished with the. But y LORDE entoreth for euer, he hath prepared his state vnto iudgment. He gouerneth y' world with righteousnes & minneth euill iudgment vnto the people. The LORDE is a defencer for the poore, a defencer in the ryme of trouble. Therefore they y knowethy name, put their trust in y: for thou (o LORDE) neuer failest the, that feest the. O prayse the LORDE, which dwelleth in Zion: there y people of his bounges. And why he maketh inquisition for their bloude, and healt. As for the heithen, they are sunkē dor as in the pyre that they made: in the same waye, which they spū out pūchly, is the ir owne seele. Thus y^e LORDE is knowe to create true iudgment, w^{ch} the vngod-ly is trapped in the woikes of his owne han-des. Sela. The wicked must be turned vnto heil, and all the heithen y^e forger God.

 But the poore shal not all waye be out of remembrance, the paine abydinge of such as be in trouble shall not perish for euer. Vp

Here the heithens begyne the y^e psalme.

Why art thou gone so farre of, o LOR-DE: wilt thou byde thyself in y^e mysof trouble: Why le y^e vngodly haue the our hande, the poore must suffre persecution: O that they were taken in the ymaginations which they go aboute. For the vngod-ly maketh boast of his owne heres sayre, the curserous blessing him self and blasphemeth the LORDE. The vngodly is so proude and full of indignacion, that he careth not: nether is God be foue his eyes. His wayes are all waye fūle, his iudgements are sette out of his sight, he deuyeth all his enemies.
 For he sayeth in his heart: Tush, I shal neuer be cast downe, there shal no harme happē vnto me. His mouth is full of cursyng, fraude and dyceite: vnder his tongue is traouyle & sorow. He stretcheth vngodly in the gardens, that he maye praye vngodly the innocēt, his eyes are set vpon the poore. He lyeth may sinpe fūlely, as it were a lyon in his denne.
 He lurcheth that he maye rauyssh the poore, yet to rauyssh the poore, when he hath gotten him in to his net. Then smyth he, then oppressech he & casteth downe the poore with his auerter. For he sayeth in his heart: Tush, God hath forgoon, he hath turned a waye his face, so y^e he will neuer see it. Arise o LORDE, God, lift vpbine honde, and forger not the poore. Otherforeshalde the wicked blasphemē God, and saye in his heart: Tush, he careth not for: Thus thou seest, for thou confoundest the mystery and sorow: The poore getteth himself ouer in to thy hands, and committeth him vnto the, for thou art the helper of the humble. Arise thou y^e arme off the vngodly and malicious, smite out the wickednes which he hath done, that he maye perish. The LORDE is thyng fau-uer, yet heithen shal perish out off his lande.

 LORDE, thou hearest the desyres longynge off the poore: ther heret is sure, that thou re heareth thereto. Helpe the fatherless and poore vnto their righte, that the vngodly be no more exalted vpon earth.

The X. Psalme of Dauid.

If the LORDE see my tresspasse, he will yetthen saye to my soule: the shalde ste as a byde vpon your hill: For so, the vngodly haue det their bone, made rebv their arewes in the quary: that they maye pryncly shure at them, which are true of heret. The very foundation vnto they cast downe, what ca the righteous hit do with all? But the LORDE is in his holy temple, the LORDE Scaze is in heauen: he considereth it with his eyes, his eye holdeth the children of men. The LORDE seeth both the righteous and vngodly, but he so delireth in wickednes, him his soule abhorreth. Vpon the vngodly he shal me sure, syne, by ymstone, stone and compass: the rewarde shal they haue to bynde. In the LORDE is righteousnes, ad he lonereth righteousnes, his countenance ce he holdeth the iust is iust.

The XI. Psalme of Dauid.

Helpē LORDE, for there is not one that moue: very fūle faith full are the mengeth the children off men. Every man collecteth y^e to his neghb^r, they do flatter with their lippes and dissimle in the ir heart. O that the LORDE wolde reue all dycearfull lippes, ad the tonge that sayeth proude thynges. Whiche saye: My ge shal be pryncyale: we are they that to speake, who is loide ouer vs: Floure the troubles sake off the oppressed, & becau of the complaunce of the poore, I and v yeth the LORDE I will helpe the, and sit the at rest. The wordes of the LORDE are pur wordes: eue as y^e sylner, which from carth tried and purified vnto ymes in the fyre. Arise the ether soue (o LORDE) and pasture vs this generation for euer. And why: what wante and vnylnes getteth the ouer hande amonge the children of men, all are full of vngodly.

The Psalter.

The XII. A psalme of Dauid.

How longe wilt thou forsake me, O LORD: how long: how longe wilt thou hide thy face frome: Oh how longe shall I see cancell in my soule: how longe shall I be so vexed in my heart: how longe shall my enemies triumph ouer me: Consider, ad heare me, O LORD my God: lighten myne eyes, that I slepe not in death. Left myn enemies say, I haue pleased a gaynst his seruice: I will praye the name of the LORD the most byest.)

But my trust is in thy mercy, and my heart is full in thy savinge health: I will singe of the LORD, that dealeth so lowly with me. (The I will praise the name of the LORD the most byest.)

The XIII. A psalme of Dauid.

The foolish bodies saye in their hearts: To say, there is no God. They are corrupt, ad become abhominable in their doctrynes, there is not one of doeth good. The LORD looked down fro heave vpo the children of men, to see yf there were any, that woulde understande & see after God. But they are all gone out of the waye, they are altogether become unprofitable: there is none that doeth good, no not one. * Thei thynke an open sepulchre, much their tonges they have discaused, the peyson of Aspes is under their lippes. * Their mouth is full of cursing, and of byzannes, their fire are swift to shed bloud. * Desolation & wretchednes are in their wayes, ad the wayes of peace haue they not knowne: there is no feare off God before their eyes. How can they haue understandinge, yf woode in these, eatinge up my people, as it were hay, & call not vps yf LORD?

The foure that they be broughte in greates here, for God stondesth by the generation of the righteous. As for you, ye haue made a name at the costell of the poore, because he putteth his trust in the LORD. Oh yf the righteous health were geuen vnto Israel our off Sym. Oh that the LORD woulde belyue his people out of captiuyte. This shulde Jacob traioyse, and Israel shulde be righte gins.

LORD, who shall dwell in thy tabernacle: who shall rest vps yf holy hill? Euen he yf leteth an vnconuerter life: that doeth the thinge which is righte, ad that speaketh the trouth from his heart. He yf wish no disceat in his conge: he that doeth no well to his neyghbours, & shunndeth not his neyghbours. He yf fetcheth not by the vngodly

The xvi. psalme. Ps. xviij.

but maketh moch of the that feare the LORD: he yf sweareth vnto his neyghbours, & shal payntech him not. He that geureth not his money vpon vsury, and taketh no reward of a gaynst the innocet. Who so toucheth these things, shal neuer be removed.

The XV. A psalme of Dauid.

Restrayne me, O God, for in the do I trust. I haue sayde vnto yf LORD: thou art my God, my goodes are nothinge vnto the. All my desire is vpon the sanctes that are in the earth, and vpon such like. But they yf touch a fier another shal haue greate trouble. Their desire is vpon ges of bloude: wil noc I offre, neither made mention of their name in my mouth. The LORD himself is my good and my praye, thou mannyest my enheredice. Ige in yf to fallen vnto me in a saye ground: Ige glad to see a goodly heretage. I will thank the LORD for geuyng me marriage, my reuerend so haue chastened me in the night. A foue denbe same I God allwaye, for he is on my righte bonde, that I shulde not be meued.

Therfore dyd my heart reioyce, my runge was glad, my flesh all shal rest in the. For why? thou shalt not leaue my soule in hell, neither shalt thou suffer thy sayce to se corrupcion. Thou hast shered me the waye of off life: thou shalt make me full of ioye in thy conuersione. At thy right hande thye is pleasure and ioye for euermore.

The XVI. A psalme of Dauid.

Hear yf righte O LORD: & shal my crye playne: heken vnto my prayer, that I geureth not out of a sayed mouth. Let my sentence come forth fro thy presence, and lette vnto the thinge that is equal. Thou hast poned & visited myne hearte in the night season: thou hast tried me in the fyre, & hast founde no wickednes in me: for I utterly purposed, that my mouth shulde not offende. Because of the wordes of thy lippes, I haue kepte me fro the wordes of men, in yf waye off the murderer. Oh odie: thou my goynges in thy pathes, that my feete steeppes slippe not. For in the I am, heare me O God, encline thine eares to me, and heare vnto my noyses. Shene yf maruelous louinge kinde, thou that sanctest them a hich pur the trust in the, from such as resist thy righte hande. Repe me as the apple of an eye, defende me vnder the shadowe of thy wynges: From the vngodly that trouble me, fro myne enemies which compass my soule rounde aboute.

Which nameyne their owne welschynesse with oppression, & their mouth speaketh pious de thinges. They lye waytinge in d' waye on euery syde, & ennyng'e their eyes downe to the ground. Like as a Lyon that is greby of his prey, & as it were a Lyons rebhelpe lured in his denne. O LORD, dispoyn'te him & cast him downe: deliuer my soule with thy strength from the engobly. For the men of thy honde, O LORD, from the men off the woud, whoe haue their poicion in the life:
whose felices thou shalt wech thy creatur.

They haue children at their desyre, and leaue the riste of their substance for their babes.
But as for me, I will beholde thy presence in triethroushines: and when thy glory appear, shall be iustified.

XVII. Psalm of David when he is deliuered from the honde off Saul.

W'here the LORD my strength.
The LORD is my succ^r, my refuge, my Sauior, my god, my helpe: i wh^o I trust: my defender, y' horne of my health, & my preseruer. I will praise y' LORD: & call upon him: for shall I be safe fro myne enemies.

The stones of death compassed me, & the buo-kes of myn engoblynes made me afayzed.
The paynes of hell came aboute me, the snares of death toke holde vpon me. Yet in my trouble I called vpon the LORD, & he answered vnto my God. So he heard my voyce: our eff his holye temple, & my suppli' came before hi, yee ear into his eares. The earth trembled & quaked, the very foundacion of the hilles shoke & was remoued, because he was wrothe.
There went a smoke out of his nostrils, and a consumyng fyre out of his mouth, so y' coales were kindled at it. He bowed the heauens & came downe, & it was darke vnder his feet.

He rode vpon the cherubins, & dyd flye: he came flyenge with the wynges of the wynde.
He made darcknesse his pauilion rounde aboute hi, with darke water & thicke cloudes to cover him. Ac the brightnesse off his presence the cloude remoued, with hale stones & coales of fyre. The LORD also thounded out of y' heauens, & the heych gaue his thonder: w' hale stones & coales of fyre. He sent out his arrowes & scattered the: he cast foue lighte-ninges, & destroyed the. The spunges of waters were sene, & the foundacions of the world woude were discovered at y' chiding: O LORD, at the blasting: & buch of thy dispitafure. He sent downe fro the heych to sech me, & toke me out of greates waters. He deliuered me fro my stronge enemies, and fro my foes which were to myghte for me. They pur-ued me in the tyme of my trouble, but y' LORD was my defence. He brought me forth also into libertie: & deliuered me, because I hab a sau^r vnto me. The LORD shall reward me a fier myn righteous dealinges, & recordinge to the cleanness of my hedes shall be recompense me. For I haue kepte the wayes of the LORD, & haue not behaue my selfe kebly agaynst my God. I haue an eye vnto all his lawes, & cast not out of his commandmentes fro me. Vncorrupt will I be before hi, & wil eke haue myne owne wickednes. Thou-fore shall y' LORD exalme me: a fier myn righteous dealinges, & a certifyinge vnto y' cleanness of my hedes in his eyesight. With the holy shalt be holy, & w' y' innocet thou shalt be innocet. With the cleanness thou shalt be clean: & with the forward thou shalt be forward.

For thou shalt saue the poore oppressed, & bring downe the hye of the proud. Thou lightest my candle, O LORD, my God: thou keest my darcknesse to be light. For in the I can discusse an hoof of me: yee in my God I can leape ouer the wall.

The waye of God is a perfecte waye: the wordes of the LORD are tried in the furne as a shyble of defence, for all them that trust in him. For who is God, but the LORD?
Who hath my strength, but our God?
It is God that hath gyded me with strength and made my waye incorrupt. He hath made my feete like hartes fyre, & he set me up as an hye. He steadyth my feete vnto the rocke, and maketh myne armes to beate as a bowe off stele. Thou hast gerd me the ce of thy health, thy righte hande vpheld me, and thy louyng'e correction maketh me great. Thou hast made myne enemies deserue for to go, that my feete steppe shall not shyde. I will salue me vpon myne enemies, and eate them: I will not turne till they be discerned. I will smyte them, they shall not be able to stande, but fall vnder my feete.
Thou hast gyded me with strength vnto battel, thou hast throued them all downe under me, that rose up agaynst me. Thou hast made myne enemies to turne their backs vpon me, thou hast destroyed the y' hated me.
They cried, but there was no one to helpe they cnen vnto the LORD, but he herde the not. I will beate them as small aschep before the wynde, I will call them vnto claye in the stretes. Thou shalt deliuer me from the stringes of the people, thou shalt make me the heade of the church. A people whom I haue no enemye, shall see me.

The Psalter.

As soon as they heare of me, they shall say unto me, but the strange childre dyssimble and were helped they put their trust in the, and were not confounded. But as for me, I am a worme and no manna: yet yecome of me and the outcast of the people. All they y se me, laugh me to scorne: they spurne out their lippes, and shake their heade. He trusted in God, let him deliuer him: let him helpe hi, if he wil haue him. But thou art he that take me out of my mothers wombe: thou wast my hope, when I hangd yet upon my mothers brestes. I haue bene left vnto the euer sence I was borne, thou art my God, out fro my mothers wombe. O go not fro me, thy forraigne is harde at hande, and here is no-one to helpe me. Great bulles are come about me, fierc open close mein on euery syde.

They gaue upon me with their mouthes, as it were a rampinge and roaringe lion.

I am poured out like water, all my bones are out of ioynt: my herte in the myddest off my body is euen like melange waie. My strength is dried vp like a pasherde, my tinge cleerly to my gages, and thou hast brought me in to the dust of deatch. For dogges are come aboute me, the colicall of y reieced hath layed siege agaynst me. They feare d not my wrath, and my fere, I mighte haue tel-led all my bones: as for them, they stode starige and lookinge upon me. They haue parted my garments amonge them, and cast lo-tes vpon my vesture.

But be not thou farr fro me, O LORD:
thou art my succour, haist thee to helpe me.
Deliuer my soule from the swerde, my bearlinge from the power of the dogge. Save me from the Lyons mouth, and heare me sit amonge the hoines off the vnicornes. So will I be cleare by name vnto my brethren, in the myddest off the congregation will I praise thee. O praise the LORD: yet that feare him: Magnific him all ye sebe of Jacob, & re all ye sebe of Israel feare hi. For he hath not despised nor abhorred the myserable estate of the poore: he hath not hyd his face fro me, but whē I called vnto him, he herde me.
I will praise thee in the greace congregation, and performe my vowes in the sight off all the char feare thee. The poore shall eate and be satisfiēd: they yfate after y LORD: shall praise him: yecare herce shall lyne for euer.

All the endes of the world shall remembre them: and, re be turned vnto the LORD: and all the generations of the heathen shall worship: he for his. For the kyngdome is the LORDS, and he shall be the gouernour of y earth. All such as be far vps earth, shall eate also and worship: All they that ly in the dust, and lyne so hardy, shall fall down before him. The sebe shall seue him, and preach of the LORD: for euer. They shall come, & be cleare his righteousnes: as a pa-ple that shall be borne, whō the LORD: hath made.

The XXIIII. psalme of Dauid.
The LORD: is my shepheard, I shall wante nothinge. He steecheth me against the greene pastures, and lecheth me to a fresh water. He quickeneth my soule, & bringeth me forth in the waye of righteousnes for his names sake. Though I should walke thro in the valley of the shadowe of deatch, yet feare I not euell, for thou art with me: thy staffe & thy shepheardes crookē me. Thou inuocest a bulle before me agaynst mine enemies: thou annoyntest my heade with oyle, & fillst my cuppe full. O helpe thy louyngē: & thou re my couer: & thou art my refuge off my hed: for euer.

The XXIII. psalme of Dauid.
The earth is the LORDS, & all that therin is: the case of the world, & all y dwell therein. For he hath founded us vps the seas, & he builded it vpon the flodes. Who shall go vp in to the hill off the LORD: or, who shall stand in his holy place? Let he y hath inioyned hōnes & cleare herce: which lieth not vps his wythe vnto wante, & sweareth not to discease. He shall receaue the blessinge fro the LORD: & mercy fro God his saluour. This is y generaciō of the yfete him, of the yfete y fate, o Jacob. Sala. Open y kyngdome of glory: It is the LORD: high & mightie, euen the LORD: mightie in battell.

Open youre gates (o ye princes) let the euerlastinge doores be opened, y the kyngdome of glory maye come in. Who is the kyngdome of glory? It is the LORD: of heeuen, he is the kyngdome of glory. Sala.

The XXXIIII. psalme of Dauid.
The LORD: lift vp my soule:
In y God, I trustyngē: O helpe me: he is constant, lest myne enemies triep he ouer me. For all they y hope in y shall not be ashamed: but such as be scornful despyre vnto a cause: they shall be put to confusiō. Shewe me thy waye O LORD: & teach me thy pathes. Lede me in y wil piayse the (O LORD) in the congrega-cions.

The xxv. A psalme of Dauid.

The LORD DE is my light and my helpe.
I shall saye: whom then shal I feare? The LORD DE is the strength of my life, for whom then shal I be a frayd? Therfore when the wicked (euen myne enemies & my foes) came vpon me, to take vpon my sight, they stonberd and fell. Therough an hoost of men were layed agaynst me, yet shal not my herte be a frayd: and though there rose vp warre agaynst me, yet wil I pursue in him. One thinge haue I desired of the LORD DE, which I wil requyre: namely, that I maye dwell in the house of the LORD DE, all the dayes of my life, to beholde the fayre beuety of the LORD DE, and to wytte his temple.

For in the tyme of trouble he hath byde me in his tabernacle, yet in the secretes place of his dwellinge hath he kepte and set me vpon a rocke of stone. And now hath he lift vp my head aboue myne enemies, thou compassed me rounde about. Therfore wil I esse in his dwellinge, the oblation of thy kyngdome: I wil both syng & speake piayse vnto the LORD DE. Heretofore vnto my voyce (O LORD) when I cryed the: haue mercy vpon me: heare me. My hert speakech vnto the, my face seeketh the, yet LORD DE, thy face wil I seeke. O hyde not thou thy face from me, cast not thy seruante out of his displeasure.
Thou art my succoure, leaue me not, neither forsake me, O God my stronge. For my father and my mother haue forsaken me, but the LORD DE hath taken me vp. Shewe mechy waye O LORD DE, and lede me in the righte path, because of myne enemies. Deliyer me not into the wylde of myne aduersaries, for there are fals wynefess ryse up agaynst me, and they wyngyn my soule.
Heare the, I beseeche the, relye to seeke goodnesse of the LORD DE in the londe of thy lyngye. O sarye thou O LORD DE, be stronge, let thine hart be of good comforte, and waye thou still in the LORD DE.

The xxvii. A psalme of Dauid.

As though I crye, O my stronge helpe: I thinke no scoome of me, lest thou shalt: the as though thou dest not) be come like them, that wyngyn in to y prey. Heare the voyce of my humble peticion when I crye vnto the, and holde up my bondes to the: as thy holy temple,

re. 9. a
 O plaſe me not alwaie amonge the vngodly and wicked boers, which ſpeake ſtandy ly to their neighbours, but ynuainge my ſeife in their hurtes. Rewarder them accordinge to their dooers and wickedneſſe of their vndeuotion. Reuerſe them a ſheete of wordes of theſe bydes, paye them that they ſeue defence. For they regarde not the wordes of the LORDE, ner the operation of his handes: therfore ſhal he breake them downe, and aſc buyldethem vp. Prayſed be y LORDE, for he hath herde the voyce of my humble percion. The LORDE is my ſtrength and my ſhyld: my herte hoped in him, ⁊ I am not perced: herfore my hart ſhall ſaye, ⁊ I will ſynge prayſes vnto him. The LORDE is the ſtrength of his peoſple, he is the defender and ſauoure of his annoynted.
 O hope chy people, geue chy beſſynge vnto thy enhurance: ſedethem, and ſet them

The XXXIIII. A psalme of Dauid.

re. 11. a
 I ſcribe vnto the LORDE (o ye mightie ⁊ ſtrength. Geue the LORDE the honour of his name, bowe youre ſhoulders to the holy maieſty of the LORDE. It is the LORDE that commaundeth the waters: It is the glorious God that maketh y thonder: it is the LORDE y ruleth the ſea. The voyce of the LORDE is mightie in operation, the voyce of the LORDE is a glorious voyce. The voyce of the LORDE breaketh the Cedars: trees: ⁊ he the LORDE breaketh the Ceders of Libanus. He maketh them to ſlippe like a calfe: Libanus and Sirion like a yonge vnycoine. The voyce of the LOR DE breaketh the flames of fire: the voyce of the LORDE ſhaleth the wilderneſſe, ⁊ he the LORDE ſhaleth the wilderneſſe of Cades.
 The voyce of the LORDE mouth of byn des ⁊ diſcometh the thicke buſſhes: in his

 The LORDE ſhal cleare the water floude, ⁊ y LORDE remaineth a kynge for euer. The LORDE ſhall geue power vnto his peoſple, the LORDE ſhall geue his peoſple the beſſyn ge of peace.

 For I haue herde the blaſphemy of the multitude: euery man abhorreth me: they gathered a council together agaynst me, and are purposed to take awaye my life.

But my hope is in y LORD, & I saye: don't an my God. My eye is in thy hon to deliuer me from the honde of myne enemye, & from thyr perfurme. She we thy seruante the lighte of thy countenaunce, helpe me for thy mercies sake. Let me not be confounded: (o LORD) for I call vpon thee: in the vngodly rather be put to confusion, and brouge vnto the hell. Let the lippe lippe be put to silence, which cruelly, dishonestly & despitefully speak agaynst the righteous. O how greate and manifest is thy good, which thou haist hyd from them that feare y. O what thinge bin yll thou doo passe for them, that put their trust in thee, euen before the foune of men.

Thou hyddest them pryncially by thine owne powre from the proude men, thou keepest them secret in thy tabernacle, from the sighte of tongues. Thanks be to the LORD, in he haist shewed me maruolous greate kindnesse in a stronge cite. For when the same feare came vpon me, I saye: I am cast out of thy sighte. Nevertheless, thou hast myne humble prayer, when I cried vnto the. O howe the LORD (all ye his seruants) for the LORD Epesureth the faithfull, and plentifully rewardeth the proude. Be stronge therfore to take a good bow vnto you, all ye that put youre trust in the LORD.

The XXXI. A psalme of David.

Blessed are they, whose virgineousnesse is forgiven, and whose synnes are covered. Blessed is the man, vnto whom the LORD impureth no synne, in whose spere there is no gyle. For whyle I helde my tongue, my bones consumed awaye tharow my daylie complaynyng. And because thy hande was so heavy vpon me both daye and nyght, my mynstere was like the drouch in Sommer. Selu.

Therefore I confessed my synne vnto the, and hid not myne virgineousnesse. I saye: I will knowe myne offence, and accurse my self vnto the LORD, and so thou shalt not see my wickednesse of my synne.

Selu. For this shall every synner make his prayer vnto the in due season, therefore shall not the greate water floudes come nye thee. Thou art my defence in the trouble that is come aboute me, O passe thou me aboute also with the ioye of deliuerance.

Selu. I will in some che, and shewe the thy waye: wherein thou shalt go: I will fasten myne eyes vpon the. Hence ye now like hokes & moles, which haue no vnderstandinge. Whose mouthes thou must holde with byre & bayl, yf they wil not obeye the.

Grace plague shall y vngodly haue, but who so trusteth in the LORD, his enemy shall compass him on every syde. Be glad (o ye righteous) and reioyce in the LORD, he is ioyfull all ye that are true of heart.

The XXXII. A psalme of David.

Reioyce in y LORD (o ye righteous) for it becommeth well the iust to be chearfull. Praise ye the LORD with harpe: synge psalmes vnto him with the lute and instrument of ten stringes. Singe him a new songe, yet synge lustily vnto him with a good organ. For the worde of y LORD is true, and all his wordes are faithfull. Heloweth mercy & iudgement, y earth is full of the goodnesse of the LORD. By the worde of the LORD were the heauens made, & all the hostes of them by breath of his mouth. He gathereth y waters together as it were in a bottell, & layeth up the depe in secretes. Let all the earth feare the LORD, and let all them that dwell in the world, shude in awe of him. Go loke what he sayeth, it is done: and loke what he commaundeth, it shall be fast. The LORD bringeth the council of the righteous to nought, and curmeth the deuices of the people.

But the coloull of the LORD endureth, and the thoughtes of his heart from generation to generation. Blessed are the people that holde the LORD for their God, & blessed are the folke whom he hath chosen to be his heritage. The LORD lecheth downe from heauen, & beholdeth all the children of men: from his stronge seate he considereth all them y dwell in the world. He seeth hath fastened all the partes of them, & knoweth all their workes. A kynge is not helped by his owne greate host, neither is a ginsane as he sheweth the mighte of his owne strength.

A horse is but a wayne thinge to saue a man, it is not the power of his strengthe that can deliuer him. Beholde, the eye of the LORD lecheth vnto them that feare him, & put their trust in his mercy. That becomye deliuer their soules from death, and so feede them in the deare synne. Let ourte forsa patiently abyde the LORD, for he is ourte helpe and shude. So shall ourte hart reioyse in him, because we haue he put in his bow name. Let thy mercifull iudgement (o LORD) be vpon vs, like as we put our trust in the.

2 GOD allwaie geue thankes vnto the LORDE, his praye shall cure be in my mouth. My soule shall make his boay in the LORDE the poore oppressed shall heare thereof and be glad. O praye of LOR DE with me, and let vs magnific his name to gether. I singe the LORDE, and he her de me, yet he deliuered me out of all my fea re. They that haue an eye vnto him, shall be lightened, & their faces shall not be sha med. This poore man cried vnto the LOR DE, and he herde him, yet he deliuered him out of all his troubles. The anell of the LORDE pitcheth his ceter rounde aboute them that feare him, and deliuereth them.

3 O taill and feere stendly the LORDE is, blesed is the man of trusteth in him. O fea re the LORDE, ye of he his sayntes: for they that feare him, lacke nothinge. The rich shall want and suffre hunger, but they which seeketh the LORDE, shall waene maner of thing ge, that is good. Come hither (o ye chil dren) hearken vnto me, I wil teach you the fea re of the LORDE. Who so listeth to heare, & wilde sayne fe good dayes. Let him re fraine his tongue from euill, and his lippes that they speake no gyle. Let him eschue euill, and do good: Let him seke peace & c uicie. For the eyes of the LORDE are ouer the righteous, and his eares are open vnto their prayes. But the face of the LORDE kecheth them that do euill, to destroye the remembrance of them out of the earth.

When the righteous crye, the LORDE heareth them, and deliuereth the out of all their troubles. The LORDE is nye vnto them of are comite in here, & wil helpe sod as be of an hille spere. Greate are y trou bles of the righteous, but the LORDE deli uereth them out of all. He kepeth alle their bones, so y noe one of them is broken. But mst for me shall slay the vngodly, and they that hate y righteous shall be gile. The LORDE deliuereth the soules of his serua tes, and alle they that put their trust in him, shall noe offende.

The XXXIII. psalme of Dauid.

2 GOD Tyme thou with them (o LORDE) that stryue w me, fight thou agaynst them that fight agaynst me. Laye thi iudg vpon the shyde and speare, and stou de vp to helpe me. Drawe out thy swe rde, and stoupe the waye agaynst them that persecute me, saye vnto my soule: I am y hel pe. Let them be confounded and put to sha me, that seke a feere my soule: let the be turned back and broughe to confusion, that yma gin my shefe soule. Let the be as y huff before the wynde, and the anell of the LOR DE scateringe the. Let their waye be h de and slippery, and the anell of the LORDE to perseute them. For they haue pur laide their nere to destroye me withoute a se, yet he made a pitre for my soule, which I neuer deserued. Let a sodeane deliuer come vpon him vnto armes, and y nee the he hath layed purely, catch him self, that he maye fall in to his owne my shefe. Drawe my soule be ioyfull in the LORDE, and tray se in his helpe. All my bones shall saie: LOR DE, who is like vnto the: which of ynter poore from these that are to stronge for him, yet the poore and the needy from his robbed.

Falke witnesses are y risen vp, & laye charge thinge that I knowe not. They reioyce me euell for good, to the greate consort of my soule. Trewethen, when they were iust, I put on a sack cloth: I blesed my soule with fastinge, and my paye turned in to myne owne bosome. I be ued myself as though he had bene my frede o my brother, I wept euell, as one of meth for his mother. But in my trust they reioyse, and gather them together: y y very lame come together agaynst me warres, makynge merue at me, & confu sion.

Which y grede y somefull vnto gnashed vpon me with their teeth. LOR DE, when wilt thou loke vnto this: O tore my soule from y wicked rimoore of the my dearinge from the thy lone. So wil I ue y thankes in the greates congregacion, praise the amenge much people. O let the not triumphe ouer me, that are myne enimie for neughe: O let them noe wynde w their eyes, that hate me withoute a cause. And why: their comoyng is not for peace, but they ymagin falsse wordes agaynst y tes of the londe. They gaue vpon me of their mouthes, sayenge: thereber: we se with oure eyes. This thou seest, o LOR DE holde noe thy tongue chert: go noe farr from o LORDE. Awake (LORDE) and stou vp: avenge thou my cause, my God, and my LORDE. Iudge me (o LORDE) my God) a conding to thy righteousnesse, y they tri phe not ouer me. O let the noe saye in the ir herten: thereber, so wolde we haue the let them noe saye: we haue ouercome him.
Let them be put to confusion and shame, that reioyse at my trouble: let the be clothe with rebute and dishonoure, that besp selues agaynst me. Let them also be glia and reioys. that fauoure my righteous belings: yet let them saye all waye: blessed be y LORDE, which hath pte: sure in the prosperi e of his seruants. And as for my tongue, it shall be call vpon of thy righteousness and of thy praise, all the daye longe.

The XXXV. A psalme of David.

Make here sheweth me the wickednesse of the vngodly, that there is no fa-uour of God beside his eyes. For he will smite by force his face, so longe till his abominable synne be founde out. The wordes of his mouth are turribenousnesse and disaite, he wil not be lerned to do good.

Imagineth mysdeede vpon his bedde, he will come in no good waye, ner seke the thinge that is euell. Thy mercy O LOR-DE reacheth vnto the heauen, and thy faith faileth vnto the cloudes. Thy righteous-nesse longeth like the stronge mountaynes, thy righteousnesse like the greates depe. Then LORDE putteth loath me & bestee. How prouisio in thy mercy O God that the children of men maye putt their trust vnder y shadowe of thy wynges: They shall be facility made by the plenteousnesse of thy house, and they shall geue them dyspente of the yuer of thy mercies. For by theis y well of life, in thy light, shall we see light. O speede with thy louyng & yndusse vnto them that fear the, thy righteousness vnto the charmer of hert. O let not the face of pry-de come at me, O let not the hande of y ngodly cast me downe. As for wicked doers, they fall, they are cast downe, & are not able to stonde. The XXXVI. A psalme of David.

Fear not thy self at the vngodly, be not thou enuious anaynst the euell doers. For they shall soone be cut downe like y grass, & be wythered euen as y green herbe. But when thy trust in y LOR-DE, the vngodly goe: so shalt thou dwell in the cloudes, & netherly shall they see. Delecte thou in the LORDE, & he shall geue thee thy her-t as desire. Consider thy waye vnto y LOR-DE, for thy hope in him, and he shall bringe it to passe. And he shall make thy righteousnesse as cleare as the light, & thy iust dealing as the noone daye. Solde the still in y LORDE, and abyde pacifely vpon him: but gaue not thy self at one that hath prosperity, and lyeth in abominacion. Leave of from wrath, let no displeasure, let not thy gedousness be alldo do euell. For we wd not shall be rored out, but they that paciely hope in the LORDE, shall embrace the londe.
Suffre yet a litle while, & y vngodly shall be cleue gone: then shall cleue a fier his piece, & he shall be aroze. But the righteous shall possesse the earth, & haue pleasure in much rest. The vngodly lyeth waye for the iust, & gnaseth vpon him w his arde.

But y LORDE laugheth him to scoone, for he seeth y his daye is cominge. The vngod-ly shall cut the iust: & vnder their borne, to cast downe y simple & poore, and to slaye such as go y right waye. Returne thes, their suerde shall go thorow their arme here, and their borne shall be broke. A small thinge y the righteous hat, is better then greates ri-che of the vngodly. For the armes of y ngodly shall be broken, but the LORDE upholdeth the righteous. The LORDE knoweth the dayes of the godly, & their embra-sacione shall endure for euer. They shall not be confounded in y perous tyme, & in y dayes of derth they shall haue ynough. As for y vngodly, they shall perishe: wher y enemies of y LORDE are in their floures, they shall consume, yet euen as the smoke shall they consume awaye. The vngodly boareth and paceth not a gayne, but the righteous is mercifull & liberall. Such as be blessed of him, shall possesse the londe: & they whom he curseth, shall be rored out. The LORDE ordureth a good man as goinge, & hath pleasure in his waye. Though he fall, he shall not be hurt, for the LORDE upholdeth him w his hande. I haue bene yonge, & now am olde: yet same I neuer the righteous forsake, ner his seide to seeke their bled. The righteous is euer mercifull, & liddeth pety, therfore shall his seide be blessed. He is euell, & do y thin-ge that is good, so shall they dwell for euer.

For y LORDE loatheth y thinge y is right, he forsaketh not his saymes, but they shall be persecuted for euermore: as for the seide of the vngodly, it shall be rored out. Yet the righteous shall possesse y lode, & dwell therein for euer. The mouth of the righteous is exercised in wysdom, & his robe is talke of iudgment. The lawe of his God is in his hert, therfore shall ne: his foesteppes stonde. The vngodly seeth the righteous, & goeth about to slaye him. But the LORDE wil not leaue him in his hōde, ner condemn him when he is iudged. Hopethon in the LORDE, & hope his waye: & he shall so pnter thee, that thou shalt haue the lode by embra- sacione, & se-when the vngodly shall perishe. Thyself haue sene the vngodly in greates power, & florishinge like a grene baye: but when I went by, so he was gone: I sought him, but he coude no where be founde.

The Psalter.

A pece innocency, and take hebe vnto the thinge that is righte, for that shall bringe a man peace at the last. As for the cruell fowles, they shall perishe together, and the vn godly shall be deede one at y last. The helpe of the righteous cometh of the LORDE, he is their strength in the tyme of trouble. The LORDE shall stode by them, and saue them: he shall deliuer them from the vn godly, and helpe the, because they put their trust in him.

The XXXVII. A psalme of Dauid.

A Verse. Doe not rebolke. Oh LORDE in thine anger: Oh chaste me not in thy heuie displeasure. For thy arrowes shall fast in me, and thy bonde purstich me sore. There is no whole parte in my body, because of thy displeasure: there is no rest in my bones, by reason of my synnes. For my wickednesse are gone ouer my heade, and are like a sore burthen, so heuy soame to beare.

My woundes synde & are corrupte, they rotte my foolishnesse. I am brought into so greate trouble and misery, that I go mourninge all the daye longe. For my loynes are clenched vp, and ther is no whole parte in my body. I am feble and sore synce, I roare for the very disquietnes of my hert.

B LORDE, thou knowest all my desire, & my gronyng is not hyd from the. My hert pained, my strength hath fayled me, & the light of myne eyes is gone fro me. My louers & frendes stonde lookinge vpon my trouble, and my kynsmen are gone a farre of.

They that song be after my life, and to do me euill, spate of eyes and ymagined disceate all the daye longe. As for me, I was like a deaf ma, and herde not: and as one that were deame, not openyng his mouth. I am become as a man that beareth not, and that can make no resistance wth his mouth.

C For in the. O LORDE is my crast, thou shalt heare me, O LORDE my God. My desire is, y myne enemies triumphe not ouer me: for yf my feet slippe, they reioyse greatly against me. I am redy to suffre trouble, and my heuynesse is euer in my sighte. For I confesse my wickednesse, & my synne greuethe me.

But myne enemies lye, and are in sighte: and they that hate me without a cause, are many in nombre. They that remarde me euell for good, speake euill of me, because I folowe the thinge that good is. So saie me not. O LORDE my God, O go not farre fro me. Gaiest thou helpe me, O LORDE my succour.

The XXXVIII. A psalme of Dauid.

The xxxix. psalme.

Sayde. I wil kepe my voyce, that I offended not in my tongue. And I shut my mouth, whye the vngodly layd wayte for me. I helde my tongue, I was deame, I kepe silence, yett call I good wordes, but it was payne and greue me. My hert was hate within me, whye I was thus mysynge, the syne poble: that I spake with my tongue. LORDE, let me knowe myne ende, and the nombre of my dayes that I may be certified what I am. Beholde, thou hast made my dayes sparre longe, and my life is as it were a vayne ge before the. O how vayne are all my vnyng: Sela. For euery man walketh as it were a shadowe, and disquieteth himself in vayne: he heareth vp riches, and do not talke to them he gathereth them. In now LORDE, when in shall I come: for me my hope is in the. Deliyer me from all myne offences, and make me not a cause to the foolish. I kepe silence, and open not my mouth, for thou hast done it. Turn thy plages awaye fro me, for I am ashamed to rewe the feare of thy harte. When thou seest my shep man for synne, thou chastest him: for that his deacie consumeth awaye, like as it were a moche. O how vayne are all my:

Sela. Heare my prayer O LORDE, and confesse my callinge: for me not thy self as thoughe thou sawest not my teares. For I am a stranger and pilgrymme with the, as all my forefathers were. Oh spare me a litte, that I may refresh myselfe, before I go hence, and be no more here.

The XXXIX. A psalme of Dauid.

Sayde patiently for the LORDE, which enclined himself vnto me, and herde my callinge. He brought me out of the boordle pitte, out of the mys and claye: he set my feet vpon the rocke, and set my goynges. He hath put a new song in my mouth, such a thankesgyng as we owe God. Many men synge this, shall praise the LORDE, & put their trust in him. Blessed is the man that setteth his hope in the LORDE, and turneth not vnto the present: to such as go aboute with lica. O LORDE my God, greates are y wonderous workes which thou hast done: & in thy thoughtes remarde no there maye none be hid end vnto the.

I wolde declare them, and speake of the: but they are so many, that they can not be tolde. Sacrifice and offeringe thou wilst not haue: but a body that thou ordainest to burne to offeringe: and sacrifice for synne thou hast not allowed. Then sayde. I. h. J. a me. In the begynnyng of the booke it is written of me, that I shal be full of thy wyl O my God, & that am I comitt to do: yet thy lawe is within my hart. I wil preach of thy righteousnesse in the greates congregation: Lo, I wil not refrayne my lippen, O LORDE, & that thou knowest. I do not hyde of thy righteousnes in my hart, my callyng is of thy trowth and sayyng health: I kepe not thy louyng mercy and faithfulness backe from the greate congregation. Turne not thou thy mercy fro me O LORDE, but let thy louyng kyndnesse and trowth alwaye persew me. For innumerable troubles are come aboute me: my synes have taken such holde upon me, that I am not able to looke vp: yet they are no inuincible, then the hayes of my heade, as my hart hath sayed me. O LORDE, let be thy pleasure to deliuer me, make haile O LORDE: to helpe me. Let them be ashamed and confounded, that sette a feet my soule to beforre: let them fall backe warde and be wexe confusion, that wyll me euill.

Let the soone be brought to shame, that meane me: there they are. But see all these that sette the, be ioyfull and glad in the: and let all those be deliuer in thy sayyng health, saye alwaye: the LORDE be prayed. As nowe, I am poore & in mysery, but the LOR-DE cared for me. Thou art my helper & somer, make no longe caridge, O my God.

The XL. A psalme of David.

Lessed is he, yf considereth yf poore: yf LORDE shal deliuer him in the tyme of trouble. The LORDE shal preserue him, and kepe him alwaye: shal make him to perspere open trowth, and shal not betraue him into yf wyl of his enemies. The LORDE shal rescue him, when he lyeth sick upon his bedde, yet thou shalt see his bed in all his sickness. I saye: LORDE be merciefull vnto me, heale my soule, for I haue synned agaynst the. Myne enemies speake all vnto me: when shal he dye, and his name perishe. Though he came in to se, yet make we be fallde in his hart, heaunge myschaunce vpon himself. All they that hate me, runne together agaynst me, and ymagin euill a-gaynst me. They haue geuen a wicked sentence vpon me: when he lyeth, he shal ryse vp vpon me. Yet euen myne owne familiar fren-de, whom I trusted, which shal care my backe, hath liue vpon my heale agaynst me. But be-thou me: full vnto me O LORDE: saye thou me vp, and I shal remorde them. By this I haue trowed vpon thee, that my enemye shal not triumphe ouer me. Thou hast vp holden me because of my innocency, and se-me before thy face for ever. O blessed be yf LORDE: O God of Israel, from hence forth and for euermore. Amen, Amen.

The XLII. A psalme of yf dylard of Corath.

Let as the hart desireth the water brooke, so longeth my soule after the, O God. My soule is a thurst for God, yett euill for that thyng God: wha shal I come, & beholde the face of God? My teares are my meate daye and nyght, whyle it is daylie sayd vnto me: where is now thy God? Trow when I thinke there vnto, I peere out my hart by my self: for I wold saye ne go hence with the multitude, & passe ouer with them vnto the house of God, in yf voyce of praye & thankesguyng, amonge such as kepe holy daye. Why art thou so full of heuynesse O my soule, & why art thou so vnto quier within me? O put thy trust in God, for I wil yet geue him thanks, for the helpe of his countenance. My God, my soule is weary within me: therefore I remember the len-de of Iordane, & the litle hill of Hermon.

One depe calleth another w the voyce of thy whylles, all thy maner & water flou-de: be as gone ouer me. The LORDE hath promysed his louyng & ynnocent dayle, that fore wil I praye: him in the tribulation, and make my praye vnto yf God of my life. I wil saye vnto God my stony rock: why hast thou forgotten me? why go I thus heuily, why the enemye oppresseth me? Why my benes are broken, & why myne enemye cast me in the teth, daylie sayyng vnto me where is now thy God? Why art thou so bryke O my soule: & why art thou so disquied within me? O put thy trust in God, for wil yett thank him for the helpe of his countenance, and be: canst he is my God.

The XLIII. psalme.

Let sentence vpon me (O God) & defende my cause agaynst the wicked people: O deliuer me from the de-ceitfull & wicked man. For thou O God art my strength: why hast thou shooe me from the? Why go I then so heuily, why the emye oppresseth me? O sende me yf light & thy trowth, yf they maye lede me & bring me vnto thy holy hill and to thy dwelling.
That I maye go in to the altar of Golden vnto the God which is my loyze pleasure, & vpon the harpes geue thanks vnto yf O God, my God: Why art thou so heuily my soule: & why art thou so disquied within me? O put thy trust in God, for I wil yett geue thanks for yf helpe of his countenance

The XLIII. A psalme of y child of Coah.

W I have herde word of care. W of fathers have tolde vs, w hat thou hast done in their tyme, of olde.

How thou hast drye out the heithen w thy bonde, & plated the in: how thou hast destroyed the nations & cast the out. For they gat not the londe in possession theow their owne force, nether was it their owne arme that helped them. But thy righte hnde, thy ne arme & the light of thy countenance, be cause thou haddest a sauoure vnto them.

Thou art y kinge t my God, thou sendest helpe vnto Jacob. Thou w y, wilt ouer thine oure enemies: & in thy name will we treade them vnder, that rye vp agaynst vs.

For I will not trust in my boue, it is not my mynste y shal helpe me. But it is thou that sault vs fro oure enemies, and puttest them to confusion that hate vs. We will all way make oure boast of God, and praye thy name for euer. Selu. But now thou forsakest vs, & puttest vs to confusion, and goest not forth wth oure hoofes. Thou makest vs to tume oure backes vpon oure enemies, so that they which hate vs, spoile oure needes. Thou lettest vs be eaten vnto like shepe, & scatterest vs amonge the heithen.

Thou sellest thy people for naught, & takest no monye for them. Thou makest vs to be rebuled of o' neyghboure, to be laughd at & scame and had in derision, of them that are rounde about vs. Thou hast made vs a very bywode amonge the heithen, & that the people shak e their heades at vs. My confusion is daylie before me, & the shame of my face couereth me. For the voyce of the slauder & blasphemet, for thy enemie and auenger. All this is come vpon vs, & yett haue we not forgotte the, ner behuid oure selues vn faithfully in thy countaunt. The Psalme.

Though the waters of the sea raged & we were so troubled, & though the mountains as shee: as the depth of the same. Sela.
 For there is a floude, which wth his riuers waite of the cite of God, the holy dwelling of the most high. God is in y^e myddest of her, therefore shall she not be remoued: for God helpeth her, & y^e righte early. The he then remaidd, the Kingdome make moch a doore: whil he heareth his voyce, y^e earth much a wayre. The LORDE of hostes is wth vs, the God of Jacob is oure defence.

Sela. O come hither, & beholde y^e wor

When a man is in honoure and hath no vnderstandinge, he is compar'd vnto the beastes, and becometh like vnto them.

The XLIX. A psalme of Asaph.

2 THE LORDE enen the mightie God hath spokē, & called the wōlde from the yeringe vp of the sonne vnto the goinge downe of the same. Out of Sion speareth the glorious benedictiō of God. Our God shal come, and wee keepe silēce: there goeth before him a consuminge fyre, and a mightie tempest rounde aboute him. He shal call the brauens from aboue, and the earth, that he maye iudge his people. Gather my saymes together vnto me, these yfste more by the conuauēte thou by eny offeringe. And the heauens shal declare his righteousnesse, for God is iudge himselfe.

Sela. Heare, o my people: let me speake, let me cōfesse amonge you, o Israel: I am God, euen thy God. I repecte the noc because of thy sacrifice, yf burnoofferings are allwaye before me. I wil take no bullockes care of thy house, nor geese out of thy foldes. For all the bestes of the fild are mine, and the sheuādes of cattell vpon the hilles.

I throwe all the foules vpon the mountaynes, and the wilde beastes of the feilde are in my sighte. If I be hungry, I wil not tell thee: for yf whole world is mine, and all that therein is. Thy next thou, that I wil eate the flesh of oxen, or drynke the bloude of geese. Offer vnto God prayse and thankes yeuynge, and paye thy vowes vnto the moste just. And call vpo me in the tyme of trouble, so wil I heare the, that thou shalt thanke me. But vnto the vngodly I saye: God: Why doest thou preache my lawes, and takest my couenaunt in thy mouth? Where is thou haef to be reformed, and castest my wordes beynde thee? If thou seist a hefe, thou remest with him, and art partaker with the adouterers. Thou lettest yf southe speake wickednesse, & thy tonge payneth disceace. Thou sweest and speakest against thy brother, yee and slauderest thine vnto mochers sonne. This thou doest, why: I holde my tonge, and thinke it me to be eadich one: as thy selfe but I wil reprove the, for my selfe against the.

me: & this is the waye, whereby I wil shew him the sayynge healeth of God.

The l. A psalme of Dauid.

Gode mercy vpon me, o God: lest thy goodnes, & cōuynge vnto thy mercies, do awaye myne offensa. Wash me well fro my wickednesse, & cleanse me fro my synne. For I knowlege my synnes, and my synne is euer before me. Against the only, agaynst thee haue I sinned, and done euill in thy sighte: that thou mightest be iustificed in thy saynges, and thou dost out come when thou art iudged.

Beholde, I was borne in wickednesse, and in synne hath my mother conceaued me.

But lo, thou hast a pleasure in the truth, and hast shewed me secrettes of thy mercy. Recreate me with I hope, and I shal be diligent: wash thou me, and I shal be vncorrupte. Oh let me heare of ioye and gladnesse, that the bones which thou hast broken, maye reioyse. Turne thy face fro my synnes, and put out all my mysdoings. My hearte is cleane here: o God: and reme a right spete within me. Cast me not awaye fro thy presence, and take not thy holy spirit fro me. O gene me the comfoute of thy helpe agayne, and stablish me with thy right spete. Then shal I reache thy wayes vnto the wicked, that synners maye be conuerted vnto the. Deliyer me fro bloudguiltynesse: o God, thou that art the God of my health, that my tonge maye praise thy righteousness. Open my lippes: O LORD: that my mouth maye shewe thy praise.

For yf thou habdist pleasure in sacrifices, I wolde geue it the: but thou deliyest not a burnoofferynge. The sacrifice of God is a troubled spete, a broken and a cōcrete heart: o God: shalst thou not despise. O be favourable and gracious vnto Sion, that the wallles of Ierusalem maye be builded. In then shalt thou be pleased with the sacrifice of righteousness, with the burnoofferynge and oblations: then shal they laye bullockes vpon thine altar.

The LL. A psalme of Dauid.

Why boastest thou thy selfe, thou sayest: I haue not sinned: where as the goodnesse of God endureth yett daylie. Thy tongue maye giueth wickednesse, and with lyes is created like a sharpe rapoure. Thou lovest vnto righteousnesse more the good, o calfe of Ierusalem: then righteousnesse. Sela.

The Psalter.

Thou loudest to speake all wordes y maye to hurte, O thou fals tōge. Therefore shal God cleane destroye thee, stynt the in peeces, p̄sente the out of thy dwellinge, and rote the ear of the londe of the luynges. Seda.

The righteous shal se this, & feare, and laugh him to scoome. Lo, this is the mā, y wote not God for his strenght, but trusted vnto the multitude of his riches, & was mightie in his wickednesse. As forme, I am like a gene of yacub in y house of God, for ever & ever the render mercy of God for ever & ever.

¶ And all waye geue thanks vnto the, for that thou hast done: and wil hope in thy name, for thy names sake like well.

The liij. A psalme of David.

The foolish bodies saie in their hearts, with, there is no God. Corrupte are they, and become abhominable in their wickednesse: there is none, that doth good. God looked downe from heauen vpon the children of men, to see if there were any that wolde vnderstande, or seke after God. But they are all gone out of waye, they are all become vnprofitable: there is none y doth good, no none one. How can they haue vnderstandinge, that are the workers of wickednes, eatinge vp my people as it were bread, & call not vpon God? They are afrayed, where no feare is: for God breake the bones of them that bisegeth: they persecute them to confusion, for God despiseth them. Oh y the sawynge healeth were gotten out of Sien: Oh that the LORDE wolde deliuer his people out of captiuitie. Then shulde Jacob reioyce, & Israel shulde be righte glad.

The liiii. A psalme of David.

Help me (O God) for thy names sake, and deliuer me in thy strenght. Heare my prayere (O God) consider the wordes of my mouth. For strangers are risen vp agaynst me, and they haue which haue not God do feie their eyes seke after my soule. Seda. Durlo, God is my helpe: as he that upholdeth my soule. He shall reuorde euill vnto myne enemies, and in thy truth shal hee destroye them. As he wil offringe wil I geue the, and prayse thy name O LORDE, because it is so comfortable. For thou hast deliuered me out of all my trouble, so that myne eyes sech his desire vnto myne enemies.

The liiiij. psalme. Ho. xxi.

I mourne & complaine. The enemies cryed so, & the ungodly commeth on so fast: for they are mynded to do me some mischief, so maliciously are they set agaynst me. My heart is heuy within me, and the feare of death is fallen vpon me. Fearfullnesse and tremblinge are come vpon me, and an horrible drede hath ouertohelmed me. And I sayde O that I had wynges like a dove, that I might fle somwhere, and be at rest. Lo, then wolde I geue me awaye farre off, and remayne in the wilderness. Seda.

¶ It wolde make haist to escape, from the stormy wynde and tempest. Destroye their tongues (O LORDE) and deuyde them, for his Gen. 11 se vnrighteousnesse & strife in y cite. This B greedy daye and nighte aboute the walles, myscheite and vyce are in the myddest of it.

Wickednesse is therein, disease and gyle go not out of his stretes. As it were myne enemy that reuyled me, I coulde beate it: or yf one that ouerheme euill wold vnto me, I wolde hyde myself from him. But it is thou my companion, my gyde and myne owne familiar frende. We had sweete & secreete communicacion together, and louynge walked vntogether in y house of God.

¶ Let death come hastily vpon them, and let them go downe quick into hell, for wickednes is amonge them in their dwellinges.

As forme, I will call vnto God, and the LORDE shall helpe me. In the eveninge, morninge and at noon: daye wil I mourne and complaine: and he shall heare my voyce.

¶ It is he that deliuereth my soule in peccete, from them that laye waite for me: for they are many agaynst me. Receiue God that endureth for ever, shall heare me, and bringe them downe. Seda.

For they wil not turne: and why? they feare not God. For they laye handes vpon such as be at peace with him, and do the like he his cotenans. Their monthes are softer then butter, & yet haue they battell in their mynde: their wordes are smooth as theyn oyle, and yet be they very swerde. O cast thy burthen (or care) vpon the LORDE, he shall not be care, and not leaue the righteous in vnquietnesse. But as for them, (thou O God) shalt cast them downe in eche pitte of destruction. The bloutheartie and disceyfull shal not lyne out half their daies, & their shelefte mytrust is in the.

Lxxvii. psalme. whē I am a frayed, I put my trust in the. I wil comforte my self in Gods word, yea I wil hope in God, and not feare. What can flesh then do vnto me?

They were me daily in my wordes: all y^e they imagine, is to do me euill. They hold all together, & depe them selues close: they marck my stappes, how they maye catch my soule. But in wayne, for it shal escape the: and why? the (o God) in thy displeasure shalte cast downe such people. Thou tellest my slicings, thou puttest my teares in thy bottell, and remembersthem. When so euer I call vpon the, myne enemies are put to flight: wherby I knowe, that thou art my God. In Gods wordes wil I reioyce, in the LORDES wordes wil I comforte me. Re in God do I trust, & am not a fraid: what can man the do vnto me! Vnto the (o God) wil I paye my vowes, vnto y^e wil I geue thales & prayse. For thou hast deliuered my soule fro death, & my feete fro fallinge. y^e I maye walke before God in y^e lighte of y^e yuuge.

The LVII. A psalme of Dauid.

The XXXI. A psalme of Salomon.

Let the kinge thy indygente (o God) and thy right iustnesse vnto the kyn ge some. That he maye governe the people a cotinge vnto right, and defen-dyng poore. That the mountaynes maye keepe peace, and the little hilles righte iustice vnto the people. He shal kepe the symple folke by their right, defende the childre of the poore, and purryshe the wrongeous doer.

Thou shalt be feared as longe as yf Son and the Moone endureth, from one gene-ratione to another. He shal come downe like the sun in a flecke of wolle, and like the sunne that water yf earth. In his tyme shal rightnesse flourish, yee and a bundance of peace, so longe as the Moone endureth.
His dominion shalbe from the one sea to the other, and from the floude vnto the wold landes. They that dwell in the wildernes, shal salute the kinge, & his enemies shal lide theuill. The Kinges of the sea and of the land shal bringe presentes, yf Kinges of Arabia shall offer giftes. All ynges shal worshippe him, & all he that shal do him iurye. For he shal deliuer the poore where euer, & the needy yf hath no helpe. He shal be fauorable to the simple & poore, he shal purge the foules of such as be in aduersitye. He shal deliuer their soules from extor-sion & wronge, & beate shal their bloude be in his sight. He shal iure, & vnto him shalbe made of y golde of Arabia: Prayer shal be made vnto him, & daylie shal he be prayed. There shalbe an heape of come in the wylde vpon the hilles, his frute shal shallute Libanus, & shal be greene in the cite, like the rose vpon the earth. His name shal enteadings had not mys slippe. And why?

I was grued at yf I wold, so fe the vngodly in such prosperite. For they are in no perill of death, but stonde fast like a palace. They come in no misfortune like other folke, neither are they plagued like other men. And this is the cause that they be so safe vp in pryde, & ouerwhelmed with cruell and unrighteous-nesse. Their eyes swell for fardness, they do not what they lyst. Corrupte are they, and speake blasphemies maliciously, proude and presumptuous are their widdes. They stretch forth their mouth vnto the heauen, & their tongue goeth thorow the woldes. Ther fore fall the people vnto them, and there ousith they no small auantage. Cursed be they (they) how shalbe God perceaued it: is there knowledge in the most hiest? Lo, these are the vngodly, these prosper in the woldes, & the se haue riches in possession. Shalbe I then deny my hert in vayne (though the J) & wash my bondes in innocency? Wherefore shalbe I be then purgish daylie, & be chafened euery morninge? Hee I had almost also sayde cerna the yf he be to, then shalbe I haue condemned the generacion of thy children.
Then thoughte I to vnderstande this, but it was to harde for me. Once I wrote in of Sanctuary of God, & considered the ende of these men. Namely, how thou hast set the in a slippery place, that thou maiest cast the downe headynges & destroye the. O how sodonly do they consume, perish, & come to a fear full ende? I see euen like as a dream when one awaketh, so maifest thou their ymge to vanish out of the cite. Thus my hert was grieved, & it wente euen thorow my reyno.
So foolish was I and ignorant, and as it were a deest before the. Neuertheless, I am allwaye by the, thou hold est me by my right hande. I haue befeime with thy cos-cel, and afterwarde receaued me vnto glory. O what is there prepared for me in heauen: there is no thinge vpon earth, that I be-fere in comparison of the. My flesh and my hert sayleth, but God is the strength of my hert, and my porcion for euer. For lo, they that forsake the, shal perishe, then destroyest all them that committe fornicacion agaynst the. But it is good for me, to hold me fast by God, to put my trust in the L O R D E God, and to speake of all thy workes.

 The LXXVII. psalme of Dauid.

Eare my lawe (o my people) incline yo eares vnto y wordes of my mouth.
I will open my mouth in parables, and spake of thinges of olde. Which we haue heere and knowe, and such as our fa thers haue tolde vs. That we shalbe not by driuen from the children of the generacions to come: but to shewe the honour of the LOR DE, his mighte and wonderfull wordes that he hath done. He made a couenante with Jacob, and gaue Israel a lawe, which he co manded our forefathers to teach their chil dren. That their posterite might knowe it, and the children which were yet in boine.

To the intent y when they came up, they might shewe their children the same. That they also might purchase their trust in God, & not to forget what he had done, but to kepe his commandementes. And not to be as their fathers, a forward and euertwarte generacion, a generacion that set not their face a night, and whose spere was not true towarde God. Like as the children of E phraim, which beinge harnesssed and carrie ge bowes, turne them silues backe in the ty me of bazeayll. They kepe not the coue nante of God, & wolde not walke in his lawe.

They forgat what he had done, and the wonderfull wordes that he had spoken for them. Manye thinges byd he in the sighte of their fathers in the sonde of the gyp sen in the silde of Zoan. He deneged the see and let them go thoro it, and made the waters to stonde like a wall. In the daye cyme he led them with a quade, and all the righte thoro with a light of fyre. He clo use the hard rockes in the wilderness, and ga uer them drynke therof, as it had bene out of the greates deynge. He broughte waters out of the flint rocke, so that they queth out like the waters. Yet for all this they syn ned agaynst him, and provoked the most best in the wilderness. They perced God in their hearts, and requyred meate for the ir lust. For the space agaynst God and say de: Yes, yes, God shal prepare a table in the wilderness. I will bet. Lo, he smote the ro ckes, and the waters streame queth out, and the flint was flowe withall: but here can be gathered and poude flesh for his people. And the LORDE herde this, he was wroth, for the fyre was kindled in Ja cob, and he was displeasur agaynst Israel.

Because they beloued not in God, and put not their trust in his helpe. So he comma nded the cloudes shone, and opened the boxes of heauen. He rained downe manna vpon them for to eate, and gaue them bred from heauen. Then are they angels sode, for he sent them meate ynough. He caused the east wynde to blowe vnder the braken, and thow his power he broughte in the fourth wynde. He made flesh to raine vpon them as chicke an dyll, and feathered foules like the sonde of y see. Let it fall amonge their trees

The fyre consumed their young men, and their maydes were not given to marraige.

Their priestes were slayne with the sword, and there were no ydolatours to be found. So the LORD made it as one cut of slepe, and like a gigantee refused with wyne. He smote his enemies in y tender partes, and put them to a per percell shame. He refused the tabernacle of Iuda, and chose not the tribe of Ephraim. He refused also, he chose y tribe of Iuda, which hill of Zion which he loued. And then he builded his temple on hye, and layd y foundation of it like y ground, that it might not personally endure. He chose Dauid also his signaile, and took him awaye from the shepe foldes. For they haue drowned Jacob, and leyd waste his dwelling place. Remember our olde tymes, let us haue mercy vpon us: that thou shalt see: for we are come to grace againe.

Helpe vs O God of Sauerour: for y glory of thy name: dilyer vs, & forgive vs of synne for y names sake. Wherefore shall y heathen saye: where is now their God? Goode on shepherde of Israel, thou y^e ledest Jacob like a flocke of shepe: shewe y^e selfe then y^e strength vpo y^e Chebrons. Before Ephraim, Be Jamin & Ma-nkiss: shew vpo thy power & come helpe vs. Turne vs agayne (O God) shewe the light of thy countenance & we shal be whole. O LORD God of hostes, how long wilt thou be angry our the praye of thy people? Thou hast hid the mych the bed of ceares, yet thou hast taken the place of the ceares to drynke. Thou hast made vs a very strife vnto o^r neighbours, & o^r enemies laugh vs to scorne.

Turne vs agayne (thou God of hostes) shewe the light of thy countenance, & we shal be whole. Thou hast broughte a vnynde out of Egipte, thou dost cast out y^e heathen, & plant it. Thou mayest ronne for it, & canst not take rote, for y^e filled the lode. The hills were covered with the shadowe of it, & th^e were the stronge Cedreues w^{ch} the bowes thereof. She stretched out hir braiches vnto the sea, & hir bowes into the water: Why hast thou then broken downe hir hedge, that al they which go by, plucke of hir grapes?

The wilde boar out of the wood hath wurt in y^e & the beestes of the felds haue deuoured it. Turne y^e agayne (thou God of hostes) let them come from heauen, beholde & visit this vnynde. What meane it, that thy right hand hath placed, & the sonne whom thou mayest somoch of for thy self. For why: it is bit with fire, & y^e reb waist: o let the perishe at the rebake of thy wrath.

Let thy house be upon the man of thy right hand, & upon the man wh^{ch} thou mayest somoch off for thine owne self. And so will not we go backe from the ob: let vs lye, & we shal call vpon thy name. Turne vs agayne. O LORD God of hostes, shewe the light of thy countenance, & we shal be whole.

The LXXX. A psalme of Asaph.

Singe merly vnto God which is o^r strength make a chearful noyse vnto y^e God of Jacob. Take y^e psalme, bynt vnto the cabinet, the merry harpe & late. Shewe vpo the tres perces in the new Moone, vpon o^r holme staffe boye. For this is the staffe of Jhad, & a lawe of the God of Jacob. This he obtained in Joseph for a testimony: when he came out of Egipte, & had herbe a straunge language. When he cast his shulder from the burthe, & when his bowes were defuared fro the poore. Why thou calldest vpon me in trouble, I helpe thee & burde thee, what tyme as the storme fell vpo thee, I proued the also at the warer of strife. Gela.

Heare o my people, for I assure the o Jhrael, yf thou wilt hearken vnto me: There shal no straunge God be in the, neither shal there be worshipe eny other God. I am the LORD thy God, which broughte the out of the lode of Egipte: open thy mouth wyde, & J shal fill it. But my people wolde not heare my voyce, & J shal wolde not obeye me. So J gaue the vp vnto their owne hartes lust, & theye foloweth their owne ymaginacions. O wofy people: wolde o beye me, for yf J shal wolde walke in my wayes. J shulde soone purge them their enemies, & turne myne hode agaynst their aduersaries. The haters of y^e LORD shulde mych J shal, but their tyme shulde en dure for ever. They shalde sicker them with the fynest wheate floure, & facis hit them with bo ny out of the stony rocke.

The LXXL A psalme of Asaph.

Ou stoneth in the congregacion of the goddes, & is a iudge amonge the iudges. How longe will ye geue wisge iudgment, & excepte the persones of the vngodly: Gela. We sate the poore & father lesse, for that soch as be in neede & necessity haue right. Delure the out caste & poore, & saue hym from the hande of the vngodly. Neuertheles, they wil not be letted & vnderstonde, but walke on still in hardnesse: theye must all the foundations of the lode be mued. I haue sayde: ye are goddes, ye all are the chylde of y^e most hysse. But ye shal bye lidenen, & fall like one of the ymaginacion. Try se (O God) y^e iudge thou the earth, for all ha: then are thine y^e cheritance.

The LXXXII A psalme of Asaph.

Goode na: thy conge (O God) kepe not y^e still silence, restrayne not y^e selfe (O God). So lo, thy enemies make a murmur rings, & they y^e hate the, lift vpo their braue. They ymagin (a) sauely agaynst y^e people, & take counsell agaynst thy secret ones. Coma sa ye theye let vs receite them out from amonge the people, that the name of Jhrael maye be put out of remembrance. For they haue cast their heades together with one consent, & are cōfederat: agaynst the.  force the soule of thy seruant, for vnto the LORD E do I lift up my soule. For thou LORD E art good and gracious, 2 of gra-tious mercy vnto all them that call vpon the.

Geue care LORD E vnto my prayer, and ponde my humble desire. In the tyme of my trouble I call vpon the, for thou hearest me. Amonge the goddes there is none like the O LORD E, there is not one that can do as thou doest. All nacions whom thou hast made, shall come and worshipe before the LORD E, and shal glouise thy name. For thou art grace, thou doest worshipe because thou art God alone. Let me in thy

LORDE God my Sauryd, I ric daye are vnto my callinge. For my soule is full of trouble, & my life is a wech nye vnto deil.

I am counted as one of the that go downe in the pyre, I am ead as a ma that hath no help. See amonge the dead like vnto the y in the graue, which be out of remembrauon, and are cast awaye from thy honde.

Thou hast layd me in the lowest pyre, in y hardness and in the depe. Thy indignauon is hard vpon me, and thou wast me with all thy frowde. Sela. Thou hast permaye myne acquaintance farre fro me, & made me to be abhorred of them: I am so fast in presence that I can noc get forth.

My sight faylde for very trouble. O R-DE, I call dayly vpo the, and stretch out my handes vnto the. Drest thou shew wouderes amonge the dead? Can the physiciais resist them vp agayne, that they maye pray-se the: Maye thy lounges kyndes be shew in the graue, of thy faithfulness in desolation? Maye thy wondrous workes be thome in the darke, of thy righteousness in the londe where all thinges are forgoten?

Vnto the I ric (o LORDE) and early co-mence my prayer before the. LORDE, why passest thou awaye my soule? Wherefore by-west thou thy face from: My strength is gone for very sorow and misery, with faintness: Do I beare thy burthens. Thy wrath full displeasur goeth out me, the feare of the oppresseth me. They come rounde about me daylye like water, and compass me together on euery syde. My louers and fis-des hast thou put awaye fro me: and turned awaye myne acquaintance.

The LXXXVIII. psalme of staban the Eliabab.

Whosome shal be all myne of the lo-uon, thy kyndesse of the LORDE, in my mouth wil I euer be shewinge thy faithfulness fro one generacion to another. For I haue sayde: mercy shal be set vp for euer, thy faithfulness shal thon stablish in the heuens. I haue made a cowntain with my chylren, I haue sworn vnto Dauid my seruauit. Thy seve wil I stablish for e-uer, and set vp thy Throne from one generacion to another. Sela.

O LORDE, the very heauens shal praise thy wondrous workes, yet & thy faithfulness in y congregation of the sayntes. For who is he amonge the cloudes, that maye be compared vnto the LORDE? For what is he amonge the goddes, that is like vnto the LORDE?
God is greatly to be feared in the couent of the sayntes, & to be had in reverence of all the that are about him. O LORDE God of hostes, who is like vnto the in power: thy truce-ty is rounde aboute the. Thou rulest the pyde of the see, thou stillest the waves therof, wher they arise. Thou breakest the proude, like one that is wounded, thou scar-rest thine enemies abode with thy myghtie arme. The heuens are thine, the earth is established: thou hast layd the foundacion of the world: and all that therein is. Thou hast made the north and the south, Tabor and Seron shal reioys in thy name. Thou hast a myghtie arme, stronge is thy hande, and hye is thy righte hande. Righteousnes and equite is the habitation of thy face, mercy and truce go before thy face. Blessed is the people (o LORDE) that can reioys in the, and walke in the light of thy countenance. Their delte is in thy name all the daye longe, and thow thy righte hande they shalbe exalted. For thou art the glory of their strength: & thow thy fauour shal euen lift vp ware homes. The LORDE is oure defendour, and the holy one of Israel is oure kynge. Thou spakst some tyme in visiovnto thy sayntes, and saydest: I haue sayd helpe vpon one that is myghtie, I haue exalted helpe vpon one cur of the people. I haue founde Dauid my seruant, with my holy oy-le haue I annoynted him. My honde shal holde him fast, and my arme shal strength him. The enemye shal not ouercome him, and the sonne of wickednesse shal not hurte him. I shal smyte downe his foes before his face, and slaye them that hate him.

My mercy also t my mercy shalbe with him, and in my name shal his name be exalted. I wil set his honde in the ce, and his righte honde in the floodes. He shal call me, thou art my father, my God, and the strength of my saluacion. And I wil make him my firstborne, beyer then the kinges of the earth.

My mercy wil I kepe for him for evermore, and my couenaunt shall stonde fast with him. His sede wil I make to endure for euer, yete and his Throne as the dayes of heauen. Surely his childre forsake my lawe, and make none in my iudgements. As they breake mye ordinaunces, and kepe not my commaundmentes. I wil vyset their offences with the rode, and their synes with scourges. Fleurethelless, my louynge kyndnesse wil I not wearily take from him, ner suffer my wrath to sayle. My couenaunt wil I not breake, ner disanulle the thinge of is gone oute of my lippes. I haue sworne once by my holynesse, that I wil not sayle Dauid.

His sede shal endure for euer, and his seate as so lite as the Some before me. He shal stonde fast for euermore as the Moone, and as the faithfull witness in heauen.

Sela. But now thou forsakest and abhorrest thine annoynted, and art displeasid at him. Thou hast turned backe the couenaunt of thy seruante, and cast his crowne to the grounde. Thou hast ouerthrowne all his hedges, and brok downe his stronge holdes. Al theye that go by, spoyle him, he is become a rebuke vnto his neyghboure. Thou steerst vp the right hande of his enemies, and makest all his aduersaries to rayse. Thou hast taken awaye the strength of his sword, and geuest him not victory in the battayll. Thou hast put out his glory, and cast his Throne downe to the grounde. The dayes of his youth hast thou shorzened, and couered him with dishonoure. Sela.

LORDE, how longe wilt thou hyde thy self: For euer: shal thy wrath burne like fyre: O remembre how shoure my tyme is, hast thou made all men for naught: What man is he that toucheth, and shal not be deaht: Make a miracle vnto thy owne soule from the honde of hell: Sela.

LORDE, where are thy olden louynge kynd-nesses, which thou sworeest vnto Dauid in thy cruelty: Remembre LORDE the rebuke that multitude of the people do vnto thy seruantes, & how I haue borne it in my bosome. Where shal thine enemye blaspheme, & shalder of foote steps of y annoynted. Thea shal be the LORDE for euermore: Amen. Amen.

The LXXXIX psalme. A prayer of Moyses the man of God.

LORDE, thou art oure refuge from generation to another. Before thy mountaynes were brought forth, and euer the earth & the woode were made, thou art God from euerslastyng, and wouldest not ouernde. Thou turnest man to behelious, Agayne, thou sayest I come agayne to the children of men. For a the wandes yeanes in thy sighte are but as yesterdaye that is past, and like as it were a nighte watch.

As sene as thou searchest them, theye cur as a shepe, and sibe are as theye lyke the grasse. In the morninge it is green and greeweth vp, but in the eveninge it is cutt downe and wythered. For we continue awaye in thy displeasure, and are as strag at thy wretched full indignacion. Thou searchest cure misteken before the, and our secret synes in the lighte of thy countenance.

For when thou art angrye, all dayes are gone, we bringe of yeares to nothinge as it were a tale that is tolde. The dayes of our age are in .score yeares: & then: & then: men be so stronge that theye come out .fiftye yeares, yete in their strengthe then be labour and sorowe: so sone passeth it awaye, & we are gone. But who regardeth the power of thy wrath, thy foes full of terrible displeasure! O teach vs to remembre oure dayes, that we maye applye oure herces vnto wyrdome.

Turne the agayne (O LORDE) as the last, and be gracious vnto thy seruantes. O satisfie vs with thy mercy, and that sence shal we reioyse and be glad all the dayes of our liue. Comforte vs agayne, now as for the tyme that thou hast plagued vs, and for the yeares wherein we haue suffered aboyance.

S Hence thy seruantes thy wofle, & the children thy glory. And the glorious markest of the LORDE oure God be vpon vs, and prosper thou the woit of oure bondes vpon vs, o prosper thou oure bondes wofle.

The XCI. psalme.

It is a good thinge to geue thanke se vnto yf name, o most byssi. To all of thy louyng & vndresse early in the mornyng, and of thy tructh in the night season.

Vpon an instrument of ten stringes, vpon

For thou LORDE hast made me glad thro thy wordes. And I wil reioyse euer the operation of thy bondes. O LORDE, how many are thy wordes, thy thowndes are my hope. In thy myn man wil not knowe this, & a foole wil not vnderstande it. That the vngodly are grasse, as the grasse, and that all the wordes of wickednes do flourish, to be destroyed for euer. But thou LORDE o

For thy enemies (o LORDE) lo, they are, they shal perishe, and all the wordes of wickednes shal be sacred aboue. But my hope in shal be exalted like the borne of an Ome me: I shal be annoynted with fresh oyle. My eneye also shal se his lust of myne enemies, & myne eare shall heare his deysie of the wicked yf rise up agaynst me. The righteous shal flourish like a palmtree, and growe like a cedre of Libanus. Such as be planted in ous & green. That they maye shewe, how true the LORDE is my strengthe, and that the re is no vngodlynesse in him.

ter of the see are mightie, & rage heartily: but yet the LORDE that dwelleth on hye, is mightier. Thy rethimonces (o LORDE) are very sure, holynesse becommeth thyne house, for euer.

The XCLII. psalme.

LORDE GOD, to whom vengeance belongeth: then GOD to whom vengeance belongeth, shewe thy self.

Arise thou iudge of the worlde, & rewar-de the poude after their desuynge. LOR-shal the vngodly triumphe? How longe shal all reioyed hoers speake so disdaynably, and make such poude boastyng: They smyte do wene thy people (o LORDE) & trouble thine hereage. They murder the widdome and the straunger, and put the father lesse to deathe. And yet they iare: I shal be gardeth it not. Take hede, ye vnwise amonge the people: o ye foolcs, when wil ye vnderstande? He that planted the rose, shal he mayest geue him patience in tyme of aduersity, until the pyre be dygged up for the vngod-dly. For the LORDE wil not saue his people, neither wil he forsake his inheritaunce.

And why? indygent shal be turned a-gayne vnto righte iustnesse, and all such as be true of here shal folowe it. Who yf steyth

S Come, let vs prayse the LORD, let vs heraldy reioyse in the strength of oure saluacion. Let vs come before his presence with thankesyngge, & shewe oure self glad in him wth psalme. The see is his, for he made it, and his hondes prepared the diuallise.

O come, let vs worshippe and bowe downe our selues: Let vs kneele before the LORD, our maker. For he is our God: as for vs, we are the people of his pasture, and the shepe of his hedges. To daye yf ye wil heare his voyce, hard not youre hartes, as whē ye prouoked in tyme of temptacion in the wilderness. Where y^e fathers cōspired me, proued me, and saue my wrotes. S Syngge vnto the LORD, a new song, syngge vnto the LORD all the whole earth. Syngge vnto y LORD, & prayse his name, be thankyngge of his saluacion from daye to daye. Declare his honoure amonge the heathen, and his wonders amonge all people. For y LORD is great, and can not woldely be praysted: he is more to be feared then all goddes. As for all y goddes of the heathen, they be but Idols, but it is the LORD that made the heaues.

Thankesyngge and worshippe are before him, power and honoure are in his Sanctuary. As ye vnto the LORD, o ye kinredes of the heathen: as ye vnto the LORD, worshippe and strength. As ye vnto the LORD, the honoure of his name, bringe

Tell it out amonge the heathen, that the LORD is Kinge: and that it is he which hath made the rounde worldes so fast, that can not be moued, and how that he shall iudge the people righteously. Let the heathen reioyse, and let the earth be glad: let the seades be ioyfull and all that is in it, let the trees of the woodd leape for ioyes. Before the LORD, for he commaundeth: for he commaundeth to iudge the earth: yee wth righteously shal he iudge the worldes, and y^e people and his crouche.

The XCVI. psalme.

The LORD is Kinge, the earth shall be glad therof: yeeche multitude of the Iles maie be glad therof. Caldeo and barchonnesse are rounde aboute his righteousnesse and iudgemente: as the habitation of his seat. There goeth a fyre before him, to burne up his enemies on every syde. His lightenynges grete shynen vnto the worldes, the earth seeth it & is afraid. The hilles melde like waxe at the presence of y LORD, at the presence of the LORD of the whole earth. The very heaues declare his righteousnesse, & all people his glory. G^o sounded be all they that worshippe him, and delite in their Idols: worshippe him all y goddes. Sion heareth of it and reioyscheth: yee all y daughters of Iuda are glad because of the iudgementes, O LORD. For the LORD is the most hyghty one: all the earth, thou art created: farr above all goddes. O ye that loue the LORD, se that ye haue the thinge which is euill: the LORD is p^{er}fect in the soles of his sayntes, he shal deliuer the from the honde of the vngodly. Ther is spunge up a lighte for the righteous, and a ioyfull gladnesse for such as be true harted.

Reioyse the soule in the LORD, ye righteous: and geue thankes for a remembrance of his holynesse.

The XCVII. psalme.

S Syngge vnto the LORD, a new song, for he hath done marvelous thinges. With his owne righte hande and with his holy arme hath he gotten the victory. The XCIII. psalme.

The LORDE is kynge, be the people ne ver so unpacient: he sitteth vpon the Cherubins, be the earth neuer so un-quiete. The LORDE is greate in Sion, & his abode all people. O let men geue the the LORDE is gracious, his mercy is enerlast-inge, and his clemency endureth from generacion to generacion.

The C. psalme. A thatesgyng of Danid.

A songe shalke of mercy and iudgment, yet vnto the (o LORDE) wil I synge. O let me haue vnderston-ding in the waye of godlynesse, vntill they see that thou come vnto merz: so shal I wal-ke in my house of an innocent herte. I wil take no wicked thinge in honde, I hate the synne of vnfaithfulnesse, it shal not cleue to me. A frowarde herte shal departe fro me, I wil not knowe a wicked personer.

Who so presely standeth his neighbou-re, him wil I destroye: Who so hath a pious de loke: & an hys stomache, I maye not a waye with him. Myne eyes shal loke for soch as be faithfull in thy londe, y they maye dwell with me: and who so lotheth a godly life, shal be my seruante. There shall no discorde fill personer dwell in my house, be that tellet lyes shal not tary in my sight. I shal doe no destroye all the vngodly of the lende, that all wicked doctrs maye be roced out of the cite of the LORDE.

The CI. psalme.

Heare my prayer (o LORDE) and let my crye come vnto the. Hide not thy face frome in the tyme of my trouble: enclyne thine eares vnto me when I call. O heare me, and thar righe soue. For my dayes are consumed awaye like smoke, & my bones are burnt vp as it were a fyre bande.

My herte is synned downe and wythered like grasse, so that I forgotte to eate my bred.

For the voyce of my prayer, my bone wil cresse cleue: my flesch. I am become like a Pellicane in the wylderne, and like an Oule in a broken wall. I weete, and am euen as it were a sparrowe sittinge alone vpon the house toppe. Myne enemies reuyle me all the daye longe, they laugh nyeto come, and are swome together against me. I asked with my bred, and merle my drynke with wepyng. And that because of y indignacion and wrath, for thou hast taken me vp, and cast me awaye. My dayes are gone like a shadowe, and I am wythered like grasse. But thou (o LORDE) endurest foreuer, and thy remembraunce thow out all generacions. Arise therfore and haue mercy vpon Sion, for it is tyme to haue mercy vpon her, yet the tyme is come. And why? thy seruantes haue a lone to bit stones, & it piteeth them to se her in the dust. The hethen shal feare thy name (o LORDE) and all the kynge of the earth thy maiesty. For the LORDE shal bylde vp Sion, and shal appeare in his glory. He turneth him vnto the prayer of the poore destitute, and despyseth not their distre. This shal be witness for those y come after, that the people which shal be borne, maye praise the LORDE.

For he lotheth downe from his Sanctuary, out of the heauen doeth the LORDE be-holde the earth.

And the yonge Lyons which were after the praye, and seek their meate at God. But when the Some ariseth, they gather away together, and lye them downe in their denes. Then geeth man forth in his meate, and to kill his londe vntill the evening. LORDE, how many folde are thy meates, right wisely hast thou made the all: yet the earth is full of thy riches. So with greace and wyde see also, water in artinges ceping immemorable, both small and greace beastes. There go the shippes out, and there is that Luziathan, whom thou hast made, to take his passyme therein. They were all vpon the, that thou mayest gather meate in due season. Whiche thou wast in them, they gather it: whiche thou openest in the bonds, they are filled with good.

And when thou bydest thy face, they are fearful: yf thou takest away their birth, they dye, and are turned agayne to their dust. Agayne, when thou laicest thy death go forth, they are made, and so thou renewest the face of the earth. The glorious magnety of the LORDE endureth for aye, and the LORDE increaseth in his meate. The earth trembleth at the lorde of him, he doth but touch yf him, and they smolt. I will synge vnto the LORDE as long as I lyue, I will prayse my God while I haue my beinge. O that my wordes might please him, for my trust is in the LORDE. As for synners, they shall be consumed out of the earth, and the mighty shall come to an ende: but prayse thou the LORDE, O my soule. Alleluia.

The Ciii. psalme.

Give thanks vnto the LORDE, and call vpon his name: tell the people what he hath done. O let your songes be of him: prayse him, and let your callinge be of all his wonderous woordes. Give his holy name a good report, in their heates ruioste that see the LORDE. Great is the LORDE, and his strength, like his face evermore. Remember the mathe-worles that he hath done, his wonders and the indignities of his month. O ye sonne of Abraham his seruante, ye children of Isaac his choyse. He is the LORDE oure God, whose punishments are theirowne in all the world. He is alwaye in my full of his seruante, and promise that he made to the same generacions.

Rec the conueneance that he made wth Abraham, and the oath that he swore vnto Isaac. And appointed the same vnto Jacob for a lawe, and to Israel for an everlastinge testament. Sayenge: vnto the wil I geue the londe of Canaan, the lorde of your beheritage. When there was yet but a fewe of them, and they strangers therein. What tyme as they wente from one nation to another, from one kyngdome to another. It sufficed no man to hurte them, but repoued even kynges for their sakes. Touch not myne annoynted, no my prophetes no haime. Neouer he called for a vetch vpon the lorde, and destroyed all the pouison of iud.

But he had sent a man befor them, euen Joseph which was solde to be a bondseruaunt. They hurte his face in the stocks, the yron pearced his herce. Small the tyme that his wordes came, and till the wordes of LORDE had tried him. Then sent the kinge and caused him to be deluyered, the pryce of the people had let him go. He made him lorde of his house, and ruler of all his substaunce. That he mighte enforme his pryces a fect his wil, and teach his Senarow wysdome. Israel also came in to Egipte, and Jacob was a stranger in the lorde of Ham.

But he increased his people exceedingly, and made them stronger then their enemies. Whose here is a tued, so that they hated his people, and dealt vncruely with his seruantes. Then sent he the Moses his seruante, and Aaron whom he had choyse. These byd his cokens among them, and wonders in the lorde of Ham. He sent darcknesse and it was darcke, for they were not obedient vnto his woordes. He turned their waters in to bloude, and slewe their fische. Their londe brought forth frogges, yet euen in their kynges chambers. He spake the wordes, and their came all maner of flies, and their came all maner of sties, and their came all their quarters. He gaue them hale stones for raine, and flammes of fyre in their lorde. He smote their vnywardes, and sige trees, and destroyed the trees that were in their coastes. He spake yf woordes, and their came gresshoppers, and catyppers innumerable. These are up all the grasse in their lorde, and deuoured the frutes of their growde. He smote all yf first borne in their lorde, euen the dirst of alle their substance. He brought the same forth wth silver and golde, there was not one fible persone among their crybes. Egipte was glad of their departing, for they were a fraich of the world. He spied out a cloud to be a conueryng, and fyre so gawellig in the night season.

The Psalme.

he sheweth his people the power of his word, that he maye geue them the heretage of the heithen. The workes of his h[an]- des are wondrous iudgment, all his comma[n]- des are true. They stonde fast for ever & his mercie is true. He sent downe his spirit vnto his people, he hath commanded his cemauntes for euer, holy & true is his name. The feare of the LORD is the begynnyng of wysdome, a good understandynge bane all they that do theraf-ter the payse of it endureth for euer.

The CXL. psalme. Galleluya.
Blessed is the man of feareth the LORD DE, & hath greates deliue in his com-mauntementes. His seide shall be within upon earth. The generation of the faythfull shall be blessed. Riches & p[ro]- fit shall be in his house, & his righteousnes shall be in his way. Vnto the godly there is light in the darcknesse: he is mercie full vnto the righteous. Wel is him that followeth & righteous. Wel is him that is without guile. & p[ro]- fiteth his wayes w[ith] discrecion. For he shall neuer be moued, the righteous shall be had in an euerlastynge remembrance. He wil not be afraid for any euell thynges, his heret stondeth fast. He belongeth in of the LORD. His her-et shall stand, he wil not shakke, vntill he shalt desire vpon his enemies. He hath his hande abode, & geueth to the poore, his right hande remauneth for euer, his home shall be in peace & hono[r]. The vngodly shall be as a sheal greue him: he shall quash w[ith] his teeth & consume awaye, & the desire of the vngodly shall perish. The CXL. psal. Galleluya.

By Rayse the LORD (O ye seruantes) Praise the name of the LORD Blessed be the name of the LORD DE, his this hyme forth for euermore. The LORDS name is worthy to be praised, fro the foun[n]tayne of the Some vnto the gountayne of the same. The LORD is hye above all heithen, and his glory above the heavens. Who is like vnto the LORD our God, yf hath his dwelling so hye, whiche is himself, to tholde that is in heaven & earth? Whiche raketh vp the symbol of the dust, and lifeth the poore out of the myc. That he maye set him among the princes, euen amonge the princes of the people. Whiche maketh the barren woman to be a mother, & to be a full mother of children. Galleluya.

that strange people. Iuba was his Sactuary, Ibad his dominion. The feare that, and fled, Jordan turned backe. The moontaynes slipped like rammes, & the litle hilles like yonge shepe. What ayled the e thou see that thou fleddest: and thou Jordan, that thou turnedst backe? He maye saynes, that ye slipped like rammes: and ye litle hilles, like yonge shepe? The earth trembled at the presence of the LORD, at the presence of the God of Jacob. Whiche turned the harde rocke in to a stonynge water, & the flint ston in to a spryngynge well.

Here the hebreue begynneth the CXV. psalme.
Let vnto vs (O LORD) not vnto vs, but vnto thy name geue the prayse, for thy loue genecy and faithfulness. Wherefore shall the heithen saye: where is now their God?
As for oure God, he is in heauen, he doth what soeuer it pleaseth him. Their magics are but sylu[n]e and golde, men the workes of mens handes. They haue mouthes, and speake noce: eyes haue they, but they see noce.
They haue eares, and heare no noyses: but they haue noses, but they smell noce. They haue handes, but they handle noce, they haue feet, but they can not go, neither can they speak the word of their choise. They that made them, are like vnto them, and so are all such as put their trust in them. But let Israel trust in of the LORD, for he is their succoure & defence. Let the house of Aaron put their trust in of the LORD, for he is their succoure & defence. They that feare the LORD, let the put their trust in the LORD, for he is their succoure & defence. The LORD is mynde full of vs, & blessed is he, blessed is he house of Israel, blessed is he house of Aaron. We be blessed all them that feare the LORD, both small & great. The LORD increaseth vs more more: you, and yere dilidit. For ye are blessed of the LORD, which made heauen & earth. All the vhole heauens are the LORDS, but the earth hath he geue vnto the chyldren of men. The deed prayse the LORD, neither all they that go downe in to sylu[n]e. But we will praise the LORD, from this tyme forth for euermore. Galleluya.

The CXIII. psalme. th/ Am we: pleased, yf the LORD be herde yf we crye of my praye. Full as he hath endued his care vnto my name, ther fore wil I cal: vnto him as long as I live. The snares of death are about me, I founde trouble and griefe. I crye vnto the LORD, & he heareth my voyce, & sendeth his mercie vnto me, & his lovinge kindness vnto me. I crye vnto the LORD, & he heareth my voyce, & sendeth his mercie vnto me, & his lovinge kindness vnto me.

The Psaltes.

The cxxij. psalme.

called I open y name of the LORDE: o LORDE: o myn rescue. Gracious is y LORDE: & righteous. yee come Ged is mercifull.

The: ORDE pusefnesch y simple, I was broughte done, and he helpe me. Turne agayne then vnto thy rest o my saule: for the LORDE hath geuen the thy desyre.

psal. 98

And why: thou hast deliuered my saule from death, myne eyes from teares, and my feete from fallinge. I wil walke before y LORDE, in the lenche of the luyng.

The CXV. psalme.

This psalme do the scribures sayn vnto us that godd before, and in his hand, than the CXVI. psalme.

2 cor. 4. c Rom. 2. 2

Deluded, and therefore haue I spokt, but I was sore troubled. I sayde in my heart: All men are liere.

What rewardes shal I geue vnto y LORDE, for all the benefices y he hath done vnto me? I wil receaue the cuppe of saluacion, and call vpon the name of the LORDE.

I wil paye my vowes in the presence of all his people, righte deare in the sighte of y LORDE is the deatch of his sayntes. O LORDE, I am thy seruaunt, I am thy seruaunt, and the sonne of chy handmayne, thou hast broken my bondes in souer. I wil esse the sacrifice of thankes geuyng, and wil call vpon the name of the LORDE. I wil paye my vowes vnto the LORDE in the sighte of all his people, in the centre of the LORDES house, cut in the mybbest of ste, o Ierusalem. Halleluya.

The CXVI. psalme.

Rom. 11. c

Prayse the LORDE all ye Gentiles, laude him all ye people. For his mercifull kyndnes is euer more and more: towarde vs, & the truce of the LORDE endureth for euer. Halleluya.

The CXVII. psalme.

Geue thankes vnto the LORDE, for he is gracious, and his mercy endureth for euer. Let Irael now confesse, y his mercy endureth for euer. Let the house of Aaron now confesse, that his mercy endureth for euer. Let the house of Levi now confesse, that his mercy endureth for euer.

Exo. 22. 2 1. cor. 10. 2 Rom. 2. 2

Let the house of Gad confesse, that his mercy endureth for euer. I called vpon the LORDE in trouble, and the LORDE herbe me. I will thank y: for he is my helper, I will thank y: for he is my helper, I will thank y: for he is my helper, I will thank y: for he is my helper. It is better to trust in the LORDE, than to put thy confidence in a man. It is better to trust in the LORDE, than to put thy confidence in a man. It is better to trust in the LORDE, than to put thy confidence in a man. It is better to trust in the LORDE, than to put thy confidence in a man.

Whiche compassed me rounde aboute, but the name of the LORDE: and I destroyed them. They kepte me in on euery syde, but with the name of the LORDE, I wil destroye them.

They came aboute me like a beeh, & was as hore as the fyre in the thorne, but with the name of the LORDE, I wil destroye them.

They thynk at me, that I mighte fallen: the LORDE was my helpe. The LORDE is my strength, & my songe, & is become my saluacion. The voyce of ioye & mynne in the dwellinges of y righteous, for y righte hande of the LORDE hath gotte the victory.

The righte hande of the LORDE hath gotte the victory, I wil not die, but I will, and declare the wodes of the LORDE.

The LORDE hath hastened & couraged, but he hath not geuen me ouer vnto death. Open me the gates of righteousnes, I maye go in there throug, & geue thauke vnto the LORDE. This is the deatch of the LORDE, the righteous shall exre in thow.

I thank the, y thou hast herbe me, & become my saluacion. The same stone whiche the builders refused, is become the chiefe stone in the corner. This was the LORDE doinge, & it is marvellous in o eyes.

This is the daye which the LORDE hath made, we reioyce and be glad in it. Helpe me LORDE, o LORDE sende vs now prosper.

Blessed be he that cometh in the name of the LORDE, we wish you good lucke, yete he of the house of the LORDE. God with the LORDE, & hath shewd vs lighte. O God the solemne feast with grene braundes, vnto the houses of y outere. Thou art God, & I wil thank the: thou art my God, & I wil prayse the. O geue thauke vnto the LORDE, for he is gracious, & his mercy endureth for euer.

The CXVIII. psalme.

Blessed are those y be vndelisted in the waye: which walke in the lawe of the LORDE. Blessed are they that kepe his commandmentes, & sitte him with their whelkes.

Which walke in his wayes, & be not rebuffed. Thou hast geuen fra yee do to kepe thy commaundementes. O my wayes were established to kepe thy lawes. So shalde I not be confounded. Ie I haue respecte vnto all thy commaundementes. I wil thank the with an vnwaxed heart, because I am learned in thy commandmentes of thy righteousnes. I wil be thy sacrifice, o for alke more neede.

they came aboute me like bees / & were like as the fyre in the thornes / but in the end of the Lorde I will destroye them.

they thrust at me, that I might fall, but the Lorde was my helpe.

The Lorde is my strength / and my songe / wheresome my saluacion.

The voyce of hope and mercy is in the mouthes of the righteous / for the right hande of the Lorde hath gotten the victorye.

The right hande of the Lorde hath prevaileth, the right hande of the Lorde hath gotten the victorye.

I will not feare, but I will beare / and declare the works of the Lorde.

The Lorde hath chastened a correcte me / he hath not geuen me ouer vnto death.

Open me the gates of righteousness / that I maye goe in there thozow / and geue praise vnto the Lorde.

This is the doore of the Lorde / the righteous shall entere in thozow it.

I thank the, that thou hast herde me / & increasid my saluacion.

Thou hast not rebuked the busshers rebellious because the heade stone in the corner. They was the Lordes boynge / and it is wonderous in oure eyes.

Thou hast not rebuked, which the Lorde hath chastened to reioyce and be glad in it.

Thou shalt now O Lorde, O Lorde sende thy spirit vnto me.

Thou shalt be that cometh in the name of the Lorde, me with you good luche / for that is the house of the Lorde.

Thou shalt be the Lorde, & hath the word by light: he hath the solemne feast with greene.

Thou shalt be the Lorde, & hath the word

hope thy statutes.

So shal I not be confounded, whyle I haue respecte vnto all thy commaundmentes.

I will thank the vnto an assigned herce, because I am learned in the iudgements of thy righteousness.

I will hope thy statutes / & forsake me not bitterly.

2 Beth.

2 Where wisthall shall a ponge man clense his waye: Euen by ruyng hym selfe after thy waye.

2 With my whole herce do I seeke the, O see me not go wronge out of thy commaundmentes.

2 Thy wordes haue I kept within my herce, that I shal not synne agayn the.

2 Praised be thou O Lorde, O teach me thy statutes.

2 With my lippes will I be telling out all thy iudgements of thy mouth.

2 I haue as greate delecte in the waye of thy testimonies, as in all manner of riches.

2 I will exercise my selfe in thy commaundmentes, & haue respecte vnto thy cōceptes.

2 My delite shall be in thy statutes, I will not forget thy wordes.

3 Ethel.

3 Do well vnto thy seruants, that I maye hope and kepe thy wordes.

3 Open thou my eyes, and so shall I see the wonderous thynges in thy lawe.

3 I am a stranger vnto my cōscience, O hyde not thy commaundmentes from me.

3 My soule breaketh out, for the very seruice of thy delecte, for I haue alwaye vnto thy iudgements.

3 Thou rebukest the poudre / curst are they that departe from thy commaundmentes.

3 O turne fro me shame and rebuke, for I kepe thy testimonies.

3 Thy iudgements also let me speake agayn the, but thy seruants are occupied in thy statutes.

3 In thy testimonies is my delecte, they are my cōsolacions.

4 Daltch.

4 My soule cleaueth to the dust, O quench thou me accordinge to thy waye.

4 I knowledged my wayes, & thou herdest me, O teach me then thy statutes.

4 Make me to vnderstande the waye of thy commaundmentes, and so shall I trayblysh thy wonderous wordes.

4 My soule melteth awaye for being full, as nestle, O see me by according vnto thy name.

4 Take fro me the waye of lyinge, & doe that me thy lawe.

4 I haue chosen the waye of truth, thy iudgements haue I layed before me.

4 I thank the vnto thy testimonies, O Lorde.

confounde me not,
I will runne the waye of thy commaunde-mentes; whye thou hast comforted my herte.

Teach me / O Lord the waye of thy statutes, and I will hope it unto the ende.

O graunt me vnderstandinge; and I shall hope thy lawe; yee I shall hope it with my life, or whole herte.

Lead me in the path of thy commaunde-mentes; for that is my desire.

Encline mine herte vnto thy testimonies; and not to couetousnes.

Turne awake mine eyes; lest they be-holde vanitie; a quicke me in thy waye.

Stabilithe thy woide in thy seruant; / I maye feare the.

Take awake yee rebuke that I am afrayed of; for the iudgementes are amiable.

Beholde; my desire is in thy commaunde-mentes; O quicke me in thy righte iudgemente.

Let thy louyng mercie come vnto me; / O Lord; and thy lawyng healtie accompanyng me vnto thy woide.

What I maye geue answer vnto my blas-phemers; for my trust is in thy woide.

Take not yee woide of treuth bitere out of my mouth; for my hope is in thy iudgemente.

So shall I alwaye hope thy lawe; yee for perpetuall and euer.

And I will walke at libertye; / for I feele thy commaunde-mentes.

I will speake of thy testimonies euen before kinges; and will not be ashamed.

My desire shall be in thy commaunde-mentes; which I loue.

My handes also will I yst vnto thy commaunde-mentes which I loue; /
for my tal-kyng shall be of thy statutes.

Thinke vpon thy seruant as concey-nyng my woide; / wherein thou hast comforted me to put my trust.

For it is my comforte in my trouble; yee thy woide quickeneth me.

The proud haue me greatly in derisyon; yet thinke not I from thy lawe.

I remember thyne euerydayng iudgemente;
O Lord; and am comforted.

As much as I am afrayed for the vngodlye; for the statutes are my songes in the house of my prayer.

Thinke vpon thy name; O Lord; in the Synagoge; and kepe thy lawe.

My soule longeth for thy lawyng mercie;
for my trust is in thy woide.

When wilt thou come; O Lord; /
I will praye.

purpose to hope thy lawe.

I make mine humble prayer presence with my whole herte; / O Lord; full vnto me accompanyng vnto thy lawe.

I call mine alone wayes to remember; and turne my face in to thy testimonies.

I make haste; and prolonge not to hope thy commaunde-
mentes.

The congregacions of the vngodlye robbed me; but I forget not thy lawe.

At mynighthe stande yee vnto me; for the iudgementes of thy righteousnes.

I am a companyon of all them that trouble the; and kepe thy commaunde-mentes.

The earth; O Lord; is full of thy testimonies; /
Teach me thy statutes.

O Lord; thou hast dealt friendly with thy seruant; accompanyng vnto thy lawe.

I learne me thy righte iudgemente; for I beleue thy commaunde-mentes.

Before I was troubled; I went out; but now I hope thy woide.

Thou art good & friendly; / O Lord; teach me thy statutes.

The proude imagineth spech vnto thy seruant; accompanyng vnto thy lawe.

Their herte is as fat as bytton; for they desire is in thy lawe.

It is good for me; for I haue be-lieued; that I maye learne thy statutes.

The lawe of thy mouth is more precious; then thousandes of golde and silver.

Thy handes haue made me and I will praye; / O Lord; geue me vnderstandinge; that I maye learne thy commaunde-mentes.

Whye I feare the; will be glad to see me; because I put my trust in thy lawe.

I knowe; O Lord; that thy iudgementes are righte; and that thou of vngodlye haue caused me to be troubled.

Let thy mercifull righte-nes be my comforte; accompanyng to the proude; that I maye hope thy lawe.

Let thy louyng mercie come vnto me; that I maye hope thy lawe is my comforte.

Let the proude be confounded; and let me hope thy lawe.

But let such as feare the; and kepe thy testimonies; be turned vnto me.

Let mine herte be vnto thy lawe; / that I maye hope thy lawe.

My soule longeth for thy lawyng mercie;
for my trust is in thy woide.

I will praye.

Thou art my prayer; O Lord; /
I will praye.

thy seruants, and learne me thy statutes.
Myne eyes giueth out to water, because men hepe not thy lawe.

¶ Verse.

Righteous art thou, O Lorde, and true is thy iudgment.

The testimonies that thou hast comanded are exceedinge, righteous and true.

My teile hath euil consumed me, because myne enemies haue forgotten thy wordes.

Thy worde is tried to the vttermoost, and thy seruantes loueth it.

I am small and of no reputacion, yet do not I forget thy commaundementes.

Thy righteousness is an euertingne righteousnes, and thy lawe is true.

Trouble and heuynesse haue taken holde vpon me, yet is my deliure in thy commaunde-mentes.

The righteousness of thy testimonies is euertingne, O graunte me vnderstanding, and I shall praye.

¶ Verse.

I call with my whole herte, heare me, O Lorde, I will hepe thy statutes.

Yee euen vpon the dox cal, helpe me, and I shall hepe thy testimonies.

Early in the morninge do I cry vnto thee, for in thy worde is my truth.

Myne eyes prevente the night watches, that I might be occupied in thy wordes.

Heare my voyce, O Lorde, accordinge vnto thy louynge h pntesse, quychen me ac-cordinge as thou art wont.

They saye vnto me that of malice persecute me, and are farre from thy lawe.

Be thou nre at hande also, O Lorde, for thy promyses are faithfull.

As concernynge thy testimonies, I haue knowen euertens the begynnyng / & thou hast grouned them for euert.

¶ Verse.

I cōfesse myne aduersitee, & deliure me, for I do not forget thy lawe.

Wante yn thou my cause and defende me, quychen me accordinge vnto thy worde.

Health is farre from the vngodly, for they regarde not thy statutes.

Great is thy mercie, O Lorde, quychen me as thou art wont.

Many there are that trouble me / & persecute me, yet do not I swaue from thy testimonies.

I greued me, when I see, that the trans-gressours hepe not thy lawe.

Confesse, O Lorde, how I loue thy commaundementes, O quychen me with thy louynge h pntesse.

Thy worde is true from euertingne, all the iudgements of thy righteousness are true, for euert more.

¶ Verse.

The princes persequete me, but my herte stablyeth in a worde of thy lawe, for I am as glad of thy worde, as men are of grette spoiles.

As for theys, I hate and abhorre thy lawe do I loue.

These thynges a base doo, because of thy righteousness iudgment.

Great is the price that they paye to loue thy lawe / & they are not offended.

Lorde, I loke for thy sauynge do alter thy commaundementes.

Thy soule hepeh thy righteousness loueth them exceedinge.

I hope thy commaundementes all mynes, for all my wordes are before thee.

¶ Verse.

Let my complaigne come before the Lorde, geue me vnderstanding, vnto thy worde.

Let my supplicacion come before the Lorde, geue me vnderstanding, vnto thy worde.

Thy lippes shall speake of thy lawe, thou hast taught me thy wordes.

Yee my tonge shall prouye of thee, for all thy commaundementes are true.

Let thine hande helpe me, for I haue iustified thy commaundementes.

I longe for thy sauynge health, and in thy lawe is my deliure.

Let my soule praise thee, and thy iudgements maye helpe me.

I go astraye, I thea a thepe that heke the seruant, for I do not forget thy commaundementes.

The cxx. psalme.

This psalme is a supplicacion of a man that is in trouble, and that he prayeth vnto the Lorde for helpe.

The longe of the trans.

In the beginninge of some songs, after the psalme that hath the title were founde it is to be noted, in a place, where the Lorde is in dauid house, upon the chamber where the men were, where the women commented.

When I am in trouble, I will cry vnto the Lorde, & he will helpe me, & I will be saved from the hande of all mine enemies.

What rewarte shall I be geuen of the Lorde, thou false tonge.

Euert mynghty art thou, O Lorde, thou shalt burne the wicked as burning.

It is me that myne enemies haue troued, I dwell in the house of the Lorde, & I will praise thee, O Lorde, for thou shalt burne the wicked as burning.

¶ The cxxi. Psalme.
It sheweth that the godly must looke for their helpe in such things that he geueth it very readely.

¶ The songe of the sheares.
I will put myne eyes vnto the ^{eyes} hylles / from whence cometh thy helpe.

My helpe cometh such from the which hath made heauen and earth. he will not suffer thy foete to be moued / nor that he perch thee / he perch not.

In the heauen and figure of Jerusalem he describeth the scepter of the conuersion of Sion / the place of the Captiues / wch sheweth euer the sur-uival.

How glad / when they sayde vnto me: we will go in to the house of the Loyde.

Our feete shall stande in thy gates / Jerusalem.

Jerusalem is builde as a citty / that is in it selfe.

for the sheares go by / euen the tribes of the Loyde to testifie vnto Israel / to geue names vnto the name of the Loyde.

for there is the seate of iudgement / euen the place of the house of Dauid.

It praye for the peace of Jerusalem / thy the eyes of a mayden vnto the hande of her suerour / euen to our eyes waite vpon the our God / he will he haue mercy upon vs.

Haue mercy vpon vs / O Loyde / haue mercy vpon vs / for we are vextly despayed.

Our soule is fylled with the scoornfull reproue of the weithy / and wery the despise-fullnesse of the proude.

¶ The cxxiiii. Psalme.
The godly people that they are ayde by the helpe of God / as a sheperd by whom into they were de-spayed.

¶ The songe of the sheares.

(now maye Israel saye) If the Loyde had not bene of oure syde / wher men rose vp agaynst vs.

They had swallowed vs by quicke / when they were so wachfully besetted at vs.

Yee the waters had drowned vs / & flame had gone ouer oure soule.

The deye waters of the proude had gone euen vnto oure soule.

But prayed be the Loyde / wher hath not geuen vs ouer for a praye vnto their reerth.

Our soule is escaped / eue as a byrd out of the snare of the fowle: the snare is broken and we are deliuered.

Our helpe standeth in the name of the Loyde / which hath made heauen and earth.

soule boch maye for him, and in his woide is my trust. My soule boch patiently aby de the LORDE fro the one morninge to the other. Let Israel trust in the LORDE, for with the LORDE there is mercy and plen tious redemption. And he shall redeme Israhel from all his synnes.

The CXXXI. psalme of Dauid.
LORDE, Jam not hye myned, I ha ue no proude looke. I do not excci t myself in greute matters, which are wytte for me. But I refrayne my soule and hope is lowe, like as a childe y is weened from his mother, yet my soule is euen as a weened childe. Let Israel trust in the LORDE, fro this tyme forth for evermore.

The CXXXII. psalme LORDE, remember Dauid and all his trouble. How he swore vnto y LOR DE, & vowed a vowe vnto y mightie one of Jacob: I wil not come within the ta bernacle of my house, nee symme vpi to my of the same at U phara, & so bidde in y weid.

We wil go in vnto his taberna cle, & fall dow ne before his foote. Arie (o LORDE) in ro thy restinge place, thou & y arte of y iherucl.

Let thy prestes be clothed with righteous ouer ness, and let thy saymes reioyse. For thy ser uaunt Dauid saie turne not a waye the pre sence of thine aroynded. The LORDE hath made a faithful oath vnto Dauid, & he shal not shauke from it: Of the sure of thy body shal I set vpon thy seate. If thy childrenre will kepe my ceuenaunt, & my testimony y I shall reue the, their childre also shal se vpb thy seate for evermore. For the LORDE hath chosen Sion, to be an habita cion for him self hath he chosen her. This shall be my rest, here wil I dwell, for I haue a delice ther in. I will blesse hir vycaies w increase, & I will satisfie hir poore with bread. I will dec re hir prestes with health, & thy saymes shal reioyse & be glad. There shall I make the home of Dauid to flourish, I haue opened a lancene for myne aroynded. As for his enemies, I shall clothe the w shame, but v pon himself shal his crowne flourish.

The CXXXIII. psalme of Dauid.

O geue thanke vnto the God of youz, for his mercy endureth for euer.

The cxxxvi. psalme.

As the waters of Babilon run round about me and wepe, when we remembred on. As for our harpes, we hang them vpon upon the trees, that are therē. Theye that led vs awaye captiue, requerd of vs a songe and melody in o harps. Singe vs one of the songes of Sion. How shall we syng the LORD ES songe in a strange lode? If I forget the o Ierusalem, let my right hand be forgotten. If I do not remember the, let my tounge cleue to the rock of my mouth: yea yf I persere not Jerusalem in my tūch. Remember the child of Sion, donk (o LORD) in the daye of Jerusalem, how they saye, downe with it, downe with it, to the grounde. O daughter Babilon, thou shalt come to mistery thy self: yea thou shalt be be, thou shalt remouer yf as thou hast serued vs. Blessid that he be, that eateth thy floure, and driueth them a gaynst the floure.

The cxxxvii. psalme of Dauid.

Whiche geue thanke vnto the o LORD with myn rebele hart, euen befor the goddess wil I syng praises to thee. I wil worshippe towarde thy holy stie, and prayshe thy name be cause of thy lowly kynde and tūch, for thou hast made me by thy woide, a cōtūng vnto thy greace me. When I call vpon thee, thou hearst, and endurest my soule with moch strength. All the kynges of the earth shal prayshe the LORD, when they heare the recordes of thy mouth. Yet they shal syng in the wayes of the LORD, that greace is the glory of the sonner.

But a place for thy name, shall be in thē.

161. For though he the LORDE be hye, yet hee respecteth me: yf lowly: as for yf proude he beholdeth him as farre off. Though I kei yf myddest of trouble, yett shal thou helpe me: thou hast stretcht forth thine hande vnto the fortifications of myne enemies, & yf he hands shal saue me. The LORDE shal be good for me, yett thy mercy (o LORDE) reach for euer: bespyre not then the wo-rthyne owne handes.

The CXXXVIII. A psalme of Dauid.

LORDE, thou seest cheste me out, and knowest me. Thou knowest my downefittinge & my wrynging. Thou knowest my thoughts as farre off. Thou knowest my path & aboute my bedde, & spy-all my wayes. For so, there is noe a wey myn edge, butt thou (o LORDE) knowest it. Thou hast fashioned me before soue, & layed thine hōde vpon me.
 Thy knowledge is to mouer full & excellēt me. I can not asseyme into it. Whither I go then from thy spere: Or, whither I ste from thy presence: If I sayme I will beare, thou art there: yf I go behell, thou art there also. If I take the wings of the mouynge, & twayne in the most parte of the see: Euen there also thy hande lede me, and thy right hande shal holde me. If I saye: peradventure the aduersitee shal couer me, then shal my night be as to daye. For the darcknesse is no aduersitee with the, butt the nighte is as clea-re as the daye. The darcknesse & lighte are both thine. For my reynes are thine, thou hast bound me in my mothers wombe. I wil reuerence vnto the, for I am wnderously wondrous: and thy workes, and that thy soule knoweth right well. My bones were not hid from the, though I be made secrete, and fashioned beneath in the earth.
 Thine eyes: so myne vnparticuler, they ston-der vnto: I thy booke: my dayes were fishing, when as yett there was not one of them to beare are yf couer vnto me o GOD: how greete is the summe of them: If I tell them, they are mo in nombre than the butt the thonder by the mighte departe fro the: For they speake vnto the of the thine names falslye them selues presumptuously.

 I hate them (o LORDE) that hate thee, & I maye not awaye with those that rise vp against thee: For I hate them right sore, because they mine enemies. Trye me (oh GOD) and sette the grunde of myne hee:

 me, & lede me in the waye euerlastinge contrie in The CXXXIX. A psalme of Dauid.

163. I praye me, (o LORDE) from the enuyls of men, oh preserue me from the wicked men. Whiche ymagin my selfe in their herres, & steere up strie all the daye longe.
 They sharpe & their tongues like a serpent, adders possion is vnder their lippen.

164. Seke me (o LORDE) from the han-de of the vngodly, preserue me from the wicked men, which are purposed to ouerthrowe my goynges. The proud haue layed a snare for me, & spied a nett abode with cordes, yett I settrappes in my waye. Seke.

165. But my sayenge is vnto the LORDE: thou art my GOD, heare the voyce of my prayer o LORDE. O LORDE GOD, thou strength of my health, thou hast covered my heade in yf daye of battayll. Let not yf vngodly haue his desyre (o LORDE) let him not abuse his purpose, lest they be so proude. Seke.

166. Lett the my selfe of their owne lippen fall vpon yf head of the, yf charge me aboute. Lett burnyng coales fall vpon the, lett the be cast in to the fire, and into the pyre: that they neuer rise vp agayne. A man full of wordes shal not prosper vpon earth: a malicious & wicked person shal be hunted away, and destroyed. Sure I am, that the LORDE wil auenge the poore, and maneyne the cause of the helpelesse. The righteous also shal geuer thales vnto thy name, & the iust shal continue in thy sighte.

The CXL. A psalme of Dauid.

167. LORDE, I call vpon the: haist the vnto me, and consider my voyce, whē I crye vnto the. Lett my prayer be set forth in thy sighte as the incense, and lett the liftinge vp of my handes be an eueryng sacrifice.
 Set a watch (o LORDE) before my mouth, yett a watch at the doore of my lippen.

168. Lett not myne herte be enclined to enuyl the, gett to be mynded as the vngodly or wicked men, lest I eate of such thinges as please the.

169. Lett the righteous rather synne me sient ly, and reprove me so wil I ratifie, as though he had poured oyle vpon my heade: it shal not hurte my heade, yett I wil paye yett for the wickednesse. Thine iudges shal be as the stone, yett heare they my wordes, yf they be full. Oure bones ly scattered before yf pyen of them.

The cxxli. psalme of Dauid.

Crie vnto the LORDE with my voy ce, yee are vnto the LORDE do I ma ke my supplicacion. I poure out my complaine before him, and shewe him of my trouble. When my spere is in heuynesse, for thou knowest my path in the waye where in I walke, haue they preyntly layed a snare for me. I lode vpon my right honde for there is no man that wil knowe me. I ha ue no place to sle vnto, no man careth for my soule. Therfore do I crie vnto the (o LOR-DE) and saye thus art my hope and my poison, in the londe of the syryng. Considre my complaine, for I am brought very lowe.
Wh deliuer me fro my persecuters, for they are so strange for me: Drynge my soule out of pison, that I maye geue thanks vnto thy name: which thinge yf thou wilt graunte me, then shal the righteous refoze vnto my company.

The cxxlii. psalme of Dauid.

Hear my prayer (o LORDE) considre my desire: and in creme for thy critech & righteousnesse sake. And care not in to iudgment with thy seruante, for in thy sighte shal no man luyng be iustified. For the enemye persecuteth my soule, he stretcheth my life downe to the grounde, he stretcheth me in the darcknesse, as the deeb men of the world be. Therfore is my spere vexed with in me, and my herte within me is desolace. Yet do I remember the tyme past, I made vps all y woikes, yee I excise my self in the woikes of thy honde. I stretch forth my honde vnto the, my soule crieth vnto the one of the thy sic londe. Selas. Heare me (o LORDE) and that soone, for my spere was ech saynce: hyde not y face fro me, lest I be like vnto the that go downe in to the grane. Oh let me heare thy louyng & kyndnesse by critech in the mornynge, for in the is my trust: shewe thou merche waye: that I shalde walke in, for I lift vp my soule vnto the. Deliuer me (o LOR-DE) fro myne enemies, for I refoze vnto the.
Teach me to do the thinge that pleaseth the, for thou art my God: let thy louyng specie lede me forth vnto the londe of righteous-nesse. Quyet me (o LORDE) for thy names sake, and for thy righteousnesse sake bringe my soule out of trouble. And of thy goodnesse scatter myne enemies abode, and destroye all them that vex my soule, for I am seruante.

The cxxliii. psalme of Dauid.

Blessed be the LORDE my sofull, longe sufferinge of greace goodse. The LORDE is leuyinge vnto every man, and his mercy is ouer all his woikes.

 Thy woikes praise the LORDE, and thy power geue thanks vnto the. They shew the glory of thy Kingdome, and traile of thy mer. That y power, thy gl'e & might-esse of thy Kingdome might, or knowe to men. Thy Kingdome is as auctia in thyngdome, & thy dominion endureth the-out all aye. The LORDE vphold-eth all sods so shalbe fall, and lifeth vp all that are downe. The eyes of all man vpon the, and thou genest them their measure for aye. Then openest thine eie, & fillest all thinges with thynges with plente-esse. The LORDE is righteous in all his wayes, & holy in all his woikes. The LORDE is nye vnto all them that call vpon his name, & call vpon him faithfully.
 He filleth the desire of them that feare him, he heareth their crye, and helpeth them.
 The LORDE preferreth all them that lo-uen him, & reueth adieue all the vngodly.
 My mouth shall speake the praise of the LORDE, & no let all flesh geue thanks vnto thy holy name for euer and euer. Halleluya.

The CXX. psalme.

Why saye the LORDE to my soule: why wilt thou saye to the LORDE, yee haue aske as I haue any beynge, I wil not praye vnto my God. O put not yd whin prynces, ner in the childe of man, for he can no helpe in the. For when y blyeth I saugorth forth, he shal turne agayne to ward, and so all his thoughtes persithe.
 Wher is he that hath y God of Jacob for helpe, and whose hope is in the LORDE his God. Which made heauen and earth, & in all that therein is, which heperth his soule for euer. Which helpeth them to the y suffre wronge, which seeth y honour. The LORDE leueth men out of pryuide. The LORDE geueth sighte to the blynde.
 The LORDE helpeth the vp that are fal-n. The LORDE leueth the righteous.
 The LORDE careth for the straungers, he sheweth y fatherlesse and wythorowe: as for the waye of y vngodly, he curmeth it vpyde same. The LORDE thy God (o Zion) is thyge for euermore, and he sheweth out all gene-tions. Halleluya.

The CXXVI. psalme.

Why saye the LORDE, for it is a good thinge to synge praises vnto thy God: for a ioyfull and pleasaut thinge is it to be thankfull. The LORDE shal buyl be vp Jerusalem, & gather together y dwellers of Israel. He healeth the contrie in herte, and bymbeth vp their wundes. He calleth the nombre of the starres, and calleth them all by their names. Great is thy LOR-DE, and great is his power, yee his wysdeme is infinite. The LORDE leueth vp y meke, & bringeth y in godly bewette y growde.

 O synge vnto thy LORDE, & thanke geuy-ge, synge praises vnto y harpe vnto thy God.
 Which conueryth y heauen w cloudes, preparerth rayne for y earth, & maketh y gras-

The Psalter.

Let them praise the name of the LORDE, for his name only is excellent, and his praise about heauen and earth. He exalteth the home of his people, all his saymes shal praise him, the children of Israell, euen the people that seruech him. Halleluya.

The CXLIX. psalme. Halleluya.

Synge vnto Y LORDE a new songe, let the congregacion of saymes praise him. Let Israell reioyce in him that made him, and let the children of Sion be ioyfull in their synge. Let them praise his name in the basilic, let them praise vnto him with taborettes and harpes. For the LORDE hath pleasure in his people, and helpeth the meekhearted. Let the saymes be ioyfull with glory, let them reioyce in their beddes. Let the praises of God be in their mouth, and sharpe swordes in their handes. To be auenged of the heathen, to rebuke the people. To bynde their kinges in cheynes, & their nobles with synge of yon. That they maye be auenged of hem, as it is written, God honoureth hys saymes. Halleluya.

The CL. psalme. Halleluya.

Praise the LORDE in his Sanctu-ry, praise him in the firmament of his power. Praise him in his noble temple in his excellent greatnesse. Praise him in the sounde of the trumpet, upon the lute and harpe. Praise him with cymbals and daunse, praise him with pipes and pype. Praise him with cymbals, praise him with cymbals. Let them praise the LORDE.

- Chap. V. He exorteth vnto wisdome, and to warre of hartenes: he telleth what harmes ye followe yf ye are not, what men can do with you, and what men, to sayngly to cleue vnto them, rich mynes, and describeth the end of them godly.
- Chap. VI. He warneth man to beware of his wife, exorteth the slothfull to labour, and to be with the wisdome of false tonges, and to be with men to be aware of aduocay, because more persons then these or felony.
- Chap. VII. He exorteth vnto wisdome, sheweth the condicions of hartenes, and what hath the power vnto god, as he cleue to the proudnes and diffidence of the flesh.
- Chap. VIII. Wisdome calleth manfully vnto her, and telleth them what to sayngly and what she hath. A condonacion and profect of wisdome, wherof every man to exorteth to cleue to her.
- Chap. IX. Wisdome crieth vnto the ignorant, and premitteth them greuous things. The foolishness of a light woman.
- Chap. X. From this chapter forth vnto the XXXI. there are describeth many faults, and what profit cometh of it: Agreue the men maye auoide foolishnesse, and the last thereof.
- Chap. XXXI. Wisdome warneth us to beware of euill women, and describeth the condonacion, manner, or behauiour of an honest man and wife.

These are the proverbes of Salomon the sonne of David kynge of Iſrael: to learne wysdome, nurture, and best ordering, piety, diligence, righteousness, iudgement, and equite. That the very babes might haue wye, and that yonge men might haue knowlege and vnderſtondinge. By hearing, the wyse mā shall come by more wysdome: and by experience, he shall be more apte to vnderſtode a parable, and the interpretation thereof: the wordes of the wyse, and the barke speeches of the same. The feare of the LORD is the beginning of wysdome, and nurture.

The first Chapter.

MY sonne, heare thy fathers doctrine, and forsake not the lawes of thy mother: for that shall bring grace vnto thy heade, and shall be thyne aboute thy necke. My sonne, cease not vnto sinners, yf they entyse the, and hope: come with us, let us laye wayre for bloude, and let us take prey for the innocēt wythout a cause: let us stralome the vp like y hell, let us deuoure the quyet and whole, as the fisher go downe in to the pyre. So shall we fynde all maner of costly riches, and shall ouercome many spyales. Cast in thy loct among geas, we shall haue all one purse.

My sonne, walke not thou wth them, rest a waye fro their wayes. For their sure rime to fall, and are haistie to shed bloude. Due in wyne, and not layd forth before the byrdes eyes. For they the selues laye wayre one for anothers bloude, and one of the wolde slaye another. These are the wayes of all such as be concouys, that one wolde rauysh another life.

Wysdome crieth withoute, and putteth forth hir voyce in the stretes. She calleth before y congregation in y open gates, and sheweth hir wordes to whom y cite, sayenge: O ye childre, how longe wil ye loue childyshnesse: how longe wil y scornes delyre in scoynge, and vnto myse be enemies vnto knowlege: O turne you vnto my correccionis, I wil expresse my mynde vnto you, and make you vnderstode my wordes. Singe then that I haue called, and ye refused it: I haue stretched out my hande, and no mā regarded it, but all my counsels haue ye despysed, and see my correccionis as naught. Therefore shall I also laugh in y destruction, and mocke you, when y thinke that ye feare cometh vpon you: cum vnto y thinge that ye be afraid of, fallerh in so-denly like a stoume, and y miserye like a tempest: yece vnto trouble and heynesse cometh vpon you. Then shall they call vnto me, but I wil not heare: they shall see me early, but they shall not fynde me: And y because they haue knowlege, and receaved not y feare of y LORD, but abhoyred my counsell, and despysed my correccion. Therefore shall they care y frutes of their owne waye, and be fylled wth their owne counsels: for y vnto yge a waye of y vnto yge shall slaye the, and y preserper of scoles shall be their owne destruction. But who so hartneth vnto me, shall dwell safely, and haue ynough withoute any feare of euill.

The II. Chapter.

WISOME, yf thou wilt receaue my wordes, and kepe my commaundmentes by the, that thine eare maye be kepten vnto wysdome, applie thine hart: then to vnderſtodinge. For yf thou cryst after wysdome, and callest for knowlege: yf thou feest after her as after money, and dyggest for her as for measure: she shall shew vnderstonde y feare of the LORD, and fynde y knowlege of God. For it is the LORD that genty wysdome, out of his mouth cometh knowlege and vnderſtondinge. He preferueth y welfare of the righteous, and defendeth them y walke innocently: he kepeth them in y right path, and preferueth y waye of his sayntes. Then shalt thou vnderſtode righteousness, iudgement and equite, yee and every good path. If wysdome entere in to thine herte, and y soule delyre in knowlege: then shall counsell preserue the, and vnderſtondinge shall repte the. That thou mayest be deliuered fro y euill waye, and from the man y speaketh flowarde thinges. From such as leaue the hie strete, and walke y wayes of barcknesse: which reioyse in doynge euill, and delyre y wicked thinges: whose wayes are croked, and their pathes slaenderous.

That thou mayest be deliuered also from the strange woman, and from her that is not thine owne: which genty sweet wordes, forsaketh the iustbande of hir youth, and so getteth the conuoyant of hir God. For hir house is enclined vnto death, and hir pathes vnto hell. All they that go in vnto her, come not agayne, neither take they holde of the waye of life.

That thou mayest walke in y good waye, and kepe the pathes of the righteous. For the iust shall dwell in the lande, and the innocēt comes shall remaine in it: but the vngodly shall receiue out of it soules, and the wicked doers shall be taken out of it.

The III. Chapter.

WHosome, forget not my lawe, but ife I thine here kepe my commaundme tes. For they shall prologe 3 dayes 2 yeares of thy life, & bringe 3 peact. Let me cy 2 faithfulness neuer go from 3: ynto the about 3 necke, & wyte them in the cables of thine herce. So shalt thou fynde sauē and good vnderstandinge in 3 sighte of God and men. Put thy cruell in 3 L O R D E with all thine herce, and leane not vnto thine owne vnderstandinge. In all thy wayes haue respect vnto him, and he shall orde thy goings. Be not wyse in thine owne con-ceite, but feare 3 L O R D E and departe from euill: so shall thy nauel be whole, and thy bones stronge.

Honoure the L O R D E wth substance, & wth 3 sustynge of all thine increase: so shall thy barnes be fylled with plenty ofnesse, and thy pusses shall flowe ouer with swete wyne.
 My sonne, despyse not the chastenynge of 3 L O R D E, neither saynt when thou art rebuked of him. For wh^{er} the L O R D E loveth, him he chasteneth: and yet despyeth in him such as a father in his owne sonne. Well is him that syndeth wth w^{is}dome, & opeyneth vnderstandinge, for the getunge of it is better then any marchaundise of siluer, & the profite of it is better then golde. W^{is}dome is more worth then precious stones, & all 3 thinges 3 thou canst desyre, are not to be compared vnto her. Vpon hir right hande is longe life, & vpon hir left hande is riches & hon^{our}.

Hir wayes are pleasaunt wayes, and all hir pathes are peaceable. She is a tree of life to them that laye holde vpon her, and blef-sed are they that kepe her fast.

With w^{is}dome hath 3 L O R D E layed the foundacion of 3 earth, & thow vnderstand-inge hath he stablished 3 heaues. Thow his w^{is}dome 3 depthes beate vp, & 3 cloudes droppe downe the dew. My sonne, let not these thinges departe from thine eyes, but kepe my lawe and my counsell: so shall it be life vnto thy soule, & grace vnto 3 mouth.
 Then shalt thou walke safely in 3 waye, & thy feet shall not stumblē. If thou sleepest, thou shalt not be afraied, but shalt take thy rest & sleepest sweetly. Thow needest not to be afraied of any sodaine feare, neither for the violent shynge in of the vngodly, when it commeth.

For the L O R D E shall be beside the, & kepe thy feet: thou shalt not be taken. Refuse not to do good vnto him that shall be beside the, as thine hande is able to do it. Saye no: wth thy neyghbour: go thy waye & come agayne, como thou wilt I geue the w^{is}dome as thou hast now to geue him. I will no hurt vnto thy neyghbour, seynge he doeth to dwell in rest by the. Strive not lightly wth any man, where as he hath done no harme. Followe not a wicked man, and chuse none of his wayes: for the L O R D E ab-horreth the frowarde, but his secret is amonge the righteous. The curse of the L O R D E is in the house of the vngodly, but he blesseth the dwellinge of the righteous.

As for the soomefull, he shall laugh out to scorne, but he shall geue grace vnto the lowly. The wyse shall haue hon^{our} in possession, but shame is the promociō that foolis shall haue.

The IIII. Chapter.

Ware O ye children the fatherly cor-recciō, & take good heede, that ye may learne w^{is}dome. Keepe I shall geue you a good rewarde, if ye will not forsake my lawe. For when I myself was my fathers deare sonne, and tenderly beloued of my mother, he taught me also w^{is}dome: let thine ear receaue my wordes, & kepe my commandments, and thou shalt lyue.

Get the w^{is}dome, get the vnderstand-inge, forget not 3 wordes of my mouth, & shal-le not be net from thim. Forsake her not, and she shall preserve the: loue her, and she shall kepe the. The chiefe payme of w^{is}- dome is, that thou be willinge to open w^{is}dome, and before all thy goodes to get the vnderstandinge. Make moode of her, and she shall promote the: wth 3 thou abusest her, she shall bringe the into benoure.

She shall make the a gracious habit, garnish the wth 3 crowne of glory. Geue my sonne, and receaue my wordes, that the years of thy life maye be many. I will shewe the 3 waye of w^{is}dome, and leade the in the right pathes. So that if thou doest therein, there shall no straitnesse be vnto the: and when thou runnest, thou shalt not fall. Take fast holde of doctrine, as her thou shalt not go: kepe her, for she is thy life.

Come not in the path of the vngodly, and walke not in the waye of the wicked.
 Eschewe it, & go not therein: departe thyself, & passe ouer by it. For they can not sleepe: they haue fast done some w^{is}dome.

whether eate they my selfe, excepte they have first done some harme. For they eate the bread of wickednesse, and drinke the wyne of robbery. The path of the righteous shyneth as the light, and is euer brighte: a brighte way with perfect daye. But if waye of the un-godly is as the darcknesse, wherein he fall, or they be aware.

My forme, marke my wordes, and encl-yng them care vnto my saynges. Let them not departe from thine eyes, kepe them euen in the myddest of thine heere. For they are life vnto all those that finde the, and health vnto all their bodies. Kepe thine here with all diligence, for theyer word hangeth life.
Put awaye from thee a frowarde mouth, and the lippen of flaunder be farre from thee.
Let thine eyes beholde the thinge yf is right, let thine eye lyddes loke strait be fore the, passe the path of thy feete, so shal all y way be sure. Turne not asyde, neher to the right hande nor to the lefte, but withold thy face from euill.

The V. Chapter.

My forme, geue heed vnto my wordes, and heere thine eare vnto my prou-erbes: for thou mayest regard good counsell, and that thy lippen maye speake iustice.
For the lippen of an harlot are a dropping of myrrour, and hir thiocke is softer then wax. But as y last she is as bitter as worm wood, and as sharpe as a two edged swerde.
Her feete go downe vnto death, and hir steppes lead the into hell. She regardeth not the path of life, so vnto last are hir way such that thou canst not knowe them. Heare me therefore (O my forme) and departe not fro the wordes of my mouth. Kepe thy maye sure from her, and come not nye y doies of her house. That thou geue not thine honour vnto another, and thy yeares to the cruell.
That other men be not fylled with thy goodnesse, that thy labours come not in a straunger house. For that thou mourne not at the last when thou hast spent thy body and goo-des, and then saye: Alas, why hated I mi-strance: why byt my heart of pynne correction?
Wherefore was not I obedient vnto the voyce of my teachers, I hardened not vnto them that informent me: I am come almost in to all my synnes, in the myddest of the multitude and congregation. Drinke of the water of thine owne well, and of the ryuers that runne out of thine owne springes. Let y welles flowe out a byde, that there maye be ryuere of water in the streetes. But let them be only thine owne, and not straungers with the.

Let thy well be blessed, and be glad with the wife of thy youth. Louynge is the bynde, and friendly is the Roo: let her bynde al-waye sacrificeth, and holde the euer content with hir loue. My forme, why wilt thou haue pleasure in an harlot, and embrace the bo-some of an other womā? For euery waye is as are open in the sighte of the LORDE, and he pōdēth all their goynge. The wickednesse of the ungodly shal catch himself, and with the snare of his owne synnes shal be trapped. Because he wolde not be reformed, he shal dye: and for his greates foolish-nesse he shal be destroyed.

The Vi. Chapter.

My forme, yf thou be surte for y neghbour, thou hast fastened thine bodie as an other mā: yee thou art boide with thine owne wordes, and taken of thine owne speach. Therefore, my forme, do this, discharge thy selfe, for thou art come in to y neghbours daunger. Go thy waye then soone, I increase thy neyghbours: let not thine eye see pe, net thine eye lyddes slomber. Gaue thy self as a doe fro y honde, as a byde fro the byde of the fouler. Go to the summer (thou slogard) so to be hir waye, and Ierne to be wyfe.

She hath no gyde, no teacher, no leder: yet in the summer she prouideth hir meate, and ga-thereth hir fodder together in y harvest. How long wilt thou slepe, thou sloghish mā? Wdhā wilt thou arise out of thy slepe? Yee slepe on still a litle, slōber a litle, solde thine handes together yet a litle, that thou mayest slepe: so shal pouerte come vnto the as one y strayler by the waye, and necessitye like a wayned man. A dissauynge person, a wicked man goeth with a frowarde mouth: he reyncteth with his eyes, he rokeneth w' his feete, he poyneth w' his synners, he is euer ymagynge myschefe, and fierardnesse in his here, and can-sath byscorde. Therefore shal his defractions come hastily v'p' him, soonly shal he be all eobroken, and not be healed.

There be y other thinges, whych the LORDE hateth, and the sureth he vcerly abhorreth: A proude loke, a dissimblynge tongue, handes that shed innocent bloude, an herte y goeth abowte w' wicked ymaginacions, feete that be swift in remynge to do myschefe, a false wy-nesse y bringeth vp lyes, and each one as sweth byscorde amonge brethren. My forme, kepe thy fathers commandementes, and forsake not y lawe of thy mother. Put the vntogether in thine here, and bynde the abowte thy necke.
That they maye lede the where thou goest, possesse the when thou art a slepe, and y when 161.10.0 then an arteft, thou mayeft take of thei, for the cōmāndement is a lantern, and the lawe a light: yee doftarynge 2 not oute is y maye of life: thea they maye kepe the fro the enell woman, 2 from the flazarynge tonge of the harlot: yf thou lust not after her beuty in thine herte, 2 lest thou be take w' hir saye lo les. An harlot wil make a mā to begg his bled, but a married woman wil hanc for y pucious life. Māye a man take fyre in his be- some, and his clothes noc be bren: Or can one go upon hooe coales, and his fete noc be hurt: Leuif, who so caer goeth in to his neighbours wife, and coudehsh her, can noc be anglic. Men do not utterly despise a thefe, that stealeth to satisfie his soule, whens he is bougier: but yf he maye be gotten, he restoroth agayne scuen tymes as much, as els he maketh recompence with all the good of his house. One who so comiteth aduourie with a womā, he is a fool, and bryngeth his life to destruccion. He getteth him self also shame 2 dishon^r, such as shal neuer be put out. For the glory 2 wairch of the mā wil noc be treated, nor though thou woldest ofte him greute giftes to make amendes, he wil not receaue them.

161.11.2 D Ear sonne, kepe my wordes, 2 laye up my cōmāndemētes by the voyce. Take my cōmāndemētes 2 my lawe, cut as the aples of thine eye, 2 thou shalt lyue. Dyuide them upon thy fyngers, 2 wryte the in the cable of thine herte. Saye vnto wysdome: thou art my syster, and call vnderston- dinge thy kynswoman: that she maye kepe y fro y strange womā, 2 fro y harlot which ge- neth fytte wordes. For out of the wyndome of my house I loled thow to the relics, 2 be- helde the simple people: 2 amonge othe yonge folkes I spyed one yonge soele goinge o- ner the stretes, by the corner in the waye to- wards the harlottes house in the twylyght of of the euenyng, when it begāne now to be

161.12.2 B right and darke. And behelde, there mett him a womā in an harlottes apparell: a dis- careful, waton 2 an vstedfast womā: who- so fore coude not abyde in y house, now is she withoute, now i y stretes, 2 lurbeth i mery co- ner: she cange be y yspe mā, kysed him 2 was noc ashamed, sa yge: I had a vowe to paye, 2 this daye I perfoume it. Ther fore came I forth to meete the, that I might see thy face, and so I haue founde the. I haue deckt my b. w. with courtesie 2 clothe of Egipte. My bedd hanc I made of smell of Myrr, Zi- loe: and Cynamom. Come, let vs lye together, 2 take oure pleasure till it be daye light. For the good man is noc at home, he is gone fure of. He hath taken the bagg of moneye with him, who can call w' him be com- home? Thus with many fytte wordes he ouercame him, and with hir flazaryng he pes he warme him.

Immediatly he foloweth her, as it was an orelch to the slaughter, and like as it was to the stocke, where foolcs are purtyshen: longe call she hath wounded his lyue with hir darke: like as yf a byrd haiffed to the su- re, noc knowinge that the parrell of his life is ezh there wps. Heare me now thefure: com- sonne, and marke the wordes of my mouth. Let noc thine herte wandre in hir waye, 2 be not thou disceaced in hir pathes. In many one hath she woked and cast down, yet many a stronge mā hath she slayne. Her house is the waye vnto hell, where men go downe to the chambers of deatch.

The viij. Chapter.
Sith not wysdome cri: doth not vnderston- dinge pur forth hir voyce? Seendeth she noc in the byplein in the stretes 2 wayes: doth she not crie be- fore the whole cite, 2 in the gates where men go out 2 in: Jcis you, o ye men, sayeth she whom I call. Vnto you o ye child of men, life I op my voyce. Take hebe unto thow go o ye ignorant, ke wyse in herte o ye fool. Gene care, for I wil speake of grace with- oute, 2 open my lippes to tell thinges that is righte. For my thow that be callinge of f- trecth, 2 my lippes aboue vngodlynes. All the wordes of my mouth are righteous, there is no stowardnesse net falsede them. They are all playnet to such as wil vnder- ste, 2 right to the that fynde knowlege. Be- ceave my doctryne ther fore and noc fiane, I knowlege moic then fyne golde. For wys- me is more worth then precious stoncs, 2 all the thinges that thou castt byn, are to be comparcd vnto it.

J wysdome hanc my b. w. llyng of know- lege, and prudent counsell is myne owne. With me is the sture of the LORDE, and y- schoyng of euell. As for pryde, vdyce, an euell waye, 2 a mouth that speaketh nei- ked thiges, I utterly abhorre. I can p- ce counsell, and be a gyde: I haue vnder- stondinge, I haue strength.

Thow wote me, fynges reigne: thow wote, p- ces make iust lawes. Thow wote me, loode be- trale, and all vbyges of y earth are vnto my- me. I am louyng vnto thef that loode, and they that seke me early, shal fynde me.

Riches & honoure are to me, yet excellent goodes & riches desires. My fruit is better than golde & precious stone, & myne increase more worth then fine silver. I walke in y waye of righteousness, & in the streets of iudgement. That I maye sende prosperitee to those that loue me, & to increase their treasure.

The LORDE himself had me in possession in the begynnings of his wayes, or euer he began his workes afore tyme. I haue bene named first euerlastinge, & first of begynnynge in our earth was made. When I was borne, there were neither depthes, nor springes of water. Before the foundations of y mountains were layd, yet before all hills was I borne. The earth and all that is vpon the earth was not yet made, no net the grounde it self. For when he made the heauen, I was present: wha he fet the depthes in order: when he hangd the cloudes about: when he fastened the springes of the deep: when he shut the sea within cerceyne boundes, that y waters shulde not go ouer their marke. When he layd the foundations of the earth, I was with him, ordyninge all thinges, deluyninge daylie & reioysynge all waye be foire me. As for the roude of pale of his world, I make it ioyfull, for mydeley it is to be amdege the children of men.

Therfore harden into me (o ye children) yourselves are they that kepe my wayes.

O gene care vnto nurture, be wise, and trust it not. Blessed is y man that heareth me, watchynge daylie at my gates, & geuynge attendance at the postes of my doore.

For who so syndeyth me, syndeyth life, and shal opene sauoure of the LORDE. One who do offendeth a gaynst me, hurteyth his ouer soule. All they that hate me, are the lions of death.

The IX. Chapter.

Who hath buylded herself an house, and heren out seven piers: she hath slaundered, poured out hir wyne, and prepared hir table. She hath set forth hir maydens to crye vpe the highest place of the cite: Who so is ignoraunt, let him come heere. A wd to the vnwise she sayde: O come on your waye, eate my bread, and buyde my wyne, which I haue poured out for you. For sake ignoraunce, and ye shall lyue: and if thou ye go in the waye of vnderstandinge.

Who so reproveth a scoopefull personne, breyth him self vnder coure: and he that rebuketh the vn godly, stayneth himself.

Reproue not a scooper, lest he owe thee the well wil: but rebuke a wyse man, and he wil loue thee. Be a discrete man but an occasion, & he wil be thy wyse teacher: a righteous man, and he wil increase. The feare of the LORDE is the begynnynge of wydom, & the knowlege of holy thinges is vnderstandinge. For thoue me y dayes shal be prolonged, and the yeres of thy life shal be many. If thou be wise, y wydom me shal do y self good: but yf thou chynest scoime thereof, it shal be thine owne harme. A foolish restless woman, full of wordes, and sodone as hath no knowlege, fyreth in the doores of hir house vps a stole aboue in the cite, to call such as go by and walke straighe in their wayes. Who so is ignoraunt (sayeth she) let him come heere, and to the vnwise she sayeth: stollen waters are swete, & the bread that is preuely eaten, hath a good tast.

But they consider not that death is there, and that hir gales go downe to hell.

The X. Chapter.

These are proverbes of Salomon.

Wise some maketh a glad father, but an vn discrete sone is the penyment of his mother. Treasures that are wickedly gotten, profit nothing, but righteousnesse deluynereth from death. The LORDE wil not lee the scule of the righteous, suffre heger, but he putteth y vn godly fro his desire. An ydle hande maketh poore, but a quyet labourynge hande maketh riche.

Who so gathereth in Semmer, is wyse: but he that is slothful in harvest, bringeth himself to confusion. Leuyng and favourable is the face of the righteous, but y foie heate of the vn godly is past shame, and presumptuous. The memoriall of the iust shall haue a good reposte, but the name of the vn godly shal flyne. A wyse man wil receaue warnynge, but a foie wil sooner be synner in the face. He that leadeth an innocent life, walketh surely: but who do goeth a wise waye, shal be knowne. He y myneth with his eye, wil do some harme: but he that hath a foolish mouth, shal be beaten. The mouth of a righteous man is a well of life, but y mouth of the vn godly is past shame, & presumptuous. A well will stretch up itself, but loue couereth y multitude of synnes.

In y lippen of him y hath vnderstandinge a wd shal fynde wydom, but yf rebbe begetteth yf backe of y foolish. Wyse me laye vpon knowlege, but yf mouth of y foolish is y destrucco. The rich was gooder are his first Dissimlynge lippes kepe haered secretly, and he that speaketh my slander, is a foole. Where much babbling is, there must nedes be offence: he that refrayneth his lippes, is wylful of all. An innocēt tongue is a noble treasure, but the herte of the vngodly is nothinge worth. The lippes of the righteous seke a whole multitude, but fooles shal dye in their owne foly. The blessinge of the LORDE maketh rich me, as for carefull wraungle, it doeth nothinge there. A foole doth wickedly & maketh bad a spoore of it: neuertheles it is wysdome, for a man to beware of sodey.

As vinegar is to the teeth, and as smoke is vnto yf eyes, and so is a slothly performe to them that sūde him south. The feare of yf LORDE maketh a lōge life, but yf yeares of yf vngodly shal be shortned. The patient abydinge of the righteous shal be turned to gladnesse, but the hope of the vngodly shal perishe. The waye of the LORDE geneth a couraige vnto yf godly, but it is a feare for wicked doers. The righteous shal neuer be dūctreuous, but yf vngodly shal not remaine in the londe. The mouth of the iust wilbe talkynge of wysdome, but the tongue of the frowarde shal perishe. The lippes of the righteous are occupied in acceptable thinges, but the mouth of the vngodly taketh them to the worst.

The XI. Chapter.

A False balancer is an abomination vnto the LORDE, but a true weight pleaseth him. Where pryde is, there is shame also and confusion: but where as is lowlynesse, there is wysdome. The innocēt dealinge of the iust shal ledethem, but the vnfaichfullnesse of the despyra shalbe their owne destruction. Riches helpe net in the daye of vengeance, but rightousnesse deli uereth frō death. The rightousnesse of yf innocēt odierch his waye, but the vngodly shal fall in his owne wickednesse. The rightousnesse of the iust shal deliuer them, but the despyra shalbe taken in their owne vngodlynesse. When an vngodly man dyeth, his hope is gone, the confydence of riches shal perishe. The righteous shalbe deliuered out of trouble, & the vngodly shal come in his steade. Thowso yf mouth off vssurbiar is his neyghboare destroyed, but thowso knowlege shal the iust be deliuered. What is goeth well with the righteous, the same is merry: and when the vngodly perishe, there is gladnesse. When the iust are in wealch, the same prospereth: but when the vngodly haue the rule, it becaugeth. A foole byngeth wylful slander of his neyghboare, but a wise man wil kepe it secreete. A dyssemblynge person wil bycouer pryncynges, but he that is of a faith full hert, wil kepe counsell. Where no good counsell is there the people becaue: but where as are many that can geue counsell, there is wealch. He that is feare for a straunger, hurteth himselfe: but the meeketh not with suretshippe, is sure. A gracious womā maketh her house, as for the mightie, shey maketh her ryche, as for hath a gentle liberal stomach, is mercifull: but who so hurteth his neyghboare, is a vyce.

The labour of the vngodly prospereth not, but he that soweth rightousnesse, shal increase a sure reward. Let a rightous man byngeth life, and so to cleue vnto mell, byngeth death. The LORDE abhorreth a stynned hert, but he hath pleasure in them that are vnbesyde. He shal not helpe yf wretched, though they laye all their bondes together, but the side of the righteous shalbe pūctured. A fayre woman without discretemens, is like a ryng of golde in a swyns snout. The iust labourer for peace and rest quyllite, but the vngodly for dysquyetenesse.

Some man geneth out his goodes, and yet he departe from nothinge, and yet is out in pouerte. He that is lyberall in grynnyng shal haue plenty: and he that watereth shal be watered also himself. Who so becometh vpon his come, he is cursed amonge the people: but blessinge shal lye vpon his hand that selleth it. He that labourerch for honesty synnerch his desire: but who so seeketh for myscheite, it shal happel vnto him. He that trusteth in his riches, shal haue a fall, but yf rightousnesse shal flourish as the grene lauf.

Who so maketh dysquyetenesse in his house, he shal haue wynde for his benefite, and the foole shal be seruante to the wynde.

The fruite of the righteous is as the fruite of life, a wise man also wynteth mens soules. If yf rightousnesse be crepted vpon combe how much more the vngodly & yf fruite

The XII. Chapter.

Who so loveth wysdome, wil be content to be reformed: but he that hateth to be reformed, is a foole. A good man is acceptable unto the LORD, as it is said: but he that is ungodly, is not acceptable unto the LORD. A man can be ungodly in his godlynesse, but if the voice of the righteous shall not be heard. A stedfast man is a crown unto his husbande: but he that behaereth himself unonestly, is a cote upon his bone. The thoughtes of the righteous are right, but the ymaginacion of the ungodly are disceatfull. The talkynge of the ungodly is, how they maye laye wayes for blame, but the mouth of the righteous shall deliver them. O ever thou canst turne he above, the ungodly shall be overthromen, but the house of the righteous shall stand. A man shall be commended for his wysdome, but a foole shall be despyed. A simple man which laboureth and travaileth, is better than one that is gorgious and wanteth beere. A righteous man regardeth the life of his soul, but the ungodly have cruel hertes. He that telleth his lorde, shall have plentifull off of bread: but he that followeth idleness, is very poore. The desyre of the ungodly hunteth after myschance, but the reede of the righteous bringeth forth fruite. The wicked fall downe into the snare that is made of his own mouth, but the iust shall escape out of it. Every man shall enjoye good a counciler to the innocency of his mouth, and a father to the mouthes of his babes shall be remarkable. Like what a foole talketh in honde, he thinketh it well done: but he that is wys, wil be concealed. A foole revealeth his wath in all the haire, but a discrete man forgereth wange. A iust man will tell the truth, and he that is ungodly is right: but a false wyrtell is disceatfull. A slanderous personne speaketh like a sword, but a wys mans tongue is wholsome. A true mouth is ever content, but a dyssemblinge tongue is soone chanced. They that ymagin end in their mynde, wil discrece: but the counclers of peace shall have to ye followinge tyme. These shall no mysfortune happen unto the iust, but the ungodly shall be filled with misery. The LORD abhorreth disceatfull lippes, but they that laboure for treuth, please him. He that hath understandinge, can hyde his wysdom: but an undiscrete herte telleth out his foolhardy. A diligent hande shall beare rule, but the yde shall be under tribute. Every nesse disceatfull is herte of man, but a good word maketh it glad agayne. The righteous is liberal unto his neighbour, but the waye of the ungodly wil disceat them selven. A disceatfull man shall fynde no waye to take, but he that is content in that he hath, is more worth than golde. In the waye of righteousness there is life, as for every other waye, it is the path unto death.

The XIII. Chapter.

Wysse sonne wilt receive his fathers warninge, but he that is scoonefull, will not heare when he is reproved. A good man shall enjoye the fruite of his mouth, but he that hath a sron arte wynde, shall be spoiled. He that keepeth his mouth, keepeth his life: but he that speaketh unadvisedly, synneth harme. The ylogarade wolde sayne his name, and can not yett his desyre: but the soule of the diligent shall have plenty. A righteous man abhorreth lyes, but the ungodly shall shame both other and himself. Righteousness keepeth the innocet in the waye, but ungodlynesse shall overthrowe the synner.

Some men are rich, though they have nothinge: agayne, some men are poore havinge great riches. With goodes every man deliverteth his life, and the poore wyl not be repoued. The light of the righteous maketh ioyfull, but the candle of the ungodly shall be put out. Amonge the proude there is cruel strife, but amonge those that do all thinges with aduysment, there is wysdome. Hastely getteth goodes are soone spent, but they that be gathered together with the hande, shall increase. Longe tarienge for a thinge that is dysferred, greueth it herte: but when the desyre cometh, it is a trete of life. Who so despyeth the word, destruction he himself: but he that feareth the commandement, shall have peace. The lawe is a wel of life unto the wys, that it maye kepe him from the snares of death. Good understandinge greueth favour, but hardie is the waye of the despyers. A wys man doth all thinges with discrecion, but a foole wil be dare his folly. An ungodly man shall ger byngeth myschance, but a faithfull ambassador is wholsome. He that rebyleth scoone to be reformed, cometh to pouerite and shame: but who so receiveth correccion, shall come to honoure. When a desyre is broughte to passe, it deliverteth the soule: but foolles abhorre him that escheweth euill. He that goeth in the company of wise men, shall be wise: but who so is a company of foolcs, shall be hurte. My chiefe foloweth vpon sinners, but the righteous shall haue a good reward. Whiche their children childen shall haue in possessiō, for the riches of the sinner is layed vp for vsure. There is plenteousnesse of sode in the felde of the poore, & shall be increased out of measure. He that spareth the robber, hatch his some: but who so loucheth him, holdeth him cur in narrowre. The righteous careth, and is satisfied, but y bely of the vngodly hath neuer ynough.

The XIII. Chapter.

Wise woman upholdeh hir hoose, but a foolish wife plucketh it downe.

Who so searcheth the LORD, walketh in the right path: & regardeth not him that abhorreth the wayes of the LORD. In the mouth of the foolish is the boesting of lordship, but y lippe of y wise will warre of sode. Where no open are, there the crybb is emprie: but where the open labour, there is much sure. A faithfull wytnesse wyl nee dyssemble, but a false recorde will make a ly.

A consciencefull byderth wysdome, & syndeh in noc: but knowlege is easy to come by, wno him that wil understande. Se y thou meke not with a soole, & do as though thou haddest no knowlege. The wysdome of him that hath understandinge is, to take he de vno his waye, but the foolishnesse of the unwise disceareth. Foolcs make but a spoete of syme, but there is favourable loue amonge the righteous. The herte of him that hath understandinge wil neither dispate for any soere, nor beco presumptuous for any so dane ioye.

N

The houses of the vngodly shall be overthrowne, but the tabernacles of y righteous shall flourish. There is a waye, which some men thinke to be right, but the ende therof ledeh vnto death. The herte is forousfull euen in laughter, and the ende of smyrth is he wytnesse. An vnfaithfull personne shall be filled with his owne waye, but a good man wyl beware of sode. An ignorant body beleneth all thynges, but who so hath understandinge, lokeh well to his goungce. A wise man, feareth, and departeth from euill, but a soole goeth on presumptuously. An impacient man hancheh foolishly, but he that is well abysed, doeth other waye.

Pro 16. c

C The ignorant haue foolishnes in possessiō, but the wise are crowned with knowlege. The asell shall bome them silue before y good, and the vngodly shall waye at the heere of the righteous. The poore is hant enen of his owne neyghbores, but the rich hath many frende. Who so despiseth his neyghbo', doeth amysse: but blessed is he that hath pyce of the poore. They that vngodly chauce, shall be dyspoynted: but they that must vpo good thynges, vnto soch shall happen mercy and faythfulness. Dight labo' byngeth riches, but where many wone wordes are, truly there is scarcenesse.

Riches are an ornament vnto the wise, but the ignoranc of foolcs is very foolishnesse. A faithfull wytnesse beluyeth in les, but a lyar dysceareth them. The feare of the LORD is a strong holde, for vno to be wyl be a sure defence. The feare of the LORD is a well of life, to auoyde the sum of death. The increase and profic of the cemens is the pynges honoure, but the decaye of the people is the confusio of the prynce. Patience is a token of wisdom, but wrath and haistie displeasur is a token of foolishnesse. A merry herte is the life of the body, but rancoure confuseth awaye the bones. He that doth a poore man wronge, blasphemeth his maker: but who so hath pyce of the poore, doth honoure vnto God.

The vngodly is a frayed of every pain, but the righteous hath a good hope vnto death. Wysdome resteth in the herte of him that hath understandinge, and he wyteacheth them that are vnlearned. Righteousness seareth vp the people, but wydeh byngeth folke to destruccio. A diligent seruante is a pleaster vnto y kyng, but a ly is not honest. prouoceth him vnto wrath.

The XV. Chapter.

Softe answereth purteth domne displeasur, but forward wordes prouoceth vnto anger. A wise conge commendeth knowlege, a foolish moue blancheth out nothinge but foolishnesse. The eyes of the LORD loke in every place, both vpon good and bad. A wholsome conge is a tree of life, but he that abuseth it, hatch a barren mynde. A soole despiseth his correction, but he y taketh hebe vnto him is repoued, shall haue y more understandinge.

In the house of the righteous are pure riches, but in the increase of the vngodly there is mysfortue. A wise mouth prouoceth out knowlege, but y herte of the foolish doeth not so. The LORD abhorreth y sacrifice of the vngodly, but the prayer of the righteous is acceptable vnto him. The waye of the vngodly is an abhominatiō of LORDE, but who so followeth righteously, he shall be loved. He that forsaketh the straight way, shall be sore punished: & who so hath correction, shall be in to death. The will of his payne is knowne unto the LORDE, how much more then the herces of men? A scamefull word longeth not one of rebuynghim, rather wyl he come amonge of wryng. A wryng herce maketh a chearfull countenance, but an vnquyete mynde maketh it heare. A wyse herce wil like a secret knowlege, & of mouth of foolles medleth with foolishly speeche. All the dayes of the poore are miserye, but a quytte herce is as a cōnyngall feeste. Better is a litle with the feare of the LORDE, then greates treasure, for they are not abrooke soone. Better is a meace of pouer with love, then a fat oxe w^{ch} will. An angry man stereth up strike, but he of patient fullness dyced. The waye of bloudfull is full of thornes, but the streete of righteous is well clenched. A wyse son maketh a glad father, but an vn discrete vnshamerh his mother. A foolle reioyseth in foolish thynges, but a wyse man loyseth well in his owne goynges. Vnadyng thoughtes shal come to naught, but whye we are men we can geue counsell, there is no satisfactiō. O how ioyfull a thyng is it, to be to geue a conuenient answer. O how pleasaunt is a word spoken in due season. The waye of life ledeh vnto heauen, is an sluide be wate of hell beneath.

The LORDE wil beate downe the house of proud, but he shal make fast the doores of wryddome. The LORDE abhorreth the ymaginacions of the wicked, but pure wordes are pleasant vnto him. The couetous man stretch up his owne house, but who so hath remembrance, shal lyue. A righteous man lyeth in his mynde how to do good, but the myde of the vngodly ymagineth, how he maye do harme. The LORDE is farre from the vngodly, but he heareth the prayer of the righteous. Like as the clearnesse of the eyes wyseth the herce, so doeth a good name fede bones. The care of the hartenerh vnto rebelling, and enclinethe thereto, shall well amonge the wyse. He that resisteth to reforme, despyseth his owne soule: but he that submyteth himselfe to correction, is safe.

The XVI. Chapter.

The feare of the LORDE is the righte waye of wryddome, and lowlynes goeth before honore. A man maye well pursue a thyng in his hart, but is answer of the longe cometh of the LORDE. A man thinkeh all his wayes to be cleane, but it is the LORDE that shal sheweth his myndes. Commyte thy wayes vnto the LORDE, and loke what thou doest, it shal prosper. The LORDE heareth all thynges for his owne sake, yet when he feareth the vngodly for the daye of wrath.

The LORDE abhorreth all presumptuous & proude herces, there maye neither strength nor power escape. With lowynge mercy & faithfullnesse synners be forgouen, and who so feareth the LORDE schuerh well. When a mans wayes please the LORDE, he maketh his very enemies to be his frendes. Better is it to haue a litle thyng in righteousnes, the greates rentes wongouously gotten. A man deuyseth a waye in his herce, but it is the LORDE that directeth his goynges. When a prophete is in the lippes of the kynge, his mouth shal not go wryde in iudgment. A true measure & a true balance are the LORDES, he maketh all weights. It is a greates abhominacion when the kynge is a wyrd, for a kynge seate shal be holden vnto righteousnes.

Righteous lippes are pleasaunt vnto the kynge, and they loue him that speaketh the truth. The kynge displeaseth in a messenger of death, but a wyse man wil pacifye him. The cherefull commutatiō of the kynge is life, and his lowynge sad is as the enenyng dewe. To haue wryddome in possession is better than golde, and to get vnderstandinge is more worth then syluer. The path of the righteous schuerh well, & who so letteth well to his wayes, feareth his owne soule.

Presumptuousnes goeth before destruction, and a fier a proude stomake there followeth a fall. Better is it to be of humble mynde with the lowly, then to deuyde the spoyle with the proude. He that hanbleth a matter wrythly, openeth good: & blessed is he, that putteth his trust in the LORDE. Who so hath a wyse vnderstandinge, is called to counsell: but he that speaketh saye, getteth more riches. Vnderstandinge is a well of life vnto him that hath it, as for the challynging of foolles, it is but foolshenesse. The herce of the wyse enformeth his mouth, and ameneth the doctrine in his lippen.

Saye wordes are an hony combe, a restyng henge of the mynde, & health of the bones.

There is a waye sinners churh to be right, but the ende therof leadeh vnto death. A troublesome soule disquyreteth hir selfe, for hir owne mouth hath brought her therto. An vngodly pryncesse stretcheth up euill, and in his lippen he is as an whore burnyng fyre.

The XVII. Chapter.

Recl. 10. d
A letter is a dyemouffell w quyetesse, the a full house and many fat ceteil w stryfe. A discrete seuaite shal ha uc more rule then the sonnes þ hane no rey-dente, and shal haue like herycage w the bicheren. Like as syluer is tried in the fryc and goide in the fomaice, euen so doth the LORDE proue the herres. A wicked body holdeth moch of false lippes, & a dyssimylinge pes-son geneth care to a discreteull ege. Who so laugheth þ poore to scowte, blasphemeth his maker: and he þ is glad of another mans hurte, shal not be unpunished. Childers chil-den are a wofshipe vnto the elders, and the fathers are the bond of the children. Anciequent speach be cometh not a feole, a dyssim-ylinge meth also testmeth not a pryuce.

Pro. 14. d

A liberalite is a pricious stene vnto him that hath it, for there so euer he becometh, he pro-sperech. Who so couereth another mans offence, seeketh lowe: but he þ discloseth the faure, stretch frendes at variance. One reptore only doth more good to him þ hath vnderstödinge, then an C. stripes vnto a feole. A seditious person seeketh mysfete: I ut a cruell ressaunger shal be sent agaynst him. It were better to come agaynst a she were robbed of hir whulpes, then agaynst a feole in his foolishnes. Who so rewardeth euill for good, the plague shal not departe frö his house. Se þ so woth disorde & strife, is like one þ dyggeth up a water bakke: but an open enemic is like the water þ breaketh ouer & renech injusticeth þ vngobly, as him þ condecipneth the innocet. What helper it to geue a foole memy in his hede, where as he hath no myn-de to bye wysdomer: he is a frende that all by the handes, & is iusticie for another, he is a foole. He þ letech strife, deltech in synne: & who so stretch his doie to hys, seeketh a frend fall. Who so hath a frewarder here, open-neth no good: and he þ hath an euerlastyng tonge, shal fall in to mysfete. A wicked body bynygeth him selfe in to forwene, an father of a foole can haue no forwene. Who herre maketh a lusty age, but a scornfully-de drytch up þ bene. The vngobly wyl gifte out of the bosome, to wassail the maye of iudgment. Wyð dome syneth in þ of him þ hath vnderstödinge, but þ feoles wanne choicere out all iobes. Who discrete senne is a grese vnto his father, but heyrness: vnto his mother þ bare him: li-punish þ innocent, and to synre þ pryuce geuere iudgment, are both euill. Who the power of the toung, he that loneth it, shal away the fruce thereof. Who so fynderh a wif synch a good thyng, 7 recoueth an wholsome benefite of the LORDE. The poore maketh supplicacion and prayeth metely, but the riche gencech a rough answer.

A synche that belongeth in loue, doth a man more frendshipe, and stricker faster wne him then a brother.

The XIX. Chapter.

Wher is the poore that lyeth godly, and the blasphemer that is but a foole. Where no discrecion is, there the soule is not well: and who so is swifte on fere, dumblith hastily. Foolishnesse maketh a man to go out of his waye, 7 then is his better repaier agaynst the LORDE. Riches make many frendes, but the poore is forsake of his owne frendes. A false wyrtess shall not remayne unpunyschted, and he that speaketh lyes shal not escape. The multitude which wps grete men, 7 euery man fauou-reth him that gencech reuwardes. As for the poore, he is hated amonge all his brethren for his owne frendes forsake him, 7 he that gacech credite wnto woordes, gencech not his gode. He that is wyse, loueth his owne soule: and who so hath vnderstondinge, shal pre-sente. A false wyrtess shall not remayne unpunyschted, 7 he y speaketh lyes shal perishe.
Delicate case be cometh not a fool, much more harmefully is it, a bonde man to haue y rule of synners. A wyse man puercheth of displea-sur, 7 it is his bonde to let seme fautes passe.

The kyngeys disfaul is like y roaringe of a lyon, but his frendshipe is like the demewps of a grass. An vndercrete sonne is y beuynps of his father, 7 a biauyng wyfe is like the topp of an house, where choore it is euer dyspyngge. Ghoust 7 riches maye a ma haue by y heretage of his eldra, but a discrete woman is the gifte of the LORDE. Slouchfulnes kyngeth slepe, 7 an ydell soule shal suffer hys gode. Who so keepeth the commaundment, kepeth his owne soule: but he y regardeth not his waye shal dye. He y hath pitie vpon the poore, ledech wnto y LORDE: lorde what he layeth out, it shal be payed him agayne. Chafer y some whyle there is hope, but let not y soule be moued to slaye hi. For grete wrauth kyngeth harme, therfore let him go, and so mayest thou reach him more nurotore.

gouernare vnto good counsell, 7 be content to be reformed, that thou mayest beuyn here a ster. There are many deuices in a mans herte, neuertheless the counsell of y LORDE shal ston-de. It is a mans wooshippe to do good, 7 better it is to be a poore ma, then a dysfentler.
The feare of the LORDE prestrucheth the life, yea it gencech piteousnes, without the vnticious of any plague. A slouchfull body shureth his honde in to his bosome, so y he can not pue it to his mouche. If thou ympech a stou-nful personne, the ignouant shal take better hede: 7 yf thou reprouest one y hath vnder-stondinge, he wil be y wyse. He y hurteth his father or shureth out his mother, is a shamefull 7 an vnworthy sonne. My sonne, heare nomore the doctrine of leacheth the awaye from the woordes of vnderstondinge.

A false wyrtess laugbeth wnto god, 7 scorneth, 7 the mouche of she vnghooly eatech vpon teethnes. Punyschmentes are ordened for she scornfull, and stripes for scoles backe.

The XX. Chapter.

Wne is a velupousus thyng, 7 dre-ffenes causeth subcion: who so belyen beherin, shal neuer be wyse.
The kynge ought to be feared as the roaringe of a lyon, who so promocheth him wnto anger, offendeth agaynst his owne soule. It is a mans honoure to kepe himself from grese, but they y haue pleasure in baning, are fooles euery one. A slouchfull body wil not go to plowe for colde, therfore shal he go a-begginge in sommer, and haue nothinge.
Wyse counsell in the herte of man is like a water in the depe of the earth, but he that hath vnderstondunge, beyngeth it forth.
Many there be that are called good doers, but where shal one fynde a true faithfull ma?
Who so ledeth a godly and an innocent life, happie shal his children be, whom he leaureth behynde him.

A kynge that stretcheth in iudgment, and lo-keth well aboute him, bynneth awaye all euill. Who can saye: my herte is cleane, I am innocent scynsynne? To vse two maner of weightes, or two maner of measures, beech these are abhominable vnto the LORDE.

A dyllie is knowne by his conuersacion, whether his woordes be pure and right. As for the hearinge of the eare 7 the sight of y eye, y LORDE hath made the both. Delaye not thou in slepe, lest thou come wnto powerethur opt thine eyes, 7 thou shalt haue bred ynough. It is naughte, It is naughte (saye men) when they haue it, but when it is gone, they gence it a good worde.

A mouth of wisdomdōingc is more worth then golde, & many precious stones, and costly jewels. Take his garment that is sicrie for a stranger, & take a pledge of him for unto some mans sake. Every mā liketh the bee that is gotten with disceate, but at the last is mōth shalbe filled with grauel.

Thow counsell the thinges that men desyre go forward: with discrecion ought wates to be taken in hande. Noble not with him that bewaileth secrettes, and is a slaunderer, and discauech with his lippes.

Who so curseth his father and mother, his lighe shalbe put out in the myddest of daret ness. The heretage that commeth to halfely acche first, shal not be playd at the ende. Saye not thou: I will recompence euell, but put thy trust in the LORDE, & he shal defende þy. The LORDE abhureth two maner of weighees, and a full balace is an euell thinge. The LORDE euideth eury mā goinges, for what is he, that vnderstandeth his owne wayes? It is a snare for a man to blasfpheme that which is holy, & then to go aboue w domes. A wyse kynge destruyeth þy vngodly, & byngeth the rebelle cur-ethen. The lasterne of y LORDE is y lynch of man, & goeth thowen all the inwarde par-tes of the body. Mercy & faithfulness presere the kynge, & with louyng kyndnes his state is holden vp. The strength of yonge men is their worshippe, & a gray hende, is an hond onto y aged. Woundes byue awaye euell, and so do stripes the inwarde partes of the body. The XXX. Chapter.

Thounges here is in the hant of the LORDE, like as are the ryuers of water: he maye turne it whither so curhe wyll. Every man thinketh his crime wa-ye to be right, but the LORDE iudgeth þy her-tes. To do righteounesse and iudgme is more acceptable to the LORDE the sacrifice.
A presumptuous lobe, a piewde stomacke, & the lasterne of the vngodly is synne. The deuyses of one that is diligēt, byngē plei-suresounesse: but he his vnabused, commeth to powerte. Who so hoodeth vp riches w þy disceatynge of his conge, he is a soie, & like vnto them that see their owne deatch.

The robberyes of the vngodly shalbe their owne destruction, for they wolde net do the thinge that was right. The wayes of the fromarde are strange, but þy workes of him y is cleane, are right. It is better to dwell in a counten vnder y house coppe, then with a braulinge woman in a wyde house.

The soule of the vngodly wysheth euell, and hath no pitie vpon his neighbour.

When the scoonefull is purryshed, the noisant cack þy better hulle: & when a wyf man is warned, he wil receaue the more vnderstandinge. The righteous enformeth the house of the vngodly, but y vngodly on still a fect their owne wickēdnesse. Who so stoppeth his eare at the cryng of the re, he shal criē himself and not be herd. A piewy rewarde pacifieth displeasure, and a grise in the bosome filleth furiousnesse.

The rust deuyeth in doyngē the thinge that is right, but the workers of wickēdnesse abhore the same. The man that wanteth cut of the waye of wysdome, shal remaine in the cōgregation of þy deeb. For y pleasure in bancketes, shal be pouer man.
Who so deuyeth in wyne and delicates, shal not be riche. The vngodly shalke gins for the rightuous, & the wisde for the stull.

It is better to dwell in a wyrdome, w with a chydngē and an angrie woman. In a wyse mans house there is greate treasure and pienceounesse, but a foolish body speach vp all. Who so followeth righte-nesse and mercy, syncheth both life, righte-nesse and hond. A wyse man wyrdeth the cice of the mightie, and as for the strength they trust in, he byngeth it downe. Who keepeth his mouth and his tonge, the soule perth his soule from troubles. He that perth his soule from troubles, he his perth presumptuous, is called a scoonefull which in wath darre worke maliciouss.

The voluptuousnesse of the flesh shal his owne deatch, for his hādes will not lab. He couereth and deuyeth all the daye longe, but the rightuous is allwaye genyng keepeth nochingē backe. The sacrificē of the vngodly is abheminacion, for they the thinge y is gotten w wickēdnesse. A wyrdnesse shal perishe, but he y wilde conent to heare, shal allwaye haue powere of his himself. An vngodly man goeth forth ly, but the iust resounereth his owne workes.

There is no wysdome, there is no standinge, there is no counsell agaynst LORDE. The horse is prepared agaynst daye of battayll, but the LORDE engraunt the victory.

The XXXI. Chapter.

Good name is more worth then re riches, and leuyng fauē is better then siluer and golde. Wherther rich or pouerte do merde so, it commeth all of God. A wyse man seyth the plague and deeth himself, but the foolish go on are purryshed. The ende of leuylme is face of God, is riches, honoꝝ, prosperite and health. Speares and fynes arc in þ waye of the fowarde, but he that sepe his soule, let him selfe sech soch. If thou reachest a childe in his yowth what maye he shuide go, he shall not leane it when he is olde. The rich ruleth the poore, and þ borowen is seruante to þ lene. Se þ is much wylde conesse, shall reape so much. The robbe of his plage shall destroye him. A long ynge eye shall be blessed, for he grauc of his bled vnto þ poore. Cast out þ fescerfull man, and so shall fescis go out w þm, ye variance, and slaunder shall cease. Who so delveth eo be of a clene herte and of gracions typpes, þ ynge shall be his frende. The eyes of þ LORDE preserue knowlege, but as for þ wordes of þ deuytful, he bryn gethem to nauight. The flemishull body foytethere is a lyd w out, I mighte le saye in þ fterre. The mouth of an harloe is a depe pyer, wher in he filtereth that þ LORDE is angry w thall. Foolshenes sickeeth in the herte of þ lab, but þ rob of correccien bawteth is awaye. Who so both a poore man vntenge to mercif his owne riches, neurch (ceruelly) vnto the rich, and at the last cometh to po nance himself. My sonne, lene borowen thine ure, and herken vnto the trades of wysdome, to applye þ mynde vnto my deccryne: for it is a pleasure thinge yf thou sepe it in thine herte, and pacieut it in thy mouth: hat thou mayest allwaye put þ trust in the LORDE, for none I learned þ wey of it with counsell and learninge: þ I might shewe þ the treuth and that thou w the verue mightest answer them þ laye any thinge against þ? Se þ thou robbe not þ poore because he is weak, and oppresse not þ simple in iudgement: for þ LORDE himself wyl defende thir cause, and do violence vnto them þ haue vsed violence. Make no frendshipe with an angrie nyllfull man, and kepe no: company w þ furious: lest thou leane his wayes, and receiue hurt vnto thy soule. Be not thou one of them þ hynde the hande vps þe mysse, and are swertie for de: for yf thou hast ne bing to paye, they shall take awaye thy bedd from vnder the. Thou shalt not remitte the lande march, which thy fore fathers haue sic. Seest thou not, þ they which be diligem in their businesse stonde before þ ynges, and not amonge the simple peopel?

The XXIII Chapter

When thou sittest at the table to eate w a lord, obdye thy fill manerly w þ thinges that are set before þ. Measure thine appetize: and yf thou wilt rule thine owne selfe, ne ever greydy of his meate, for meate begyeth and disturbeth.

Take not our greates trowale and labd to be riche, be noce of soch a purpos. Why wilt thou set thine eye vpon þ thinge, which suddenly vanissheth awaye? For riches make them seine w ynges, and take their flight li ke an Aegle into þ ayre. Take not thou w þ cryuous, and desyre no his meate, for he hath a martnedus herte. Seest thou vnto þ eate and drynke, where as his herte is not w þ? See þ morsels that thou hast eaten shall theu verbrake, and lese those swete wordes. Tel ne thinge in to þ eares of a fool, for he wyl despise the wysdome of thy wordes. Remoue not þ olde lande marke, and come not within þ felde of the fatherlesse: for he þ delinerech them is mightie, euen þe that defende their cause agaynst the. Applye thine herte vnto learninge, and thine eare to the wordes of knowlege. Withholde not correction from þ childe, for yf thou barest him w the robbe, he shall not dye thereof. Thou mayest test him w the robbe, but thou deluyest his soule from hell. My sonne, yf þ herte receiue wysdome, my herte also shall reioyce: ye my reynes shall be very glad, yf þ typpes speake the thinge þ is sight. Let not thine herte be gelous to felous symone, but kepe þ still in the feare of the LORDE all the dayes linge: for the ende is not yet come, and thy pacieut abydinge shall not be in wayne. My sonne, ne eate w be wyse, so shall thine hert prosper in the waye. Kepe no company w wyne be beters and ryotous eaters of flesh: for soch ad be diondardes and ryotous, shall come to po uerite, þ he that is genen to much sepe, shall go w a raggyd cere. Gene care vnto thy father that leueth the, and despyse not thy mother when she is olde. Labd for ro gett þ treuth, sell not awaye wysdome, nouer vnto vnto despying: for a richereus father is maruelous glad of a wyse sonne, 2 delyeth in his fo shall thy father be glad, and thy mother that bare the, shall reioyse. My sonne, gene me thyme herte, and let thine eyes haue pleasure in my wayes. For an whow is a depe greue, and an harloe is a narrow pyer. She surkech like a thefe, and those that be not aware, she biugeth vnto her. Where is woe: where is sorrow: where is strife: where is bialyngge: where are woundes without cause: where be red eyes: Euen amonge those that be euer at the nyne, and sitte out where the lesse is. Lete not thou vpon the wyne, how reth it is, and w hat a cold it groweth in the glasse. It goeth downe so fly, but at the last it is by thy neighbours house, lest he be wery of the, and so abhorre the. Who so beareth false witness agaynst his neighbour, he is a veyn peere, a swearer & a sharpe arrowe. The hope of the vngodly in tyme of neede, is like a rotten eoth and a slippery foote. Who so syngeth agaynste to a wicked herre, clotheeth himselfe with ragges in the colde, and poureth wyne out upon chaffe. If thine enemy hunger, feede him: if he be drye, geue him drynke: for so shalt thou haue coales of fyre vpo his heade, and the LORD shall rewarde the. The rich wynde dryeth awaye the rayne, euen so doth an earnest soker countenaunce a backbiters tongue. It is better to syle in a corner vnder the rose, then to be a bawlynge woman in a wyde house. A good repute out of a faire conuerse, is like colde water to a thyrstie soule. A righteous man fallinge downe before the vngodly, is like a troubleth well and a springe is destroyed. Like as it is not good to care to much hony, euen so he that will starye out bye thynge, it shal be to the hurt vnto hym. He that can not rule himselfe, is like a cite, whiche is broken downe, and hath no walles.

Like as stone is not meete in sommer, ner rayne in harvest: euen so is wordes vnsimly for a fool. Like as a bynde and the swalowe take their flight and flighte and there, so the curse that is gauen in wayne, shal not ligghe vpon a man. Vnto the horse belongeth a vobyppe, to the Ass a bysole, and a rodde to the soles backe. Geue not the foole an answer to a scer his foolishness, lest thou become like vnto him: but make a foole an answer to his foolishness, lest he be wise in his owne conceite. He is lame of his feete, yett vnderstande is he in vanite, that vnderstande any thinge to a foole. Like as it is an vncomly thinge to haue legges & yett to be lame, eue so is a parable in a fooles mouth. He that ferreth a foole in hye dignite, is in euill as if a man vnd cast a picious stone vpo a galous. A parable in a fooles mouth, is like a thorne in a pichers hand, or a broken man in a hand. A man of experience discerneth all thinges well, but who so byreth a foole, byreth himselfe as well as he. Like as the dogg turneth agayne to his vomite, euen so a foole begynnet his foolishness agayne a fresh. If thou sycst a man in his wise in his owne conceite, thereto is more hope in a foole then in a bynde. The slothfull sayeth: there is a hope in my waye, and a lyon in my myddest of the streete. Like as the dogg turneth aboute vpon the tresholde, euen so doeth the slothfull vnder himselfe in his bedde. The slothfull bodye thursteth his hode in to his bosome, and it greeth him to put it agayne to his mouth. The slothfull thursteth himselfe wyser, then wy. men beate fyre and reach. Who so goeth by and medleth with other mens strife, he is like one that taketh a dogg by the eares. Like as one sturth deadly arrowes and dares out of a pny place, euen so doeth a vssimbleth with his neighbour, and then sayeth: I dyd it but in spoire. Where no wodd is, there the fyre goeth out: and where the bachevter is taken awaye, there the strife ceaseth. Coles kynde heate, and wodd by fyre: euen so doeth a bawlynge fellowe steepe vnto variance. A slaunderous wordes are like slatery, but they pearse in inward partes of a body. Venymous lippes & a wicked herre, are like a postherde covered with siluer dyoffe. An enemye vssimbleth with his lippes, and in the meane season he ymagineth myscheise: but whan he speakech saye, beleue him not, for there are seuen abhominacion in his herte. Who so sepech euill with secretly to do hurte, his malice shal be shewed before the whole congregacion. Who so byggeth up a pyer, shal fall therein: and he that weltereth a stone, shal stombe vpon it himselfe. A vssimbleyng conge hatech one that rebutech him, and a slateryng mouth woyleth myscheise.

The xxvii. Chapter.

Like not thy boost of comtoire, for thou knowest not what maye happen to daye. Let another man prayse the, & not thine owne mouth: yett other shall lippes, and not thine. The stone is heavy, and the sonde weighty: but a fooles wrath is heavier then they both. Wrath is a cruelle thinge, and furiousnesse is a very tempest: yett who is able to abyce enuye? An open rebuke is better, then a secreete loue. Faithfull are the woundes of a loner, but the lippes of an enemye are disceatfull. He that is full, abdoneth an hony combe: but vnto him that is hungry, euery sower thinge is sweete. He that oft tymes synneth, is like a bynde that forsaketh his nest. The herre is glad of a sweete oymment and sauoure, but a stomacke that can geue good counsell, reioyseth a mans neighbour. Thyne owne frende and thy fathers frende se thou forsake not, but goe not in to thy brothers house in tyme of thy trouble.

Better is a frende at hōde, then a broether fatte of. My sonne, be wise, and thou shalt make me a glad heart: for that I shall make an freere unto my rebukers. A wise man seynge the plague wyll hyde him self, as for foolcs they go on kill, and suffer harme. Take his garment that is surerrie for a straunger, & ta ke a pledge of him for the vnknowenmans sake. He that is to hastie to praise his neigh bour aboue measure, shall be taken as one of gheuch him an euell repute. A bawdyng woman and the rose of the house droppynge in a rayne daye, maye well be compared together. He that restrayneth her, restray neth the wynde, and holdeth oyle fast in his hōde. Like as one vis whereth another, so doth one man censure another. Who so keepeth his sye ere, shall enioy the frutes thereof: he that mayneth upon his master, shall come to honour. Like as in one wa ter there appeare dyuerser faces, tū so dyuer ser men haue dyuerser hertes. Like as hell & destruction are neuer full, euen so the eyes of me can neuer be satisfied. Syluer is tryed in the moule, & golde in the fornace, & so is a man, rehan he is openly praysed to his fa ce. Though thou shuldest buy a foole w a pestill in a mortar like ormeuell, yet wil not his foolishnesse go from him. Se y thou knowe the nombre of thy carell thy self, and loke well to thy flockes. For riches abyde not all waye, & the crowne endureth not for euer. The hay groweth, & grassē cōmeth up, & herbes are gathered in & mountaynes.
 The lamberd shal clothe the, & for the goe ses thou shalt haue moneye to y husbandry.
 Thou shalt haue goates mylk ynough to fede the, to wpholde thy husbande, & to susteyne thy maydens.

C The xxviii. Chapter.
 The vngodly flyeth no man chafynge him, but the righteous stenderth stiff as a lyon. Because of synne y lon de doth ofte chaunge hir prynces: but choi men of vnderstoninge & wysdomē a realme endureth longe. One poore man oppress ge another by violencē, is like a conynuall raue that destroyeth y frute. They that seuse the lawe, praysē y vngodly: but such as kepe the lawe, abhoire them. Wicked men dyscerne not the thinge y is righte, but they that seke after the LORDE, dyscast all thinges. A poore man leynge a godly li fe, is better then the riche that goeth in rōde waye. Who so keepeth the lawe, is a childe of vnderstoninge: but he y fidech ryuous men, shameth his father. Who so increaseth his riches by wastage & wyng ge, let him gasper them to helpe the poore withal. He that turneth awaye his ear from hearinge y lawe, his praye shall be hoired. Who so leach y righteous man an euell waye, shall fall in to his ownne net, but y iust shall haue the good in posses sion.

 The rich man chynketh him self to be safe, but the poore that hath vnderston inge, can perceiue him wyl ynough. When vngodly men are in prosperite, the both dom y frate of men chaungeth. He that hyeth his symes, shall not prosper: but who Enrelegeth them and forsaketh them, shall haue mercy. Well is him that sideth waye in awe: as for him that hardeneth here, he shall fall in to mischefe. Like as rearinge lyon and an boogrie bear, wyl is an vngodly pryncē ouer the poore peple.

 Where the pryncē is without vnder dinge, there is greates oppression & wronge but y he be sōdly one as hauech con science, he shall longe raigne. He that w lece sheddeth any mans bloude, shall be nagare vnto his graue, and no man shall able to succō him. Who so leacheth a god that geeth from a waye, shall once haue reousness of dreb: but he that soloweth full man is greately to be commēdē, but that maketh to much haist for to be rich, shall not be vngiltie. To haue respect of persones in iudgment is not good: but why: he wil do wronge, yet euen for a pea of bued. He that will be rich all to som hath an euell eye, and considereth not: his pouerete shall come upon him. He that bueth a man, shall fynde more saueneas y last, the he that starveth him. Who so bech his father and mother, and sayeth no synne: the same is like vnto a mo chen.

 He that is of a proude stomack, shall up friste: but he that putteth his trust y LORDE, shall be well fedd. He that trusteth in his owne hert, is a foole: but he that letch wisely, shall be safe. He that geeth to the poore, shall not wame: but he
 that neth awaye his eyes from such as be in need see, shall suffre greates pouerete him self.
 When the vngodly are come up,
 not are saue to hyde them self: but whē they

B ryuous men, shameth his father. Who so

 When the vngodly are come up,
 not
 are saue to hyde them self: but whē
 they perish, the righteous increasē.

What is stiffnecked & will not be reformed, shall suddenly be destroyed & our eny helpe. Where the righteous have the over hande, the people are in prosperitie: but where the ungodly beareth rule, the people mourne. Who so loveth wysdome, shall keepe his saether a glad man: but he that despiseth her counsaile, shall bringe greivous paine vnto himselfe. Who so shall crye out vnto the righteous, sayinge, I have sinned, he shall be mercifull vnto him, & shall saye, Behold, I was in my sinne, but I have not denyed it: I have sinned, & I have not hid my iniquitie. Who so shall saye, I will not sinne, he shall be hated of all. Who so shall saye, I will not be angry, he shall be angry with his neighbour, & shall be hated of all. Who so shall saye, I will not be angry, he shall be angry with his neighbour, & shall be hated of all. Who so shall saye, I will not be angry, he shall be angry
 with his neighbour, & shall be hated of all. Who so shall saye, I will not be angry, he shall be angry with his neighbour, & shall be hated of all.

A pynne deuyr in the eyes, all his seruants are ungodly. The poore and the leuder mee together, shall be hated of all eyes.
 The state of the kinge shall faithfully indyge the poore, shall continue sure for his enemies. The rodde and correction shall keepe the child from sinne. When the ungodly come vpon the righteous, he shall be hated of all. The righteous shall be hated of all. The righteous shall be hated of all. The righteous shall be hated of all.
 The righteous shall be hated of all. The righteous shall be hated of all. The righteous shall be hated of all. The righteous shall be hated of all. The righteous shall be hated
 of all. The righteous shall be hated of all.

If thou seest a man that is haustie to speake many wordes, thou mayest trust a fool more then him. He that delicately bringeth vpon his seruant from a child, shall make him his master at length. An angry man stretcheth vpon strife, and he that beareth euill will in his mynde, doeth much euill. A pynne deuyr commeth a fall, but a lowly spere bringeth greatesse. Who shall be hated of all, he shall be hated of all.
 Who shall be hated of all, he shall be hated of all. Who shall be hated of all, he shall be hated of all. Who shall be hated of all, he shall be hated of all.

The righteous abhorre the ungodly: but as for those that be in the right waye, they will hate them.

The XXX. Chapter.

The wisdomes of Agur the sonne of Iak.

The prophetic of a true faithfull man, hath God helpd, whom God hath chosen for a nonshed. For though I am the least of all, I have no mas vnder my dig: for I knowe not wisdomes, yete haue I vnderstandinge, & am not enscourmed in godly thinges. Who hath climmed vp to heauen? Who hath come downe from thence? Who hath holden the wayes of the earth? Who hath comprehendd the waters in a garment? Who hath set all the endes of the world? What is his name, or his sonnes name? Canst thou tell? All the wordes of God are pure & cleane, for he is a shyld vnto all them, that put their trust in him. Put thou nothinge therfore vnto his wordes, lest he reprove thee, and thou be founde as a liar.

Two thinges I requyre of thee, that thou wilt not denye me before I dye. Remove from vnto me wante, and I yeo: geue me neither pouer nor riches, ony graunte me a necessary nyng. Lest yf I be to full, I denye thee, & I saye: what shall I do to the LORD? And lest I be constrained to sweare, I shall fall into cursing, and shall curse the name of my God. Accuse not a seruant vnto his master, lest he speake euill of the alfo, and thou be hurt. He that bringeth vpon an euill report vnto the generacion of his father and mother, is not worthy to be commended.

The generacion that rebuyleth them selues cleane, shall not be defende from their synfulness. There are people yf haue a pynne deuyr, and cast vpon their eylydes. This people the are swerdes, and with their darte bones they consume and deuoure the temple of the earth, and the poore from amonge them. This generacion (which is like an houselocke) hath two daughter: the one is called, feare the LORD, the other,
 bringe vnto the LORD.

There be thre thinges that are neuer satisfied, and the fourth shall neuer be. The hell, a womans wombe,
 and the earth that neuer hath water quenched. As for fyre, it is sayd neuer to be quenched. Who so laugheth his saether to scorn, and stretcheth his necke vnto his mother, he shall be commended
 as naught:
 the rauen picketh out his eyes in the milke,
 and deuoureth the be of the yongle Begles.

There be thre thinges that are never satisfied, and the fourth shall
 be.

Job 11
 Deu 27

 1-5

The waye of an Aegle is 3 aye, 3 waye of a sturpe ouer 3 stone, 3 waye of a shippe in 3 se, 3 waye of a mā w a yonge womā.

Such is the waye also of a wyfe 3 beatech wedlocke, which wyreth hir mouth like as whā she hath eat, 3 sa-yeth: As for me, I haue done no harme.

C Thow wiche thinges the earth is disquieted, 3 the fourth maye it not beare: Thow w a fowle 3 beatech rule, thow w a foole 3 haue greate riches, thow w an ydle houswife, 3 thow w an handmayden 3 is heye to hir mastres. There be foure thinges in the earth, the which are very litle: but in wysdomme they excede the wyse. The Lemmings are but a weake people, yet gather they their meate together in 3 haters.

The conyes are but a feble folk, yet make they their couches amonge the rockes. The grasshoppers haue not a gyde, yet go they fowth together by heapes. The spyder laboureth w hir hādes, 3 3 in 3 kynge's palace.

There be thre thinges 3 go stiffly, but the goinge of the fourth is the goodliest of all. A Lion which is kynge of bestes, 3 geueth place to no man: A cock ready to fyght: A rāme: And a kynge 3 goeth fowth w his people.

If thou be so foolish to magnifie 3 self, or medle 3t w any such thinge, the laye thine hāde upon 3 mouth. Who so dymneth my self, maketh bitter: he that rubbeth his nose, maketh it blede, and he that causeth wrath, bryngeth fowth strife.

21

These are the wordes of kynge Lamuel, 3 3 lesson 3 his mocher taughte him. My sonne, thou some of my boyes: O my deare beloved sonne, geue not ouer thy substance 3t w mynd vnto women, which are the destruccion of 3 kynge. O Lamuel, geue kynges no wyne, geue 3t mynes 3t pynnes no stronge drynke: lest they beinge dionken forget the lawe, 3 regarde not 3 cause of the poore, 3 of all such as be in aduersitee. Geue stronge drynke vnto such as are condemned to deathe, 3 wyne vnto thos 3t mourn: that they maye drynke it, 3t forget their misse 3t aduersitee. Be thou an aduocate 3t some in iudgment thysse, speake for all such as be borne 3t iustourles. With 3t mouth defende 3t thinge 3t is lawfull and ryght, and 3t cause of 3t poore and helpelesse.

22

Who so synneth an honest faithfull wo-mā, she is moche more worth the perle. The herce of hir husbande maye 3t 3t wā in her, so that he shal haue no neede of spyce.

She wil do him good 3t not end all 3t dayes of hir life. She occupieth woll 3t say, 3t laboreth gladly w hir handes. She is like a marchauntes shippe, that bryngeth 3t vnto yales from farre. She is vp in 3t night season, to prouyde meate for hir housholde, 3t foode for hir maydens. She considereth de, 3t byeth it, and w the frize of hir handes she planteth a wyngarde. She greteth hir loynes with strengch, and courage, 3t armes. And yf she perceaue that hir hus wifre both good, 3t hir candle goeth not out by night. She layeth hir fynge's vnto the spyndle, 3t hir hande taketh holde of 3t roote.

She openeth hir hande to 3t poore, yet she stretcheth forth hir hādes to such as haue neede. She feareth not 3t the colde of wynter shal hurt her house, for all hir housholde bestes are duple clothed. She maketh hir self fayre vnto men, hir clothinge is whyt, 3t purple. Her hūshāde is made by 3t gates, whē he stretcheth amonge 3t rulers of londe. She maketh cloth of sylke, 3t silke it, and deluyreth a gyrdle vnto 3t marchaunt.

Strengch and honoure is hir clothing, 3t in the latter daye she shal reioyse. She openeth hir mouth with wysdomme, 3t in her age is the lawe of grace. She looketh vnto the wayes of hir housholde, 3t teacheth her bred with vtilnes. Her children misse 3t all hir blessed, 3t hir husbande maketh moche of her. Many daughteres there be 3t garbantes together, but thou goest aboueth all.

As for faub, it is disceatfull, and baser is a wāyne thinge: but a woman that feareth the LORDE, she is worthy to be praised. Geue her of the frize of hir handes, and let hir owne wordes praise her in the gates.

Ecclesiastes.

What this booke cometh yneth.

Chap. I. All thynges (yf any wyl cōspire them wyl) are but vanite. These thynges and ge nym all they are nothyng meaker and more vnderstāp, then man him self.

Chap. II. In this chapter (and in the o ther also) he maketh of tyme nation of the wordes and cōuersaciō of the vngodly: that by this meane he maye reuerce those men to despyse all creaturen, in respect of the on ly creaturinge God.

Chap. III. Every thyng hath a tyme. There is no thyng but God hath put recty suf fesse and transpasse in it, to correcte men with all. What so ever a man enjoyeth of this la boure, the same is a gift of God, given to the maner that men shalbe feare him.

Chap. IIII. A cōsideraciō of wisers thynges. There is nothyng foer excellent and byre, but if it do not the deuy and office where wto it is ordred, it shalbe brought lowe.

Chap. V. Agaynst foolish and temerari ous wises. Let no man marvaile that so much wylle is done, for the world is cremany. Agaynst the rich and agaynst the poore.

Chap. VI. Agaynst those that saye that they do not enjoye their riches: how man and foelish they be.

Chap. VII. To man knowe that what is for to come. God worthy a thyng it is to have a go od name. The profit of wysdome.

Chap. VIII. Of the obediēce which men owe unto God and to their heuē. The light of seruaunce of God is not to be despised. It is impossible for any man, to cōspend the wto man that be in the world.

Chap. IX. Lette thynges happen unto all men: therefore with myrth and thank fulnesse shalbe men enjoye the giftes of God. Wylle demeriteth all thynges.

Chap. X. XI In these two chapters are many wysdom and profitable sentēces, wch worthy to be considered of every man.

Chap. XII. In this chapter the preacher spea keth with his whole meaning, as though he woulde saye. As for all the thynges that be vnder the Sonne (wch of I have spoken) I have cō sidered them, and proued them metely wch by experyence. And this is the conclusiō that there is nothyng suchfast and durable but God him self, who men ought to feare, and to done his cōmāndementes before theye eyes wem from their yowth wch.

The first Chapter.

These are the wordes of the Preacher, the sonne of David, Kinge of Ierusalem.

All is but vanite (saiesh y þe preacher) all is but playne vanite.

For what els hath a mā, of all the labo þe he taketh vnder the Sonne: One generaciō passeth awaye, another cometh, but the earth abydeth still. The Sonne ariseth, the Sonne goeth downe, it raiurneth to his place, þe maye there rise up agayne. The wynde goeth to wardes þe South, it setcheth his cōspase aboute vnto the North, it so turneth in to hymself agayne. All floudes runne in to the see, yet the see is not fylled: so loke vnto what place the riuers runne, thence they come agayne. All thynges are so harde, þe no mā can expresse them. The eye is not satisfied wch sighte, the eare is not fylled wch hearinge. The thyng þe hath bene, cometh to passe agayne: the thyng þe hath bene done, is done agayne, there is no new thyng vnder the Sonne. Is there any thyng, wherof it maye be sayde: lo, this is newe: for it was lōge ages in the tymes þe haue bene be fore vs. The thynges yf is past, is out of remembrance: Euen so the thynges that are fore to come, shal no more be thoughte vpon amonge the that come after. I my self þe Preacher, beyng the Kinge of Iudael & Ierusalem, applyed my myrde to sette euery search for the knowlege of all thynges þe are done vnder hea uen. Such traunyle I labo hath God geue vnto þe child of me, to expre clyse the silēce therof.

Thus I haue considered all the thynges that come to passe vnder the Sonne, & lo, they are all but vanite & vepaciō of mynde. The croked can not be mayde straighe, & the sautes ca not be nūbed. I cōmoned wch myne owne herte, sayenge: lo, I am come to a greate cōstate, and haue gotte more wysdome, the all theye y haue done before me in Ierusalem. Rec my hert had greate experyence of wysdome & knowlege, for there vnto I applyed my myrde: yf I might knowe what were wysdome & vnderstādinge, what were erred & foolishnes. And I perceaued yf this also was but a vepaciō of mynde: for wherere moche wysdome is, there is also greate traunyle & disquietnes: & yf moche knowlege a man hath, the more is his care.

The II. Chapter.

As I sayde I thus in my hert: I am good, I will take myne ease & haue good dayes. But lo, that was vanite also: for so moche that I sayde vnto laughter: thou art madde, and so myrth: what doest thou?

So I thought in my heart, to withdraue my flesh from wyne, to applye my mynde vnto wysdome, and to compend the foolishnesse which are vnder the Sonne. I might see what were best for men to do, so longe as they lyue vnder heauen.

6.7

I made gorgeous fayre woordes, I buylde me houses, and planted vnyardes: I made me orchardes and gardens of pleasure, and planted trees in them of all maner frutes. I made poles of water, to water the greene and fruitful trees withall. I bought seruaunts and maydes, and had a greate herd of holde. I had oxen and sheepe. I had more substance of them, then all they were before me in Ierusalem. I gathered silver and golde together, euen a treasure of tyngees & lonbeas.

I prouided me syngers and wemen which coude playe of instrumentes, to make me meryth and pastime. I gat me brylllyng cypres also and glasses. (Sordly) I was greater in mine worshippe, then all my predecessors in Ierusalem. For wysdome remaineth with me: & I seeke what so euer myne eyes desired. Let them haue it: & Robertin so euer my heart desired or had any pleasure, I withelde it, not for this. Thus my heart reioysed in all that I dyd, and this I seke for the portion of all my trauaile. But when I considered all the woordes that my handes had wrought, and all the laboure that I had taken therein: lo, all was but vanitie and vexation of mynde, & nothinge of any value vnder the Sonne. Then turned I me to considere wysdome, creature and foolishnesse: for what is he amonge men, that might be compared to me? I ynge in such woordes: and I saue, that wysdome excelleth foolishnesse, as farre as light doth darknesse. For a wyse man beareth his eyes aboue in his heade, but the fool geeth in the darknesse. I perceaued also that they both had one ende.

Then thoughte I in my mynde: If it happen vnto the foole as it doth vnto me, what needeth me then to labour any more for wysdome? So I confessed within my heart, that this also was but vanitie. For the wylle is euer as licke in remembrance as the foolish, and all the dayes for to come shall be forgotten, yee the wyse man dyeth as well as the foole. Thus began I to be weery of my life, in so much that I coude awaye with nothinge that is done vnder the Sonne, for all was but vanitie & vexation of mynde: yee I was weery of all my laboure, which I had taken vnder the Sonne, because I shoulde be layne to leaue them vnto another man, that might seeke after me: for what should I be, what he shall be a wyse man or a foole? And yet shall he be lorde of all my laboure, which I had done: for such wysdome haue taken vnder the Sonne. I see not this a vayne thinge:

So I turned me to reioysce in my mynde from all such trauaile, as I seke vnder the Sonne: for so much as a man shalde may him self with wysdome, with vnderstandinge and opperience, and yet be fayne to leaue his laboure vnto another, & neuer seeke for them. This is also a vayne thinge and a greate misery. For what geeth he a man of all that laboure of his mynde, & beareth vnder the Sonne, but benyngesse, & some quietnes all the dayes of his life? In so much that his heart can not rest in the night. I see not this also a vayne thinge: For it is not better then for a man to eate and drynke, and his soule to be merry in his labour: yee I saw that this also was a gifte of God: for many may eate, drynke, or synge any thinge to please with him: And why the geeth man a man, what it pleaseth him: better he will be vnder vnderstandinge, or gladnesse. Vnto the synner he geeth weerynes and sion, that he may gather and heape together things, & a fewe words shall be gotten vnto whom it pleaseth God. This is now a vayne thinge, yee a very disquietnesse and vexation of mynde.

The iii. Chapter.

Very thinge hath a tyme, yee all that is vnder the heauen, hath his tyme, and his season. There is a tyme to be borne, and a tyme to dye. There is a tyme to plant, and a tyme to plucke vp the thinge, & a tyme to beate the whole: A tyme to beate downe, and a tyme to beate vp: A tyme to wepe, and a tyme to laugh: A tyme to mourne, and a tyme to dance: A tyme to cast awaye stones, and a tyme to gather stones together: A tyme to embrace, & a tyme to refrayne from embrace: A tyme to wyne, and a tyme to leste: A tyme to spare, and a tyme to spende: A tyme to cut in peeces, and a tyme to sowe together: A tyme to kepe silence, and a tyme to speake: A tyme to loue, & a tyme to hate: A tyme of warre, and a tyme of peace.

What hath a man a tyme (that doeth any thinge) but weerynesse and labour: For as touching the trauaile and carefullnesse which God hath geuen vnto me, I see that he hath geuen it them, to be exercised in it. All that hath he ordered marvellous goodly, so every thinge his due tyme. He hath placed ignorance also in the hearts of men, & they shal never fynde out & groundes of his woorkes, which he doth from & beginninge to & ende. So I perceived, & in these thinges the n is workeinge better for a man, the to be mere to do well, so longe as he lyveth. For all & a man catcheth & dryeth, yet what so ever a man enjoyeth of all his labo, & same is a gift of God. I considered also & what so ever God doeth, it is cōtinueth for ever, & & no thinge can be put unto it nor take from it: & & God doeth it to & intent, & men shalde sea n him. The thinge & hath bene, is now: & the thinge & is for to come, hath bene a fore tyme, for God restoreth agayne the thinge that was past. Moreover, I sawe under & Sonne, vngodlynesse in the steade of iudgment, & iniquitie in steade of rightuousnesse.

Then thoughte I in my mynde: God shal separate the righteous from the vngodly, & thou shalt see the tyme & iudgment of all coun-aile & woorkes. I comend w myne omynge also concerninge the childre of men: howe God hath chosen them, and yet letteth thev aspeare, as though they were bestles: for it happeneth unto men as it doth unto beas-tes, as the one dyeth, so dyeth & other: yet they heare both one manner of death, so & (in this) a man hath no premyence above a best: but all are subdued unto vanite. They go all vnto one place, for as they be all of dust, so shal they all turne vnto dust agayne.

Who knoweth the spere of man & goeth upward, and the breath of the beast & goeth downe in to the earth? Wherefore I per-ceaved, there is nothinge better for a man, then to be ioyfull in his labour, for that is his portion. But who wil bringe him to see the thinge, that shal come a farre him?

The III. Chapter.

I turned me, and considered all the violence wronge that is done under the Sonne: and behelde, the creature of such as were oppressed, and there was no man to comforte them, or that wolde deliver and defende them from the violence of their oppressours. Wherefore I iudged those that are dead, to be more happye then such as be alive: yet him that is yet vnto borne to be better at ease: the they both, because he seeth enye the miserable woorkes that are done under the Sonne. Agayne, I sawe that all travayle and diligence of labour was hated of every man. This is also a vaine thyng, and a vexacion of mynde. The foolc folloeth his handes together, & catcheth up his o-wne flesch. One hand shall reache he is better to rest, the both & hantes shall wch labo and travayle. Moreover, I turned me, and behelde yet another vanite under the Sonne. There is one man, no moe but himself alone, havinge neither childre nor brother: yet is there no ende of his careful travayle, his eyes can not be satisfied with riches, (yet doeth he not remembre himself, & saye:) for whom do I take such travayle? See whose pleasure do I thus consume a waye my lyfe: This is also a wayne and miserable thinge. Therefore two are better then one, for they maye well enjoye the profite of their laboure. If one of them fall, his compannyon helpeth him up agayne: but wo is him that is alone, for if he fall, he hath no other to helpe him up. Agayne, when a too sleepe together, they are warme: but howe can a body be warme alone? One maye be overcome, but two maye make resistence: A thre solde cable is not lightlye broken. A poore childe beyng wylde, is better then an olde hinge, that doeth, and can not beware in tyme to come. Some one cometh out of prison, & is made a bynge: & another which is borne in the kynngdome, cometh vnto power. And I perceived, of all men travay-ge under the Sonne, go to the seconde childe, that cometh up in the steade of the other. As for the people that have bene before him, and that come after him, they are innumerable: yet is not their ioye the greater thowen him. This is also a vaine thinge and a vexacion of mynde. When thou comest in to the house of God, kepe thy foote, and beware nye, that thou mayest heare:

that is better then the offeringes of foolles, for they knowe not what eall they do.

The V. Chapter.

Do not haste with thy mouth, & let thee not beine hert speake eny thinge rashly before God. For God is in heaven, & thou vpon earth, that thou see thy wronge be sene. For where men carefulness is, there are many dreames: & where many wodes are, there men maye heare foolles. If thou make a vowe unto God, be not slacke to performe it. As for foolishlye vowes, he hath no pleasure in them. If thou promysse enye thinge, paye it: for better it is to than thou make no vowe, then that thou shouldest promise, and not paye. Vse not thy mouth to cause & flesch: for to syme, if thou saye not before the angel: my foolishnesse is in & sawe.

Deu. 23. d
Baruc. 4. e

For the God wil be angry at thy voyce, and destroye all y^e workes of thine handes.
And why? there as are many dreames & many wordes, there are also bynarye vanities: but lcke y^e cheu feare God. If thou seest the poore to be oppressed and wrongeously dealt withall, so y^e equite & the right of the lame is waished in the londe: maruell not thou as thou idd gmet, for one greater ma kepeth touch with another, and the mightie helpe the selow together. The whole londe is also with the sides and all that is therein, is in subieccion and bondage vnto y^e Kinge.

B He that loueth money, wil neuer be satisfied with money: and who so delireth in riches, shal haue no profite thereof. Is not this also a wayne thinge: Where as many riches are, there are many also that spende them awaye. And what pleasure more hath he that possesseth them, sauynge that he maye lcke vpon them with his eyes? A labouringe man slepeth sweetly, whether he be li-cke or moch that he careth: but the abundance of the rich wil not suffre him to slepe.

There is there a foure plague, which I haue se-ne vnder the Sonne: namely riches kepte to the harte of him y^e hath them in possession.

For oft t meas they perishe with his grea-tem sery and trouble: and yf he haue a chalde, it geueth nothinge. Like as he came nated out of his mothers wombe, so geeth he thither agayne, and carrieth nothinge awaye with him of all his labour. This is a miserable plague, y^e he shal go awaye euen as he came. What helpech it him then, y^e he hath labored in the wynde: All the daies of his life also must he eate in the darke, with greate carefulness, sickness & sorrow.

C There fore me thinke it a better and a fay-rer thinge, a man to eate and drynke, and to be refreshed of all his labour, y^e he takech vnder the Sonne all the dayes of his life which God geueth him, for this is his por-cion. For vnto whom so euer God geueth riches, goodes and power, he geueth it him to enioye it, to take it for his porcion, and to be refreshed of his labour: this is now the gifte of God. For he thinketh not moch how longe he shal liue, for so moch as God fylleth his hert with gladnesse.

The VI. Chapter.

A There is yet a plague vnder y^e Sonne, & it is a generall thinge amonge min: when God geueth a man riches, good-des & honoure, so that he wanteth nothinge of all that his herte can desire: and yet God geueth him not leaue to enioye the same, but another man spedech them. This is a wayne thinge & a miserable plague. If a man begget an hundred children, and liueth many yeares, so that his dayes are many in number, and yet can not enioye his good, maye be buried: as for him y^e liueth, that an vnly byrth is better than he. For he cometh to naughte, & geeth his waye in to darkness, and his name is forgotten. Moreover, he seeth not the Sonne, and knoweth of neyther here nor there: Yet though he liue two thousande yeares, yet hath he no good life. Come not all to one place: All that doureth a man taketh, is for himselfe, an yet his desire is neuer fylled after his wyde. For what hath the wyse more than foole: What helpech it the poore, that knoweth to walke before the dayynge? The sighte of the eyes is better, then that the foole shulde so departe a waye. Honour is also a wayne thinge and a bysymet of mynde. What is more excellent then yet can be not in the lawe get the victory him that is mightier the best: A wayne ge is it to cast out many wordes, but not hath a mande.

The VII. Chapter.

O who knoweth what is good in a mans liuynge, in y^e dayes of his life, which is but a shadowe: he that wil tell a man, what shal happen vnto him vnder the Sonne? A good name is worth then a precious oymment, and y^e daye of death is better the y^e daye of byrth.

It is better to go in to an house of mourninge, then in to a banquet house. Such is the ende of all men, and he that is geueth, taketh it to herre. It is better to be sery then to laugh, for wher the countenance is heavy, the hert is ioyfull. The hert of y^e wyse is in the mourninge house, but the hert of the foolish is in the house of meryty. It is better to geue eare to the chasty-tynges, then to beate the songe of fo-les. For the laughinge of foolles is like the crackynge of thames vnder a port. This is but a wayne thinge.

Who so doeth wronge, maketh a wyman to goe out of his wit, and destroyeth gentle hert. The ende of a thinge is better then the begynnyng. The patient spere is better then the hie mynde. Do not hastilye angrye in y^e mynde, for many teeth in the bosome of a foole. Saye not thou: What is the cause that y^e dayes of olde tyme were better, then they y^e be now: for that were no wyse question. Why is better then riches, yett much more worth then the eye sight. For wysdome defendeth as well as money, and the excellent knowlege and wysdome geueth life vnto him that hath it in possession. Considre the worke of God, how that no man can make the thinge straight, which he maketh crooked. Use well the tyme of prosperite, and remember the tyme of mysfortune: for God maketh the one by the other, so that a man can fynde nothin gea.

C These things also haue I considered in my tyme of vanite: y^e the iust man persisteth for his righteousnes sake, & the vngodly liueth in his wickednesse. Therfore withoutt neither to righteous nor our wyse, y^e thou perishest: neither to vnrightheous also nor to foolissh, lest thou die before thy tyme. It is good forthe to take holde of this, & not to lett y^e go out of thy hande. For he y^e feareth God shall escape them all.

Wysdome geueth more courage vnto the wyse, then ten mightie men of the cite: for tyme is not one iust vnto earth, y^e doth good, & simeth not. Take not heede vnto euery word that is spoken, lest thou heare thy seruante curs: the: for thine name here knoweth, that thou thy self also hast oft tymes spokt euell by other men. All these thinges haue I proued because of wysdome: for I thought to be wyse, but she wente farther from me then she was before, yett so depe that I might be not ready vnto her. I applied my mynde also vnto knowlege, and to seeke our science, wysdome and vnderstandinge: to knowe the foolishnesse of the vngodly, and the erreure of beinge fooles. And I founde, that a woman is betterer then death: for she is a very angle, her bert is a nett, and her handes are cherynes. Who so pleaseth God shall escape from her: but the synner will be taken w^h her.

Dehold I sayed y^e teacher this haue I diligently searched out & proued, y^e I might come by knowlege: which so yett I see, and finde it not. Amonge a thousande men I haue founde one, but not one woman amonge all. & o, this onely haue I founde, that God made man iust & right, but they seeke diuerse forsooke, where as no man hath wysdome & vnderstandinge, to geue answer there vnto.

The viii. Chapter.

Wysdome maketh a mans face to shyn, but malice purteth it out of fauour. Kepe the kynge's commaundment: I wanne there the oath y^e thou shalt make vnto God. Be not hastie to go out of his sight, & thou shalt continue in no euell thinge.

ge: for what so euer it pleaseth him, y^e doeth he. Like as when a kynge geueth a charge, his commaundement is myghtie: & thou so who maye saye vnto him: what doest thou? Who so keepeth the commaundement, shall fele no harme: but a wyse mans hart by ceareth tyme and maner: for euery thinge will haue opportunitie and indgement, and this is the thinge that maketh men fall of carelesnesse & for owne. And why? a man knoweth not what is for to come, for who wyll call him: whether is there any man y^e hath power ouer y^e spirit, so kepe shal y^e spirit, nor to haue any power in the tyme of death: It is not he also that can make an ende of the battaylle, ther maye vngodlynes deliure him y^e meddeth withall.

All these thinges haue I considered, and applied my mynde vnto euery worde that is vnder the Sonne: how one man hath leishipe vpon another to his owne harme. For I haue oft sene y^e vngodly brought to their graues, and fallen downe from the hye and gloriouse place: in so much y^e they were forgotten in the cite, where they were had in so hye & greates reputation. This is also a vaine thinge. Because no man that euell workes are not hastily purysht, the hart of man geueth him self ouer vnto wickednesse. But though an euell personne offerde as handereth tyme, and haue a longe life: yett am I sure, that it shal go well witheth that feare God, because they haue him before their eyes. & agayne, as for the vngodly, it shall not be well with him, neither shal he prouide his dayes: but euen as a shadowe, so shall he be that feareth not God.

Yet is there a vanite vpon earth: There be iust men, vnto whom it happeneth, as though they had the workes of the vngodly: & agayne, there be vngodly, with whom it geueth as though they had the workes of y^e righteous. This me thinkt also a vaine thinge. Therfore I commendeth gladnesse, because a man hath no better thinge vnder the Sonne, then to eate and drinke, and to be merry: for that shal he haue of his labour all the daies of his life, which God geueth him vnder the Sonne. When I applied my mynde to learne wysdome, and to knowe the vanaile thinge in the worlde (and that of such a fashion, y^e I Iuffed not myne eyes to slepe neither daye nor night) I vnderstode of all y^e workes of God, that it is not possible for a man, to attayne vnto y^e workes that are done vnder y^e Sonne: and though he bestowe his labour to seeke them out, yett can he not reach vnto the: yet though a wyse man wol de undertake to knowe them, yet myght he not fynde them.

The IX. Chapter.

ALl these thinges purposed I in my mynde to sette out. The righteous and wyse see and their wordes al so are in the hande of God: and there is no man that knoweth ether the loue or hate of the thinge that he hath before him. It happeneth vnto one as vnto another: It goeth with the righteous as with the vngodly: with the good & cleane as with the vncleane: with him that offereth as with him that offereth none like as it goeth with the vertuous. So goeth it also with the synner: As it happeneth vnto the penured, so happeneth it also vnto him that is a frayed to be man savour. Amonge all thinges that come to passe vnder the Sonne, this is a misery, that it happeneth vnto all alyke. This is the cause also that the hartes of men are full of troublersse, & madd foolishnesse is in their brer as long as they lyue, vntill they dye.

And why? As long as a man lyueth, he is carles: for a quyl dogg (saye they) is better the a beehon: for they that be lyuynge, knowe that they shall dye: but they that be ded, knowe noching, nether desire they any more. For their memoriall is forgoett, so that they be nether loued, hated nor enuyed: nether haueth they any more parte in of worlde, in all that is done vnder the Sonne. So thou that wast, eate thy bread with ioye, & drynke that wast with gladnesse, for thy workes please God.
Let thy garments be all waye whyte, & let thy hearte be as a newe. Of thy selfe to lye is fullylly with thy wyse: whom thou louest, all of daies of thy life, which is but vayne: & God hath greued the vnder the Sonne, all of daies of thy vnicite: for his portion in this life, of all thy laboure & trauayle that thou hast vnder the Sonne. What so euer thou hast in hande to do, that do with all thy power: for amonge the deedes where as thou goest vnto: there is nether worke, counsell, knowlege nor wysdome.

So I turned me vnto oether thinges vnder the Sonne, and I sawe, that in runnyng, it helpeth not to be swiftest in barayll, it help-eth not to be strongeste to fyghte, it helpeth not to be wisest to ridde, it helpeth not to be swiftest to haue in fauoure, it helpeth not to be cunningest: but that all I lych in vaine & fortunc. For a man knoweth not his tyme, but like as the fysh receaue with the angle, and as the byrde are catched with the snare: so are so arement taken in the perillous tyme, when it cometh suddenly vpon them.

This wysdome haue I seen also vnder the Sonne, & me thoughte it a greace thinge. The re was a litle cite, & a fewe men within it: so it came a greace byng & beseged it: & made greace but woorkes against it. And in the cite there was founde a poore man (but he was wyse) which by his wysdome deliuered the cite: yet was there no body, & had any respect to sodey a symple man. Then sayde I: wysdome is better then strength. Cleane les, a symple mans wysdome is bespyred, & his wordes are not herbe. A wise mans coun-cell that is folowed in silence, is farr aboue the cryenge of a captain amonge foole. For wysdome is better then hamer: but one that is alone destroyeth much good.

The X. Chapter.

Let fyre that corruppe sweete meate & make it to flyme, are thinges more worth then the meate of a foole. A wyse mans part is vpon the righte hande, but a foolles part is vpon the left. A doynge foole thinketh, & as ry ma dooth as foolishly as himselfe. For a capitall pleure he greut the to beare rule, he negligent the in thine offic. For so shal grete wisednesse be put downe, as it were mebe cyne. Another plague is there, which I haue sene vnder the Sonne: namely, if ignoraunce is commonly amonge prynces, a foole stytch in greate dignite, & the wise are set downe beneath: If seruantes rye vpon hoyses, & prynces goynge vpon them as it were seruantes. But he that is vpon a pytt, shall fall therein himselfe: & he that beareth downe the hedge, a serpent shall bite him. Who so remoueth stones, shall be trauayle with hall: and he that heareth shall be hurt therewith.

When an yon is blowne, and of point sharpened, it must be wher a game, and with myght: Euen so doth wysdome diligence. A babler of his tongue is no better, then a serpent that syngeth with byssynge. The worder out of a wyse mans mouth are grauous, but the lippe of a foole wil destroye himself. The begynnyng of his callynge is foolishnesse, and the last ende of his mouth is greace made effe. A foole is so full of wordes, that a man can not what ende he wil make: who wil thinne him to make a conclusion: The labour of a foolish is greuous vnto the, & he that knowe not how to go in to the cite.

¶ We be vnto the ☉ thou realme and son be) whose kynge is but a childe, and whose prynces are early at their banckettes. But will is the ☉ thou realme and londe) whose kinge is come of nobles, and whose prynces are in due season, for strength and noc for lust. Thowm slouchfullnesse the halles fall downe, and chidom yde hādes it rayneth in at the house. It was maketh men to laugh, and wyne maketh them merry: but vnto money all thinges obediēt. Why the kynge mēuell in y thought, and speake no hurin of y ryke in chy ptey chamber: for a by-be of the ayne shall betraye thy voyce, and w-for fathers shall be bewraye thy wordes.

The X. Chapter.

¶ Ende thy wayes ouer the waters, and so shall thou fynde the aſter many years. Sece it a waye amonge se was a light, for thou knowest noc what myſt ryshal come vpon earth. Whe the cloude are full, they poure out rayne vpon the earth.
And whe y are full, (whether it be comar the south or north) in what place so euer it fall, the it lyeth. He that regardeth y wyne be, shal noc so we: and he that hath respecte vnto the cloude, shal noc reape. ¶ Now lice thou knowest noc the waye of the wyne-ber how y bones are fylled in a mothers womb: Euen so thou knowest noc the worke of God, which is the workemaster of all.

¶ Cease noc thou therfore with chy han-des to ſewe thy ſide, whether it be in y monyng or in the evening: for thou knowest noc whether this or that shall prosper, z yf they both take it is the better. The lighte is ſure, z a pleaſant thinge is it for the eyes to loke vpon the Sonne. If a man lync many years, and be glad in them all, let him remember the dayes of darknesse, which shall be but vnto. He glad then ☉ thou yonge man in chy youth, and let thine heart be me-ry in chy yonge dayes: ſolow the wayes of this vnto here, and the lust of thine eyes: but be thou ſure, that God shall bringe the in to iudgment for all these thinges.

The XII. Chapter.

¶ It is vnto pleasure out of y heart, z remoueth all from chy body: for all ☉ behoude and youth is but vnto. Remember chy maker in chy youth, or euer thy dayes of aduerſite come, and on the yeares dwarre nye, when thou shalt saye I haue no pleaſure in them: before the Sonne, y lighte, y lincme and the ſtartes be durted, and on the cloude turne agayne after the raine when the ſtupes of the house shall crumble, and when the ſtronger men shall bowe them ſilues: when the Myllers ſtones ſhall becauſe they be ſo ſore, and when the ſight of the wymbours shall waue dymme: when the dweres in the ſtreces shall be ſhore, and when y voyce of the Myllers shall be layed downe when men shall crye up at the voyce of the wynde, and when all y dongeours of muſyke shall be brought lowe: when men shall ſtate in hys place, and be a ſtrayed in the ſtreces: when the Almonde are ſhalbe deſpyed, the greshopper come out, and when greates poutre shall blowe in: when man goeth to his longe home, and the mourners go about the ſtreces. ¶ On er the ſyluer lace be ra-den awaye, and on the golden benche be broken: On the port be broken on the well, z the whele vpon the Caſtelle: On dust be turned againe vnto earth from whence it came, and on the ſpate returne vnto God, which gaue it. All is but vnto (ſayeth the preacher) all is but playne vnto.

The ſame preacher was noc wyſe alone, but taught the people knowledge alſo: he ga-ue good beh, ſunghe out the goodde and ſerueth many parables. His diligence was to fynde out acceptable wordes, right ſcripture, and the wordes of exult. For the wordes of y wyſe are like pickes and nails that go thowm, wherewith men are kepte together for they are greuen of one ſpexhe be onely.
Therefore be warre (my ſonne) that aboute the ſe thou make the noc many z innumerable boles, noc take dymme doctrynes in hande, to weary chy body withall.

Let us heare the conclucion of all thinges: Feare God, and kepe his commandemēt-tes, for that toucheth all men: for God shall iudge all wordes and ſerce thinges, whether they be good or euill.

Salomons

Balecces,

called

Cantica Canticorum.

The first Chapter.

Qhat thy mouth wolde geue me a Kysse, for y brestes are more pleasaunt then wyne, & that because of the good and pleasaunt sauoure. Thy name is a sweete smellynge oymment; therefore do the maydens loue thee: yete that same moneth me also to loue a fater the.

The kynge hath brought me into his pryue chamber. We wil be glad & reioyce in the, we thynke more of thy brestes then of wyne: well is them that louethe.

I am black (o ye daughteres of Ierusalem) like as the cermes of the Cedarres, and as the hangynges of Salomon: but yet am I faire & well sauoured withal. My aruill noe at me & I am so black: & why? & Sonne hath shyned vpo me. For when my mothers childe had euill wil at me, they made me & keper of the vynyarde. Thus was I fayre to kepe a vynyarde, which was not myne owne.

Tell me (o chon whom my soule loueth) wherethou fideist, wherethou restest at the noone day: I will go amonge, and come vnto the flockes of thy companyons.

If thou knowe noe y self (o chon sayest amonge women) cha go y waye south after y forestepes of the shepe, as though thou woldest seke y goozes besyde y shepherdes cermes. There wil I rarye for the (my loue) whom myne boosst & with my charmes, which shal be no fierer then Pharaos.

Then shal thy cheskes & thy neck be made fayre, & hanged w spages & goodly ismelat a necke bande of golde wil we make y w syluer doerons. When the kynge syteth at the table, he shal smell my Tarbas: for a bodeil of Myrre (o my beloved) lyeth betwixte my brestes. A cluster of grapes of Cyprus, or of the vynyardes of Engaddi, art thou vnto me, O my beloved.

O how saye art thou (my loue) how saye art thou: thou hast beuen eyes. O how saye art thou (my beloved) how well sauored art thou? Oure bed is betwixt flowers, & syllynges of oure house are of Cedre tre, & oure baltes of Cypresse.

The ii. Chapter.

I Am the floure of the silbe, and blyss of the valleyes: as the rose amonge the thornes, so is my loue amonge the daughteres.

Like as the apple tre amonge the trees of the wodde, so is my beloved amonge the founes. My delite is to sit vnder his shadowe, for his frute is sweete vnto my throte. & he leaue me in to his wyne seller, and leaue me specially well. Kysse me w grapes, & soume me wch apples, for I am sicke of lone. O lest ha de yeech vnder his heade, & his right hande enhaue me.

I charge you (o ye daughteres of Jerusalem) by the Rom & byndes of the silbe, & y wake not vpon my loue nor touch hit, all for be content her self.

We thynke I heare the voyce of my beloved, there cometh he hoppinge vpon y mountaynes, and leapinge ouer the lisse hilles. My beloved is like a Roos or a yong hart. Beholde, he stoneth behynde of wall, he lokech in arabe wyndowes, & peepeth thro the grate.

My beloved answered & sayde vnto me: O stide vpon my loue, my doue, my beery full come: so lo, the wynter is now past, the myrre is amais & gone. The floures are comyn in the silbe, the wysynging tyme is come, the voyce of the turtle done is herde in oure lande. The syge tre bynyngch soue hit syge, the vyne beare blossoms, and haue a good smell.

O stide vpon my loue, my beery full, and o me (my beere) out of the caues of iherosol, out of the holes of the wall: O let me sit thy countenance and heare thy voyce, for sweete is thy voyce and fayre is thy face. Get to the foyes, yee the lisse foyes that haue y wyne, for oure vyne beare blossoms.

My loue is myne, and I am his, (which febeth on us gethe the lisse) vntill the daye beare, and till the shadowes be gone, Come o gayne preud y (o thy beloved) like as a Roos or a yong hart vnto the mountaynes.

The iii. Chapter.

I mighte in my bedd, I songhe hym, whom my soule loueth: yee daughtery songhe I him, but I founde him not. I wil get vpon (thought) and go aboute the cite: vpon the martre and in all y fyttes will I seke him whom my soule loueth: but when I songhe hym, I founde him not. The watchmen that go aboute y cite, founde me. Save ye not him, whom my soule loueth:

So when I was a little past them, I found him whom my soule loueth. I haue got an hode vpon him, and wil not let him go, mail I bringe him in to my mothers house, and in to her chamber that bare me.

I charge you o ye daughters of Ierusalem by the Roses and hyndes of the salbe, that ye wal not wry my louener touch her, till she be wauer herself.

Whos this, that cometh out of y^e y^e demefulda piers of smoke, as it were a smell of Myrr, frankincense and all maner spices of the Apoccaty?

Beholde, aboute Salomons bedchamber the stande LX. maleauus men of the mightie in Iud. They holde swertes euery one, & are open in warre. Every man hath his swerthys by his side, because of feare in the night.

Yonge Salomon hath made himself a hostate of the wodd of Libanus, the piers of off flint, the coveringe of golde, y^e scare of purple, y^e grounde pleasurably paved for the daughters of Ierusalem.

So forth, o ye daughters of Sion) and be hidde yonge Salomon in the crowne, w^{ch}er with his mother crowned him in the daye of his marriage, and in the daye of the glad-wiffe of his bett.

The III. Chapter.

How saye art thou (my lone) how saye art thou: thou hast douce eyes beyde that which I sech hid within. Thy haire lockes are like a flocke of shepe that dypped, which go first vp from the washinge place: where euery one beareth two tymes, and not one vnfructfull amonge them. Thy lippes are like a rose coloured ryboue, thy wordes are loudly: thy doctes are like a pier of a pomgranate, beydes that which I sech hid within. Thy neck is like the tower of David builded with balmoiles, wher vpon there haue a thousande sheldes, y^e all the weap^{er}s of the graunces. Thy twoo lippes art like twoo tymes, of yonge roes, which seke amonge the lilies. O that I mighte go to the mountayne of Myrr, and to the hill of frankynsenf: all the waye break, and all the shadowes be past awaye. Thou art all fyre (my lone) y^e no spact is there in the.

Come come from Libanus (o my spense) come to me from Libanus: come soone the myr waye from the toppes of Aman, from the toppes of Samir and Serapion, from the Libons demes and from the mountaynes of y^e leopardes. Thou hast wotidde my hert (o my sister, my spouse) thou hast wotidde my bett, with one of thine eyes, and with one cheyne of thy neck. O how saye art loudly are thy bestes, my sister, my ipe use: Thy bestes are more pleasaunt then wyne, and the smell of thy oymntences passeth all spices. Thy lippes (o my spouse) doo ppe as the hony combe, y^e mylke and hony is under thy renge, and the smell of thy garmentes is like the smell of frankynsenf.

Thou art a well kepte garden (o my sister, my spouse) thou art a well kepte water pynge, a lealed well. The fructes that spowse in the, are like a very paradys of p^{er}granates w^{ch} fruce frutes: as Cypresse, Cardus, Gasfron, Calmus, and all the beres of Libanus. Myrr, Aloes, and all the best spices. Thou art a well of gardens, a well of luyng^{er} matters, which renne downe from Libanus. W^{ch} thou no thyng^{er}, come thou southw^{er}de, and blome vpo my garde, that the smell ther of maye be caried on euery syde: That my beloved maye come in to my garden, & eate of the frutes and apples that growe therein.

The V. Chapter.

Come in to my garden o my sister, my spouse: I haue gathered my Myrr w^{ch} my spice. I wil sace my hony and my hony c^{er}be, I wil drynke my wyne & my mylke (Eate o ye frenches) drynke and be merry, ye belene.

As I was a slepe, & my hert wakynge, I herde the voyce of my beloved, wh^{er} he knoched, O pen to me (sayde he) o my sister, my lene, my doue, my darlinge: so my heade is full of dew, and y^e ockes of my hayre are full of the mighte dioppes.

I haue put off my cote, how ca I do it en agayne: I haue washed my feet, how shal I style them agayne: W^{ch}er when my loue put in his hanbe at the hole, my hert was moued to garde him: so that I sode up to open vnto my beloved. My hades dypped in Myrr, & the Myrr ranne downe my fingers vpon y^e locke. Neuer bestest wh^{er} I had opened vnto my beloved, he was departed, and gone his waye.

W^{ch}er I like, as a foretyme when he spak, my hert coude no longer respayre: I was so now I songht be, but I coude not fynde him: I c^{er}ed vpon him, neuer bestest he gaue me no answer. So the watchmen that wente aboute the cite, saide me, smore me, and woued me: Noe they that kepte the walles, tokt awaye my garmente fro me. I charge you the fore o ye daughters of Ierusalem if ye fynde my beloved, that ye call him, howe that I am sicke for loue.

Who is thy loue aboute other louers, O thou sayest amonge women: O, what can thy loue do, more then other louers, that thou chargest vs so straitly?

As for my lone, he is whyte and reade colourd, a singular personne amonge many thousandes: his heade is the most fyne golde, the lockes of his haire are busshed, brown as the enerynge: his eyes are as the eyes of doves by the water brookes, washen with mycke, and remainyng in a plentiful place: his chere is like a garden bedd, where in the 2pocaryes plate all manner of sweete thinges: his lippes droppe as the floures of the most principall Myrr, his handes are full of golde rymges and precious stones, his body is as the pure verry, dectre ouer with Saphyres: his legges are as the pilers of Iherusalem, set upon sockets of golde: his face is as Libanus, and as the breuy of the Cedre trees: his throte is sweete, yet he is altogether the louely. Soch one is my lone, o ye doughty eers of Iherusalem soch one is my lone.

Whiche is thy lone goneth? thou sayest amonge women: whiche is thy lone departed, that we maye see him with thee?

The VI. Chapter.

My lone is gone downe in to his garden, vnto I sweete smelling beddes, that he maye refresh himself in the garden, and gather floures. My lone is myne, and I am his, which sedeth amonge the lilies.

Then are pleasant (o my lone) men as I selynesse myself, thou art saye as Iherusalem, glorious as an armye of men with their banners (Turne awaye thine eyes fro me, for they make me to proude) Thy haire lockes are like a flocke of goates vpon I mount of Salaa. Thy teth are like a flocke of shepe I be clypped, which go out of the washing place: wher euerie one beareth two clypps, and not one withoute full amonge them. Thy chere are like a pear of a pomgranate, besides I which I seth hid within. There are three score quenes, some score concubynes, and yenge women withoute nombre. But one is my dove,

My dearyng. She is the dely beloved of his mother, and deare vnto her that bare her. Whā the daughters sawe her, they sayde she was blessed: see the quenes and concubynes playe for her. What is she this, that peperh out as the morning saye as the Moone, excellent as the Sonne, glorious as an armye of men with their banners?

I wente downe in to the matt garden, to see what grew by the brookes, to loke yf the wyntage stonished, and yf the pomgranates were shot forth. Then the charytes of the prynce of my people made me secretly saye. Turne agayne, turne agayne, O thou lambe, turne agayne, turne agayne, that we maye loke vpon thee.

The VII. Chapter.

What pleasure haue ye moue in the lambe, than when she danceth amonge the men of warre? O how pleasaunt are thy treadynges with thy feet, thou prynces daughter: Thy chere is like a fayre iewell, which is wrought by an nyngle workmaster: Thy navel is like a rubie begetter, which is neuer withoute vnto thy wombe is like an heape of ybony, set aboute with lilies: Thy two breasts are like two clypps of yonye roses: Thy neck is as a tower of yonye: Thyne eyes are like water pales in Iherusalem, besyde the piers of Bathabbim: Thy nose is like the tower of Libanus, which looketh towards Damascus: Thy heade that stoncedh vpon the hill Carmel: The haire of thy heade is like thynges purple solden vpon plates.

O how saye and lovely are the charyte lynes in pleasures: Thy stature is like a cete, and thy bestes like the grapes. I sayde: I wil clymme vp in to the battes, and kee holde of his bianchias. Thy beles shall be as the vyne grapes, the lym of the no strels like the smell of an apple, and thy chere like the best wyne.

This shall be pure & cleare fro my lone, his lippes and teth shall haue their pleasure: There wil I turne me vnto my lone, and I shall turne him vnto me. O come on my waye, let vs go forth in to the silde, and enterre lodgyng in the villages. In the morninge wil we ryse by clymme, and go for the waye: yf it be spynge foeth, yf the grapes be growne, and yf the pomgranates be shot out. There wil I gende the my bestes: that I shall the Mandragoras graue their smell be: be oure bones: There o my lone, haue I Ipe vnto the all manner of frutes, both new and olde.

The VIII. Chapter.

That I mighte fynde the withoute: My lone, I, whom I loue as my beste: which suckte my mothers breast: that thou woldest not be offended, yf I set the and broughte in to my mother: lest that thou mightest teach me, and that I mighte gawe the ryme of I syced wyne: and of the sweete sappe of my pomgranates: as I left hande I seth vnder my heade, and I seth hande couereth me.

This is the prophecy of Esay the sonne of Amos, which he shewed vpon Iuda and Jerusalem: In the tyme of Osi-as, Iourban, Abas, and Eschias kynnges of Iuda.

The first Chapter.
Are o heauen, hearken o earth, for the LORD speaketh: I haue nourished & brought vp children, and they are fallen away fro me. An oxe knoweth his LORDE, and an Ass his masters stall, but Iud knoweth no thinge, my people haue not understandinge. Alas for this synful people, which are experte in blasphemies, a fra-wde generation, vnnatural children. They haue forsaken the LORD, they haue picou-slye the holy one of Israel vnto anger, and are gone backward. Wherefore shulde ye be pleged any more? For ye are euer fallinge awaye. The whole heade is sicke, and the heart is very heuy. From the sole of the foote vnto the heade, there is no whole parte in all y^e body: but all are woundes, botches, fins and strepes, which can nerher be helped, bounde up, mollified, nor eased with any equipment.

Your londe lieth wast, youre cities are bent vp, youre enemies denoure youre londe, and ye must be saynt to stonde, and loke vpon it: and it is desolate, as it were with remains in a hanel. Moreover y^e daughter of Syon is left alone like a vnyne and like a marchouse in tyme of warre, like a besieged cite. And excepte the LORD of heauen had left vs a fewe alvies: they shulde haue bene as Sodoma, & like vnto Gomora.

Heare the wordes of the LORD ye cy-taines of Sodoma: and hearken vnto the lawe of your God, & how people of Gomora.
Why offer ye so many sacrifices vnto me? I am desolate for the dredd of strynges of wethers, and with y^e sacrefice of bestbeastes. I haue no pleasure in the bloude of bullockes, lambes and gootes. When ye appeare before me, who requyered you to create within my pouches? Offrende no mo oblacions, for it is but lost labour. I abhorre youre incense. I maye not awaye with youre newmoones, your Sabbathes and solempne dayes. Your fastingues are also in wayne. I hate youre new holy dayes and fastingues, euen for my very hate. They make me weary, I cannot abide them. Though ye holde out yo^r bon-des, yet turne I myne eyes from you. And though ye make many prayers, yet heare I nothinge at all, for youre bondes are full of bloude.

Wastly you make you cleane, put awaye yo^r euill though hee out of my sight, cease from doinge of euill and violence. Lerne to do right, applie youre selues to equyte, deliuer the oppressed, helpe the fatherlesse to his right, let the wydowes compaignie come before you. How goe cozsaicly the LORD? we wil talke together. Is it not so? Though yours synnes be as red as scarlet, they shal not be whyter then snowe? And though they were like purple, shall they not be like whyyte wool? Is it not so? If ye be louynge & obedient, ye shal enioye the best thinge that groweth in the londe. But if ye be obstinate and rebellious, ye shalbe deuoured with the sicerbe: so: thus the LORD hath promised with his owne mouth.

How happneth it then that the righeuous cite (which was full of equyte) is become unfaithfull as an whore: rightuousnes dwelt in it, but now murdher. Thy Siluer is turned to dross, and thy wyne mixt wth water. Thy princes are traytours and compaignons of chereus. They loue giftes alogre ther, and solome rewarde. As for the fatherlesse, they hyspe him not to his righte, nether wil they let the wydowes cause come before them. Therefore speaketh the LORD God of hostes the mighty one of Israel: Ah I must ease me of myne memos, and a venge me vpon the. And therefore shal I laye my bonde vpon the, and burne out thy dross from the finest and purest, and put out all thy leade, & scethy iudges agayne as they were some tyme, and thy Senators as they were from y^e beginninge. Then shalst thou be called the righteous cite, the faithful ci-tie. But Zion shalbe redeemed with equyte, and hye captiue with rightuousnesse. Soe are become vnfaithfull vnto the LORDE, must all together be vcerely destroyed.

And excepte ye be ashamed of the offences wherein ye haue so delited, and of the gardens that ye haue chosen: ye shalbe as an oke whose leaues are fallen away, and as a garden that hath no moystnesse. And as for the glory of these thinges, it shalbe turned to drie strawe, and he that made them to a sparke. And they shal both burne together, so that no man shalbe able to quench them.

The seconde Chapter.

Howeuer this is the worde that was epened vnto Esay the forme of Amos, upon Iuda and Jerusalem. It will be also in proofe of tyme: That the hill where the house of the LORDE is builded, shalbe y chuse amonge hills, and exalted aboue al the hills. And al he that shal passe vnto him, speakinge thus one to another: vp let us go to the hill of the LORDE, and rethe house of y God of Jacob: y he maye see us his waye, and y we maye walke in his pathes. For y lawe shal come out of Syon, and the worde of Got from Jerusalem, and shal geue sentence amonge the heathen, and shal reuolue the multitude of people: So that they shal breake their swordes and spea-res, to make sythes, sickles & sawes therof.

From that tyme forth shal not one people lift vp weapon agaynst another, neither shal they leme to fight from thensforth. It is to the that I erie (o house of Jacob) vp, let us walke in the sight of the LORDE. But thou art feared abide with thy people (o house of Jacob) for ye go farre beyonde yo fathers, whether it be in Sorcerers: whom ye haue as the phylistynes had, or in calkers of mens bythes, wherof ye haue to many. As soone as youre londe was ful of syluer and gelde, and no ende of youre treasure: so soone as youre londe was ful of strenge hoyses and no ende of youre charrettes: Immediately was it ful of Idols also, euen worshes of youre owne honours, which ye yore selua haue facioned, and youre fingers haue made. There killeth the man, there sal ketch the man downe before them, so y thou canst not bunge him awaye from thence.

And therfore get y soone in to some rock, and hyde the in the grounde from the sight of the fearful iudge, and from y glory of his Magesitie. Which casteth downe y high soles of presumptuous persones, and bringeth lowe the pryde of sma, and he only shall be exalted in y daye. For the daye of y LORDE of hostes shal go ouer all pryde & prynces, vpon all the that exaltes the selfe: shal bunge them all to nether: vpon all high steute Cedrus trees of Libanus, and vpon the okes of Basan, vpon all high hills, and vpon all steute mountaynes, vpon all high towers, and vpon all stronge walles, vpon all shippes of the see, and vpon euery thinge y is glorious and pleasant to loke vpon.

And it shall bunge downe the pryde man, and laye mans presumptuousnesse lowe, and the LORDE shal only haue the glory in that daye. But the Idols shal be ly bereed out. Men shal creepe in to holes of stene, and in to caves of the earth, from the sight of the fearful iudge, and from the sight of his magesty: what tyme as he shal ketch him vp to shake the earth. Then shal he cast awaye his goddes of sytter and yd-de (which he neuer helde as had made to inuerse) vnto Molles and Basan: so he maye the better creepe in to the caves of rocks, and in to the chiftes of hard ston, from y sight of the fearful iudge, and from the glory of his Magesity.

The thirde Chapter.

Whermyan can eschue a persone mouth Langer, for what doth he wylde? He shal y LORDE of hostes take awaye his consale & Iuda, all possessors & power, all meat and drinke, y capteyne and the iudge, y iudge and the prophete, the wyse and the aged man, the moost iustful of iustice yeaeres, and the honorable a be Senators, and of vnderstandinge: the masters of craft and orateurs. And I shal geue you chieft-e to be youre prynces (saith the LORDE): whiche shall haue the rule of you. One shal enue be doinge violence and wronge to another. The voyes shal presume agaynst the LORDE, and the vyle persone agaynst the honorable. Recorde shal take a frende of his contyned by y bofome, and saye it without thinge, thou shalt be oure heade, for the waye I kepe us from this fall and perill.

Then shall he sweare and saye: I can not helpe you. Howeuer, there is neither warre clothinge in my chuse, make me no fetter of the people. For Jerusalem and Iuda must decaye, because that both their wordes and counceles are agaynst the LORDE: they promysse the presence of his magesty to anger. The chaunginge of their counsaunce betwixt them, see they beate their owne synnes thenselues, and they

Wo be vnto ye vngodly and vniuersal vs for they shal be remoued after their wretchednes. O my people, rybaundes oppresse y, and women haue rule of the.

O my people, thy leaders becaune the, and made out the waye of thy footsteps. The LORDE is here to comon of the narres, and standeth to geue iudgment with the people. The LORDE shal come forth to reasenth with the Senators and pynners of his people, and shal saye thus vnto them: It is ye that haue built up my wynter, the robbery of the poore in your house. Wherfore do ye oppresse my people, and marre y faces of the innocent: thus shal the God of hostes reuise them.

Moreover thus saith y LORDE: Seinge the daughters of Sion are become so pious, and come in with stretched out neckes, and with manye vntunon eyes: seinge they come in trippinge so nycely with their feet. Wherfore shal the LORDE haue the byades of the daughters of Sion, and make their haire bare in that daye. In that daye shal the LORDE take awaye the gorgeousnes of their apparel, and spanges, cheryes, parettes, and colares, bracelets and hoores, y goodly shouers, wynde and broderd raymet, basshes and heabbandes, rynges and gardes, holy daye clothes and vases, kerchies and pynnes, glasses and smokes, bonets and rashes.

And in steade of good smell there shal be stunk amonge them. And for their gyrdles there shal be lowe bondes. And for welliche haire there shal be baldnesse. In steade of a stomacher, a iack cloth, and for their bewy wyndnesse and sonneburnyng. Their balbondes and their mightie men shal perishe with the swerde in batall.

The fourth Chapter.

O that yme shall their gates mourne and complayne, and they shal crye as the solace of the earth. Then shal the stones saye: Take hede of youc man, and saye: we will laye all one meate and cloothinge together in comon, ony that we maye be called thy wyues, and that this shamefull reproofe maye be take frome. After that crye shal the bananach y LORDE be beautiful and myghtie, and y fruite of the earth shal be saye and pleasaunt for those Israelites that shall springe thero. Then shal the remnaunt in Sion and the remnaunt at Jerusalem be called holy: namely all theye are as water amonge the drynges at Jerusalem: what cyme as the LORDE shall waite awaye the desolation of the daughter of Sion, and pouge the bloude out from Jerusalem, w y wynde of his smecte and fyre.

Moreover upon all the dwellinges of the hill of Sion and upon their whole congregation, shal the LORDE piouslye a cloude and smote by daye, and the slynging be of a flammynge fyre by nyght, for all their glory shal be preferud. And Jerusalem shal be a tabernacle for a shadowe because of here in the daye tyme, a place and refuge where a man maye kepe him for werber and rayne.

The V. Chapter

O my well than, I will singe my beloved frinde a songe of his wynter. My beloved frinde hath a wynter in a very frutefull plenteous grounde. This he hedged, this he walled rounde aboute, and planted it with goodly grapes. In the myddst of it buylded he a toure, and made a wyne presse therein. And afterwarde when he loked y it shalde bringe him grapes, it broughte forth thornes. I shewe you now my cause (O ye Cityens of Jerusalem and whole Iuda:) Judge I praye you betwixte me and my wynegarbinge. What more coude haue bene done for it, that I haue not done: Wherfore then hath it gotten thornes, where I loked to haue had grapes of it?

Well, I shall tell you how I will do w my vyngarde: I will take the hedge from it, that it maye perishe, and breake downe y wall, that it maye be troden under soe. I will laye it waite, that it shall nethe be raynyed nor cut, but bene thornes and briers. I will also so byd y cloude, that they shal not rayne vpon it. As for the vyngarde of the LORDE of hostes it is the house of Israel, and whole Iuda his sayre plantinge. Of thes he loked for a quyre, but se then in vyngarde: for righteousnesse, lo, I see bad misery.

Do to you that soyme one house to another, and bringe one lende so nigh vnto another, till ye can gette no more grounde. Will ye dwell vpon the earth alone? The LORDE of hostes rometh me thus in my: care: shal not manye greater and more gorgeous houses be so waite, that no man shall dwell in thes? And can ariens of wyne shal geue me a Quarte, and xxx bushels of fyre shal geue me a bushell.

Wo be unto them that rise vp early to use them selues in diuinitynes, and yet at night are more superfluous with wyne. In whose companies are harpes and lutes, cybils, dulcians, and pipes, and wyne. But they regard not the woike of the LORDE, and consider not the operations of his honde. Therefore cometh my folk also in captivitye, because they haue no vnderstandinge. Their glory shall be myre with hunger, and their pride shall be marred for thirste. Therefore gaue he hel, and opened hy mouth: manye loue wyder than pryde, loofinge and reioysing, with ioye, as reioyse therein, maye be founde in to it.

Thus shall man haue a fall, he shall be brought lowe, and the high lodes of the proud shall be downe. But the LORDE of hostes, yf holy God: shall be exalted and vntouched, when he shall declare his raigne and righteousnesse after this maner. Then shall yf lambs care their apointed feeder, and shall feed plentifully in the mountaynes. Wo vnto wyne, psonnes, that diuine wisdomes vnto the, as it were with a coorde, and spure, as it were with a care rope. Which vnto I speake on this maner: let him that hath now, and go forth wth his weite, that we maye fynd it. Let the comel of yf holy one of yfrael come, and diuine me, yf we maye knowe it.

Wo vnto them that call euil good, and good euil: which make hardnesse of sighte, and lighte hardnesse, yf make softer sweete, and sweeter bitter. Wo vnto them that are wise in their owne sighte, and thinke them selues to haue vnderstandinge. Wo vnto them, yf a care comyng men to suppe out wyne, and oportune to sit vp diskeuse. These gyue sentence with the wisdomy for rewardes, but condemne the iust cause of the righteous.

Their rose, like as theye lyeeth up the steame, and as the flame cōsumeth the stubble: Euen so: when their roote is ful, their blossome shall vanishe awaye like dust oymete for theye despyre the laue of the LORDE of hostes, and blaspheme the woide of the holy maner of yfrael.

Their rose is the wrath of the LORDE bynded also agaynst his people, and he shall bech his honde at them: yet he shall shynre so, that the hills shall tremble. And their castles shall lye in the epistretes, like myre. After all this, the wrath of God shall not cease, but he shall stretch his hyde wyder. And he shall gyue a toll vnto a straunge people, and call vnto them in a farr countre: and beholde, theye shall come hastilye with speede. There is not one sayment lyke amonge them, nor not a stronglye nor sleepye paydour. There shall not one of them put of the gyrdle from his lonyes, nor loose the lathet of his shoe. Their arrowes are sharpe, and their bows are bent. Their horse hoesse: are like fyre, and their care theye like a stormy wynde. Their crye is as it were of a lyon, and the roaringe of the milite lyons helpes. They shall rear, and hitch up the piave, and no man shall recover it: eue get it from the. In that daye theye shall be feare upon them, as the see. And yf a lorde were the londe, beholde, it shall be all carenesse and serene. yf we loke to be brought choide, it shall be carefull with careful deperacion.

The vii Chapter.

In the same yeare yf Kinge Siasa dyed, and the LORDE sittinge upon a high and glorious seate, and his crayne filled yf palace, from atene staires the Seraphius, a hof of euery one had set wynges. With trayned theye covered his face, wth theye his face, and with euery one dyde flye. Theye cried also with euery one in this maner: holy, holy, holy is the LORDE of hostes. The noble woide is ful of his glorye. See the castles and detekes: as meted at the tenege, and the horse was ful of effemete. Then yf saye: Who is me. For I was aslounished: that yf (which am a man of vncle lppen, and dwell amonge people yf aith vncle chippes alle). Shall I yf Kinge and LORDE of hostes with myne eyes.

Then stene one of the Seraphius vnto me, hauinge a hore cele in his honde, which he had taken from the aulter with the tenege, and reuched my mouth, and sayde: lo, this hath touchted thy mouth, and thy vnghteousnesse is taken awaye, and thy synne forgiven. After this yf heard the voyce of the LORDE takinge aduysment on his maner: When shall yf stene, and who wilt eue messanger: The yf saye: hee am yf, sende me. And se he saye: go, and tel this people: ye shall care in dete, but ye shall not vnderstone, ye shall please, and not perceave. I caren the care of this people, stoppe their eares, and shut their eyes, that theye fynd not wth their eyes, heare not with their eares, and vnghten be net with their hartes, and conuerse and be calde.

Then spake yf: LORDE, how long shall foundational the cities be weertly without habitacions, and yf houses without men, the lorde be also desolace, and the vnbuyt be. For the LORDE shall take the men far awaye, so that the londe shall lye wast. Nevertheless, the tenth parte shall remayn therein, for it shall conuerse and be fructifull. And like wise as the Terebintes and otheres bunge forth their frutes, so shall the holy sede haue frate.

The iuenth Chapter.

It happened in the tyme of Ahas the sonne of Ionathas, which was the sonne of Iosachan kynge of Iuda: that Kezin the kynge of Siria, and Poci Romeles sonne, kynge of Israel: wente vp to ward Jerusalem to besiege it: but wanne it not. For w when the horse of Dauid (that is Ahas) hade more thereof, y Siria and Ephraim were considerate together: his here quoted: yee and y heres also of his people like as a re in the selde, that is moued with the wynde.

Then sayde God vnto Esay: go meete Ahas (thou and thy sonne) Bear Jafub ye the heade of y ouer pelic, in the fore part by the faller grounbe, and saye vnto him: take hede to thyself and be still, but feare not, neether be fayr harted, for these two tales: that is: for these two smokynge fyre brandes, the wrath and furiosnes of Kezin the Syrian and Romeles sonne: because that the kynge of Siria Ephraim and Romeles sonne haue wickedly conspyred agaynst the, sayenge: We will go downe in to Iuda, weze the, and brynge them vnto vs, and ser a kynge there: euen the sonne of Taball. For thus saith the LORDE God there. Ye shall not go forth, neether come to passe: for the heade cite of y Sirians is Damascus, but the head of Damascus is Rezin. And after synce and cheskeue yere, shall Ephraim be no more a people. And the cheske cite of Ephraim is Samaria, but the head of Samaria is Romeles sonne. And yf ye be leuener, there shall no promys be kepte with you.

Afterwar, God spake vnto Ahas, sayen: requyre a token of the LORDE thy God, whiche he be comarde the depty beneath or comarde y higher aboue. The sayde Ahas: I will requyre none, neether will I tempeste the LORDE. The LORDE answered: Then he arte, ye of the house of Dauid: Is it not enough for you, that ye be greuous vnto men, but ye must greue my God also? And therefore the LORDE shall geue you a token of himself: Beholde, a virgin shall conceaue and beare a sonne, and shall call his name Emmanuel. But ter and hony shall he eate, yf he maye knowe the euil, and chese yf good. But ouer that childe come to knowlege, re- sithne the euil and chese the good: The londe (that thou arte so fayre for) shall be declare of beeh hir pyngoe.

The LORDE also shall sende a tyme vpon the, vpon thy people, and vpon thy fathers house: (soch as neuer came since the tyme of Ephraim departed from Iuda) cho: ro yf kynge of the Assirians. For at the same tyme shall the LORDE whysile for the syes yf are abouthe water of Egipt, and for yf Berye in the Assirians londe. These shall come, and shall lightheall in the vales, in yf wordes of stene, vpon all grene thynges, and in all coners.

At the same tyme shall the LORDE shawe the hayre of the heade and the fere and the beere cleue: of wich the reason that he shall paye them with shall beyonde the water: namely, with yf kynge of the Assirians. At the same tyme shall a man lye with a cowe, and two shepe. Then because of cheske abeyndance of my self, he shall mate butter and eate it. So that eury one which remaineth in the londe, shall eate butter and hony. At the same tyme all vynyardes (though there be a thousand vynes in one, and were solde for a thousand siluer linges) shall be turned to beares and thomes. Like as they shall come in to the londe where artores and bonous, so shall all the londe become beares and thomes. And as for all hilles that now are heuened downe, they shall not come vpo them, for feare of beares and thomes. But the carle shall be dryuen thither, and the shepe shall fede there.

Whouer the LORDE sayde vnto me: Take the a greate leaf, and wyre in it, as men do with a penne, that he speke him to robbe, and haist him to spoyle. And immediately I called vnto me faithfull wyneffes: Oti as the prest, and Zacharias yf some of Baas chias. A fere that wente I vnto the prophete, that now had conuerted and beome a sonne. Then sayde the LORDE to me: geue him this name: Matherchal bashbas, that is: a spider robber, an haistie spoyler. For why, ouer the childe shall haue knowlege to saye: Abi and Im, yf is father, and mother: shall yf rydes of Damascus and yf sulstauce of Samaria be take awaye, thowd in the kynge of yf Assirians.

Which shall poure out his fury vnto euery man, and renne ouer all their bankes. And shall breake in vpon Iuda, increasinge in power, till he see him by the throte. He shall ysyl also the wyde wyse of thy londe wth his blade wynges, O Emanuel. So together ye people, and gather you, hearken to all ye of farre countries. Mustre you, and gather you: mustre you and gather you, take youre counsel together, yett muste youre counsel come to noughte: go in honte withal, yett shall it not prospeere. Excepte Emanuel: (that is God) be with us. For the LORDE chastised me, and rete me by yf honde, and warned me, sayenge vnto me: that I shulde not walke in the waye of this people. He sayde moreover: rounde with meene of the, who so euer saye: yonder people are bounde together. Neuertheless teare them not, neither be afrayde of them, but saucifie the LORDE of hosties, let him be youre feare and dwede. For he is the ianctienger, and stone of iouctiuar, yf rock to fall vpon, a snare and net to both the houses: to Iuda, and the inhabitours of Ierusalem. Vp his shalder shall he kyngdome be, and he shall be called wth his name: The wonderous geue of counsel, the mightie God, the euellastynge father, the prynce of peace, he shall makynge ende to encrease the kyngdome and pece, and shall sye vpon the seate of Dauid and in his kyngdome, to see vp the same, to stablish it with equyte and righte doctryne, from thence forth for evermore. This shall the nelson of the LORDE of hosties be to passe.

¶ The LORDE sent a worde into Jacob, the same is come in to Israel. All the people also of Ephraim, and they that dwell in Samaria, can saye with pryde and with mackes, on this maner: The eye wth fallen do none, but we will byde it with harder stones. The tholbery synne ye haue ben, but we shall see it vp agayne with the die. Neuertheless, the LORDE shall prepare Asyn the euemie agaynst the, and shall rebulde their aduersaries, that yf Syrians shall laye helde vpon them be fore, and the phyllystynes behynde, and so denunce Iuda and open mouth.

¶ I see all this, the mouth of the LORDE shall not ceasse, but yett his hande shall stretch out still. For the people cannot come vnto him, that chastyse them, and to they see the LORDE of hoostes. Therfo re the LORDE shall roce out of Jrsal both hede and tale, bnannd and twygge in one daye. By the hede, is vnderstonde the Senatour and honorable man, and by y tail, the prophet that preacheth lye. For all they which enforme the people that they be in a right case, soch be discanera.

Such as men thynke also to be perfecte a monge these, are but cast awaye.

D Therefore shall the LORDE haue no pleasure in their yonge mē, neither fauoure the ir suchelisse and wydowes. For they are aliogether ypoocrites and wick'ed, and all their mouthes speake fely. After all this shall not the LORDE wraoth cease, but yet his honde shall stretch out still. For the ragoddy burne, as a fyre in the byers and thornes: And as it were out of a fyre in a wood or a redbush, so ascenbeth the smoke of their pyre.

For this cause shall y wraoth of the LOR DE of hoostes fall upon the londe, and the people shall be consumed, as it were with fy re, no man shall spare his brother. If a man do hurte him to the right honde, he shall saueth, or so the lesse hurte to eat, he shall rechaue ynough. Every man shall eate the flesh of his owne arme: Manasse shall eate Ephraim, and Ephraim Manasse, and they both shall eate Juba. After all this shall not the LORDE's wraoth cease, but yet shall his honde be stretched out still.

The tenth chapeer.

I Wo be vnto you y make unrightuous lawes, and deuyse changes, which be to hurte my to kepe; wherthow the poore are oppressed, on euery syde, and the iu-stices of my people are there with robbed of iudgment: that wydowes maye be your praye, and that yemaye robbe the si-cherelisse. What will ye do in tyme of the uicacion and destruction, that shall come from sure: To whom will ye ruine for helpen: to whom will ye geue your honoure, that he maye kepe: that ye come not amonge the prisoners, or lye amonge the dead: After all this shall not the wraoth of the LORDE cease, but yet shall his honde be stretched out still.

Wo be also vnto Assur, which is a staff of my wraoth, in whose honde is the rod of my punishment. For Jhsal sende him amonge those ypoocritish people, amonge the people that haue deserued my disfaou-re: Jhsal Jsend him: that he maye utterly wite them, spoyle them, and treade them downe like the myre in the strece. Howbeit his meynynge is not so, neither chyneth his harte of this fashion. But he ymagineth only, how he maye ouerthrowe and destroye moche people, for he saith: are not my princes all kynge? Is not Cains as easie to wyme, as Charchanis? Is it harder to conquire Antiochia then Arphad: Or is it lighter to ouercome Damascus then Samaria? As who say: I were able to wyme the kingdome of the Idolaters and their goddes, but not Jerusalem and Samaria.

Shal I not do vnto Jerusalem and their ymages, as I dyd vnto Samaria and the ir ymages?

Wherfore the LORDE saith: As soon as I haue performed my whole wofde vpon the hyl of Syon and Jerusalem: the will I also wysse the noble and stoue kynge of Assiria, with his wysdome and pry-de. For he stenderth thus in his owne conceit: This do I, thow in the power of myne owne honde, and thow in my wysdome: For I am wysse, I am he that remove the lon-des of the people, I robbe their princes: and like one of the wretches I dyne them from their hy seates. My honde hath pou-er out the hoostes of the people, as it were a nest. And like as egges, that were lay-de here and there, are gathered together So do I gather all countrees. And there is no man, y darre be so bolde, as to toudy a father, that darre open his mouth, or ence whilper.

But both the eye boost itself, agaynst him y heweth thertwith, or doch the lawe make any traunge, agaynst him that relechit: That were euen like, as yf the reb dydealte it self agaynst him, that beareth it: or as though y staff shulde magnifie itself as who saye: it were no wodd. Therfore shall the LORDE of hoostes sende him po-uerie in his riches, and burne up his power, as it were with a fyr. But the lichte of Jhsrael shall be yf fyre, and his Sanctuary shall be the flame, and it shall brynle, and burne vpon his thornes and byers in one daye, yee all the glory of his woddes and sables shall be consumed with body and soule. As see him self, he shall be as one chafed awaye. The trees also of his silde shall be of such a nomber, that a chyld maye tell them.

After yf de ye shall the remanent of Jhsrael, and soch as are escaped out of the honse of Jacob, sete no more cofort at him that smote them, but shall confortet hem selfe with faith fulnesse and treuth in the LOR

DE, the holy, one of Israel. The remnant, yet and the posterite of Jacob, shall conuer-te into God the mighty one. For though thy people (o Israel) be as the sonbe of the see, yet shall but the remnant of them only conuerte into him. Perfecte is the iudgment of him that flourish in righteoussesse: and therefore of LORDE of hostes shall perfectly fulfill the thinge, that he hath determined in the myddst of the whole worlde. Therefore thus saith the LORDE God of hostes: Thou my people, that dwellest in Sion, be not afraid for the kinge of the Assyrians: he shall wagge his staffe at thee, yet and beate the with the rodd, as the Egipcians dyd sometyme: But for once a feare, shall my rewarde and my indignacion be fulfilled agaynst their blasphemies.

For our the LORDE of hostes shall prepare a scourge for him, like as was the punyshment of Nadab upon mount of Sich.
And he shall life up his rod over the see, as he dyd sometye over the Egipcians. Then shall his barthen be taken from thy shulders, and his yocke from thy necke, yet the same yocke shall corrupte for very fatnesse. He shall come to Auz, and go thither toward Ugiron. But at Uadyma shall he muster his hostes, and go ouer of soude. Gaba shall be their resting place, Amana shall be a rest yde, Gaba Saul shall be awaye. The voyce of y noyse of thy hostes (o daughter Gallam) shall be herde into lais and co Anachoch, which alld shall be in trouble. Uadyma shall tremble for feare, yet shall be remayne at Tabehar daye. After that, shall he life up his honde agaynst the mount Sion, and a-gaynst the hill of Ierusalem. But the LORDE God of hostes shall take awaye the prou-de from thence, w^{ch} feare. He shall hew downe thornes of the wood shall be reered out of Yf feare this chere shall come a rod forth of the kynne of Jesse, and a blossome out of his roote. The spruce of the LORDE shall lighte upon te: the spruce of myssome, and strength: yf spruce of knowlege, and of the feare of God: and shall make him sturue in the feare of God. For he shall not gene sentee, after the thinge yf shall be broughe before his eyes, neither repoues matter at the first hearinge: but with righteoussesse shall he iudge the poore, and with holynesse shal he refourme the simple of the worlde.

He shall synce yf worlde with yf staffe of his mouth, & with yf beatech of his mouth shall he slaye the wicked. Righteousnesse shall be the gyde of his loynes, truth and faithfullnesse the gydinge w^{ch} of his runne. The shall yf wolfe dyed with the lye, and the leopard shall lye downe with the go-ate. Bulloche, Lyons and carrel shall kepe company together, so that a litle childe shall drye them forth. The come and the Beere shall fede together, and their yongones shall lye together. The lye shall cate strawe like the ore, or the corne. The childe whyle he sucketh, shall haue a desyre to the serpen-tys, and whyle he is weaned, he shall put his hande in to the Cocke trye denne. Uoman shall be euell to another, no man shall be another, in all the hill of my Sanctuary.
For the earth shall be full of yf the myghte of y LORDE, euen as though the water of the see flowed ouer the earth.

Then shall the Gentiles enquire after the roce of Jesse (which shall be set up taken into the Gentiles) for his dwellinge shall be glorious. At the same tyme shall the LORDE take in honde agayne, co conquest yf remnant of his people (which are left alyue) from the Assyrians, Egipcians, Aro-bians, Morians, Elamites, Calceyes, An-tiochians and Uedes of the see. And he shall set up a table amonge the Gentiles, and gether together yf dispersed of Israel, yet and the occasions of Iuda from the foure corners of y worlde. The hatred of Ephraim, and yf enmye of Iuda shall be cleere reered out. Ephraim shall teare no eed w^{ch} to Iu-da, and Iuda shall not hate Ephraim: but they both together shall lye vpon the shulders of the Philistynes toward the West, and spoyle them together that dwell toward the East. The Jewmynes and the Moabites shall see their hodes fall, and the Ammonites shall be obedient vnto them.

The LORDE also shall cleare the cunnes of the Egipcian see, and with a mightie w^{ch} he shall he life up his honde ouer Tyro, and shall synce his fewe streames and w^{ch} water go ouer drye shod. And thus shall he make a waye for his people, yf remayne from the Assyrians, like as it happened to yf racles, what tyme they departed out of clare his counsels amonge the people, and 6. tpe his name in remembrance, for his name is exalted. O synge praises vnto the LORDE, 7. for he doth greates things, as it is knowen in all the world. Crie out, and be glad, thou 8. that dwellest in Sion, for greates thy prynces are holy one of Israel.

The XIII. Chapter.

 7. and in my wrath I will call for sod, as cry-8. umpe in my glory.

 6. the captiue of the whole armye. As they
 7. had come not only out of farr countreys, 8. but also from the entres of the heauens: Let 9. the LORDE hymself with the ministers of 10. his maych, to destroye the whole lode. Mour-11. nethefear, for the daye of the LORDE is at 12. hande, and commeth as a destroyer frons 13. alonghe. Then shall all boundes be lerted

 16. rowe shall come v^p them, and they shall ha-17. ue payne, as a woman that traueleth with 18. lode. One shall euer be abasshed of ano-19. thers, their faces shall burne, like y^e flame.

1. In the daye of the LORDE shall come
 2. terrible, full of indignacion and wrath:
 3. to make the londe waste, and to roete out the 4. frons thereof. For the starres and planetes of 5. heuon shall not gene their lighte, the Sonne
 6. shall be quenched in the r^oysing, and the Mo-7. nye shall not shyne with his lighte. And I will 8. punish the wicketnesse of the world, & the 9. frons of the wiggoly, sayeth the LORDE.
 10. The y^e stomackes of the proude will I ra-11. de awaye, and will laye downe the boofing 12. of synners. I will make a man bearer the 13. frons of gold, and a man to be more w^ord, the 14. a g^reat w^ord of Ophir. Moreover, I will

1. shake the heauens, that the earth shall re-

1. Thus shall it goe w^o Babilon in the month 2. of the LORDE of hostes in y^e daye of his
 3. fearfull indignacion. And Babilon shall be
 4. as an burnt or chafed doo, and as a flocke 5. of our shepherde. Every man shall come to his
 6. owne people, & shee chone into his owne lon-7. de. Who so is founde alone, shall see the 8. row: And who so gather together, shall be de-9. troied w^o the swerde. Their children shall be
 10. slayne before their eyes, their houses spoyle-11. led, & their wyues rauyshed. For so, I shall 12. bringe v^p y^e L^oubes agaynst the, which shall 13. not regard synner, nor be desirous of golde.
 14. Then shall y^e y^ounge mens bones be knapped 15. asunder. The L^oubes shall haue no piere 16. w^ome w^o childe, & their faces shall not spare 17. y^e childe. And Babilon y^e glory of kyngdomes 18. and lertice of the Caldees hande shall be de-19. stroied, eue as God destroyed Sodom & Go-20. morra. It shall neuer be more inhabited, nei-21. ther shall there be any more dwellinge there, 22. from generation to generation.

1. The Arabians shall make no mo tentes 2. there, neither shall the shepardes make their
 3. folkes there any more: but wyde beastes 4. shallie there, & y^e houses shall be full of grea-5. te Oules. The striches shall dwell there, & the 6. spes shall daunse there: The litle Oules shall crie
 7. in the palaces, one a fere another, & Diablos 8. shall be in the pleasur persons. And as for 9. Babilons tyme, it is at hande, & hir dayes 10. maye not be longe absent.

The XIII. Chapter.

1. We y^e LORDE will be mercifull vnto Ja-2. cob, & will calle v^p Israel agayne, & set
 3. the in their owne lode. Strangers shall cle-
 4. ue vnto the, & get the to y^e house of Jacob.
 5. They shall take y^e people, & carrye the home 6. of the. And y^e horse of Israel shall haue the in 7. possession, for seruantes & maydes in y^e lode
 8. of y^e LORDE. They shall take those prisoners, 9. whose captiues they had bene afore: & rule 10. those, y^e had oppressed the. When y^e LORDE 11. now shall bringe y^e to rest, frons y^e traynle 12. waye, & harbe bondage: y^e thou wast laden 13. with all: then shalt thou see this mockage vpon 14. y^e Kinge of Babilon, & saye: howe happeneth 15. it y^e y^e oppiessour leauey of? It y^e golden

B See then the Syre trees and Cedres of Libanus cutt off at thy fall, sayenge: How thou art layde downe, there come no mo vp to destroye vs. Well also crumbleth at thy commynge. All mightie men and princes of the earth, steepe forth before the. All kynge of the earth stonde vp fro their seates, that they maye all (one after another) synge and speake vnto the. Art thou wounded also as we: art thou become like vnto vs: Thy pompe and thy pride is gone downe to hell: No thes shall be layde vnder the, & wormes shall be thy coveringe.

Luc. 10. c

Apg. 1. d

How art thou fallen from heauen (o Lucifer) thou saie morninge childe: hast thou gotten a fall euen to the grounde, thou that, not rich in soundings, dydest subdue the people: And yet thou thoughtest in thine hart: I will clymme vp in to heauen, and make my seate above the starres of God, I will see vpon the glorious mount toward the West, I will clymme vp above the cloudes, & will be like the highest of all. Therefore I saye, thou shalt be brought downe to the depe of hell. They that se the, shall narrowly loke vpon the, and thinke in them selues, sayenge: Is this the man, that brought all londes in feare, and made þe kingdomes a fraide: Is this he that made the wolde in a matter wast, & art layde the cities to the grounde, whiche let not his prisoners go home?

Eze. 11. c

How happeneth it, that the kynge of all people lie, eury one at home in his owne palace, with roothis, and thou art cast out of thy graue like a wilde bsaunch: like as dead mens rayment that are short therow with the swerde: as they that go downe to the stoma of the depe, as a dead carcase that is redden vnder see: and are not buried w them: Euen because that thou hast waisted thy lode, and destroyed thy people. For the generation of the wicked shall be without bond, for euer. There shall a waye be sought to destroye thur childe, for their fathers wickednes: they shall not come vp agayne to possesse the londe, and fill the wolde ful of castles and towres.

D I will stonde vp agaynst them (sayeth the LORD of hoosten) and root out þe name and generation of Babilon: (saith the LORD) & will geue it to the Oxers, and will make water pobbels of it. And I will swepe them out with the besome of destruction, sayeth the LORD of hoosten. The LORD of hoosten hath sworne an oath, sayenge: It shall come to passe as I haue decreimed: & shall be fulfilled as I haue deuyed. The Assirians shall be destroyed in my londe, and vpon my mountaine: as will I create them vnder foot. Who shall see his rocke shall come from vnder þe burthen shall be taken from youre shulders. This deuyce hath God taken theow the wolde woildor, and thus is his honde stretched out ouer all people. For yf the LORD of hoosten decrete a thinge, who maye dissuade it? And yf he stretch forth his honde, who wil holde it in agayne?

The same yere that yng 2. was byn, the God thicarned by Esay on this maner: to yse nor, thou whole Palestina) as though I rod of him I beareth the were broken: for out of þe serpentis roze, there shall waxe a farrice, & the frute shall be a fyne wine. But the poore shall fede of the best things, and the ymple shall dwell in his feite. Therefore wil I destroye w hunger, and it shall laye remnant. Mourne ye portes, wepe ye Gates. And feare thou, o rubole Palestina: for thou shalt come fro the North, a smoke, wher no man maye abyde. Who shall de mayntene the messenge of the Gemya: But the LORD establisheth Syon, the power of my people shall put their trust in him.

The XV. Chapter.

Lo is þe heuy burth vpon Moab: for Moab was destroyed (as me thought) in the nyght season: The wallis of Moab rifled in the nyght, & wanstled awaye: The wyte to Baith and Dibon in the his place: for to wepe: Moab bid mourne fro Ula & Medba: All their heades were colled, and their bearded shauen. In their streets as they gyded aboute with sacke cloth. In all the toppes of their houses & streets was there northinge, but mourninge and weeping. Bethon and Beale cried, that their wy was herde vnto Jahaz. The women of Moab bleared and cried for very sore of their myndes: Who is my her: for Moab saie. They fled vnto the cite of Soar, whiche is like a fayre fruteful bullocke, they went vnto Lubith, wepinge. The waye cometh to ronaim was ful of lamentacion for þe iure. The waters of Dimrim were dried vp, the grasse was withered, the herbes destroyed: what necessary grent thinge there was left. In like maner the thinge y was left of their substance, they carried it by waye to Araby. The cite went ouer the woldes of Moab: from Esclaim vnto Bar, wher there northinge but mourninge. The waters of Dimon were full of bloude, for y camie had sent thither a bonde of man, whiche as a lyon layde waite for the remanant of the londe, and for them y were escaped.

The xviij. Chapter.

Thus saith the lordes of the londe a mā of warte, from the rocke that lieth toward the deserte, vnto the hill of the daughter Sion: for as for the daughter of Moab, they were as it had bene a rymblyng byde, y is put out of hir nest, by the fry of Amon: which messanger sayde: gather youre comel, come toger her, couer vnto wch your shadome in the myddaye, as the night doth: hyde the chafed, & bewaie not the that are fled, let the perfect be: No shew dwel amonge you, be oure open refuge agaynst the desyre you: for the aduersary opprest vs, the robber widdoeth vs, & the tyrauntye dryeth vs out of oure londe. But yf tyme of youre kyngdome is ful of grace, therefore herbarfyereth vpon it w' faitfulnes: & reueth in the house of Dauid, knowe the thinge: & do his diligence to helpe shorthastinge to Equite and righte wysnes. As for Moab pnde (shal they answer) it is w' l'ndome. And all though they be exultant, proud, arrogant, & the mynbed: yet is ther strength no chynge like. And therfor Moab complayneth vnto Moab, where thowp they come all to mourne: & now yf they be s'nyteen, they take their deuoye bewebby the drye wall, and make their cōpl'nt.

The suburbs also of Hesbon were made wast, & the p'nces of the Gentyles bew'ed some yf vnyardes of Sibina, which were plantid with noble grapes, and spred into Jaser, and were vnto the ende of the londe, whose braunches stretchyd their selues south beyonde the ste. Therfore y mourne for Jaser, & for yf vnyardes of Sibina of grapes: I poured my teares vpon Hesbon & Eleale, for all their songes were l'nd do w'ne, in their harvest & gatheringe of their grapes: Myrth and there was gone out of yf fildes & vnyardes, in so much, that no man was glad n'c s'ngre. There wete no m'bar in to the wyne p'esse, their mery cheere was layde do w'ne. Wherfore my tely' b'ld: as it had bene a lute for Moab sake, & mye w'ndes m'ndes, for the drye wall like. For it happened thus also: whell Moab sh'ke: but she was turned up syde downe: she went up an hie in to her sanctuary to make hir prayer there, but she mighte not: & sh'ke. This is the deuoye, which the LORDE made in bonde at that tyme agaynst Moab. Turne to the ORDE sayeth thus: In three yere shal yf power of Moab w' their p'p'e (which is greate) be m'nsheo, like as yf burthē of an hyred seruaunte: And as for yf remanant of eban, they shalbe lesse then a fewe, and not rec'nd no ch' w'rt.

The xvij. Chapter.

This is the heuy burthē vpon Damascus: & Deholde, Damascus shal be nomore a cite, but an heape of s'broken stones. The cities of Aroer shalbe wast, The catel shal lie the re, & nomā shal stray the awaye. Ephraim shal no more be strōge, & Damascus shal no more be a kyngdome. And as for yf glory of yf remanant of yf Sirians, it shalbe as the glory of the childre of Israel, s'ith yf LORDS of booties. At that tyme also shal yf glory of Jacob be very p'odie, & his s'arins leane. It shal happē to the, as when one sheareth in harvest, which curcheth his handfull w' the sickle: & when one gathereth yf sheaves together in the valley, of Kephaim, that remaineth yet some eare ouer. Or as when one sheareth an elyete, which fyndeth burrowe or che of yre berre above in the coppe, and foure or fyue in the braunches. Thus the LORDE God of Israel h'ch spoken.

Then shal man couerte agayne vnto his maker, & turne his eyes to the holy one of Israel. And shal not turne to the heathens that are yf worke of his owne hōdes, neither shal he lōke vpon gr'uaues & ymages, which his fingers haue wrought. At the same tyme shal their stronge cities be desolate, like as were once yf s'ns'ke plowes & come, which they fou'ld, for feare of yf children of Israel.

So shalt thou (o Damascus) be desolate, because thou hast forgotten God yf Sanioner, & hast not called to remembrance yf rock of s'ns'ke, Wherfore thou hast also set a s'nye plāte, & grafed a strange braunch. In the daye when thou diddest plant it, it was grete, and gave soone the frute of the side: But in the daye of harvest, thou shalt reape an heape of sorowes & miseries.

Wo be to the multitude of much people, that rush in like the see, and to the heape of silte, that reune: ouer all like grete waters. For though so many people increafe as the flowing waters, and though they be armed, yet they fle farre of, and vanish awaye like the dust w'ch the wynde vpon an hill, and as the whylic wynde there to a storme. Though they be fearful at night, yet in the morninge it is gone w'ch the, This is their position, that do no harme, and be heritage of them, that robbe vs.

upon the earth: when the token shal be geuen upō the mountaynes, then loke vp: and when the doune bloweth, then herten eo. for thus hath yf LORDE sayde vnto me. I layde me downe, and pondred the matter in my houl, at the noone daye when it was hote:
and there fel a myslunge shower, like a dew, as it happeneth in barush. But the fruses, were not yet ripe cut of, and the grapes we re but yonge and grene. Then one inuice of the grapes with an hoke, yet he hewed dow ne also the bawes and the bannades, & vdy cast the awaye. And thus they were lay de wast, for the soules of the mountaynes, and so: yf bestes of the earth together. So yf the soules sat ther upon, and the bestes of the earth reynered there. Then shal the re be a patient brought vnto the LORDE of hoostes: vnto the harde folke, that feiul folke, and thas further is the this: yf despe shal they turne to y^e LORDE, and he also shal haue mercy vpon them, and saue them. Then shal there be a common waye out of Egipte into Assiria. The Assirians shal come in to Egipte, and the Egiptians in to Assiria. The Egiptians also and the Assirians shal both haue one Godd seruaice. Then shal Israel with honoure be the thirde to Egipte and Assir. And the LORDE of heouens shal bless them, sayenge: Blessed is my people of the Egiptians. Assir is the worke of my handes, but Israel is myne inheritance.

The xx. Chapter.

In the same year that Sardan came to Babel, where Sargé the kinge of the Assirians sent him, what tyme as he also be held Babel, & wine it of same season: The spirit the LORDE vnto Esay of sonne of Amos, sayenge: go and lowse of y^e sack cloeth thy thynges, and put of y^e shooes from thy feet. And so he byd, goinge naked & barefoot. Then sayde the LORDE: where as my seruants Esay goeth naked and barefoot, it is a token and signification of the thinge, that after the year shal come vpon Egipte and Ethiopia. For euen thus shal the kinge of the Assirians drie both yonge and olde, as prisoners naked and barefoot, out of Egipte and Ethiopia, And shal discomf of the land of Egipte. They shal be also at their witte, and ashamed one of another: the Egiptians of the Morians, and the Morians of the Egiptians, at the sight of the glory.

Moreover they that dwell in y^e Iles shal sytten the same daye: beholde, this is our hope, to whom we fled to seeke helpe, that we might be deliuered from the kinge of Assirians. How will we escape!

The xxj. Chapter.

In this is the heuy burthen of the waist: for a grieuous visio was shewed vnto me, like as when a storme of wynde and rayne rusheth in from the wyndierne, that terti the lande. Who so maye disceare (sayde the voyce) let him disceare: Who so maye dystroye, let him dystroye. O y^e Lam, besege it o Madad, for y^e wall still all their grounynges. With this, the raymes of my backe were fulfilled: for my paines came vpon me, as vpon a woman in hir travaile. When y^e herber, y^e was a bawle: and whé y^e loled vp, y^e was a stone. Myne here pained, y^e trembled in fear. The darcknesse made me fearfull vnto mynne.

In these things maketh y^e table (sayde this voyce) bape the woad, eate and drynke: y^e ye captaynes, take you to youre shyde, for thus the LORDE hath charged me: go thy waye, and set a watchman, that he maye tell what he seeth. And whé he had wayed diligently, he sawe two hostines: the one rydinge vpon an Asse, the other vpon a camel. And the lyon cried: LORDE, y^e haue sponde waytinge all the whole daye, and haue kepte my watch, all the night. With y^e came there one rydinge vpon a chare, which answered, and sayde: Babilonis fallen, he is turned vpon his downe, and all y^e ymages of hir goddes are smytten to y^e ground. B I sawe the Elamites take the quyners to care and to horse, and that the walles were bare from battelle. Thy goodly valleys were full of charrettes, the horse men made them soone to besage the gates. Then was the courtinge of Iuda put from thence, and then was sene the sege of the rymbic house. There shal ye see the ryses in the walles of

And ye shal make a pyt bet wytre & rmales. And ye shal make of the water of the olde pole, and nothinge regarde him, that toke it in hande and made it. And at the same tyme shal y^e LORDE of hoostes cal me to weepinge mourninge, to badnest and putinge on of sacke clothe. But they to fulfill their lust and wilfulnes, slaughter of, they byll shepe, they eate costly meate, & drynke wyne: let vs eate and drinke, tomorow we shal die. Heur the les whē the LORDE of hoostes herde of it, he sayde yee, y^e this wickednes of yours shalbe remiterd, ye must die for it. This hath y^e LORDE God of hoostes spoken.

C Thus sayeth the LORDE God of hoostes: Go in to the treasury unto Sobna the gouernour, and saye vnto him: What hast thou here to do? & from whence comest thou? that thou hast made the a grame here? For he had caused a costly tombe of stonc to be made for himself, and a place to lye in to be herous out of a rock. Beholde the LORDE shal cast the ouer by violence, he will deck the of another fashion, and put vpon the a strange clothe. He shal carie y^e in to a sacre cōtre, like a ball with his handes, There shal the thou die, there shal the pompe of thy charrettes haue an ende: thou wyllcme of the house of thy LORDE: I wil shute the ouer of thine office, and put the from thine estate.

I wil also laye the keye of Dauids heuie vpon his shulders, and yf he open, no man shal shute, and yf he do shute, no man shal open. I wil fasten him to a ncle in the place of the most hie faste fulnesse, and he shalbe vpon the glorious throne of his fathers house. They shal bā-

This shal come to pass, (saith the LORDE of hoostes) when the welle, y^e is fastened to the place of the highest faste fulnesse, shalbe pluckt of, and whē the weighte that hangeth vpon it, shal fall, in broken, and be wexen in pece. For the LORDE himself hath sayde it.

The xxxij. Chapter.

A heavy burthen vpon Titus. Mourne y^e shippes of Tharsis, for she is thowne downe to the grounde, and comen out of them, that are come from Citim. The Jewellers of the Ionides, the marchourmes of Sidon, and they that occupied the se (of whom thou wast ful some tyme) are a poynte. For by se were there frutes brought vnto the, and all maner of come by water. Thou wast the comon market of al people. Sidon is sory for it, yee and all y^e poynte of the see cōplaceth, and saith: O y^e I had neuer trauced with childe, that I had neuer borne eny, y^e I had neuer nonnyed bye, ner brought vp daughter. As soone as I se gyper percaueth it, yee the wite as for saye. Thus it self. Go ouer the see, I Mourne y^e dwell in the Jica. Jo noe that the glorious cite, which hath bene of longe antiquite, wherof many a dweller in ge farrre of, comen be her so greatly: Who hath deuyshid things vpon Titus the crowne of salaces, wherof marchalites and capteynes were the highest and principal of the worlde. Thus the LORDE of hoostes hath deuyshid, that he maye put downe al pompe, and minish all the glory of the worlde. Go thou wthy Ionide, (o thou daughter of the see) as men go ouer the water, and there is no gyble more.

Thus the LORDE that remoueth the kingdomes, and hath taken in hande agaynst that mightie Canaan (for it ont) hath stretched out his hande ouer the se, and sayde: From hence forth shalt thoumpe be no more myghte of thou daughter Sidon: for thou shalt be put downe of the earth. Seconde vp therfore, and go where the me me wil carie the, wherof thou shalt al haue no rest. Beholde: for thine ensample. The Caldees were soday a people, that no man was like them. As sur buyed they the se vpon his castles & palaces, and breake them downe agayne. And therfore comen (y^e shippes of the see) for youre power shalbe thowne downe.

After that, shal the lxx. yeares of Tyrus (euen as long as the tynges life was) be forgotten. And after lxx. yeares, it shal happen to Tyrus as with a harlot that playeth upon a late. Take chyldren (saie men to her) and go aboute the cite, then art yet an vnknowne wench, make passyme with dyverse valentes, wherby, thou mayest come in to a captiuitie. Thus shal it happen after lxx. yeares. The LORDE shal visit the cite of Tyrus, and it shal come agayne to hy Marchaundise, and shal occupie with al the Kingdomes that be in the world. But all hit occupie and wynnynge, shal be halowd vnto the L O R D E. For then shal they laye vp nothinge behinde them nor vpon theyr bes: but the marchaundise of Tyrus shal beloge vnto the ciuities of the LORDE, to the feedinge and sustenynge of the hūgry, and to the clothyng of the aged.

The xxxij. Chapter.

¶ The LORDE shal waite and plage the world, he shal make the face of the earth desolate, & scarce abode yf inhabitours therof. Then shal the priest be as the people, the master as the seruante, the dame like the mayde, the seller like the byer, he that leueth vpon vsury, like him yf he to woth vpon vsury, the creditor, as the detter. Wee miserably shal yf woulde be waisted & clement destroyed. For yf LORDE hath so determyned in himself. The earth shal be henge and decaye: The face off earth shal perish & fall awaie, the proude people off yf woulde shal come to naught, for yf earth is corrupte off her indwellece.

¶ For why they haue offended yf lawe, they wnght the ordināces, and made the euill things to remaine off none effecte. And therfore shal the curse denoure the earth: for they yf wretchednes, haue synned, wherfore they shal be henge also, and those that remaine, shal be very few. The swete wyne shal moune, the grapes shal be meale, and all yf haue bene meate in harte, shal fighe. The myssh of cabarettes shal be layde downe, the chere of the ioyful shal cease, and the pleasure off stutes shal be an ende: there shal no moie wyne be wrighte with myssh, the beer shal be bytter to the thar drinke it, the wicheb cities shal be broken downe, all houses shal be shur, that no man maye come in.

In the stretes shal there be lift vp a cribe because off wyne, all men chere shal wanish awaie, and all ioye of the earth shal passe. Desolacion shal remaie in the citie, and the gates shal be smytten with waistnesse. For it shal happen vnto all londes and to all people, like as when a mā smytten downe yf oluyes, yf are left vpon the tree: as if each a one grapes, when the wyne gatheringe is over. And those same that remaine, shal lift vp their voyce, and be glad, & shal magnifie the glory off the LORDE, euen from the ste, & praye in the name off the LORDE God off Israell, in the valeys and Iheros. We here songes sung to the praise off the righteous, fro al the endes off the world. Therfore I must speake: O my vnfruitfulness, off my pouerte, woe is me, all is ful off synners, which offende off purpose and malice. And therfore, (o thou that dwellest vpon the earth) there is at hande for the, feare, pye and snare. Who so escapeth the terrible crie, shal fall in to the pye. And yf he come out off the pye, he shal be take with the snare. For the wyndowes aboute shal be opened, and the foundation off the earth shal moue.

The earth shal geue a greete crack, it shal beue a iour ruine, and take an horrible fall. The earth shal shaker like a drunken man, and be take awaie like a tent. The myddes shal lie heuie vpon her, yf she must fall, and neuer rise vp agayne. Yet the same cyne shal the LORDE mystre together the hie booste aboute, and yf kynges off the world vpon the earth. These shal be coupled together as prisoners be, and shal be hur in one warde and punished innumerable daies. The Moone and the Sonne shal be ashamed, when the LORDE off hoostee shal rule them at Jerusalem vpon the mount Zion, before and with his excellent council.

The xxx. Chapter

¶ LORDE, thou art my God, I will praye in the, and magnifie yf name: for thou bringest marvelous things to passe, accordinge to thine olde counceles, truly and stedfastly. Thou makest off women, heapes off stone, and off head cities, broken walles: The palaces off the wicheb destroyed thou out off the cite, that the yf shal neuer be buyled agayne. Therfore the very rude people must magnifie the, and the cities off the cruel heathen must feare the. For thou art the poore mans helpe, a strenght for the needful in his needesite. Thou art a defence agaynst euil wecher, a shadowe agaynst the heet. But vnto the presumptuous, thou art like a stronge whyle roynde, that casteth downe the boostynge off the vngodly, thou takest men from heate with the shadowe off the clowde, thou cuttest off the bismaches off cyuantees. Moreover the LORDE off hoostee shal once prepare a staff for all people vpon the hill: 25 plenteous, costly, pleasant feast, of fat and welfed beastes, of sweet and most pure thin-ges. Upon the hill shal he take awaye the sy-de vale yf hagereth before yf face of al people, and the coveringe wherewith all Gentiles are covered. As for vearch, he shal venterly cōsume it. The LORDE God shal wipe awaye the teares from all faces, and take awaye the confusio of his people theowm yf whole worlde. For yf LORDE himself hath sayde it.

At the same tyme shal it be sayde: lo, this is oure God in whō we put oure trust, and he hath healed vs. This is the LORDE that we haue wayed for: Let vs reioyse & delire in his healyng. For the hōde of yf LORDE cea-seth vpon the hill. But I Iacob shal be discomfited vnder him, like as the strawe in roode vnder feete in a dōge hill. For he shal stretch out his hōdes vpon him, like as a swimmer dorch to fō ymme. And wth the power of his hōdes shal he cast downe his bie pompe.
As for his frōge holdes & his walles: he shal burne them, cast the downe, and fell the to the grounde in to dust.

The xxviij. Chapter.

When shal this songe be sung in the lon-de of Iuda: We haue a strōge arm, the walles & the ordina^{ce} shall kepe vs. Ope yf gates, yf the good peoplenaye go in, whiche laboureth for the treuth. And thou, which art the deere and hast the matter in hōde: shal praye for peace, eue the peace yf me hope for in the. Hope stil in the LORDE, for in the LORDE God is euery thinge strōge.
For why, it is he, yf bringeth lowe the bie mynde citadels, & casteth downe the piou-de ciues. & casteth the to the grounde, yee ene in to yf myre, yf the y maye be trode vnder the feete of the symple, & with the stepes of the poore. Thou (LORDE) castest the path of yf righteous, wherher it be right, wherher the waye of yf righteous be right. Therefore (LORDE) we haue a respecte vnto the waye of thy iudgements, thy name and thy remediance reioyse the soule. My soule lusteth after thee all the night lōge, & my mynde hai-steth frely to the. For as soone as thy iud-gme is knowne to the woulde, the the in a hicours of the earth learne rightwousnesse.

Wher the vngodly (though he haue receiued grace) yett lemeth he not rightwousnesse. but in that place where he is punished, he offen-deth, & feareth not the glory of the LORDE.
LORDE, they wil not se thine bie hōde, but they shal se it, and be confounded: whē thou shalte deuoure them with the wach of the people, and with the fyre of thine e-memie. But vnto vs (LORDE) piouyde re-pente: for thou werkest in vs all o woulde.

O LORDE oure God, though fōch loches haue domination vpon vs as knowe not the yet graue, that we maye only hope in the, and kepe thy name in remembraunce. The malicious T yrauntes whē they die, are the in list nou in the resurreccō, for they rest the and roovert the one, and despoyle all the memoryall of them. Agayne, thou increasest the people (LORDE), thou increasest the people, thou shalt be prayed and magnified in all yf endes of the woulde. The people that sete vnto the in trouble, the same aduersite whiche they complaine of vnto the a chastenynge before the. Lorde a wise wth childe (whē his crauyle cometh vpon her) is ashamed, cryeth and suffreth payne: Lorde so are we (LORDE) in thy sight.
We are with childe, we crauyle, & beare, & with the spere we bringe forth health, we rebowe the earth in vnderstōme, and the inhabitours of the woulde perishe not.

But as for thy dead men and ouns, that be departed, they are in list and resurreccō.
They lie in the earth, they wake, & chaunge for yf de wth a be wth flite & lighthe. But yf ple of the malicious T yrauntes is stille awake. So go now my people in to thy chāce, and shue the doore to the, and suffre now yf a wth clings of an eye, till the wach be over-pass. For behold, the LORDE wil go out of his habitacion, & vyfere the wiche-dnes of the that dwell vpon earth. He wil discover the bloude that she hath deuoured, she shal ouer hyde the, that she hath murdered.

The xxviij. Chapter.

When the LORDE wth his heare, grand and lōge stearde shal vyfere & ena-che, that in vincible serpete: eue I Iacob yf serpens, and shal slaye the Wallfish in yf.
At the same tyme shal me synge of the make it in due season. I watche baye a night, that no man breake in to it. I beare no

I greatly forgeringe all face of iudgement, shal be burne it vnto once wth thowme & be-lowe. O wth wth en force me to kepe or make pace. It wil come to this poynce, yf Iacob be, as vps the dayes of extreme heate. And therefore shal the iniquite of Iacob be thus mowed. And so shal he take awaye all yf frute of his synnes.

134 As for aulter stones, he shal make them all as stones beaten to powder: the Stones and Tribes shal nor stonde. The stronge cities shalbe desolate, and yf saye cities shal be like a wilderness. The carel shal sece and lie there, and the shepe shal care it vp. Their buruett shal be burnt, their nywes which were their bewtie when they came forth shal be defyled. For it is a people withoute understandinge, and therfore he yf created them, shal not fauoure them: and he yf made them, shal not be merciful to the. In yf tyme shal yf NORDE shute from yf swithe wynde of Euphrates, wynde yf ryues of Egipte. And there shal the children be choien out one by one. Then shal the greace troyner be blowen, so that those which haue le me destroyed in the Assirians londe, and those that be scattered abrode in Egipte: shal come yf worshippe the NORDE at Ierusalem, vps the holy mount.

The xxviiij. Chapter.

135 The word be to yf crowne of pryde, to yf tronck of Ephraim, and to the saydinge fleete to the glory of his ppe, yf is vps the toppe of the piteuous valley: which mē be ouer when w' wyne. Beholde, the strength and power of the NORDE shal breake in to the londe on euery syde, like a tempest of hale, that beareth downe stronge holdes, and lieth on a hounte, mighte and ouer flowinge water. And the proude crowne of the bounte Ephraim, shal be trode: vnder foot 136 And as for the saydinge flour, the glory of his pompe, which is vpon the toppe of the piteuous valley: it shal happen vnto him, as to an onymely frute before the haruest come. Which as soone as it is sene, is by and by deuoured, or euer it come well in a mans hande.

And then shal the NORDE of hoostes be a voyful crowne, and a glorious garlande vnto the remanens of his people. Vnto the lowly, he shal be a spere of iudgment, and vnto them that drye can aye the enemies from yf gues, he shal be a spere of strength. 137 But they go wronge by yf reason of wyne, they fall and stacher because of stryge bynne. Receiue the prestes and prophetes them 138 Thus so amill, they are broken with wyne, and made blamed thoro stronge drynke. They erre in semyge, and in iudgment they soyle. So all tables are so ful of womyte and flythynges, yf no place is cleare. What is he amonge them, yf can teach, instructe or asfourme the chyldre, which are wened from such or taken from the bestes: of any other fashion, then: Commaunde yf maye be commaunded, byd yf maye be byddē, so byd that maye be forbodde, kepe backe yf maye be keppe backe, here a litle, there a litle. And therfore the NORDE also shal spake to liping lippes and w' a straunge langage vnto this people, to whom he spake a fore of this manner: This shal bringe rest, yf one refreth the werry, ye this shal bringe rest. But they had no will to heare. And therfore the NORDE shal answerē their stubborne Commaunde yf maye be commaunded, byd yf maye be bydden, so byd yf maye be forbodde, kepe backe yf maye be keppe backe, here a litle, there a litle. That they maye go forth, fall backwarde, be husled, inared and taken. Wherefore beare the worde of sebe NORDE, ye mocters that rule the NORDES peepel, which is at Ierusalem. For ye cofore w' silens thuse: Tush, death yf we are at a poynte, it as for hell, we haue made a coddion wyth it: that though they breake out any fore plage, it shal not come vpon vs. For wyth dyceate wil we escape, and wyth mynutenes wil we defende of silens. Therfore thus saith the NORDE God: Beholde, I will laye a stone in Sion, a grace stone, a costly corner stone for a sure foundacion: yf who so putreth his trust in him, shal not be confuted. Righteousnes wil I set vp agayne in yf balaunce, and iudgment in the weightes. The chiefest of hale shal take awaye yf refuge, that ye haue to discause withal, and yf ouerflowing waters shal breake downe yf stryge helde of dissimulation. Thus the appoyntment that ye haue made w' death, shalbe donie a waye, and the coddion that ye made with hell, shal not stode. When the greace destrucce goeth thoro, it shal all to create you, Je shal take you quyte a waye before it. For it shal go forth early in the morninge, and coneyne only yf daye and yf nyght. And the very feare only shal reach you, when ye heare it. For yf bebbe shal be so narrowe yf a mā cā not lye vpon it. And the coveringe to small, that a mā maye not wynde him self tharin. For the NORDE shal steppe forth as he byd vpon the mount Perasim, and shal take on as he byd vps the vale of Gabdon: that he maye bringe forth his dryce, his strange dryce: and fulfil his woite, his wonderfull woite. And therfore make no mockes at it, that your captiuyte increaseth not: for I hane herbe the LORDE of hoostes saie, that there shal come a soden destruccion and plague upon the whole earth. Take heede, and heere are my voyce, poudre and mercie my wordes are. Seest thou the huf bonde man cuer in due season earnestly to his londe he moweth & ploweth his grounde to sowe. And when he hath made it playne, he sowerth it with seedes of comyn. He soweth yf wheate and Barley in their place, Milium and Rye also in their place. And yf he maye do it righte his God teacheth him and sheweth him. For he readech not the seedes out with a roayne, neither bringeth he the cart here and there out of the comyn, but he throt sheweth yf seedes out with a flake, and the comyn with a rod. As for the wheate, he gryndeth it to make bread thereof. In as much as he can not bringe it to passe wth treadinge out. For neither the bussinge that the cart wheles make, nor his beastes can grynde it. This and such like thinges come of the LORDE of hostes which is maruclous in counsel, and greace in righte dooynesse. The xxix. Chap.

David saie the Lord Ariel, thou site that let some feastes yett passe ouer: then shal Ariel be besieged, so that he shal be heuy and sorrowful, and shal be vnto me euen as a Lyon. For I wil laye siege to the rounde aboute, and kepe yf in with towern, and grate up by the agaynst yf. And thou shalt be brought lowe, and speake out of the earth, and thy wordes shal go humbly out of yf grounde. Thy voyce shal come out of the earth, like the voyce of a witch, and thy talkinge shal growe out of the myre. For the multitude of thine enemies shal be like mealdust. And the nombre of Tyranntes shal be as yf dust that the wynde taketh a waye sodenly.

Thou shalt be visited of the LORDE of hoostes with thondre, earth quake, and with a greace crack, with the whylye wynde, tempest, and with the flame of a conflagration mynne syde. But now the multitude of all the people, that went out agaynst Ariel: the whole hooste, the stronge holdes, and sieges like a beaume which appeareth in the night. It is like as when an hungrie man dreameth that he is eatynge, and when he awaketh, he hath nothinge like as when a thurstie man dreameth that he is drinkeinge, and when he awaketh, he is thyrste, and his soule vnpatient.

So is the multitude of all people, that mustre them seluen agaynst the hill of Sion. But ye shal be at your wittes ende, ye shal be abashed: ye shal sacke, and releeue and fro. Ye shal be drunken, but not of wyne. Ye shal fall, but not thorow drunkennesse. For the LORDE shal geue you an hard sypinge spere, and holde do wone your enemye: namely yo^r prophetes and deades which shulde se, them shal be couer. And all of you shal be vnto you, as the wordes that stonde in a sealed lecture, when one offereth it to a man that is learned, and sayeth vnto this lecture. The he answereth: It can me rederie, for it is short. But yf it be great, one yf is not learned, or sayde vnto him: take this lecture: Then sayeth he. I can not reder.

Therefore thus saiech the LORDE: In so much as this people disuermeth my me of their mouth, and pietyerth me highly with their lippes: what as there here neuerthe les is faite fro me, and the staie which they ouer vnto me, that came they to mensures and doctrynes: therefore wil I also reue vnto this people, a maruclous terrible and greate thinge. (Namely this:) I wil distroye the wisdom of their wyse, and the understandinge of their learned men shal perishe. Wo be vnto them that sette so depe, to be their ymaginacion be foue the LORDE, which rebearce their cocelles in yf barnes, and saie: who seich we, or who threugh us?

Which ymaginacion of yours is euen as when the potters claye taketh aduysment, as though the worke might saie to yf master: make me not, or as when an earthen vessel saiech of the potter: he vnderstondech not. Se ye not that it is hard by, that Libanus shal be turned in to Charuel, and that Charuel shal be taken as a wodde? Then shal deaf men vnderstonde the wordes of the bolde, and the eyes of the blynde shal se without anye cloude or darkness. The oppressed shal holde a merry fest in the LORDE, and the poore people shal reioyse in the holy one of Israell.

Then shal the furious people cease, and yf mockers shal be put awaye, and all they yf do wronge shal be roored out, such as labour to disuerm me vnto synne: and yf disuerm me, which reipoueth them in the gnat, & such as earne good perfonces to vaine. And therefore the LORDE (even the defender of Abraham) saiech thus vnto the house of Jacob: How shal not Jacob be ashamed, nor his face confounded, when he seich amonge his children: (whom my handes haue made) such as halowe: my name amonge them: that they maye sacrifice the holy one of Jacob, and feare the God of I nal: and that they which a foie tyme were of an erroneous spere, haue now understandinge, and y^e soday as before coude not speake, are now learned in my lawe.

The xxx. Chapter.

Woe be to those shewlinge children (said) with the LORDE which sette counsel, but not at me: which take a weelbe in honde, but not after my will: that they maye heare one syme upon another. They go down into Egipte, (and are me no counsel) to see helpe at the power of Pharao, and confidence in the shadowe of the Egiptian. But Pharao helpe shalbe your confusion, and the comforte in the Egiptians shadowe shalbe your owne shame. Your rulers haue bene at Zaan, and y^e messengers came into Zaan. But ye shal all be ashamed of the people y^e maye not helpe you, which shal not bringe you strength or comforte, but shame and confusion.

Your besties haue borne burthens vpon their backs towarde the Stone, choise of the waye that is full of perrell and trouble, because of the lyes and byones, of the Cockatrice and shewinge diagon. See the Mules bare your infirmitie, and the Camels broughe vnto creature upon their croked backs, vnto a people that can not helpe you. For the Egiptians helpe shalbe but vane and lost. Therefore I holde you also y^e your ryde shalbe haue an ende. Wherefore go heere, and write them this in their tables, and note it in a booke: that it maye remayne by their posterite, and be stil keppe. For it is an obstinate people, vnfaithful children, children that will not heare the lawe of the LORDE.

They barre saye to the prophetes: Iureo mixe your flures with nothinge, and vnto y^e Soythayers: tell us of nothinge for to come, but speake frendly wordes vnto vs, and preach vs false thinges. Trade out of the waye, go out of the path, turne the holy one of Israel from vs. Therefore thus saith the holy one of Israel: In as much as ye haue cast of your betwice, and comforted your selues with power and nymble, and put your confidence therein: therfore shal ye haue this myschefe agayne for your destruction and fall, like as an hie wall, that falleth because of some rife or blast, whose breakeing cometh suddenly.

And your destruction shalbe like as an trete pat, which breakech no man toucheth it, yett and breakech so sore, that a man shal not fynde a sheuer of it to steech fyre in, or to take water with all out of the pye. For the LORDE God, euen the holy one of Israel hath promised thus: With fasteing and rest shal ye be healed, In quietnesse and hope shal your strength lie. For trust standunge ye rigarde it not, but ye will saie: No, for thus are we cōsūmred to ste vpon bestes. (And therfore shall ye see) we must ryde vpon swift bestes, and therfore your persecutors shal yett be swifter. A thousand of you shal ste for one, or at the most for fyue, which do but only geue you euell wordes: until ye be desolace, as a ship cast vpon an hie mounceyne, and as a tree ten vpon an hill.

Net stonde th the LORDE wastinge, that he maye haue mercy vpon you, and listeth him self vpon, that he maye recreate you to grace. For the LORDE God is righteous. Sapies are all they that waite for him. For thus (o thou people of Sion and ye citizens of Jerusalem) shal ye neuer be in henyens, for doubtlesse he will haue mercy vpon the. As soone as he heareth the voyce of thy crye, he will helpe the. The LORDE geureth you the bred of aduerstie, and the water of trouble. But thine instructor fleth not farre from the, yf thine eyes loke vnto thine instructor, and thine eares hearken to his word, that crye: thafter the and saith: This is the waye, go thither, and turne nether to the right hande nor the left.

Mouer: yf ye destroye the sluer workers of youre Idols, and cast awaye the golden coopes that ye best them withall (as sylthymes) and saie, gett ye hence: The will be geure vnto the ste, that ye shal sowe in the earth, and geue you breade of the increase of the earth, so that all shalbe plenteous and abundant. Thy care all shal be sde in the brede medowes, yett thine ore and Mules that till the ground, shal eate good fodder, which is pougred wth y^e sanne. Goodly ryuers shal flowe out of all his mountaynes and hills. In the daye of the greate slaughter when the towres shal fall, the Mone shal shyne as the Sonne and y^e Sone shyme shalbe scut folde, and haue as much shyme, as in seven dayes beside.

In that daye shal the LORDE hymde vpon y^e buist sours of his people, and breake the woundes. He holde, the glory of the LORDE shal come from farre, his face shal burne, that no man shalbe able to adyde it, his lippes shal wagge for very indignacion, and his tunge shal be as a consuminge fyre. And the same rodde to which the LORDE wil sende upon him, shal moue the whole foundation: with noise of warre and basell, to destroye. Wo vnto them that goe downe in eoegypte for helpe, and trust in hoises, and comforte them selues in Charetes, because they be many, and in hoise me because they be lustie and stronge. But they regarde not the holy one of y^e Israel, and they aske no question at the LORDE. Where as he neuertheles playcely y^e wiled, and yet goeth noc from his wylde, whā he steppeth forth and taketh the victory agaynst the househelde of the frauwerde, and against the helpe of euel doers. Now the Egyprians are men, and not God, and their houses fleshy and mee spere. And as soone as the LORDE stretcheth out his hande, then shal the helper fall, and he that shal aide haue bene helpe, and shal altogether be destroyed. For thus hath the

The xxxij. Chapter.

Holdeth, the kinge shal gouerne after y^e rule of righteuousnes, and y^e puaices shal rule accordinge to the baluance of equitie. He shal be vnto me, as a defence for the widdow, and as a refuge for the tempest, like as an yner of tracer in a thurstie place, and y^e shadowe of a greate rock in a due lide. The eyes of the seinge shall not be dymme, and the eyes of chein that heare, shal rate diligētly be. The hurt of che vnwist, shal at anye knowledge, and the vnparfite cūge shal speake plainly and distinctly. Then shal the ygarde be no more called gentile, nor the challe spūerall. But the churche wil be churche mynbed, and his heart wil moue euel and playe the ypoente, and ymagineth howe to agaynst God, to make the hungry leane, and to withholde drinke from the churche: These are the perous weapons of the covetous, these be his shameful countaunce that he maye begyie the peore with dycerful workes, yee euen there as he shal be gosen sentence with the poore. But the libnall person ymagineth honeste thinges, and commeth vp with honesty.

W^o y^e rich and yble cities, hurten me my voyce. Ye careless cities, marke my wordes. After yeares and dayes shal ye be brought in feare, o ye careless cities. For y^e harveste shal be out, and the grapegarde ringe shal not come. O ye rich yble cities, ye that feare no parell, ye shal be abashed and remoued: when ye se the barenesse, the redness and preparinge to warre. Ye shal knead vps youre breste, because of the pleasaunt felde, and because of the fructfull wyngarde. My peoples felde shal bringe thornes and thistles, for in euery bush is y^e lupinusines, and in the cities, wilfulnes. The palaces also shal be broken, and the greates occupide cities be desolate. The towres and bulwarkes shal be becme to comes for comore, the pleasure of y^e limes shal be turned to pasture for shepe: Vnto chey me chey spere be poured vpon vs from above.

of flames and gooses, with the fatness of udders of the mothers. For the LORDE shall be of Ioumae. There shall the Drucomes fall with the Walles, (that is with the giants) and their londe shall be washed with bloude, & their grounde corrupted with fatnesse. Vnto the alle (o Sion) shall come the daye of the vengeance of God, and the ye are when as thyne owne iudgements shall be recompensed. Thy floudes shall be turned to prey, and thine earth to bymstone, & therewith shall the londe be kyndled, so that it shall not be quenched daye nor night: But smokes euermore, & so forth to lie wast. And no man shall go choise in thy londe for euer: But Pellicanes, Scowles, great Oules, and Rarions shall haue it in possession, & dwell therein.

For God shall spiede out the lyne of desolation upon it, & wepe it with the stones of empynea. When kinges are called vpon, they shall be gone, and all princes shall be awaye. The houses shall growe in their palaces, needes & chistles in their stronge holdes, & the diagens maye haue their pleasure therein, & that which maye be a court for Ustriches. There shall strange visures and monstrous beastes meete one another, & they will be kepte company together. There shall the lamia lye, & haue hir lodgings. There shall the hedghogge bylde, digge, be there at home, and bringe forth his yongroes. There shall the eyes come together, eche one to his like.

See there now the scripture of the LORDE & reade it. There shall none of these thinges be left out, there shall not one (ner sod) like) sayle for what his mouth commaundet, that same doth his sprece gather together (or fulfill) it. Vpon whom so euer I shall let, or to whom he deales hit with the line: those shall possess the inheritance from generation to generation, and dwell therein.

The xxxvii. Chapter.

Of the deserte & wilderness shall reioyse, & flourish as the lily. She shall flourish like a saunnet, and be ioyful, and euer be ioyne of ioyntea more and more. For y glory of libanus, the beate yof Charmel & Sar shall be reuen her. These shall knowe the honoure of the LORDE, and the magesty of our God. And therfore strength y weake hedes, and conforthe the feeble knees. Saye vnto them that are of a fearful hert: We of god there, and feare not. Beholde: your God cometh, to take vengeance & to reuenge God cometh his owne self, and will deliuer you. Then shall the eyes of the blinde be lightened, and the eares of the deaff opened. Then shall the lame man leape as an hart, & the dumme man singe like a lute.

In the wilderness also there shall wells springe, and floudes of water in the deserte. The drie grounde shall come to ryuer, and the thurstie to springes of water. Where as diagens dwelt a foue, there shall growe fere steures and grene rushes. There shall footpaches & comon streetes, this shall be called the holy waye. No vnclene person shall go thow way, for the LORDE himself shall go with the that waye, and the ignoraunt shall not erre. There shall be no yon, and no rushinge deaft shall come therein nor be there, but men shall go there fre and safe. And the reuemed of the LORDE shall conuerse, and come to Sion with thankes giuinge. & blaspheming: for they haue, pleasure & glouise shall be amonge them, And as for all foue and beaymes, it shall vanish awaye.

The xxxviii. Chapter.

In the xliij. yeare of kinge Eschias, came Senna cherib kinge of the Assirians downe, to laye siege vnto all the strong cities of Juda. And the kinge of the Assirians sent Rabfades from Lachis toward Jerusalem, agaynst kinge Eschias, with a gnew hooste, which set him by the conuoy of the our pole, in the waye that goeth thow y fullers lode. And so there came fight vnto him Eschias & Ischias some the president, Sobna the scribe, and Ioah Ischias some the Secretary.

And Rabfades sayde vnto them: Eschias, that the greace kinge of Assirians sayeth thus vnto him: What presumption is this, that thou trustest vnto: Thou thinkest (peradventure) that thou hast comend pover y noughe, to mayntene this warre: & els wher to trustest thou, that thou shalt be saved of fro me: lo, Thou purrest thy trust in a busken staffe of rebe: (I meane Eschias) which herbe leaneth vpon, it goeth in his bonde & smutcheth him thow. Eschias is Pharao the kinge of Egipt, vnto alle the that trust in him. But yf thou woldest saye to me: We trust in y LORDE our God: Thou godly god, in bede: whos he his places & antire: Eschias toke downe, and commaunded Juda and Jerusalem, to worshippe only the alder. A byde the, then hast made a conuicion with my lode the kinge of the Assirians, that he shall be generer the Eschias.

in hisse: Art thou able to see me there up? Singe now that thou canst not resist the power of the smallest pynteebae my LORDE hath, how darrest thou trust in y charreza and horse men of Egypce: Moreover, thinkest thou y I am come downe hither, to destroye this londe with out the LORDE: will: The LORDE sayde unto me: go downe in to that londe, that thou mayest destroye it.

Then sayde Eliachim, Sobna: Johahy was Rabshades: Speake to us thy seruantes (we praye the) in the Sirians language, for we understande it well: And speake not to win the Jewes tunge, lest the folcke heare, which lye upon the wall. Then answered Rabshades: Thinke ye, y the Kinge sent me to speake this only unto you: hath he written me to the also, that lie vpon the wall: that they be not compelled to eate their owne dung, and drinke their owne stalle with you?

And Rabshades stode stiff, & cried with a loud voyce in the Jewes tūge, and sayde: How take ye, how the greates Kinge of the Assiris gaweth you warryng. Thus saith the Kinge: Let not Eschias discease you, for he shal not be able to deluyer you. Moreover, let not Eschias comforte you in the LORDE, when he saith: The LORDE with out doubt shal defende vs, & shal not geue ouer this citie to the handes of the Kinge of the Assiris, belachim not. But thus saith the Kinge of Assiria: opeyne my sauoure, enclayne to me: So maye euery mā enioye his vnyardes and figgetrees, and drinke the water of his cistern: into the tyme that I come myself, & kinge you in to a londe, y is like youre owne: wher in is wheat and wyne, which is both so men with sode, and planted with vnyardes. Let not Eschias discease you, when he sayth unto you: the LORDE shal deluyer vs.

Whiche the goddes of the Gentiles kepe our mannes londe, from the power of the Kinge of the Assirians: Where is the God of hemeth & Arphad: Where is the God of Sephannaim: And who was able to defende Sennanai out of my honde: Or which of all the goddes of the isdes, hath deliuered the citie out of my power, so that the LORDE shuld deluyer Jerusalem from my honde: In which Eschias messengers helde the iungles, and answered not one worde: for the Kinge had charged them, that they shuld geue him none answer. So came Eliachim Elihas some the preside, Sobna the scribe, and Johahy sapha some the Secretery, unto Eschias with rente clothes, & tolde him the wordes of Rabshades.

The xxxvij. Chapter.
When Eschias herde that, he rente his clothes, & put on a sack cloth, & went in to the temple of the LORDE. But he sent Eliachim the preside, Sobna the scribe & the eldest priestes clothed in sack, unto the prophet Esay the forme of Amos, & they sayde unto him: Thus saith Eschias this is the daye of trouble, of plauge & of much ille as when a childe cometh to the byrth, but the woman hath no power to bringe it forth. The LORDE thy God (no doubt) hath well considered the wordes of Rabshades, whom his lorde y Kinge of the Assirians hath sent, to desire & blasphemethe luyng God, with such wordes, as the LORDE y God hath herde right well. And therefore list up y prayer for the remanent, that yet are left. So the seruantes of Kinge Eschias came to Esay.

And Esay gaue them this answer: Saie thus unto your lorde: thus saith the LORDE: Be not a frayde of the wordes that thou hast herde, wherwith the Kinge of Assirians seruantes haue blasphemed me. Whereof, I will cause a wynde go ouer him, as done as he heareth it, he shal go agayne in to his countrey, there will I destroye him with the swerde. Now when Rabshades returned, he founde y Kinge of Assiria layenge sege to Lobna, for he had understood, that he was departed from Lachis. For there came rumoure, y Taracha Kinge of Ethiopia was come south to warre agaynst him.

And when the Kinge of Assiria herde y, he sent other messengers to Kinge Eschias, with this commaundement. Saie thus to Eschias Kinge of Iuda: Let not thy God discease the, in whom thou hopest, & sayest: Jerusalem shal not be geue in to the handes of the Kinge of Assiria. For thou knowest well, how the Kinges of Assiria haue handled all the londes, that they haue subuerted, & happest thou to escape: Were the people of the Gentiles (whom my progenitors conquered) deliuered at any tyme to their gods? No namely, Bosan, Haran, Kegyph, & the childe of Eden, which dwell at Tbalassar. Where is the Kinge of Semath, & the Kinge of Arphad, & the Kinge of the cite Sephannaim, & Na & Aua: How when Eschias had receaued y letter of the messengers, & red it, he went up in to the house of the LORDE, & opened the letter before y LORDE. And Eschias prayed before the LORDE on this maner: O LORDE of hostes, thou God of Israel, which dwellest vpon Cherubim, Thou to ebid.) open thine eyes (o LORDE,) & se, and pend all the wordes of Sennacherib, which hath sent his embassage to blaspheme the, the living God. (Is to see (o LORDE) that the Kinges of Assiria haue conquered all King-yre. (To witte) & those were no goddes but the wordes of sinners wordes, of wodd or vnto Eschias, sayinge: Thus saith y LORD DE God of y Israel: Where as thou hast ma-cherib, this is the answer, that the LORDE hath geuen concerninge him: Despisid art thou, & mockid, o daughter of Sion, he hath shaken his heade at thee, o daughter of Jerusalem. But thou Sennacherib, whom hast thou defied, o blasphemer? And agaynst whō hast thou lifted vp thy voice, & exalted thy

If there be no water, I wil grane & drynke.
And as for waies of defence, I shal drie them up with the fire of myne booste. Yee (saith I) thou hast thos not herbe, what I haue taken in bonde, & brought to passe of olde tyme: That same wil I do now also: waist, destroye, & bringe the stronge cities vnto hea-pe of stonnes. For ether inhabitours shall elihelame men, bringe in feare & confounded.
They shalbe like the grasie & grene herbes in commandeth the LORDE: See thine house in daire, for thou must dye, and shalt not escape. Then Eschias turned his face warde the wall, & prayed vnto the LORDE, and sayde: Remember (o LORDE) that I haue walked before the in truth and a scharp heart, and haue done the thinge that is plasaunt to the. And Eschias wepte for. Then sayde God vnto Esay: Go and speake vnto

¶ And schol of the house of Juda as of a ped, shal come together, and the remnaunt shal take roze beneth, & bringe forth frute of house. For the escaped shal goe out of Iuda land, & the remnaunt from the mounte Sion.
And this shal the gelousy of the LORDE of hoopes bringe to passe. Then forth shal with the LORDE, concerninge the Kinge of the Assirians: he shall not come in to the cite, and shall shute no arrowe in to it, there shall no shalbe hurte it, neither shall they grane about it. The same waye that he came, shal he returne, and not come at this cite, saith the LORDE. And I wil repte and save the cite (saith he) for myne owne, & for my waunte De wds sake.

¶ Thus the angel went forth, and sum of the Assirians hooste, an cccc. thousand

So Sennacherib the Kinge of the Assirians ke up, and dwelt at Ierusalem. Afterwarde chaunfed, as he prayed in the Temple of Ierusalem his god, that Israhel and Saram his owne sonnes slewe him with the sworde, and fled in to the londe of Atrat. And Israhel had his sonne reigned after him.

The xxxviij. Chapter.

ter it ten degrees backward. So the Sonne turned ten degrees backward, the which was descended afore.

¶ Then Eschias prayde, which Eschias the sonne of Iuda wrote, when he had bene sicke, & was recovered.

The prophet Esay.

I thought I shulde haue gone to the gate of hell in my best age, and haue wanted the residue of my yeares.

I spake within my self: I shal neuer visite the LORD God in this life: I shal neuer see man, amonge the dwellers of the woulde. My age is folden vp together and eaten awaye fro me, like a sheperdes cotage: my life is breuen of, like as a weauer cutteth of his webbe.

Why I was yet eatinge my rest, he beamed me of: he made an ende of me in one daie.

I thought I woulde haue lyued vnto the moone, but he dashed my bones like a lyon, and made an ende of me in one daie.

Then chaured I like a swalowe, and like a crane, and mourned as a dove.

Uplift up myne eyes in to v' high: O LORD God, (saye I) violence is done vnto me, be thou mercie to me.

What shal I speake or say, et hat he maye see this doo? I maye lye out all my yeares, yet in the bytternesse of my life?

Verily LORD, men must lye in bytternesse, & all my life must I passe ouer therein: for thou rauest me vp, and wastest me. But lo, I wil be wel content with this bytternesse.

Neuer theles my comfortacion hath so pleased v', that thou wouldest not make an ende of my life, so that thou hast cast all my synnes aboute thy backe.

So shall pietye not the, death doth not magnifie the.

They that go downe into the graue, pietye neyther crush: but che luyning, yee che luyninge ad noulege the, like as I do this daie. The father recollect his children of thy faithfulness.

Deliver vs (O LORD) and we will synge praises in thy house, all the dayes of our life.

And Esay saye: make a playster of offygen, and laye it upon the sore, so shal it be whole. Then saide Eschias: O what a greace this is to vs, that I shal go vp in to the house of the LORD.

The xxxij. Chapter.

At the same tyme Merodach Balada, Balada's sonne kinge of Babilon, sent letters and presentes to Eschias. For he was recovered, hee that he had bene sick, & was recovered agayne. And Eschias was glad therof, & shewed them the commodities of his treasure: of syluer, of golde, of spices & reuerce, of precious stones, all that was in his gold rebbes and treasure houses. There was none one thinge in Eschias house, & for to row out all his kingdome, but he let them see it.

The came Esay the prophet to Kinge Eschias, and sayde vnto him: What haue v' men sayde, and from whence came they vnto the? Eschias answered: They came out of a farre countrie vnto me: out of Babilon. Esay sayde: what haue they looked vpon in thyne house? Eschias answered: All that is in myne house, haue they seene: and there is no thinge in my treasure, but I shewed it them.

Then sayde Esay vnto Eschias: Under stande the worde of the LORD of hostes, he holde, the tyme wil come, & that every thinge which is in thyne house, and all that thy progenitours haue layde vp in store vnto this daie, shal be caried to Babilon, and nochinge left behinde. This sayeth the LORD. See and parte of thy sonnes that shal come of the, and whom thou shalt get, shal be caried hence, and become euered chamberlaines in the kinge of Babilons court: Then sayde Eschias to Esay: How God prospereth his owne counsell, which thou hast tolde me. So sayde moouer: So that there be peace, and faithfulness in my tyme.

The xl. Chapter.

Behold of good there my people, be of good obdience (saith your God) Confore Jerusalem, and call her: that bitrawale is at an ende, that bit offence is pardoned, that she hath receaved of the LORD a bonde sufficient correction for all hir synnes.

A voyce crieth: prepare y' waye for the LORD in the wyldenesse, made straight y' path for our God in the deserte. Let all vallies be exalted, and euery mountayne and hill be layde lowe. What so is crooked, let it be made straight, and let the rough places be made playne sables. For the glory of the LORD shal appeare, & all flesh shall see, for why, y' mouth of the LORD hath spoken it.

The same voyce spake: How crieth. And I sayde: what shal I crie? Then spake it: that, all flesh is grasse, and that all the beestie the rof, is as the floure of the felde. When the grasie is withered, the floure falleth awaye. Euen so is the peopls as grasie, when the breath of the LORD bloweth vpon them, Neuerthelesse whether the grasie wither, or the floure fade awaye: Yet the worde of our God endureth for ever. Moreover the voyce crieth thus: Go vp vnto the hill (O Sion) upon that bringest good tidings, lift vp thy voyce with power, O thou preacher Jerusalem. Lift it up without feare, and say vnto the cities of Iuda: Despoile, your God!

Knowest thou not, hast thou not herbe, that the euerlastinge God, the LORDE which made all the coma of the earth, is neither weery nor fayne, and that his wisdom can not be comprehended: but that hee greaeth strength vnto the weery, and power vnto the fayne? Children are weery and fayne, and the strongest men fall: But vnto them that haue the LORDE before their eyes, shal strength be increased, Angles wynges shal growe vpon them: When theye runne, theye shal not fall: and when theye go, theye shal not be weery.

 set Myrtrees, olmes and hartshomes together. All this do I, & they altogether maye see and marcke, perceaue with their herres, & confesse that the honde of the LORDE ma-keth these chynge, and that the holyone of Israel bringeth them to passe. Stande at your canse (saith the LORDE) and bringe forth your strengest grounde, councelesh the kynge of Jacob. Let the goddesses come forth them selves, and shewe vs the chynge, & are poss. what they be: let the declare the vnto vs, & we maye take them to herre, and knowe them hereafter. Echer, let the shewe vs thynge for to come, and tel vs what shall be done hereafter: so shall we knowe, that they be god-des. Shewe somthinge, ether good or bad, for we doch knowlege yf same, & tel it out.

Beholde, ye goddesses are of naught, & yo makinge is of naught, but abhominacion hath chosen you. I haue made vpon you from the North, & he shall come. And another from the East, which shall call vpon my name, & shall come to the princes, as the power to his claye, & as yf Poeter teacheth vnto the myne. Who wolde yf a fouer? So wil we confesse & saye, that he is righteous. But there is none that sheweth or declareth any thinge, there is none also that heareth your wordes. Beholde, I will first graunte the of any wretch one worde. Lo, wretched are they & vayne, with the chynge also that they take in honde: yet wynde are they, and emptynes-se, with their ymages together.

The xliij. Chapter.
Behold now therefore, this is my seruant whom I will respect to my self my elect. In whom my soule shall be pacified. I will geue him my spere, that he maye shewe forth iudgment & equyte amonge the Gentiles. He shall not be an outcarye, ner an hie mynded person. His voyce shall not be herde in yf stretes. A blisfed rebe shall he not becarie, & the smokinge flax shall be not quenched: but saithfully & truly shall he geue iudgment. & I shall neither be outcarye ner hystie, that he maye restore righteounnesse vnto the earth: & the Gentiles also shall kepe his lawes. For thus saith God the LORDE vnto him: Euen he that made the heauens, and spied them aboue, & sit for the earth with his increafe: which geureth breath vnto the people that is in it, & to them that dwel therein: I the LORDE haue called yf in righteounnesse, & led the by the honde. Therefore wil I also defende the, & geue the for a covenant of the people, & to be the light of the Gentiles.
 That thou mayest open the eyes of the blinde, let out the prisoners, & them that sit in darknesse, out of the dongeon house. I my self, whose name is the LORDE, which geue my power to none ether, neither myne honoure to the goddesses: shewe you these newe thin-gings, and let you them or they come, for olde chynge also are come to passe.

Synge therefore vnto the LORDE, a newe songs of thankes geuyng, blowe out this pray-se vnto the ende of the world. They that be vpon the see, & all that is therein, praise him, the Yes & they that dwel in them. Let the wilderness with hir cities lift up hir voyce, the women also that be in Cebur. Let them be glad that sit vpon rockes of stone, and let them crye be name from the hie mountaynes ascribinge almightynes vnto the LORDE, & magnifyinge him amonge the Gentiles. The LORDE shall come forth as a gyauante, and take a stomache to him like a fishy man of warre. He shall roare and crye, and ouercome his enemies.

I haue longe holde my peace (saith the LORDE) shal I therefore be still, and kepe

The LORDE be merciful vnto them for his sighte: use these saies, that his worde might be magnified & praised. But it is a myghteous & wicked peop. and because I set by the, and loued the: I pilled all men for the, and deliuered vpon alle people for thy sake, that thou shuldest not feare, for I was with the. I wil bunge thy from the east, and gather the together from the west. I wil saye to the north: let go, and to the south, tpe not backe: But bunge my sonnes from sarr, and my daughter from the endes of the world: Tamey, all these that be called a fter my name: for I haue I created, fashioned, and made for myne honoure.

Bunge forth that people, whether they haue eyes or be blynde, deaf or haue eares. All nacions shal come in one, and be gathered in one people. But which amonge you: vnder goddes shal declare such thinges, tell vs what is to come: Let them bunge their wennesse, so shal they be ste: for the men shal heare it, and iay: it is truch. But I bunge you wittnesse (saith the LORDE) entertho that art my seruantes, whom I haue desent: to the intente that ye might be careful, and geue me faithfull credence: ye and to this side, that I an be, before whom there was neuer any God, and that there shall neuer a fter me. I am only the LORDE, and with me is there no Sauioure. I geue warnyng, I make whole, I teach you, that they shal be no straunge God amonge you. And this recorde must ye beare me yours (saith the LORDE) that I am God. And euen he am I from the begynnyng, and there is none, that can take any thinge of my honde. And what I do, can no man chaunge.

Thus saith the LORDE the holy one of Israel your redeemer: for your sake I will sende to Babilon, and bunge all the strongest of them from thence: Tamey, the Caldeas that be of their shippers: And I the LORDE your holy one which haue made Israel, and am your Kinge. Howen, thus saith the LORDE: When he that maketh a waye in the see, and a fote path in the mightie waters: which bunge forth the charaxes and hoists, the bootes and the power, that they maye fall a slepe and neuer rise, and be estrance, like as now is quenched.

as of water in the wilderness. The wilde beastes shal worshippe me: the dragon, and the scorpion. For I shall geue water in y^e wil-dernes, and streames in the deserte: that I may geue drinke to my people, whom I chose. This people haue I made for my self, and they shal shewe forth my praise. For thou Jacob woldest not call vpon me, but thou haddest an vniust towards me, o Israel.
Thou wast as menne thy yonge beastes for harmes sininges, neither didst thou honour me with thy sacrifices. Thou boughtest me no man price with thy money, neither pourest the fat of thy sacrifices vpon me. Howbeit I haue not bene chargeable vnto thee in offerings, neither greuous in Inceits.

But thou hast laden me with thy synnes, and waeried me with thy vngodly doings: Whereas I yet am euen he only, that for myne owne iustice sake do awaye thine offences, & forget thy synnes: so that I wil neuer thinke vpon them. Put me now in remembrance for we will reason together: & shewe what goodness haue I for thee, & make the quiete. Thy first father offended me, and thy rulers haue squared agaynst me. Therefore I reber sufered, or I leue the chiefest synners: I byd cuse Jacob, and gaue Israel into reprob.

The xliij. Chapter.

Obheare now, o Jacob my seruaunt, and Israel whom I haue chosen. For thus saith the LORDE, that made the, fashioned the, and helped he, euen from thy mothers wombe: Be not a frayde (o Jacob my seruaunt,) thou righteous, whom I haue chosen. For I shall poure water vpon the drie ground, and riuers vpon the thyrstie. I shal poure my spere vpon thi side, and myne encircas vpon thy stocke. They shal in one together, like as the grasse, and as the wallies by the waters side. One will saye: I am the LORDE: Another wil call ender the name of Jacob. The thirde shal subscribe with his honde vnto y^e LORDE, and geue him self vnder the name of Israel.

Moreover, thus hath the LORDE spokē:
I will be the kinge of Israel, and his a venger, y^e LORDE of hostes: I am the first, and the last, and without me is no God. For what is he, that ether man like me, which am that are past and fore come: yee and that without any feare or stoppe. For haue not I euer tolde you hyther to, & warned you? Ye can beare me recorde vpon selues. Is there any God excepte me? or any maker, that I shulde not knowe him?

Wherefor all caruers of Idols are but wa-yme, and their laboure lesse. They must beare recede them selues, that seeing they can nether see nor vnderstand: they shal be confounded. Who shulde now make a god, or fashion an Idol, that is profitable for nothinge? He holde all the fellowshipe of the world to be broughte to confusion. Let all the workma-sters of them come and stonde together from amonge men: they must be abolished and confounded one with another. The smithe taketh iron, and beateth it with hoes coles, and fashioneth it with hammer, & maketh it wth all the strength of his armes: See somtyme he is saynt for very hunger, and so thurstie, that he hath no more powere. The carpenter (or ymagē caruer) taketh me the ymbr, and spedeth forth his lynē: he maketh it with some colour: he playeth it, he ruleth it, he squared it, and maketh it after the ymagē of a man, and accordinge to the beuētie of a man: that it maye stonde in the temple.

Moreover, he goeth out to hewe downe cedre trees: he bringeth home elmes and oaks, and ether ymbr of the wood. O also the fyr trees which he planted himself, ad soch as the raze hath swelled, which wou-de sturue for me to burne. O this hee taketh and warreth himself with all: he maketh a fyr of it to lake hie. And a fier warde ma-keth a god there of, to honoure it: and an Idol, so knel before it. One pece he burneth in the fyr, with another he roseth flesh, that he maye eate: or ste he lye full, with the thir-de he warreth himself, and saith: Ah: I am well warmed, I haue bene at the fyr.
And of the residue, he maketh him a god, and an Idol for himself. He knelch before it, he worshippeth it, he prayeth vnto it, and saith: deliuer me, for thou art my god.

Yet men neither considre nor vnderstande, because their eyes are stopped, that they can not see: and their heares, that they can not perceiue. They pōndre not in their myndes: for they haue neither knowlege nor vnderstandinge: so thinke they: I haue bene one pece in the fyr, I haue bene died wth f, coles there of, I have roasted flesh withall, & eaten it: & hal I now of the residue make an abomination, and fall downe before a rotten peece of wood: The keepinge of dust, and foolishnesse of heere hath earned them a syde: soe haue none of them can haue a fre conscience to thinke: maye noe Jerre?

Cast I out this (o Jacob and Israell) for thou art my seruante. I have made the, that thou mightest serue me. O Israell, forget me not. As for thyne offences, I will purge them awaye like the cloudes, and thy synnes as the mist. Turne yf agayne unto me, & I will deliuer yf.

Be gladd ye heauens, whom the LORDE hath made, les all yf is here beneth vpon the earth, beioysfull. Reioyse ye mountaynes & wooddes, with all the trees that are in you: for yf LORDE shall redeme Jacob, & shewe his glory vpon Israell. For thus saith the LORDE thy redemer, euen he that fashioned the from thy mothers wombe: I am the LORDE, which do all thinges myselfe alone. I only haue spied out the heauens, and I only haue layde the foundation of the earth. I be stroye the cedars of wooddes, and make the Soothsayers go wronge. As for the wise, I turne them backward, and make their counnyng foolshynesse.

But I see vpon the purpose of my seruantes, and fulfill the counsell of my messengers. I saye to Ierusalem: turne agayne: And to the cities of Iuda, be ye buyded agayne: and I repaie their decayed places. I saye to the groundes: be drie. And I drie vp thy water founteynes. I saye to Citrus: thou art myne hyrd man, soe that he shall fulfill all thinges after my will. I saye to Ierusalem: be thou buyded, and to the temple: be thou fast grounded.

The xlv. Chapter.

Thus saith the LORDE vnto Citrus his annoynted, whom he leddech by yf right hē: be that the people maye fall downe before him: I will lowe the gyble of thynges, yf they shall open the gates be fore thy face, and not to shut their doores. I will go before the, and make the croked straighte. I shall breake the biesin doore, & burst the yron barres, I shall geue the the hydraesure, & the thinge which is secretly kepte: that thou mayest knowe, yf I the God of Israell haue called the by thy name: and hee for Jacob my seruante sake, & for Israell my chesen. For I called the by yf name, and ordered the, as euer thou knewest me: Euen I the LORDE, before whom there is none other, for w out me there is no God: I haue prepared the, as euer thou knewest me: that it might be knowne from the riy-ge of the Sonne to the goinge downe of the same, that all is nothinge without me. For I saye the LORDE, & there is no none. For I created the light and darcknes, I make peace and trouble: Noe enen I the LORDE do all these thinges. The heauens above shall bepepe downe, and the cloudes shall rayne righteousnes. The earth shall open it self, and bringe forth health, and thereby shall righteousnes flourish. Euen I the LORDE shall bringe it to passe.

Who be vnto him that chydeth w him. For, the porter he with the porter. Saith yf claye to the porter: What makest thou: w yf woike sturth for nothyng: Who be vnto him, yf saith to his father: why begetteth thou: And to his mother: why bearest thou: Thus saith the LORDE, when the holy one & maide of Israell: Are me of thinges for to come, concerninge my sonnes: and put me in vnto haunce, as touchinge the moortes of my bē: I haue made the earth, and created all vpon it. With my hondes haue I spard fūch heauen, and geuen a commandment for all the hoofe therof: I shall make him up with righteousness, and ordie all his wayes. He shall bysloe my care, & let out my pūdour: that neither for gyftes nor rewardes, saith the LORDE of hoostes.

The LORDE hath sayde mo more: The occupiers of Egipte, the marchantes of the Mooryns and Sabees, shall come vnto the with tribute, they shall be chine, they shall serue me, and go with cherynes vpon their sea. They shall fall downe before the, and make supplication vnto the. For God w out wōd there is none other God: shall be with the. O how pious founde art thou o God, then God: Saviour of Israell: Confounde be ye, and put to dishonour: go hence together with shame, all ye that be worshippers of ydols. But I shall be saved in the LORDE, which is the everlastinge saluaciō: They shall not come to the manner confusion, wōd without end.

For thus saith the LORDE: euen he that created heauen, the God yf made the earth: that fashioned it, and set it forth: I haue not made it for naughte, but I made it to be inhabited: Euen I the LORDE, with out whom there is none other. I haue not spoken falsely, neither in darck places of the earth. For not for naughte the: I saye vnto the side of Jacob: like me. The xij. Chapter.

arken vnto me, o house of Jacob, and all ye that remayne yet of the housholde of Israel, whom I haue borne from youre mothers wombe, and broughte you up from yor birth, all ye were growen: I which shall beare you vnto youre last age: I haue made you, I will also nourish you, beare you and saue you. Whom will ye make me like, in fashion y ymage, that I maye be like him: or so els: no douer will take out silver and golde out of youre purses, and weye it, and hyre a goldsmith to make a god of it, that men maye finde douer and worshippe it. Yet must he breake on mens shuldres and bones, and sein his place, that he maye stonde and not moue. Alas that men shoulde crye vnto him, which geueth no answer: and deluyere thee the man that calleth vpon him, from his trouble.

Considre this will, and be ashamed. Go into youre owne sinnes: O ye rannagates. Wherefore the LORD God with his spirit hath sent me, And thus saith the LORD thine avenge, the holy one of Israel: I am the LORD thy God, which teach the profitable thinges, and lede y^e the waye, that thou shouldst go. If thou wilt not regard me, my commandement, thy w^{ch} waye shall be as the water streame: & thy righteousness as the waxe flowing in the see. Thy side shall ite as the s^{er}uice in the see, & the frute of thy labour, like the grauel stones thereof: Thy name shall not be reued out, nor destroyed before me. Ye shall go a waye from Babilon, and scape the Caldees with a merry voyce. Thou shalt be spoken of, declared abroad, & go forth vnto the ende of the wolde: so that I shall saye: The LORD hath defended his seruante Jacob, that they suffered no thurst, wh^{ch} they traauayled in the w^{ch} desert. He clea^{re} the rocks a founteyn, and the water gusheth out. As for the vngodly, they haue no paine, saith the LORD.

MESSIAS

The xlix. Chapter.

Herken vnto me, ye Iles, and take heed ye people from farre: The LORD hath called me from my birth, and made me a conu^{er} name for my mothers worbe: he hath made my mouth like a sharpe sworde, vnder y^e dome of his honde hath he defended me, and hyd me in his quoyre, as a good arrowe, and sayde vnto me: Thou art my seruante. I wil be honoured in thee. Then answered I: I shall ke my laboure, I shall spende my strength in vayne. Therefore I wil committe my cause, and my worke vnto the LORD my God. And now saith the LORD, wh^{ch} he hath fashioned me from my mothers wombe, to be his seruante, that I maye bunge I eb agayne unto him : howbeit, Israel will not be gathered unto hi agayne. In whose sight I am graue, in which also is my LORD, my God and my strength. Let it be but a final thing, that thou art my seruant, to set vp the birchwood of Jacob, to restore the desolation of Israel: yf I make the not also the sight of the Gentiles, that thou mayest be my health unto the ende of the world.

Nowe thus saith the LORD the avenge and holy one of Israel, because of the abominable and despisinge amonge the Gentiles, concerninge the seruant of all them of heaual: Kings and princes shal feare, and stand and weep, because of the LORD that he is faithfull: and because of it be holy one of Israel, which hath chosen the.

And thus saith the LORD: In the year appointed wil I be present with the. And in the houre of wrath wil I helpe the, & deliuer the. I wil make the a pledge for y people: y thou shalt helpe vpon the earth agayne, and chalenge agayne the scattered heretofore: that thou mayest saye to y prisoners go forth, & to them that are in darthnesse: come into the light, that they maye see in the birches, & greene luyng in all places. There shal neither hunger nor thirste, heate nor Sonne burne them. For be that saueueth them, shal feede them, and geue them drink of the sponge of well. I wil make wayes vpon all my mountaynes, and my fore partes shal be exalted. And beholde, they shal come from sarrile, seme from the north and west, some from the south. Reioyse ye heathens, and singe praises: thou earth: talke of ioye ye hills, for God wil comfort his people: he will haue mercy vpon his, y be in terrible.

Then shal Sion saye: God hath forsaken me, and the LORD hath forgotten me. Doth I not forsake the childe of his wombe, ad the sonne whos he hath borne: And though she do singe, ye wil not I forget the. Beholde, I haue written the vp vpon my handes, thy walls are care in my sight. They that haue broken the dome, shal make hast to buyde the vpon agayne: and they that made the wast shal dwell in the. I life vpon thine eyes, and lift aboute the: all these shal gather them together, and come to the. As truly as I lyue saith the LORD: when shal I put them all vpon the, as an apparell, and gyde the to, as a bynde both in Ierusalem. As for thy ioues, they shal be desolate, marked & destroyed: it shal be to narrow for the, that shal dwell in it. And they y wolde deuoure the, shal be starved. Then the childe whos y bare shal bringe forth unto y, shal saye in thine care: this place is to narrow for me: yete together, y I maye haue roume. Then shal thou thinke by thy self: Who hath begotten me these: I saye I am bare & albe, a captiue & an outcast: And who hath nourished the vp for me: I am desolate & alone, but fro whence come these?

And therfor: thus saith the LORD God: Beholde, I will stretch out myne hande to the Gentiles, and set vp my token to the people. They shal bringe the by somes in their lappes, & carie thy daughters vnto y vpon their shuldres. For Kinges shal be thy nursinge fathers, and Quenes shal be thy nursinge mothers. They shal hal before the wicheir faces shal vpon the earth, and lick vp the dust of thy face: that thou mayest knowe, howe that I am the LORD. And who so puttest his trust in me, shal not be confounded. Who spoyleth the game of his prey: or who catcheth the prisoner from the mightie: And therfore thus standeth the LORD: The prisoners shal be taken from the giants, and the spoyle deliuered from the violence: for I wil maynteyne thy cause agaynst thine aduersaries, and saue thy somes. And wil sethine enemies with their owne flesh, and make the drinke of their owne blood, as of strete wyne. And all flesh shal knowe (o Jacob) that I am the LORD thy Sauiour, and stronge avenge. Chap. 1.

Thus saith the LORD: Where is the bill of y mothers deuorment, that I sent vnto her: or who is the vnter, to whos I shalde you: Beholde, for your owne offences are yete solde: because of youre transgression, is youre mother forsake. For why wolde no man receaue me, when I came: & when I called, no man gaue me answer. Was my hode cleane swete of: that it mighte not helpe: or, had I not power to deliuer. So, as a woide I build vpon the sea, & of water floudes I made the lode: so y fount of water, the fish corruppe and die of thirste. So for heauen, I clooth it with darthnesse, and put a sack vpon it.

The LORD: God hath geue me a wellerued euge, so that I can comforte them which are troubled, yete y in tyme of sarrile. He walketh in myne care vpon yynes in y mourninge: as y scolemasters do y I mighte herbe. The LORD God hath opened myne care, therfore can I not saye woe, nor wdiuane myself, but I offer my backe vnto y smytere, and my cheere to the nyppers. I tume not my face fro shame ad spicinge, for the LORD God had path me, therfore shal I not be confounded. I haue hardened my face like a ston.

stone, for I am sure, that I shall not come to confusion. Myne aduocate speaketh for me, who reuethen go with me to lawe: Let vs sto be one agaynst another: yf there be any that wil reason with me, let him come here forth to me. Beholde, the LORDE God standeth by me, what is he that can condemne me? lo, they shall be all like as an olde cloth, which yf moches shall eate vp.

Psalm. 101

C Therefore who so feareth the LORDE among you, let him heare the voyce of his seruant. Who so walketh in darkness, and light shyneth vpon him, let him hope in the LORDE, and holde him by his God. But take heed, ye haue all synned a fyre, and gyrded your selues with the flame: Ye walke in the glistrike of youre owne fyre, and in the flame that ye haue kyndled. This cometh vnto you fro my honde, namely, yf ye shall slepe in sorowe.

The li. Chapter.

2 Herken vnto me, ye that holde of righteousness, ye that fele the LORDE. Take heed vnto the stone, wherout ye are hewen, and to the grate wherout ye are digged. Confide in his nam your father, & Sara that bare you: how that I called him alone, & prophesied him well: & encreasid him: he was the LORDE comforted Sids, and repayed all his decaye: makinge hit desire as a Paradise, and hit wilderness as the garden of the LORDE. My wrath and ioye was there, thankes geuyng and yf voyce of praise. haue respect vnto me then (omy people) and laye thine care vnto me: for a lawe, and an ordinance shall go forth fro me, to lighten the Gentiles. It is hard by, that my health & my righteousness shall go forth, and the people shall be orderd with myne arme.

2 The Iudoes (that is of Gentiles) shall hope in me, and put their trust in myne arme. Lift vp youre eyes toward heaue, and loke vpon the earth beneath. For the heauens shall vanish awaye like smoke, and the earth shall teare like a clothe, & they that dwell therein, shall perish in like manner. But my health endureth for euer, and my righteousness shall not cease. Therefore herken vnto me, ye haue pleasure in righteousness, thou people that bearest my name in thine herte. Feare not the curse of men, be not a frayde of their blasphemies & reuylnges: for women & mothes shall eat the vp like clothe & woll. But my righteousness shall endure for euer, & my sauyng health from generation to generation.

Wake up, wake up, & be stronge: O thou arme of the LORDE, wake vp, lyke as in trymes past, euer and since the worlde began. Art not thou he, that hast wounded the proud lacifer, and broken the wings in pieces: Art not thou euen he, which hast broken vp the depe of the see, which hast made drye the see grounde, that the deluyered mighte go throughe? That the redemed of the LORDE, which turned agayne, mighte com with ioye vnto Sids, there to embrace fouer: That mynch and gladnesse mighte be with them: that sorowe & mo mighte flye from the Ier J. I am euen he, that in all thes dayes graunt you consolacion. What art thou then, that fearest a mortall ma, yf childe of man, which goeth awaye as doeth the floure: And ingreest the LORDE that made the earth, and out the heauens, and layde the foundations of the earth. But thou art euer a frayde in the sighte of thine oppresseur, which is vnto doo harme: Where is the weath of the oppresseur? He cometh on fast, it maye haist to apere: It shall not perish, yf it shal be not be able to destroye, neither shall his forsaite of nourishinge. I am the LORDE God, that make the see to be full, and to rage: whose name is the LORDE of hostes. I shall put my worde also in thy mouth, and sende the with the turninge of my mouth: that thou maye set plame the heauens, and bryn the foundations of the earth, and saye vnto Sids: thou art my people.

Awake, awake, and stonde vpon Ierusalem, thou that from the honde of the LORDE, hast broken out the cuppe of his wrath: thou that hast sipped of, and sucked out the stombing cuppe to the become, for amonge all the sonnes whom thou hast begotten, there is not one that maye holde the vnto: and not one to lede the by the honde, of all the sonnes that thou hast nourished. Both the things are happened vnto the, but thou soist for it: Woe, destruction, mourning, hunger & sword: but who hath comforted the? Thy sonnes lie com forles at yf haue of our strete like a talle wenyson, & are ful of myrtable weath of yf LORDE, & punishment of the God. And therefore thou miserable & troublid (humble it not w' myne) I care this: Turne thy LORDE: thy LORDE & God, yf benefiter of his people. Beholde, I will take yf the bigge cuppe out of thy hnde, and yf cuppe of the wregges of my wrath: yf fro hence forth thou shalt neuer drinke it more, & wil put in their hnde that trouble the: which haue fallen to thy soule: stoupe downe, that we maye go over the: make thy hoby case with the grounde, and as the fette to go vpon.

The liij. Chapter.

Who shall vp, take by strength unto the put on thine harness of armour o' Ierusalem, thou cite of the holy one. For from this tyme forth, there shall no vncircumcised nor vncleane person come in the. Whate hee shal see the, shall see it from the toppe, o' Ierusalem. Pluck out thy meate from the bosome, o' thou captiue of Sion. For thus saith the LORD: He that shall see for naught, therefore shall ye beredeved as well without any money.

For thus hath the LORD sayde: My people were downe afore tyme in to Egypte, the it to be straungers. Afterwarde byd the king of the Assyrians oppresse the, for naught.
 And now what profit is it to me (saith the LORD) if my people in frely caried awaye, z brought in to be yemes by their rulers, and my name euer still blasphemed? saith the LORD. But y' my people maye knowe my name, I my self will speake in that daye. We haue here an 'J. O how benefull are the seruice of the Ambassador, y' bringeth the messages fro the mountaynes, z proclaimeth peaces by which the good tydings, z preacheth health, z saith vnto Sion: Thy God is the Kinge. Thy watchmen shall lift vp their voyce, w' loude voyce shall they preach of him: for they shall see his presence, whi the LORD shall come againe to Sion.

Be glad, o' thou desolate Ierusalem, z reioyce together: for the LORD will restore his people, he will be ioyer Ierusalem. The LORD will make bare his holy arme, z shewe it forth in the sight of all the Gentiles, z all the endes of the earth shall see the sauynge health of our God. Awaye, awaye, get you out fro then a z touch no vncleane thinge. Go out from amonge you, And be cleane, yet that beareth the will of the LORD. But ye shall not go our with steeles, nor make haile as they that sle awaye: for the LORD shall go before you, and the God of Israel shall kepe the watch.

Beholde, my seruant shall deale mysfully, therefore shall he be demagnified, exalted z greatly honoured. Like as y' multitude shall re-vild vpon him, because his face shall be deformed z not as a mans face, z his beuete likened man: Euen so shall hee multitude of the Gentiles loke vnto him, z y' Kinges shall shew their mouths before him. For they y' haue not bene to be of him, shall see him: and they y' haue not heerd of him, shall beholde him.

before the LORD: like as a bruisid, z as a rore in a drie grounde. Hee shall haue neither den-ty nor fauours. When we loke vpon him, there shall be no saynesse: we shall haue no lust vnto him. Hee shall be the most simple z des-pyrd of all, which yet hath good experiance of sorrowe z infirmities. We shall reben him so simple z so wyle, that we shall hyde our faces fro him. Howbeit of a treachy hee only taketh awaye our infirmities, z beareth our payne: yet we shall iudge him, as though he were plagued and cast downe of God: where as hee (not with standing) shall be woful for our offences, z smytten for our wickednesse.
 For the payne of our punishment shall laye vpon him, z w' his stripes shall we be healed.

As for vs, we go all astraye like shepe, e-uery one turneth his owne waye. But thro-row him, the LORD pardoneth all of synnes, hee shall be payned z troubled, ad shall not ope his mouth, hee shall be led as a shepe to be slayne, yet shall hee be as still as a lambe before the shearer, z not open his mouth. Hee shall be had awaye, his cause not herde, z w' out any iudgment: whose generation yet no man maye nombre, when hee shall be cut of fro the grounde of the lyvinge: Which puny-shment shall go vpon him, for the transgression of my people. His grauee shall be geue him with the cōdemned, z his cruceifige with the charyns, where as hee shall neuer violence nor wright, neither hath there bene any disceartfulnesse in his mouth.

Yet hath it pleased y' LORD to smyte him with infirmities, that when hee had made his soule an offeringe for synne, hee might see a long lastynge se. And this deuice of the LORD shall prosper in his honde. With tray-le and labours of his soule, shall hee opene greate riches. My righteous seruant shall reuise his wisdome iustifie z be ioyer the multtude, for hee shall beare awaye their synnes.
 Therefore will I geue him the multitude for his parte, z he shall beuide the stronge spoyle because hee shall geue our his soule to death, z shall be reuored amonge the transgressours, which neuertheles shall take awaye y' synnes of the multitude, and make intercession for the mysdoers.

their symes. For they seeke me daye, and wil knowe my wayes, euen as it were a people that dyd right, and had not forsaken the statutes of their God. They are gone with me concerninge right iudgement, and wil please at the last wth their God. When thou shalt see (saye they) and thou shalt it not. We put our lues to straitnesse, and thou regardest it not.

23 Beholde, when ye fast, your last remaineth still: for ye do no lesse violence to your detere: lo, ye fast to strife and debate, and to sinne him with your fist, that speaketh vnto you. Ye fast not (as some saye) that ye maye be heard of above. They seeke this fast pleasech me, that a man shalbe chasten himself for a daye, and to weyche his head as abundance like an hoke in an hairy cloth, and to lye upon the earth: Shoulde that be called fasting, or a daye of pleasure? THE LORD: 24 This fasting pleasech not me, all that tyme that thou loose him out of bondage, that is in thy dwelling: that thou breake the oath of wicked bargaynes, that thou let the oppressed go free, and take from them all manner of burthen. It pleasech not me, till thou deale thy hand to the hungry, and bringe the poore fatherlesse home in to thy house, when thou seest the naked that thou cover him, and hyde not thy face fro thine owne flesh. Then shal thy light breake forth as the morninge, and thy healeth flourish right shortly: thy righteousnesse shal go before the, and thy glory of the LORD shal embrace the.

25 Then if thou callest, the LORD shal answer thee: if thou criest, he shal saye: here I am. See if thou layest away thy burthens, and holdest thy synners, and ceaseest from blasphemous talings, if thou hast compassion vpon the hungry, and repressist the troubled soule: Then shal thy light springe out in the darknesse, and thy darknesse shal be as the noone daye. The LORD shal eare thee, and satisfie the desire of thine heart, and fill thy bones with marrow. Thou shalt be like a freshwatred garden, and like the founteyne of water, that neuer leaureth runninge. Then the places that haue euer bene waste, shalbe buylded of the: there shalt thou laye a foundation for many tymes. Thou shalt be called the maker vp of hedgges, and of buylder againe of the wayes of the Sabbath.

26 See if thou turne thy free from the Sabbath, so that thou do not the thinge which pleasech thy self in my holy daye: then shalt thou be called vnto the pleasant, holy and glorious Sabbath of the LORD, where thou shalt be in honor: so if thou do not a farthe come ymaginacion, neither seeke thine owne will, nor speake thine owne wordes. They shal theu haue pleasure in the LORD, which shal eare the above the earth, and see the heritage of Jacob thy father: for the LORD hath opened his mouth for thee.

The lix. Chap.

1 Beholde, the LORDS bonde is now broken: his ear is cam nothelp, neither is his eare so stopped that it maye not heare. But ye synners haue separated you from the God, and synnes hyde his face from you, he heareth you not. For ye haue been defyled with bloude, and ye synners are righteconfesse: ye lippen speake lyes, and ye longe stretch out wickednesse. Ye manageth righteconfesse, and no man iudgeth thy Leuery man: heareth in vayne thinges, and ymagineth diuice, because they were wylful bringeth forth euill. They haue coftened their egges, and weene they shal be wylful. Who soeareth of their egges, dieth. But if our wrath upon the, there cometh vp a serpent. That we be made to close, that they maye not see the work of their labours. Their deede are the bes of wickednesse, and work of robbery in their hedes. Their face runne to euill, they make haste to shed innocent bloude. Their eies are wicked coueited, haue a defraude are in their wayes. But they waye of peace they knowe not. In their goinges is no equitye, their wayes are so crooked, they knowe not greuch therein, knowe nothinge of peace.

And this is the cause why equite is so farre from vs, and righteconfesse cometh not vnto vs. We loke for light, lo, it is darknesse: for we multiply synnes, we walke in y darkness. We gropelike they synde upon y wall, we grope without one they haue none eyes. We stembel at y noone daye, as though it were toward night: y fallinge places, lifemen they are half dead. We roare all like Deeres, y moorne in the bowes. We loke for equite, but there is none for healeth, but it is farre fro vs. For y offeringes are many before y, and synnes reffuse agaynst vs. See we must be siffic to see offende, and knowlege, they do anyff: I am y, anyffresse and byffembel agaynst the LORD, and y waye fro God: vffinge paffusions, and vicious ymaginacions, and castinge false matters in y herre. And therefore is equite gone a ffyre, y righteconfesse shal be farre off from y fallen downe in the ffyre, and the temple that is playne and open, maye not be ffounded. See y temple is lobe in paffion, and he that

The prophet Iſay.

I will declare the goodneſſe of the LORDE Deere and the pietye of the LORDE for all that he hath gyuen vs, for the greace good he hath done for Iſrael: which he hath gyuen them of his owne fauoure, & a cōdinge to the maliciae of his louynge kynneſſes.
 For he ſaie: Theſe no doube wilbe my people, and no ſhewinge children, and ſo he ma-keth his fauoure. In their troubles he ſoſoke them, but the angel that went forth from his preſence, deliuered them: Of very lowe & kinneſſe that he had vnto them, redeemed he them, he hath borne them, and caried them vpon eare, ſince the wolde begāne. But after they promoued him to wrath and weyed his holy mynde, he was their enemy, and ſought agaynſt them him ſilf. Yet remembred he the olde cōme, of iſraels & his people: how he brought them from the water of the ſee, as a ſhepherde doth with his ſhepe: how he had gūen his holy ſpūe amonge them: how he holdeth iſraels by the righte hande with his glorious arm: how he had deuyded the water beſide them (wherby he gat him ſelf an earlaſtinge name) how he led them in the deſert, as an hōly ſer- uant, that they ſhoulde not ſtumble. The ſpace of the LOR-DE led them, as a tame beaſt goeth in the ſide.

Thus (o God) haſt thou led thy people, to make thy ſelf a glorious name with all.
 Lete vnto them from heauē, and beholde the dwellinge place of thy ſanctuary & thy glory: how is it, y thy gelouſy, thy ſtrength, the manifeſtation of thy mercie and thy louyn-ge kinneſſe, w ſhoulde be entreated of vs: Yet art thou o father, for Iſrahāam knoweth vs not, neither is Iſrael acquainted with vs.
 But thou LORDE art oure father and redemer, and thy name is ever laſtinge. O LORDE wherefore haſt thou led vs out of egypte? wherefore haſt thou hardened oure heares, that we ſcare the noe: We are one with vs a-become, when as we were from the beginnyng: but thou art not their LORDE, for they haue not called vpon thy name.

haue made their ſmoles upon the mountaynes, and blaſphemed me upon the hilles: they ſore will I meaſure their olde deeds in to the it beſome agayne.

1. 1. b. Better thus ſaith the LORDE: like as roben one wolde gather holy grapes, men ſaye into him: break it not of, for it is holy: Then ſo will I do alſo for my ſeruauntes jacks, that I will not deſtroye them all. But I will take a ſtew out of Jacob, and out of Juda one, to take poſſeſſion of my hill. My choſen ſhal poſſeſſe theſe thinges, & my ſeruauntes ſhal dwell there. Saron ſhal be a ſhepefold, and the valley of Achis ſhal geue ſtalling for the cattell of my people, that feare me. But as for you, ye are they, y haue ſo-ken the LORDE, and forgotten my holy hill.
Ye haue ſet up an altar unto fortune, & generich dunt offeringes unto treaſure. Therefore wil I nombe you with the ſwerde, that ye ſhall be deſtroyed all together. For when I called, no man gaue me anſwere: when I ſpake, ye hearned not unto me, but bye trickenes before myne eyes, and choſed the thin-ge that pleaſed me not.

1. 1. c. Cherfore thus ſaith the LORDE God: Be-holde, my ſeruauntes ſhal eate, but ye ſhall haue hunger. Beholde, my ſeruauntes ſhall drynke, but ye ſhall ſuffre thurſte. Beholde, my ſeruauntes ſhal be merry, but ye ſhall be cōfounded. Beholde, my ſeruauntes ſhal reioyce for very quietneſſe of here. But ye ſhal crie for ſorrow of here, and cōplain for vexation of mynde. Your name ſhal not be ſeene by amonge my choſen, for God the LOR-DE ſhal ſaye you, and call his ſeruauntes by another name. Who ſo reioyſch vps careh, ſhall reioyſe in the true God: And Who ſo ſwearch vps careh, ſhal ſwear in the true God. For the olde enemie ſhal be forgotten, and taken a waye out of my ſight. So lo, I ſhal make a new heauē, & a new earth. And as for the olde, they ſhall neuer be thought vps, ner kepte in mynde: but me ſhal be glad and extreme reioyſe, for the thinges, that I ſhall do.

1. 1. d. D For why: Beholde, I ſhal make a ioyfull Jeruſalem, yet I my ſelf will reioyſe with Jeruſalem, & be glad with my people: And the voyce of weeping and wayling ſhall not be heard in her from thence forth. There ſhall neuer be childer ner olde man, that haue not their full dayes. But when the childer cometh to an hundred year old, it ſhall be bye. And if he that is an hundred year of age do weage, he ſhall be curſed. They ſhal buye the hou-ſe, and dwell in them: they ſhal plant vine-yardes, and eate the fruite of them. They ſhal not buye, & another poſſeſſe: they ſhall not plant, and another eate. But the liſt of my people ſhal be a tre, and ſo ſhal the woode of their bondes.

My choſen ſhall yeue longe, they ſhall me-laboure in vayne, ner beger w trouble: for they are the hie bleſſed ſide of the LORDE, & their frutes wiſh them. And it ſhal be, that o crier they call, I ſhal anſwere them. Why le they are yet but thinging how to ſpeake, I ſhal heare them. The wolfe and the lambe ſhal fede together, and the lyon ſhal eat haye like the bullocke. But careh ſhal be ſerpetes meate. There ſhal no man buye ſlaye another, in all my holy hill, ſaith the LORDE.

The lxxvi. Chapter.

1. 1. e. Iſa ſaith the LORDE: Heare is my ſeace, and the earth is my force ſhik.
Others ſhal now the houſe ſtande, y ye will buye into me: And where ſhal be the place, y I wil dwell in. As for the thin-ges, my hōde hath made them all, and they are all created, ſaith the LORDE. Whoſh of them ſhal I eber regarde: And him them of a lowly troubled ſpree, and ſtōdeth in me of my wordes. For who ſo ſlayeth an ox for me, doth me ſo greate diſhonour, as he killeth a mā. Ye that killeth a ſhepe for me, choſeth a dogge. Ye that bringeth me offringes, offerch ſwines ſlōme: Whoſh maketh me a memorall of Incenſe, payeth the thinge y is vniſight. Yet take they ſodwayes in hōde, and their ſoule deliſeth theſe abhorminacions.

1. 1. f. Therfore wil I alſo haue pleaſure in and she suffice the payne of the byrth and sorrowe of a trayle. Who euer herbe or sawe such thinges: Dost the grounde beare in one daye: or are the people boine all at once, as Sion beareth his sonnes: For thus saith the LORDE: Am I he that ma-keth ocher to beare, and beare not my selfe: Am not I he that beareth, and maketh bar-ren: saith the God. Reioyse with Jerusalem: be glad with her, all ye that loue her.

Be ioyful with her, all ye that mourned for her. For ye shall sucke comfort out of hir bies-tes, and be satisfieth. Ye shall taste, and haue delice in the plentifulnesse of hir power. For thus saith the LORDE: beholde, I wil let peace i co her, like a water founte, and I mighte of the heit he like a flowing streame. Then shall ye sucke, ye shall be boine upon hir sydes, and be ioyful vpon hir knees. For like as a childe is comforted of his mother, so shall I comfort you, and ye shall be comforted in Jerusalem. And when ye se this, youre hertes shall reioyse, and youre bones shall flourish like an herbe.

Thus shall the honde of the LORDE be knowne amonge his seruantes, and his in-dignacion amonge his enemies. For beholde, the LORDE shall come w fyre, and his chare shall be like a whyrlwynde, that he maye recompence his vengeance in his wrath, and his indignacion with the flame of fyre.
For the LORDE shall iudge all flesh with the fyre, and with his swerde, and there shall be a great nombre slayne of the LORDE. Such as haue made them selues holy and cleane in the gardens, and those that haue eaten swy-re flesh, myce, and ocher abhominacions, shall be taken auaie together, saith the LORDE.
For I wil come to gather all people and con-gret, with their wordes and ymaginacions: these shall come, and se my glory. Vnto them shall I geue a cōk, and sende certayne of the (that be deliuered) amonge the Gentiles: in to Ceticia, Africa and Lidia (where men can handle bones) in to Italia also and Gaule londe.

The Ies saith of chat haue not herbe speake of me, and haue not sine my glory: shall preach my prayse amonge the Gentiles, and shall bringe all youre bierth for an offering vnto the LORDE, out of al people, vpon horses, charettes and horse litters, vpon Mooles and carres to Jerusalem my holy hill (saith the LORDE) like as the children of Israel bringe the offeringe in cleane vessels, to the house of the LORDE.

And I shall take out certayne of them for to be preastes and leuites, saith the LORDE.
For like as the new heauē and the new earth which I wil make, shall be fast stablished by me: (saith the LORDE) So shall youre side and youre name continue, and there shall be a new Meane for the ocher, and a new Sabbath for the ocher, and all flesch shall come to worshippe before me, (saith the LORDE.) And they shall go forth, and lode vpon the carryons of them, that haue transgref-sed agaynst me.
For their roome shall not be, neither shall their fyre be quenched, and all flesch shall abhorre them.

These are the Sermons of Jeremy the sonne of helchias the prest, one of those that dwelt at Anathoth in the londe of Beniamin: when the LORD Ehad first spoken with him, in the tyme of Iudas the sonne of Amon Kinge of Iuda, at the vij. yeare of the kyngdome: and so durynge vnto the tyme of Iochim the sonne of Josias Kinge of Iuda, and vnto the 31 yeares of Sedechias the sonne of Josias Kinge of Iuda were ended: when Ierusalem was taken, euen in the fifth Moneth.

The first Chapter.

The worde of the LORD spake thus vnto me: Before I fashioned the in thy motheres womb, I dyd knowe thee: And ere thou wast boine, I sanctified the, & endued the, to be a prophce vnto the people. Thus saide I: Oh LORD E God, I am vn true, for I am yet but yonge. And the LORD answered me thus: Saye not so, I am to yonge: for thou shalt go to all that I shall sende thee vnto, and what so euer I commaunde the, that shalt thou speake. Be not afrayed of their face, for I will be with the, to deliuer the, saith the LORD E.

And now thus, the LORD E stretcheth out his hande, and toucheth my mouth, and sayeth vnto me: Whelpe I put my word in thy mouth, and this do ye do: I set the over the people and kyngdomes: that thou mayest rece out, break: of, destroye, and make wast: and that thou mayest buylde vp, and plaie. After this, the LORD E spake vnto me thus: Jeremy, what hast thou? And I saye: I seea makinge rodde. Then sayde y LORD E: thou hast sene righte, for I will maede diligently vpon my worde, to per forme it. It happened a sterwarde, that the LORD E spake to me a gayne, & sayde: What seest thou? And I sayde: I do see a seethinge pot, boilinge from out of the north with sturwarde.

Then sayde the LORD E vnto me: One of the north shall come a plage vpon all the dwellers of the londe. For so, I will call all the officers of the kyngdomes of the north, (saith the LORD E.) And they shall come, and euery one shall see his seate in the gates of Ierusalem, and in all their walles rounde aboute, and ehoiow all the cities of Iuda. And ehoiow them shall I declare my iudgement, vpon all the wickednesse of cheise men that haue forsaken me: that haue offered vnto strange goddes, & worshipped the wotkes of their owne hondes.

And therfore gyde vp thy loques, arise, and tell them all, that I geue the in commandement. Feare them not: I will not haue the to be afrayed of the. For behold, thus do ye do: I make the a stryge fence corne, an yron pyler, and a wall of stele a gaynst y whole londe, a gaynst the kynges and mightie men of Iuda, a gaynst the prestes and people of the londe. They shall fight a gaynst the, but they shall not be able to ouercome the: for I am with the, & deliuer the, saith the LORD E.

The II. Chapter.

When I sawe the worde of the LORD E commaunded me thus: Gerch maye, arise in the eares of Ierusalem, & saye: Thus saith the LORD E: I remember the for the synnysse of thy yowth, and because of thy stedfast loue in that thou solowdest me ehoiow thy wickednesse, in an vnalled londe. Thou Iherusalem wast halowed vnto the LORD E, and so was his first frutes. All they that deuoured Iherusalem, offended: misfortune fell vpon them, saith the LORD E. Hereafter fore the worde of the LORD E, O thou heuse of Jacob, and all the generacion of the house of Iherusalem. Thus saith y LORD E vnto you:

What vnfaithfulnesse founde ye your fathers in me, that they wente so farre awaye frome, fallinge to lighynesse, and beinge so wayne? They thoughte not in their hearts: Where han we left the LORD E, y broughte vs out of the lode of Egipte: y led vs thoro the wyldeynesse, thoro a deserte and rough londe, thoro a vnde and a vnde londe, yet a londe that no man had gone thoro, and wherin no man had dwelt. And when I had broughte you in to a pleasant & vlyuible londe, that ye mighte enioye the frutes, and all the comodities of the same, ye wente forth and desyied my londe, & broughte myne hereto, ge to ab hominacion.

The prestes the idoles saide not once: where is y LORD E? They y haue belame in the it hondes, & knowe me not: The shepherdes offende agaynst me. The prophetes do seruyce vnto Baal, & folowe such thinges as shall bunge them no profite.

Whye for I am constrained (saith the LORD) to make my complayne vpon you, and vpon youre children. Go in to the Iles of Cephim, and loke weste vnto Cedar, take diligence heere and se, whether such thinges be done there, whether the Gentiles them selfe beale so falsly & vntuly with their goddes (which yet are no goddes in dede.) But my people hath geuen ouer their bie honour, for a change that maie not helpethem.

Be astonished (o ye heauens) be afraide, & abashed as such a thinge, saith the LORD E. For my people hath done two euils. They haue forsaken me the well of the water of life, and digged them pittes, yett vnde and broken pittes, that holde no water. For Israel a bonde seruaunt, or one of the household: Why is hee ben so spoyled? Why do they roare and crye then vpon him, as a Lyon: They haue made his londe wayfe, his cities are so burnt vp, that there is no man dwelling in them. See the children of Toph and Taphneas haue defiled thy necke.

Comech not this vnto the, because thou hast forsaken the LORD thy God, euer since he led the by the waye. And what hast thou now to do in y^e streete of Egypt: to drinke foule water? Either, what makest thou in the waye to Assiria: To drinke water of the floude? Thine owne wickednesse shall reprove the, and thy curnyng awaye shall condemne the: that thou mayest knowe and vnberstonde, howe euell and hurtfull a thinge it is, if thou hast forsaken the LORD thy God, and not feared him, saith the LORD E God of hostes.

I haue euer broken thy yod of olde, & bursten thy bondes: yett saiest thou, I will nomore serue, butt like an harlot, thou runnest aboute vpon all hye hilles, & amonge all grene trees: where as I planted the out of noble grapes and good roces. Howe art thou turned then into a bytter, vnfruytfull, and straunge grape? See and that so foue: that though thou wast sheyt the rich Titrus & makest thyselfe to sauoure with that sweete smelling herbe of Baitch: yett in my sight thou art stayned with thy wickednesse, saith the LORD E thy God.

D Saye not now: I am not unclene, and I haue not folowed the goddes. Loke vpon thy ne owne waies in the wooddes, valleis & denes: so shalt thou knowe, what thou hast done. Thou art like a swiffe Dromedary, that goeth easely his waye: and thy wantonnesse is like a wilde Ass, that vseth the wilderness, and that so offeth and bloweth as his will. Who can tame the? All they that shall, shall not saile, butt synne the in thine own unclennesse. Thouapest thy yore from mydnes, and thy cheere from thurst, and cheest thou in thy selfe. I will take no for me, I will loue the strange goddes, that be geuen vpon them.

Like as a cheefe that is taken with the be, commeth to shame, and so is the house of Israel come to confusion: the comon people, their kinges and rulers, their prestes and prophetes. For they saye to a steed, thou art my father, and to a steed thou hast begotten me, yett they haue turned their back vpon me, not their face. But in the tyme of their tribulation, when they saye: stande vp, and helpe us, I shall answer the: Where are now thy fathers, that thou hast made the? vnto them I will saye, stande vp, and helpe the in the tyme of tribulation: for loke how many cities thou hast (o Iuda) many goddes hast thou also.

Whye for the wil ye go to lame with me, seinge ye all are synners agaynst me, saith the LORD E. It is but lost labour, that I synne youre children, for they receaue no correction. Your owne synnes destroye youre prophetes, like a beuouring Lyon: if ye be the people of the LORD, then heale me to his woide: Am I the become a wilderness vnto the people of Israel: or a londe that hath no lighte? Whye for saith my people: then we are full of, and we wil come no more vnto the: Doth a mayden forget hir nymme, or a bryde hir stomacher? And bech my people forget me so longe: Whye boofest thou thy wayes so hyllie, (o praye) saunt that thou owest: when thou hast yett staund them in blasphemies?

Vpon thy wynges is founde the blood of poore and innocent people, and that not in comers and holes only, butt openly in all these places. See barrst thou saie: I am guilelesse: Tush, his wach can not come vpon me. Beholde, I will reason with y^e, because thou barrst saie: I haue not offended. O howe well wilt thou be for the, to abyde: when he shall be knowne, howe oft thou hast gone backe: For thou shalt be confounded, as well of Egypte, as of the Assirians: see thou shalt go thy waye from the, & synne y^e hee bootes together vpon thy heade. Because the LORD E shall bunge that confidence and hope of thine to naught, and thou shalt not possesse with all.

The iii. Chapter.

Comonly, when a man putteth away his wife, and she goeth from him, and marrieth with another, then the question is: shalbe he refuse unto her any more after that? Is not this seldome besyled and refused? But as for the, thou hast played the harlot with many lovers, yet turne agayne to me, saith the LORD. Lift vp thine eyes on every side, and loke, yf thou be not besyled. Thou hast raised for them in the forest, and as a murderer in the wilderness. Thou thy whoredome and shamefull blasphemies, is the londe besyled.

A This is the cause, that the rayne and e-wynge dew hath ceased. Thou hast gotten the an whores foreheade, and canst not be ashamed. If I woldest thou saye vnto me: O my suster, thou art he that hast brought me up, and led me fro my youth: Wilt thou then put me away, and cast me of for ever? Or wilt thou wishdissolve thy selfe cleane fro me? Nevertheless, thou speakest such wordes, but thou art ever doinge worse, and worst.

B The LORD sayde also vnto me, in the tyme of Josias the Kinge: Hast thou sene what hath shewinge Israel hath done: how she hath turme vp upon all her hilles, and amonge all high places, and there played the harlot: hast thou sene also, (when she had done all this) how I sayde vnto her: that she shalbe turne agayne vnto me, and yet she is not returned: Juda that vnfaithfull sister of hers also saimeth to: I Tameley, that after I had well sene the aduource of the shewinge harlot Israel, I put her away, and gathered a bill of deuocement.

For all this, his vnfaithfull sister Juda was not ashamed, but wente backe and played the whore also. Yee and the nyse of her whoredome: hath besyled the whole lode. For she hath committed hir aduource with stones and stockes.

Nevertheless, his vnfaithfull sister Juda is not turned vnto me agayne with hir whorl: but sayed, saith the LORD. And the LORD sayde vnto me: The backe of Israel is more rathenous, than the vnfaithfull Juda: and therfore goe preache these wordes towarde the north, I saye: Thou shewinge Israel, turne agayne (saith the LORD), and I will not turne my face from you. For I am merciful, saith the LORD. I will not all waye beare displeasure agaynst the: but on this condition, that thou knowest thy greates blasphemy: I Tameley, that then hast vnfaithfully forsaken the LORD thy God, and hast made thyselfe partaker of stragge goddes vnder all grene trees, but hast had no wil to heare my voyce, saith the LORD.

O ye shewinge children, turne agayne, saith the LORD, and I will be married with you. For I will take one out of the cite and two out of one generation from amonge you, and bringe you out of Sion: and will geue you byrome a fair myne owne mynde, which shal seide you with leynunge and mysdomme. Moreover, when ye be increased and multiplied in the londe, then (saith the LORD) there shall no more boost be made of the arke of the LORDES Testament: No man shall thinke vpon it, neither shall any man make mention of it: for from thence forth it shall neither be visited, ner honoured with giftes.

Then shall Jerusalem be called the LORDES seate, and all heathen shalbe gathered vnto it, for the name of the LORDES sake, which shall set up at Jerusalem. And from that tyme forth, they shall folowe none more the ymaginacion of their owne frauwore heret.

That those yf be of the house of Juda, shal go vnto the house of Israel: And they shal come together out of the north, in to the same londe: that I haue geuen your fathers, I haue shewed also, how I toke the vp beinge by a childe, and ganethe a pleasant londe for thine heritage, yee and a goodly booste of the heathen: and how I commaunded the, that thou shouldest call me father on ly, and not to shewde fro me.

But like as a woman saiyeth hir lover, so are ye vnfaithfull vnto me (o ye house of Israel) saith the LORD. And therfore the voyce of the children of Israel was herde on euery side, weeping and wailing: for they haue besyled their waye, and forgotten God their LORD.

O ye shewinge children, turne agayne, (saye: lo, we are thine, for thou art the LORD our God): And so shal I heale your backturnynges. The hilles fall, and all the high pyre of them ouerthrowne, but the health of Israel sheweth only vpon God our LORD.

Confusion hath deuoured oure fathers laboure from oure youth vp: yee their hope and bullockes, their sones and donghears. So do we also sleepe in oure confusion, and shame conuerted vs: for we and oure fathers from oure youth vp vnto this daye haue sinned agaynst the LORD our God, and ha-

And yf thou wilt put away thy ablyueth: in trowth, in equite and righteous-nesse: and all people shall be fortunate and to all Juda and Jerusalem: plove your ion

Be circumcised in the L O R D E, and cut awaye the foreskyme of youre hartes, all ye of Juda, and all the indwellers of Jerusalem: that my indignacion breake not out like fyre, & Tyndle, so that no man maye quench it, because of the wickednes of youre yma-ginacions.

Preach in Juda and Jerusalem, crye out and speak: blame the crompettes in the temple, crye that every man maye heare, and sa-ye: Gather you together, and we will go in to strange cities. Set up the token in Sion, speke you, and make no variange: for I will brynge a greate plague, and a greate destruction from the north. For the spoyler of the Sentinels is broken up from his place, as a lyon out of his dens, that he maye make the londe waste, and destroye the cities, so, that no man maye dwell therein.

yourselves aboute wth sack cloth, mourne, and wepe. for the fearfull wrath of the L O R D E shall not be wth dyemen from you.

At the same tyme saith the L O R D E the hart of the kinge and of the princes shall be gone, the prestes shall be astonysed, and the prophetes shall be as frayed. Then sayde J: O L O R D E God, hast thou then disceued this people and Jerusalem. sayenge ye shall have peace. and now the sworde goeth thro-row their lyues: Then shall it be saide to the people: z to Jerusalem: there commeth a war me wynde from the north thow the waye of my people, but neither so sanne, nor so clek.

After that shall there come unto me a strange wynde, and then wil I also geue sentence upon them. For so, he commeth downe like as a cloude, and his charrettes are like a stormy wynde: his hoysmen are swift as the Aegle. Wo unto vs, for we are destroyed.

O Jerusalem, wash thine hart from wickednesse, that thou mayest be helped. How longe shalt thou ysome thoughtes remayne wth the:
For a voyce from Dan and from y hill of Ephraim speaketh out, and telteth of a destruction. Beholde, the watchmen gate Jerusalem warnyng, and preach unto her, that she destroye and comyng from strange coun-treas. They call the cities of Juda the same also, they shall geaethen warnyng in any place, like as the watchmen in the walde. For they have p^{ro}uoked me to wrath, saith the

Thy wayes and thy thoughtes, haue broughte the unto this, this is thyme one wickednesse and disobedience, that hath possessed thine hart: Ah my bely, ah my bely, (shalt thou crye) how is my hart so sore: rag here payneth muchin me. I can not be full, for I haue herde the cryinge of thy trompetes, and peales of warre.

They crye murthar upon murthar, the whole londe shal perish. Immedyately my remes were destroyed, and my hangynges, in the twinklinge of an eye. How long shall I see the tokens of warre, and heare the noy-se of the crompettes?

Remember this shall come upon them, because my people is become foolish, and hath weery no understandinge. They are the children of foolishnes, and withoute any creed. To do euill, they haue more ymagi-nacion, but to do well, they haue no wiffdom. I haue looked upon the earth, and se, it is wast and voyde. I looked towarde heauen, and I had no hym.

I behelde the mountaynes, and they man-bled, and all the hills were in a stare. I beheld aboute me, and there was no body, and all the bydes of the ayre were awaye. I we-ted well, and the plowed filde was become waiste: yet all their cities were broken downe at the presence of the L O R D E, and indignacion of his wrath.

For thus hath the L O R D E sayde: The whole londe shall be desolate, yet will I not then haue done. And therefore let the crye mourne, and let the heauen be fey aboute the thinge that I haue purposed, and let ten upon me to do, shall not repent me, and I will not go from it. The whole londe shal fle, for the noyse of the hoysmen and drum-mes: they shall runne in to dennes in no mandes, and clymme up the stony rockes. All the cities shall be voyde, and no man wil linge therein.

What wilt thou now do, thou beinge stroyed? For though thou clobest thy self wth scories, & dostest yf wth golde: though thou paynest thy face wth coloure, yf thou thoustrymest thy self in paynt.

For those that haue bene thy greue sauourers, shal abhorre the, and go a longe to slaye y. For (me thinke) I heare a noyse, like as it were of a woman trauelinge, or one labouringe of hir first childe: Euen the voyce of the daughter Sion, that casteth out hir armes, and swooneth, sayenge: Ah wo is me, how sore vexed and saynte is my hart, for them that are slayne:

The V. Chapter.

Wher thouw Jerusalem beholde and si: Sete thouw hur streets also with this, yf ye can fynde one man, that both equal and right, or that laboureth to be fashyfull: and I shall spare him: (saith the LORDE) For though they can saye: The LORDE is iurth, yet do they sweare to discaure: Whereas thou O LORDE lokest only upon fash and treueth.

Thou hast scourged them, but they take no repentance: thou hast coueate them for amendes, but they refused thy correction. They made their faces harder then a stone, and wold not amende.

Therefore I thoughte in my self: peraduenture they are so simple and folish, that they understande nothyng of the LORDES wylle, y. and iudgements of oure God. Therefore will I go vnto their heades and rulers, and talke with them: yf they knowe the waye of the LORDE, and the iudgements of oure God. But these (in like maner) haue broken the yoke, and broken the bondes in sonder.

Wherfore a lyon out of the wood shal hurte them, and a Wolfe in the eveninge shal destroye them. The cat of the mounteyne shal lie lurking by their cities, to teare in peeces all them, that come therout. For their offences are many, and their departinge a waye is greate.

Shalde I then for all this haue mercy vpon the: Thy children haue forsaken me, and swoue by them that are no goddes. And albeit they were bounde come in marriage, yet they filled aboute, and haunteth harlotres houses.

In the desyre of secretly lust they are become like the stonec hysse. every man neyeth at his neighbours wife. Shalde I not correcte the: (saith the LORDE)

Shalde I not be a venge of every people, that is like vnto this: I synne up vpon their walle, beate them downe, but destroye them not utterly: out of their binnches, because they are not the LORDES.

So I saynt fully both the house of Israel and Iuda forsaken me, (saith the LORDE) They haue denied the LORDE, and sayde: it is not he.

Truly, there shall no misfortune come vpon vs, we shall se neither sweate ner hunger. As for the wauyng of the prophets, they take it: but for wynde, yet there is none of these, which will tell them, that such thynges shalbe ppen vnto them.

Wherfore thus saith the LORDE God of hostes: because ye speake such wordes, beholde: The wordes that are in thy mouth will I turne to fyre, and make the people to be wod, that it may consume them.

Lo, I will bringe a people vps you from the east, o house of Israel: (saith the LORDE) A mighty people, an olde people, a people wofe speach: thou knowest not, neyther vnderstoddest what they saye.

Their aromes are sodane death, yet they them selues be very giuantes. This people shal eate up thy fruce & thy meate, yet they shal deuoure thy sonnes and thy daughters, thy shepe and thy bullockes.

They shal eate up thy grapes & fyges. As for thy stronge and well fenced cities, wherein they dwelst trust, they shal destroye them with the sworde.

Therefore I will not then haue done with you, (saith the LORDE) For yf they saye: wherfore doeth the LORDE oure God all this vnto vs?

Then answer them: because, that like as ye haue forsaken me, and serued strange goddes in your owne londe, even so shall ye serue other goddes also in a strange londe.

Preach this vnto the house of Jacob, & crie it out in Iuda, and saye thus: Seare this (thou folish) and vndiscrete people. Ye haue eyes, but ye se not: eares haue ye, but ye heare not.

Fear ye not me, (saith the LORDE) Are ye not ashamed, to loke me in the face: which bynde the see with the sonde, so that it can not passe his boundes: For though it rage, yet can it do nothyng: and though the waxes thereof do swell, yet maye they not growe.

But this people hath a false and an obfistinate herte, they are departed and gone awaye from me. They thinke not in their hartes: O let vs feare the LORDE oure God, that getteth vs to raine early and late, when neede is: which kepeth ever still the harvest for vs yearly.

Therefore your misdeedes haue turned these synnys, & your synnes haue robbed you herof. For amonge my people are founde wicked personnes, that painely laye sinnes and waite for men, to take them, and destroye them.

And like as a net is full of byrdes, so are their houses full of chat, which they haue gotten with falsite and disceite. herof conueth their greatesubstaunce and riches, herof are they fat and welthy, and are ranne a waye for me with shamefull blaiphemies. They minisre not the lawe, they make no me of the factualeffe cause, they iudge not the poore accordinge to equite.

Shulde I not punish these thinges. saith the LORDE: Shulde I not be a venged of all such people, as these be: humble and greuous thinges are done in the londe.

The prophete teach falsly, and the prestes folowe them, and my people hath pleasure therein. What will come therof at the last:

The Vi. Chapter.

Come out of Jerusalem, ye stronge child of Den Jamin: blowe up theroom pettes ye Teuites, sit up a token vnto Bethacarem, for a plage and a greate misery piped out from: he: Vtoch.

I will take the daughter Sion to a saye and cendie woman, and to her shall come the shepherdes with their flockes. Their teases shall they pinch rounde aboute her, and euery one shall seee with his honde. Make daniel a ganyt her: shall they saye: Arise, let vs go vp, whilste it yett daye.

Alas, the daye goeth a waye, & the nighte shadowes fall downe: Arise, let vs go vp by night, and destroye his stronge holdes, for thus hath the LORDE of hostes commaunded.

Howe roue his trees, and set up vniworke agaynst Ierusalem. This is the cite that must be punished, for in her is all maliciousnes. Like as a cōdye aboundeth in water, eue so this cite aboundeth in wickednes. A obbery and mingheousnesse is herde in her, sowm & woundes are eue there in my sight. And the (o Jerusalem) lete I wech diuine my heree from the, and make the desolare: thy londe also, y no man dwell in it. For thus saith the LORDE of hostes: The residue of I: shall haibe gathered, as the remnaunt of arapae.

B And the foire turne thine honde agayne in to the baye: like the grape gatherer. But vnto whom shall I speake: whom shall I warne, that he maye take heede? Their eares are so vnicumised, that they maye not heare, Beholde, they take the woode of Goddinge for a scoine, and haue no last therof. And therfore I am so full of chy indignacion: LORDE, chae I maye suffice no longer. Shee one chy wrath upon the children that are without, and upon all yonge men. For the man must be taken prisoner with the myght and the aged with the crepel. They shall with their londes and wites: shall be taken vnto strangers, whē I stretch out my hande vpon the inhabitours of this londe, saith the LORDE. For from the leest vnto the most, they hang all vpon couerousnes: and from the prophete vnto the prest, they go all aboute with falsite and lies.

And teryde that, they heale the hurt of my people with swete wordes, sayenge: peace, peace, when there is no peace at all. The feere they must be ashamed, for they haue dunned abhymnacion. But who shall they be ashamed, when they knowe nothinge: whether of shame nor good nurture: And the feere they shall fall amonge the slaue, and in the houre when I shall visite them, they shall be brought downe, saith the LORDE.

Thus saith the LORDE: go in to the sinnes, conside and make inquisition for the sinne: and yf it be the good and right waye, then go therein, that ye maye fynde rest for yome soules. (But they saye: we will not kee therein) and I will see watchmen ouer you, and the foire take hede vnto the voyce of the trempet. But they saye: we will not take hede. Heare therfore ye Gentiles, and thou ouer greaacion shall knowe, what I haue sayed for them. Heare thou earth also: beholde, I will cause a plage come vpon this people, ruen the frute of their vane ymaginations.

For they haue not bene obedient vnto my woordes and to my lawe, they abhorred the. Whether foue bringe yeme incense from Chaldea, & sweete smellinge Calamus from ierre: ruen trees: Your burnt offerings are displeasid, and I reioyce not in your sacrifices.

And therfore thus saith the LORDE: beholde, I will make this people fall, and the re shall fall from amonge them: the father of the children, one neyghboure shall persecute another.

Moreover thus saith the LORDE: Beholde, there shall come a people from the North: a greate people shall arise from y entrance of earth, w bowes & w dardes: shall they be named: It is a rough & fierce people, a vnermeral people: their voyce roareth like the see, they ride vpon horses and appointed in sh all agaynst the, o daughter Sion. Then shall this crye be heard: Oure armes are stille, hermyes and sion is come vpon vs, as vpon a woman trauelling with child. No man go forth in to the felde, no man come vpon the hie streete: for the sward and feare of the enemye shalbe on euery side.

Wherefore, gynde a sack cloth aboute the (o thou daughter of my people) sprynkle thy self with ashes, mourne and wepe bitterly, as vpon thy only beloued sonne: for the desolour shall suddenly fall vpon vs. The haue I sate for a prouer of my harde people, to sithen vs and to crye their waye. For they are all vnfaithfull and fallen a waye, they hange vpon shamefull iace, they are cleue blasse and yon, for they hurte and destroye euery man. The beloued son went in the fyre, the leade is consumed, the rider melteth in waye, for the coal is not taken awaye from them. Therfore shall they be called nantheby syluer, because the LORD E hath cast them out.

The VII. Chapter.

I these are the wordes, that God spake vnto Jeremij: Stande vnder the gates of the LORD E house, and crye out these wordes there, with a loude voyce, and saye: These are the wordes of the LORD E, all ye of Iuda, that go in at this doore, to honour the LORD E. Thus saith the LORD E of hostes the God of Iffrael. Amende youre wayes and youre counsels, and I will see you dwell in this place. Truste not in falsse hynges wordes, sayenge: here is the temple of the LORD E, here is the temple of the LORD E, here is the temple of the LORD E.

For yf ye will amende youre wayes and counsels, yf ye will iudge right betwixte a man and his neighbour: yf ye wil not oppresse the stranger, the fatherles & the wyd borne: yf ye will not shed innocēt bloude in this place: yf ye will not cleue o strange goddes to youre owne destruction: then will I let you dwell in this place, yee in the londe that I gaue a sone tyme vnto youre fathers for euer. But take heede, yee trust in counsels, that begyle you and do you no good. For when ye haue stole, murdered, committed adoultorie, and perury: when ye haue offered vnto Baal, sole winged straunge & vnknowen goddes: Then come ye, and stande before me in this house (which hath my name gotten vnto it) and saye: Truth, we are absolued of you, though we haue done all these abominacions.

What t' thinke you this house that beareth my name, is a verme of theuse? And these thinges are not done purely, but before myne eyes, saith the LORD E. So comyng place in Sile, where vnto I gaue my name a sone tyme, and loke well what I byd to the same place, for the wickednes of my people of Iffrael. And now, though ye haue done all these dedes (saith the LORD E) and I my self rose vp euer by tyme to warne you and to comon with you: yee wolde ye not heare me: I called, ye wolde not answer. And therfore euen as I haue done vnto Sile, so will I doo to this house, that my name is gotten vnto, (and thus ye put youre trust in) yee vnto the place that I haue gotten to you and your fathers. And I shall thrust you out of my sight, as I haue cast out all youre brethren the wholye side of E phraim.

Therefore thou shalt not praye for this people, thou shalt neither geue prayers, nor byd prayer for them: thou shalt make no intercession to me for them, for in no wise will I heare the. Seest thou not what they do in the cities of Iuda, and without Ierusalem: The children gather sticks, the fathers kynble the fyre, the mothers kneade the doue, to bake cakes for the queene of heauen.

They poure out drinkeoffringes vnto strange goddes, to piousse me vnto wrath: how be it they hurte not me (saith the LORD E) but rather confounde, and shame euen thinses.

And therfore thus saith the LORD E God: beholde, my wrath and my vmbignacion shall be poured out vpon this place, vpon man and cattell, vpon the trees in the felde and all frute of the londe, & it shall burne so, that no man maye quench it.

Thus saith the LORD E of hostes, the God of Iffrael: Ye heape vp youre burnt offerings with yome sacrifices, & eate yf flesh. But when I brought youre fathers out of Egipte, I spake no worde vnto them of burnt offerings and sacrifices: but this I commaunded them, sayenge: hearken and obeye my voyce, and I shall be your God and ye shall be my people: so that ye walke in all the wayes, which I haue commaunded you, that ye maye prosper.

But they were not obedient, they disobeyed not their eares there vnto, but went a ster their owne ymagynacions and after the motions of their vntwined herte, and so turned them selues amaye, and conuerted not vnto me. And this haue ye done, from the tyme that youre fathers came out of Egipte, vnto this daye.

thou shalt crie vpon them, but they shall not

This shalt thou saye vnto them also Thur saith the LORDE: Dominion shall be they arise not vp agayne, and turne the farre awaye, yf they neuer conuert. The fewe thou is this people and Jerusalem so farre backe, that they turne not agayne.
They are euer the longer the more obstinate, and will not be conuerted.

For I haue loled, and considered: but re is no man, that taketh repentance for synne, eache will so much as saye: to what haue I done this: But euery man (as soon as he is turned backe) I ameth forth still, like wilde horse in a barnayl. The Scotts burne his apoynted tyme, the Turkebow, yf Sawlow and the Crane, consider the tyme of their t'rauaile: but my people will not knowe the tyme of the punishment of the LOR-DE. How darre ye saye then: we are iust, we haue the lawe of the LORDE amonge vs.

Beholde, the disceatfull penne of the scribes, stretcheth forth lies: therefore shall the wise be confounded, they shall be afraid and shame: for so, they haue cast out the words of the LORDE: we haue myssedome can them amonge them: Wherefore, I will geue their wyes vnto alicuices, and their silens destroye.

Go from the lewest vnto the highest, they followe all shamefull iur: and from the p'phet vnto the priest, they deale all with liars, T'wertables, they heale the heart of my ple with sycere wordes, sayinge: peace, peace, where there is no peace at all.

Yee for shame, how art hominable things do they: And yet they be not ashamed, yf they knowe of no shame.

Wherefore in the tyme of their visitation they shall fall amonge the deed bodies, saith the LORDE.

W'rtouer I will gather them in (saith the LORDE) so that there shall not be one yge upon the wyne, neither one fyge upon the fyge tre, and the leaues shall be placc of them.

Them will I cause them to depaue, and saye: why prolonge we the tyme: Let us gather oure selues together, and go in to the stronge cite, there shall we be in safety: for the LORDE oure God hath pur-posed to drynke, and geuen vs water myrre and to drynke, because we haue synned agayn-st him.

We looked for peace, and we saye not the better, we mayed for the tyme of safety, and lo, here is nothing but trouble.

Then shall the noyse of his bowes be

The VIII. Chapter.

1 The same tyme, saith the LORDE, the bones of the kinges of Iuda, the bones of his princes, the bones of the p'fettes and p'phers, yee and the bones of the cirkens of Jerusalem, shall be brought out of their graues and layed agaynst the Sonne, the Moone and all the beaueity booffe: whom they loued, whom they serued, whom they ranne after, whom they sought and worshipped. They shall neither be gathered together nor buried, but shall lye vpon the earth, to their shame and despisinge.

And all they that remaine of this wicked generacion, shall desire rather to dye tho lye: where so euer they remaine, and where so I scatter them, saith the LORDE of hoes herbe from Dan, the whole londe shall be dried at the dryge of his stronge hoves: for they shal go in, and deuoure the londe, with all that is in it: the cities, and those that dwell therein. Moreover, I will ^{the} make the Cedars trees 7 stripes amonge you (which will not be charmed) and they shal bite you, sayeth the LORDE.

Some time is come upon me, and heuynes weigh my heare: for so, the voyce of the cil-ing of my people is herde from a farr coun-tre: Is not the LORDE in Sion? Is not he King in her? Wherefore then haue they grieved me (shall the LORDE saye) with their images, and foolish straunge fashions?
 The haire is gone, the Summer hath an ended, and we are not helped. I am sore vexed, because of the hurte of my people: I am henyed and abashed, for there is no more Triacle at Gelaad, and there is no Physician, that can heale the hurte of my people.

The IX. Chapter.

Who will geue my heade water enough, 7 a well of teares for my-ne eyes: that I may wepe night ad daye, for the slaughter of my people: Wol-de God that I had a cottage some where far re from folk, that I might leaue my people, and go from the: for they be all aduocaters and a strengthinge force. They deue their eu-yle like bones, to shure our lues: As for the truth, they maye nothinge awaye with all in the wolde. For they go from one wichedome to another, and holde nothinge of me, sa-ieth the LORDE.

Ree one must kepe himself from another, so no man maye safelye trust his owne brother: for one bocher undermineth another, 7 one neighbours begyleth another. Ree one dissi-mular with another, and they Deale with no much. They haue pacified their tongues to lye, and eaten greate paynes to do mysche-fit. They haue set their stole in the myddest of dishoneste, and for veay dissimblunge falsely they wil not knowe me, saith the LORDE.

Therefore thus saith the LORDE of hoo-se, beholde, I wil smite them and trie the, for what shalde I els do to my people: The images are like sharpe arrows, to speake dishoneste. With their mouth they speake pe-acably to their neighboure, but piously they laye waite for him. Shalde I not punish them for these things, saith the LORDE. I shalde I not be auenged of evyl soch people, as they? Upon the mountaynes will I call up a lamentation and sorrowfull crie, and a mourninge upon the fayne playnes of the wildernes: Namely, howe they are so brened up, that no man goeth there any more: Ree a man shal not heare one beast cry there.

Bydes and cattell are all gone from the-ce. I will make Jerusalem also an heape of stones, and a benne of very manye womenes.
 And I will make the cities of Juda sawaste, that no man shal dwell therein. What man is so wise, as to understande this: What rethom hath the LORDE spoken by mouth, that he maye shewe this, and saye: O thou londe, why pershest thou so? Wherefore art thou so brened up, and like a wilderness, that no ma goeth the row? Ree the LORDE hath said the same vnto them, that sought his lawe, and kepe not the thyng that he gaue them in commandement, neither yead they there: but followed the wickdones of their owne her-tes, and faced straunge goddes, as their fathers taught them.

Therefore, thus saith the LORDE of ho-oster, the God of Israel, beholde, I will sede this people with wormes, and geue the gall to drynte. I will scathe them also amonge the heathen, whom neether they nor their fathers haue knowne: and I will sende a fire arde amonge them, to persure them, until I bringe them to nought. Moreover, thus sa-ieth the LORDE of hostes the God that ye call for mourninge wyne, and sende for wise women: that they come shonty, and singe a mournyngesong of you: that the teares maye fall out of oure eyes, and that our eye ly-des maye gusse out of water.

For there is a lamentable noyse he-de of Sion: O howe are we so sore desroyed? O howe are we so piously cor-founde: We must forsake our owne menatall countre, and we are shot out of oure we lodgyngs. Ree heare the worde of the LOR-DE (ye maye) and set your eares regard the worde of his mouth: that ye maye lerne yourne waye to meane, and that every one maye teach his neighboure, to make the mentation. Namely thus: Keech ye hymne up in at oure wyndowes, he is come in to oure houses, to destroye the childe before the doue, 7 yongeman in the strete.

Buttelle thou plainly, thus saith the LOR-DE: The deed bodies of men shal lye a pon of ground, as the donge upon the felde, and as the hay a fect the mower, and there shal be no man to calke them up. Moreover, thus saith the LORDE: I will not be wise man to lye in his wyndome, nor the stronge man to lye in his strength.

in his strength, neither the rich man in his riches. But who so will reioyse, let him reioyse in this, that he vnderstandeth, and knoweth me: for I am the LORD, which do mercie, equite and righteousness vpon earth. Therfore haue I pleasure in such thinges, saith y^e LORD. Beholde, the tyme cometh (saith the LORD) that I will visite all them, whose feet haue I vn-circumcised: The Egyptians, the Jews, the Ammonites, the Moabites, and the shauen Nabianites, that dwell in the wilderness. For all y^e Gentiles are vn-circumcised in the flesh, but all the house of Israel, are vn-circumcised in the herte.

The x. Chapter.

Here the worde of the LORD, y^e he speaketh vnto the, o thou house of Israel: Thus saith the LORD: Ye shall not leme after the maner of the heathen, and ye shall not be afrayed for the tokens of heauen: for the heathen are afrayed of such: For all the customes and lawes of the Gentiles are nothinge, but vanitie. They haue deuene a tree in the wood which the bondes of the weale man, and fashion it with the axche: they couer it ouer with golde or silver, they fasten it with nails and hammers, that it moue not. If it be as stiff as the palm tree, it can not her speak nor go, it must be doine. Wener ye afrayed of such, for they can do neither good nor euil. But there is none like vnto y^e (o LORD) thou art great, and great is the name of y^e power. Who wolde not feare thee? or what kinge of the Gentiles wolde not obey thee?

For amonge all the wysemen of the Gentiles, and in all their kingdomes, there is none, that maye be likened vnto the. They are all together vnlearned and vnwise. All their connyng is but vanitie: namely, wood, silver, which is brought out of Tharsis, and beate to plates: and golde from Ophir, a worke y^e is made with the honde of the craftisman, and the casket, clothed with yallow sylk and scarlet: euens so is the worke of the wysemen all together. But the LORD is a true God, a lyvinge God, and an everlastinge Kinge. If he be with the earth, shall the Gentiles maye not abyde his indignacion.

As for their goddes, it maye well be sayde of the: they are goddes, that made neither by hand, nor earth: herfore shall they perish fro the earth, and from all thinges vnder heauen. But as for oure God, he made the earth with his power, and with his wisdom hath he framed the whole compasse of the world, with his discrecion hath he spred out the heavens, he his voyce the waters gather together in the ayre, he doeth with y^e clouds (from the west) out partes of y^e earth: heauenly lighteninge to rayne, and biggish fowle the wyndes out of the treasures: he is not done neither all men foolen. And consumed be all castles of ymagines, for that they cast, is but a wayne thinge, and haeth no life. The wayne crazes men with their worke, the they in their vanitie haue made, shall perish one with another in the tyme of visitacion. Neuertheles, Iacob possid is not do: he it is he, that hath made all thinges, and Israel is the rodd of his inheritaunce: The LORD of hostes is his name. Put away thy vnclennesse out of the londe, thou that art in the strengthe of aica. For thus saith the LORD: Beholde, I will now christ out the inheour of this londe: a greates waye off, and trouble them of such a visitacion, that they shal no more be founde.

Alas, how am I hurt: alas, how painful are my scourges vnto me: for I am full of this sore by my self. I must suffer it, my taberna cle is destroyed, and all my countes are broken. My children are gone fro me, and can no where be founde. How haue I now to spede out my centre, or to set vp my hangings. For the hyemen haue done filthily, that they haue not sought the LORD. Therfore haue they dealt vnwisely with the ir cattell, and all are scattered abroad. Beholde, the noyse is harde at honde, and greates sitacion out of the north: make the citie of Ierusa a wilderness, and a dwellinge place for Dragons. How I knowe (o LORD) that is not in mans power to orde his owne weale, or to rule his owne steppes, & goinges. Therfore chaste thou vs (o LORD) but with sauoure, and not in thy wrath, bunge vs not utterly to naught. Poure out thy indignacion rather vpon the Gentiles, that knowe y^e not: and vpon the people that call not on thy name: And that be cause they haue consumed, deuoured and destroyed Iacob, and haue not ed out his glory.

The XL Chapter.

This is another Sermon, which the LORD commaunded Jeremy to preach, sayenge:

Hear the wordes of the covenant, and speake vnto all Iuda, and to all them that dwell at Ierusalem. And saye thou vnto the LORD: Thus saith the LORD God of Israel: God is not in any one, that is not obedient vnto the wordes of this covenant: which I commaunded vnto your fathers, what tyme I bring them out of Egypt, from the yon fomaer, sayenge: De obedienc vnto my voyce, and do according to all that I comma-nde you: so shal ye be my people, and I wil be your God, and will kepe my promysse, y I haue sworne vnto youre fathers: I namely, that I wolde geue them a londe which floweth with mylke and honny, as ye see it is come to passe vnto this daye.

Then answered J, and sayde: Amen. It is as the LORDE, as thou sayest. Then the LORD sayde vnto me agayne: Preach this in y ciues off Iuda and rounde aboute Jerusalem, and saye: heare the wordes off this comunaunt, that ye maye heere them. For I haue diligently exorted youre fathers, euer since the tyme that I broughte them out off the londe off Egypte, vnto this daye. I gaue them mannyng by tymes, sayenge: hearken vnto my voyce: I neuertheles, they wolde not obeye me, nor encline their eares vnto me, bute folowed the wicked ymaginacions of their owne hertes. And therefore haue I accusede them as transgressours of all the wor-des off this comunaunt, that I gaue them to kepe, whiche they (not withstandinge) haue not kept.

And the LORDE sayde vnto me: It is so true, that whole Irael and all the ciuitens off Jerusalem are gone backe. They haue turned them selues to the blasphemous off their fore fathers, which had no lust to hea-ren my voyce. Euen like wise haue these also sinned strange goddes, and worshipped them. The house off Israel and Iuda haue broken my coemaunt, which I made wth the their fathers.

Therefore thus saith the LORDE: Beholde, I will sende a plague amonge you, which y shall not be able to scape: and though ye see vnto me, I will not heare you. The shal the comesse off Iuda and the ciuitens of Jerusalem go, and call vpon their goddes, vnto whom they made their oblacions: but they are not able to helpe them in tyme off their trouble. For as many ciues as thou hast (o Iuda) so many goddes hast thou also: And loke how many streets there be in the (o Jerusalem) so many shameful auicers haue ye set vp, to offere vpon them vnto Baal. But praye not ther for this people, byo neither praye nor praye for them: for though they see vnto me in their trouble, yet will I not heare them.

O thou beloued, why doest thou so shame full greace blasphemous in my house: euen as though that holy flesh might abscure the, specially when thou hast made thy boote off thy wickednes. The LORDE called the a grene olyue tre, a fayre one, a fruite full one, a ge-ody one: but now that there is a contrary reporte off thy abroad, he will burne the vp, and destroye thy braunches. For the LORDE off bootes that platted the, hath deuyed a pla-ge for the: (o thou house off Israel z Iuda) y euell that ye haue done, to pouerise him to weath, in that ye byd seruyce vnto Baal.

This (o LORDE) haue I lerned of y the, and vnderstonde it, for thou hast sheved me the ymaginacions. But J (as a melle lambe) was caried awaye to beslayn: not knowin-ge, that they had deuyed such a counceyl against me, sayenge: We will destroye his meace with wood, and dryue him out of the londe of the luyngs, that his name shal neuer be theough upon. Therefore I will besite the new (o LORDE) of bootes: thou righteous iudge, thou that tryest the reynes and the detee: let me see the awenged of chrim, for vnto the haue I commated my cause. The LORDE therefore spake thus of the ciuitens of Ano-the, that he soughte to slayme, sayenge: Preach not vnto vs in the name of the LORDE, or els thou shalt dye of oure handes. Thus J saye spake the LORDE of bootes: Beholde, I will vifey you. Your yonge me shal perish with the sixe arde, y^o sonnes and your dought-ters shal vterly dye of hunger, so that no ne shal remayne. For vpon the ciuitens off Anathot wil I bunge a plague, and the years of their visitacion.

The XII. Chapter.

THU LORDE, thou art more righteous, then that I shal dispute with the I neuertheles, let me talke with the in thinge reasonable. How happeneth it, that the waye off the vngodly is so prosperous: and that it goeth so wel with them, which (with out any shame) offe the and lyue in wickednesse: I hon plantest them, they take roote, they growe, and bringe forth frute. They boost much off the, yet doest thou not pmyssh them. But thou LORDE (to whom J am well knowne) thou that hast sine, z proued my herte, take them awaye, like as a flock is caried to the slaughter house, and appointe them for the daye off slaughteringe.

How longe shall the londe mourne, and all the herben off the felde perish, for the wickednes off them that dwell therein?

 saye they thus, God will not destroye vs verery.

Scinge thou art wotery in runnyng with the force men, how wilt thou then runne wth hoies? In a peaceable sure londe thou mayest be safe, but how wilt thou do in the furious pryde of Jordan: For thy brethern ab thy byred haue al together despised the, and cried out upon thee in thour absence. Beloue them not, though they shall saye wordes to the. As some saye I, I haue forsaken my ne owne dwelling place, and left myne here tage. My life also that I lone so well, haue I geuen in to the hōdes of myne enemies. Myne heretage is become vnto me, as a Lyon in the wood. It cried out upon me, therfore haue I forsaken it. Myne heretage is vnto me, as a speckled byde, a byde of dyuerse coloures is upon it. So hence, and gather all the besties of the fildes together, that they maye eat it vp.

Dyuerse byrdmē haue broken downe my wynter, and troden upon my porcion. Of my pleasaunt porcion, they haue made a wildernes & deserte. They haue loyed it wast: and now that it is wast, it sigheth vnto me. Neer the whole londe lieth wast, and no man regardeth it. The destroyers come ouer the heath euery waye, for the swerde off the LORDE shal consume from the one ende of y^e lōde to the oether, and no flesh shal haue rest. They shal slay some wheat, and reape thornes. They shal take h^ereage in possession, but it shal do them no good. And ye shalbe confounded of youre owne wyntinges, because of the greute wrath of the LORDE.

Thus saith the LORDE vpon all myne euil neighbours, that laye honde on myne heretage, whōch I haue geuen my people of I^{er}usal: Beholde, I wil plucke them (namely I^{er}usal) out of their londe, and pue out the house of Iuda from amonge them. And whē I haue dooed the, I will be at one woth the agayne, and wil haue mercy vpon them: and bringe them agayne, euery man to his owne heretage, and in to his lōde. And yf they (namely thateroumē my people) wil learne yf was yo of them, to swaere by my name: The LORDE I wtherch (like as they learned my people to swaere by Baal) shal they be rekened amonge my people. But yf they wil not obeye, they wil I^{er} rose out the same folke, and destroye them, saith the LORDE.

The XIII. Chapter.

Wreuer, thus said the LORDE vnto me: of thy waye & ge the a synnen buech, and gyde it aboute thy loynes, and let it not be weat. Then I got me a buech, accordinge to the commaundment of the LORDE, and put it aboute my loynes. After this, the LORDE spake vnto me agayne. Take the buech that thou hast prepared: put aboute the, and ge the vp, and ge to Euphrates, and hyde it in a hole off the rock. So wot I, and hydde it, as the LORDE commaunded me. And it happened long after this, that the LORDE spake vnto me. Dy, and ge the to Euphrates, and see the buech from thence, whōch I commaunded the in byde there. Then went I to Euphrates, and digged vp, and toke the buech from the place where I had hyd it: and beholde, the buech was corrupt, so that it was profitable for nothinge.

Then sayde the LORDE vnto me: Thus saith the LORDE: Euen so will I corrupt the pryde off Iuda, and the bye myne of Ierusal. This people is a wicked people, they wil not beare my wote, they wil not beare wicked ymaginacions off their owne, they hange vpon strange goddes, they haue they serued & worshipped: and therfore they shal be as this buech, that stureth for nothinge. So as strately as a buech lieth vpon a mil loynes, so strately dyd I bynde y^e whole nation of I^{er}usal, and the whole house of Iuda vnto me, saith the LORDE: that they might be my people: that they might haue a gloum name: yf they might be in honore: but they woude not obeye me. Therfore laye this rebulde before them, and saye: Thus saith the LORDE God of I^{er}usal: euery pot shalbe fylled with wyne. And they shal saye: whōch thou me knowe not, yf euery pot shalbe fylled with wyne: Then shal thou saye vnto them: Thus saith the LORDE: Beholde, I shal fyll alle the in habitacions of this lōde vnto drouennes, the byrges that stey v^{er} droue stole, the prestes and prophetes, with all y^e dwell at Ierusal. And I will strafe them one agaynst another, yee yf fathers agaynst the sonnes, saith the LORDE.

I wil not spare on them, I wil not spare them, nee haue pitie vpon them: but despayne them. Be obedient, geue care, take no droue ne at it, for it is the LORDE himself that shal kech. Honour yf LORDE youre God here, or he take his lighte from you, and droue youe fire stembles in darkness: as yf full destroye ye loke for the lighte, be tume it into y^e strowe and darkness of deach. But yf ye wilnt heare me, that geue youe sercece to mynne, I will moune from my whole barre for your stubburnesse. Piteously will I wepe, and y^e teares shall gush out of myne eyes. For the LORDES floc shall be carried awaye captiue.

1 Telle thinge & the rulers: Humble yo^r sel-ues for you downe lowe, for y^e crowne of yo^r glory shall fall from youre heade. The cities warre the south shall be shut vp, & no man shal open the. All Iuda shall be caried away captiue, so chat none shall remayne.

2 Lie vp youre eyes, and behold the, that came from the North: Like a fat flocke shall they fall upon the. To whom wilt thou make thy moe, when they come upon the: for thou hast raught the thy self, and made the maistore over the. Shal not for some come vs^o the, as on a woman trauelinge with childe:

3 And yf thou woldest say: the in thine heart: Wherefore come these thinges vpon me: (Eue^r) 4 for the multitude of thy blasphemies, shall thy synners perishe & thy see be discouered.

5 For like the man of Iude maye chaunge his synne, & the cat of the mountayne his ferocite: so maye ye that be eyed in euill, be good. Therefore will I iacece you lyke as y^e fobbe that is take awaye with y^e south wynde. This shal be your portion, and the portion of youre measture: when with ye shal be rewarded of me, saith the LORDE: because ye haue forgotten me, and put youre trust in vncertaine thinges. Thei for shall I turne my dolches ouer thy heade, and discouer thy cheere, that thy pyncities maye be seene: y^e abominance, thy deedly malice, thy beastlynes and thy shame shall rebordome. For vpon the sides and hilles I haue sene thy abominations. We be vnto the (o Ierusalem) whē wilt thou cease be clenid en ymoire?

The xiiii. Chapter.

The wordes of the LORDE shewed vnto Jeremij, concerninge y^e death off the frutes.

1 Woe shall mourne, men shall not ge woe more the: o wo bi gaza: the lode shal be nom one had in reparation, & the cite of Ierusalem shal burke out. The lodes shall sende their seruauntes to seche water, & when they come to the welles, they shal fynde no water, but shal carie their vessels home emptye. They shal be ashamed ad confounded, & shal couer their heades. For the grobde shal be dried vp, becauise there is no raien vpon it. The plowmen also shal be ashamed, ad shal couer their heades.
The hynde shal forsake the yonge sawne, because it bulgath fast in y^e filde, becauise there shal be no grasse. The wilde Asses shall stoube in the Messer, and diame in their wynde like the dragons, their eyes shal sayle for want of grasse.

2 Doubtes are ourne wisdnesse rewarde us: But LORDE by thou accordinge to y^e name, though cure transgressions, and synnes be many. For thou art the comforter & helpe of Israel in the tyme of trouble. Why wilt thou be as a straunger in the London, and as one that goeth ouer the feldes, ad cometh in only to remayne for a night? Why wilt thou make thy self for a conuorde, and as it were a graue that yet maye not helpe: for thy arrouns (o LORDE) and we deare thy name, therfore forsake vs not.

3 Then spake the LORDE, concerninge this people: y^e haue pleasure to go so nembly w^o their see, and laune not of, and therfore displeaseth the LORDE in so much, that he will no longer agayne to remembraunce all the iustices, ad pynyshe all their synnes. See euē thus saith the LORDE vnto me: Thou shalst not praye to do this people good. For though they fast, I will not heare their prayers. And though they offre burnt offryges & sacrifices, yet will not I accept them. For I will be froye them with the sword, hunger and pestilence. Then answered I: O LORDE God, the prophetes saie vnto them: Tush, y^e shalst be no fwarder, and no honger shall come vpon you, but the LORDE shal geue you continuall rest in this place.

4 And the LORDE saith vnto me: The prophetes preach lies vnto them in my name. I haue not spoken with them, neither gaue I them any charge, neither byd I sende the: yet they preach vnto you false visions, charmynges, vanities, and disceitfulnesse of their owne heart. Therfore thus saith the LORDE: As for those prophetes that preach in my name (whom I neuer theles haue not sent) and y^e saye: Tush, there shal neither batel nor honger be in this londe: Wiche swarde ad with honger shal those prophetes perishe, and the people to whom they haue preached, shal be cast out of Ierusalem, bye of honger, ad be slayne with the swerde, (and there shal be no man to carie them) both they ad their wy-ues, their synnes and their dougbters. For thus wil I prece their wickidnes vpon the, this shal the: I saye also vnto them: Wipe ye eyes shal wepe without ceasinge daye & night. For my people shal be destroyed with greate harme, and shall perishe with a greate plague. For yf I go in to the fildes, lo, it lieth all full off slayne men: If I come in to the cite, lo, they be all famished of honger.

5 See their prophetes also and prestes shal be led in to an unknowne londe.

D Hast thou then venterly forsaken Juda : (saye J) Dost thou so a byone Sir: Dost thou so played vs, that we can be healed no more: We looked for peace, and there cometh no good: for the tyme of health, & lo, here is noching but trouble. We knowe (o LORDE) all oure mysdoes, and the synnes of oure fathers, that we haue offended y. We noe displeasid (o LORDE) for thy names sake, for gre noe thy loyngne kyndnes: Remember y nante, that thou hast made with vs. Are the re any amonge the goddesses of the Gentiles, that sende rayne, or geue the showres of heaven: Dost not thou it o LORDE our God, in whō we trust: The LORDE, thou dost all these things.

The XV. Chapter.

When spake the LORDE vnto me, ad sayde: Though Ilesos and Samuel shode be for me, yet haue I no helpe to this people. Dymethem away, that they maye go out of my sight. And yf they saye vnto the: Whyther shal we go: The tell the:
 The LORDE geaeth you this answer: Some vnto death, some to the sword, some to hon-ger, some in to captiuitie. For I will bringe foure plagues vpon them, saith the LORDE.
 The sword shal stragle them, the dogges shal deuoure them, the fowles of the ayre ad beestes of the earth shal eate them up, and destroye them. I will scaete them aboute al dy in all kingdomes and londes to be plaged, because of Manasses the sonne of Iehias kinge of Juda, for the things that he dyd in Jerusalem.

Who shal then haue pite vpon the, o Jerusalem: Who shal be ioiuy for the: O who shal make intercession, to opene peace for the: seinge thou goest frome, ad turnest bac-wards, saith the LORDE: Therfore I will stretch out myne hande agaynst the, to destroye the, and I will not be increased. I will scaete the abroad with the sanne on euery side of the londe: I will waist my people and destroye them, for they haue had no lust to turne from their owne wayes. I will make their wyddenes mo in nombre, then the sondes of the see. Vpon y mothers of their children, I shal bringe a destroyer in the noone daye. Sodenly and vnwares, shal I sende a seate vpon their citie. She that bath bone vñ children, shal haue none, hir breasts shal be fill of sorrowe.

The Some shall saye her in the cleare daye, when she shal be confounded and saye for very heuynesse. As for those y remay-ne, I will deliuer them vnto the swordes of their enemies, saith the LORDE. O much alas that euer thou dydest beate me, in mine and backe of the whole londe: Though I neuer leaue ner receaue vpon thys, yet uery man speake enell vpon me. And y (LORDE) answered me: Lebe not I the then no good: Come noe I to the, when thou art in trouble: and helpe y, when thine enemy presseth the: For one yon burte another, one malle that cometh from the north, ether: As for youre riches and treasure, I will geue them out in to a pray, not for my money, but because of all youre synnes, they haue done: all youre coastes. And I will inge you with youre enemies in to a londe, yf ye knowe not: for the fyre that is kyndled my indignacion, shal burne you up.

O LORDE: saye J: When thou knowest al things, therfore remembre me, ad visit deliuer me fro my persecutors: As cause my cause in y lōge watch, yet thou knowest that for thy sake I suffre tribul. When I had founded by my doo, I ac them vpon deliuer they haue made my hart so full of glo. For I call open thy name, o LORDE: God of hoopes. I dwel not amonge the heathen, neither is my deliuer therein: but I dwell only in the feare of thy honre, for thou hast sal-ued me with by grace. Shall my heuynesse dure for euer: Are my plagues then so greaue: they maye neuer be healed: While thou be in a water, that salter, and can not conyue: Vpon these wordes, thus sayde the LORDE vnto me: If thou wilt come agayne, I shal see the in my seruyce: and yf thou wilt out the thinge that is precious from the vyle, thou shalt be euen as myne owne mouth.
 They shal conuerse vnto the, but come as thou vnto the: and so shal I make the a stronge wall of stele agaynst this people. They shal fight agaynst the, but they shal not prevail. For I myself will be with the, to be-the, and deliuer the, saith the LORDE. And I will ryd the out of the bondes of the weles, and deliuer the out of the honde of El ranza.

The XVI. Chapter.

M Grouer, thus saye the LORDE: I so me: Thou shalt take y no wife ner begett children in this place. For of the children that are borne in this place, of their mothers that haue borne them, and of their fathers that haue begotten them in this londe, thus saith the LORDE: They shal dye an horrible death, no mā shal mourn for them, ner burie them, but they shal lye as dead.

ge upon the earth. They shall perish thowm the swarde and hunger, and their bodies shall be meate for the foules of the ayre, and besides of the earth. Againe, thus saith the LORDE: Do not vnto them, that come together, for to moune and wepe: for I haue taken my peace fro this people. (saith the LOR-DE) yet my fauoure and my mercy. And in the londe shall they dye, olde and yonge, and shall not be buried: no man shall bewepe them, no man shall clippe or shawe himselff for them.

There shall not one visite another, to mour-ne with them for their deed, or to comforte them. One shall not offre another the cuppe off consolation, to forget their heuynes for father and mother. Thou shalt not go in to their seate, to syt downe, much lesse to eate or drynke with them. For thus saith the LORDE off hoostes the God off Israell: Beholde, I shall take awaye out of this place, the voyce off mynch and gladnesse, the voyce off the brydegrome and off the bryde: yet and that in youre da ye, that ye maye se it.

Now when thou shewest this people all these wordes, and they saye vnto the: Wherefore hath the LORDE deuised all this greate plage for vs? Or what is the offence and synne, that we haue done agaynst the LORDE our God? Then make thou them this an-swere: Because youre fathers haue forsaken me, saith the LORDE, and haue cleued vnto straunge goddes, whom they haue honoured and worshipped: but me haue they forsaken, and haue not kepte my lawe. And ye w^o your shamefull blasphemies, haue exceded the wickednes off youre fathers. For euery one off you foloweth the frowerde end ymaginacion off his owne hert, and is not obedient vnto me.

Therefore wil I cast you out off this lon-de, in to a londe that ye and youre fathers knowe not: and there shall ye serue straunge goddes da ye and night, there wil I shewe you no fauoure. Beholde therefore saith the LORDE: he be aia are come, that it shall no-more be sayed: The LORDE lyueth, which broughte the children of Israel out of the lode of Egypte: but it shall be sayed the LOR-DE lyueth, that broughte the children of Israel from the L^ord, & from all londes wher he had scattered them. For I wil bringe the agayne in to the lode, that I gaue vnto their fathers.

Beholde, saith the LORDE: I will sende out many fishers to take them, and after y wil I sende out many hunters to hunt the out from all mountaynes and hilles ad oue of the caues of stonoe. For myne eyes beholde all their wayes, and they can not be hyd from my face, neither can their wicked dedes be kepte close out of my sight. But first wil I sufficiently rewarde their shamefull blas-phemies and synnes, wherwith they haue syled my londe: Talmey, with their sinningge Idols and abhominacions, wherw^o they haue fylled myne heretage. GLORDE, my strength, my power, and refuge in tyme off trouble. The Gentiles shall come vnto the from the endes off the world, and saye: Ve-rely oure fathers haue claud vnto lio, their Idols are but vayne and vnfocable. How can a man make, those his goddes, which are not able to be goddes? And therefore, I wil once teach them, saith y LORDE: I wil shewe them my honde and my power, that they maye knowe, y my name is y LORDE.

The xvij. Chapter.

Quere synne o ye off the wybe of Juda is writen in the table off heretee, & graue so vpon the edges of yd au-ters w^o a penne of yon z with an Adamite claw: y youre children also maye thynke vpon youre aueters, woddes, thide trees, hie hilles, mountaynes z feldeo. Wherefore, I wil make all youre substancies z treasure be spoyled, for the great synne that ye haue done vpon youre hie places, thowm out all y coofles off youre lode. Ye shall be cast out also from the heretage, that I gaue you. And I wil subdue you vnder the heuy bddage of yore enemies, in a londe that ye knowe not.
For ye haue ministred synne to my imbriga-cion, which shall burne euermore. Thus saith the LORDE: Cursed be the man that putteth his trust in man, ad that eateth flesh for his arnie: and he, whos herte departeth from y LORDE, he shall be like the heath, that growteth in the wilderness. Ad for the good thin-ge that is for to come, he shall not se it: but dwell in a drie place off the wilderness, in a sale and vnooccupied londe. Whiffed is the man, that putteth his trust in the LORDE, and whos hope the LORDE is himself. For he shalbe as a tre that is planted by the water syde: which spredeth out the roce vnto moynesse, whom the heate can not harme, when it commeth, but his leaues are grene.
And though thow growe but litle fruct because off drought, yet is hence carefull, because he neuer liueth off to bringe forth fruct.
Among all thinges lyuynge, man hath the most discreetfull and wisestheable hert.

Who shall then knowe it: Euen I the LORD Eripe out the grounde off the heere, and searche the reynes and rewarde euery mā accordinge to his wayes, and accordinge to the frute off his counsailes.

The disceasefull maketh a nest, but bringeth forth no yonger: he commeth by riches, but not righteously. In the myddest off his life must he leaue them behinde him, and at the last be founde a very foole. But thou (O LORD) who seestronic is most glorious, excellent and off most antiquite, which dwellest in the place of oure holyrest: Thou art the comforte off Israel. All they that forsake the, shall be confounded: all they that departe from the, shall be written in earth, for they haue forsaken the LORD E, the very condite of the reuoters of life.

Scale me, O LORD E, and I shall be whole: saue thome, and I shall be saued, for thou art my prayse. Beholde, these men saye vnto me: What is the worde of the LORD E? Let it come. Where as I neuertheles leuinge the flocke in thy wayes, haue compelled none by violence, for I neuer desired any mā deeth, this knowest thou well. My wordes also were righte vnto the. Be not now terrible vnto me (O LORD E) for thou art he, in whom I hope, when I am in perill. Let my persecuters be confounded, but not me: let them be a frayd, and not me. Thou shalt bunge upon the tyme off their plage, and shalt destroye them righte soie.

Agayne, thus hath the LORD E sayde vnto me: So and stonde vnder the gate, where thow the people and the kinges of Iuda go out and in, vnder all the gates of Ierusalem, and saye vnto them: Heare the worde of the LORD E, ye kinges of Iuda, and all thou people of Iuda, and all ye citsens of Ierusalem, that go thow the gate: Thus the LORD E commaundeth: Take heede for youre yues, that ye carie no burthen vpon you in the Sabbath, so bringett thow the gates of Ierusalem: ye shall beare no burthen also out of youre houses in the Sabbath: Ye shall do no labour there in, but haloue the Sabbath, as I commaunded you sayetha. How be it they obeyed me not, ne ther hearkened they vnto me: but were obstinate & stubborne, and neuer obeyed me, ne ceased my correction.

Neuertheles, yf ye will heare me (saith the LORD E) and beare no burthen in to yce thow the gate vpon the Sabbath: If ye will haloue the Sabbath, so that ye do no worde there in: then shall there go thow thow the gates of this cite, kinges and princes, that shall see vpon the sole of Dauid: They shall be caried vpon charettes, and ryde vpon horses, both they and their pynce: The whole Iuda and all the citsens of Ierusalem shall go here thow, and this cite shall euer be the more and more inhabited.

There shall come men also from the cuns of Iuda, from aboute Ierusalem, and from Ierde of Ben Jamun, from the playne sides, from the mountaynes and from the wildernes: which shall bunge burntoffringes, sacrifices, oblacions, and incense, and offer up thankes geynge in the house of the LORD E. But yf ye will not be obedient vnto me, & haloue the Sabbath, so that ye will train youre burthen thow the gates off Ierusalem vpon the Sabbath: Then shall I se fyre vpon the gates off Ierusalem, and it shall burne vpon the houses off Ierusalem, and no man shall be able to quench it.

The XVIII. Chapter.

This is another communication, that God had with Jeremyp, sayenge:

Arise, and go doune in to the Potter's house, and there shall I tell the moue off my mynde. Now when I came in the Potter's house, I founde him makinge his worke vpon a whele. The vessell that the Potter made off claye, brake amonge his feete: So he beganne a new, and made another vessell, accordinge to his mynde. Thus sayde the LORD E thus vnto me: Whye not I do w' you, as this Potter doeth. O ye house off Israel, saith the LORD E: Beholde, y house off Israel: ye are in my hande, euen as the claye in the Potter's house.

When I take in honde to rote out, to destroye, or to waite awaye any people: or I ghyde me: yf that people (agaynst whom I haue thus deuyfed) conuert from their wickednes: Immediately, I repente off the plage, that I deuyfed to bunge vpon the. Agayne: When I take in honde, to buyde, or to plante a people in a kingdome: yf the same people do euill before me, and beare not my wayes: Immediately, I repente off the good, that I deuyfed to do for them.

Speake now therfore vnto the whole Iuda, and to them that dwell at Ierusalem: Thus saith the LORD E: Beholde, I am deuyfing a plage for you, and am calyng a thinge in honde agaynst you.

Therefore, let euery man turne from his 13 Then saith he saith the LORDE: Are amonge the heithen, yf eny man hath herbe such horrible thinges, as the daughter of Si on hath done. Shall noe yf sinowe (yf melteth vpon the stony rockes of Libanus) moisten the silbes: Or maye the springes off waters be so graun awaye, that they runne no more, geue moistnesse, ner make frutefull? But my people hath so forgotten me, yf they haue made sacrifice vnto vayne goddes. And whyle they folowd their owne wayes they are come out of the hie strets, and gone into a fere waye noe vnto to be troden. Where the wayes they haue bidoughe their soules in to an enarlinging wilderness and soome: 14 Or yf who so euer trausyleth ther by, shall be abashed, and wagge their heades. With an all wynde will I scatter the, before their enemies. And when their destruction cometh, I will rurne my backe vnto them, but not my face.

15 Then saye they: come, let vs ymagin smythinge agaynst this Jeremy. Wee this daye euen the prestes, to whom yf lawe was commytted: the Senectors, yf were the wyfstand the prophetes, which wauced noe yf more off God. Come saye they: let vs cutt off his edge, and let vs not regarde his wordes. Considre me: (o LORDE) and heare the voyce of myne enemies. Do they not recomence all for good, when they dygg a pye for my soule: Remember, how that I stode before the, to speake for the, ad to rurne awaye thy wrath from them.

16 Then saith he: let their childre bye of hunger, and let them be opprested with the swerde, & let their wyues be robbed of their chylidre, and become wydowes: let their handes be slayned: let their yonge men be fylled with the swerde in the felde. Let the noyse be herd out of their houses, when the murderre cometh suddenly vpon them: for they haue digged a pic to rade me, and layed snares for my face. Yet LORDE, thou knowest all their counsel, that they haue deuysed, to slay me, and let the fore sounge them noe their wickednes, and let no their synne be put out of thy sight: let them be iudged before the, as the giltye: This shall thou do vnto the in yf tyme of thy indignacion.

The XIX. Chapter.

17 Neuer, thus saide the LORDE vnto Jeremy: Go thy waye, and bye the as an eiden pycher, and bringe forth the Senectors and chiefe prestes in to the valley of the dylouen off Ennon, which lieth be fore the porte that is made of bricke: & shewe them there the woddes, that I shall tell the, and saye thus vnto them: Heare the wordes of the LORDE, ye Kinges of Iuda, ad ye citeyns of Ierusalem: Thus saith the LORDE of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I will bringe such a plage vpon this place, that yf cares of all that heare it, shall glowe. And that because they haue forsake me, and unbalowd this place, and haue offred in it vnto straunge goddes: whs nerther they, their fathers, ner the Kinges off Iuda haue knowen. They haue filled this place also wth the bloodes of innocentes, for they haue set vnto an altar vnto Baal, to burne their childre for a burnt offeringe vnto Baal, which I nether commaunded, ner charged them, nether thoughte once there vpon.

Behold it ther fore, yf tyme cometh (saith the LORDE) yf this place shall no more be called Tophet, ner yf valley of yf dylouen of Ennon, but yf valley of slaughter. For in this place will I slaye the Senectors of Iuda & Ierusalem, I will chee downe wth the swerde in yf sighte of their enemies, ad of them that see their lyues. And their deat carcasses will I geue to be meate for the foules of the ayre, and bestes of the felde. And I will make this cite desolate, ad despyed: that who so geath there by, shall be abashed & graef vpon her, because of all his plagies.

I will sode them also wth the flesch of their fomes & their dongheers. Xee euery one shall eate vpon another in the besynging & strayinge sit, wher wth their enemies (yf sith their lyues) shall perthe in. And the preder shall thus breake in the sighte of the me, yf shall wth the, and saye vnto the: Thus saith the LORDE off hostes: Loe so will I destroye this people & cite: as a Poeter breateth a vessell, that can noe be made whole agayne.

In Tophet shall they be buried, for they shall haue none other place. Thus will I do vnto this place also, saith the LORDE, and to che yf well there in: yee I will do to this cite, as vnto Tophet: for the houses of Ierusalem & the houses of the Kinges of Iuda are defyled, li: as Tophet, because off all the houses, in whose parlors they byd sacrifice vnto all the hoste of heane, and poured out burnt offeringes vnto strange goddes. And so Jeremy came from Tophet, wher the LORDE had sent himre prophcie, and stode in the court off the house off the LORD, and spake so all the people: Thus saith the LORD off hosties the God off Israel: Beholde, I will vinge vpon this ease and vpon eury towne aboute it, all the plagues that I haue denysed agaynst them: for they haue bene obsequer, ad woldenoe obeye my warnynges.

The XX. Chapter.

When Pashur the priest, the sonne off Ammer, these in the house off the LORD, herde Jeremij preach so fastly: he sinore Jeremij, and put him in the stocks. that are by the hie gate off Jen Jamim, in the house off y LORD. The next daye followinge, Pashur broughe Jeremij out of the stocks agayne. Then sayde Jeremij vnto him: The LORD shall call the nameise Pashur (that is excellent and increasinge) but I lague (that is fearful ad a frayed) eury where. So thus saith the LORD: beholde, I will make the a frayed, che thy self, and all that fauoure y: which shal perissh with the forward off their enemies, euen before y face.

And I wil geue whole Iuda vnder the power off the kinge of Babilon, which shall carie some vnto Babilon prisoners, and slaye some with the sword. Moreover, all y substance off this lond, all their precious and gorgeous wores, all coslynesse, and all the treasure off the kinges off Iuda: wil I geue into the hodes off their enemies, which shal spoyle them, and carie them vnto Babilon.

But as for the Pashur, thou shalt be caried vnto Babilon with all thine housholde, & to Babilon shalt thou come, where thou shalt die, and be buried: thou and all thy fauourers, to whom thou hast preached lies. O LORD, then makest me weake, but thou refreshest me, & makest me stronge agayne. All the daye longe am I deysyd, and blaughed to some of eury man: because I haue now preached longe agaynst malicious Tyranny, and shewed them off destruction. So y which cause they call the woide off the LORD in my eech, and take me eue to the woise.

Wherefore, I thoughte from hence forth, not to speake off him, ner to praye in his name. But the woide off the LORD was a very burnyng fyre in me here and in my bones, which when I wold haue stopped, I might noe. For why, I herde so many denysis and blasphemies, yee euen off my ne owne companions, and off soch as were conuersaunte with me: which wene aboute, so make me a frayed sayng: vpon him, he go vpon him, so frare him, and make him holde his tongue: yf we maye ouercome him, and be a venged off him.

But the LORD stode by me, like a mightie gaunte: wherfore my persecuters shal, an coude do no thinge. They shal be frayed confounded, for they haue bene trusty, they shal haue an euerlastinge shame. And now, O LORD off hosties, thou righteous sterde, which knowest the reyne and the very heart: let me se them punished, for into the I come to my cause.

Syng vnto the LORD, and praye him, for he hath deliuered the soule off the oppresid, from the honde off the violent. Cursed be the daye, wherein I was borne: vnto what pic be y' daye, wherein in my mother I was borne. Cursed be the man, that brought my father the adinges, to make him glad, sayng: thou hast gotten a sonne. Let it be open vnto that man, as to the cities which y LORD turned vpside downe: when he had longe herde the wicked rourne off thynt cause he slewe me not, as some as I came out off my mothers wombe, and because my mother was not my graue hill, off the which myghte noe haue come out, but remained still in her. Why thou came I forth off my mothers wombe: To haue experiance off labour and sorrow: and to lete my life with shame?

The XXI. Chapter.

These are the woordes that the LORD spake vnto Jeremij, when yme as the kinge Sedechias sent vnto him in pass in the sonne off Nieldia, and Sephanus the sonne off Maasia priest, sayng: Art thou well at the LORD (we praye the) off our behalf, for Labachodonosor the kinge off Babilon t' speake to, off the LORD (patience) will deale with vs, according to his maruelous p'ter, and take him from vs.

Then spake Jeremij: Goe Sedechias, this answere, Thus saith the LORD off Israel: beholde, I will come to the weapons, that ye haue in your handes, whether with yf fighte agaynst the kinge off Babilon & the Caldees, which be siege you rounde aboute y' walles: & I wil bringe the vnto me in to the myddest off this cite, and I myself will fighte agaynst you, with an outspreade bowe, ad with a mighty arme, in great pleasure and terrible wrath: and will

them, that dwell in this cite: yee both me ad cazell shal dye of the pestilence.

And after this saith the LORDE: I shall deliuer Sadechias the kinge of Iuda, ⁊ his seruauntes, his people and such as are escaped in the cite, from the pestilence, swerde, and hunger: in to the power of Nabuchodo-nosor kinge of Babilon: yee in to the hōdes of their enemies, in to the hōdes of those y of solow upon their tyues, which shall smyte them with y swerde: they shal not pite the, they shal not spare them, they shall haue no mercy vpon them.

And vnto this people thou shalt saye: Thus saith the LORDE: beholde, I haue before you the waye of life and death. Who so shal pish in this cite, shal perish: ether wth the swerde, with hunger, or with pestilence. But who so goeth out to holde on y Caldees partye, y beleege it, he shal saue his life, and shall wyne his soule for a pray. For I haue set my face agaynst this cite: saith the LORDE: y shall plug it, and to do it no good. I must be genial in to the bande of the kinge of Babilon, ⁊ to be warr with yue.

And vnto the house of the kinge off Juda saith yue: heare the worde of y LORDE (vnto the house off Dauid) for thus saith the LORDE: I thinke the righteousnes, and that so one, vnto the oppressed frō violent power: or mee my terrible wrath break out like a fy-re, and burne so, that no man maye quēch it, because of the wickednes of youre imaginations. Beholde: saith the LORDE: I will come vnto you, that dwell in the walleis, recks and selles and saye: Cuss, who will make me a staye: or who will come in to ouerhouse me: for I will vnto you: saith the LORDE because off the wickednes off youre inuentions, and will tyndle such a fyre in youre wed, as shall consume all, that is aboute you.

The XXII. Chapter.
Thus sayde the LORDE also: So dome-nyd in to the house of the kinge off Juda, and spake there these wordes, ⁊ saie: heare the worde off the LORDE, thou kinge off Iuda: that sittest in the kyngly seat off Dauid: thou and thy seruauntes ad y people, that go in ⁊ out at this gate. Thus saie the LORDE commaunders: kepe equite and righteousnesse, deliuer the oppressed frō the power off the violent: do not greue ner op-presse the stranger, the fatherlesse ner the widowe, ad slyd no innocēt bloude in this place.

And yf ye kepe these thinges faithfully, then shall there come in at the doore off this house kynges, to syt vnto Dauidos seate: they shal be caried in Chareeces and ryde vpon horses, both they ⁊ their seruauntes, ad their people. But yf ye wil not be obedient vnto these commaunders, I sweare by my-ne owne self: saith y LORDE: this house shal be wast. For thus hath the LORDE spoken vpon the kynges house of Iuda: Thou art the heade, as Galaad is in Libanus: What wile thou laye of it, yf I make the not frō wast: ⁊ thy cities also: that no man shal dwell there in.

I will prepare a destreyt with his mea-pēs for the, to hem dome the speciall Cedre trees, and to cast them in the fyre.

And all the people that go by this cite, shal speake one to another: Wherefore hath the LORDE done thus vnto this noble cite?
Then shall it be answered: because they haue broken the couenaunt off the LORDE their God, and haue worshipped and serued strayge goddes. I knowe not ouer the deed, and be nor wo for them, but be fōry for him that depretech a waye: for he commeth one agayn, ad stech his natyue countre no more. For thus saith the LORDE, as touching Sallum the sonne of Josias kinge of Iuda, which reigned a fater his father, and is cari-ed out off this place:

He shal neuer come hitther agayne, for he shal dye in the place, where vnto he is led acayue, and shall this londe nomoie. Wo woth him, that buydech his house with vnrighteousnes, ad his perlers with the good, that he hath gotten by violence: which neuer recompenseth his neighbors laboure, ner payeth him his hye. He thinkech in hymself: I wil buyde me a wyde house, ad geuoune perlers: he causeth wyndowes to be hewen there in, and the sylinges and geafes ma-kech he off Cedre, and paynteth them with Zender. He thinkest thou to reigne, in what thou prowest me to: warr with y Cedre trees?

Dyd not thy father eate and drynke, and prosperer well, as long as he dealt with equi-te ad righteousness: yee when he helped y oppressed and poore to their righte, then profpered he well.

From whence came this, but only because he had me before his eyes: saith the LORDE. Wherefores, as for thine eyes and thine herte, they loke vnto covynousnesse, to slyd in nocent bloude, to do wronge and violence. And therfore, thus saith the LOR-DE agaynst Joachim, y sonne of Josias kin-ge of Iuda: Thou shalt nomoie reigne for him: (as they vnto) do alas brother, alas syster:

Whether shall they saye vnto him: Alas sye, alas for that noble pryncce. But as an Assē shall he be buried, covered and be cast with ourthe gates of Ierusalem.

D Chymme vpon the fall off Libanus (o thou donghter Zion) lift vpon thy voyce vpon Babilon, crye from all partes: for alle thy louers are destroyed. I gaue the morninge, whyle thou wast yet i prosperite, but thou saydest: I will not heare. And this maner hast thou vsed from thy youth, that thou woldest neuer heare my voyce. All thy hyndmen shalbe deuyen with the wynde, and thy delingues shalbe caried awaye in to capelyue: Then shal thou be brought to shame and conuicion, because of alle thy wickednes: thou that dwellest vpon Libanus, ad makest thy nest in the toppe of cedres. As truly as I lyue (saith the LORDE.) Though Iudonias the sonne off Joachim kinge off Iuda were the signe off my right hande, yet will I plucke him off: And I will geue the in to y power off the that seeke to slaye the, and in to the power off them that thou fearest in to the power off Labachodon for the kyng off Babilon, and in to the power off the Caldees. Moreover, I will sende the, and thy mother that bare the, in to a straunge londe, where ye were not borne, ad there shall ye dye. But as for the londe that ye will desire to returne vnto, ye shall never come acit agayne. This mā Iudonias shal be like an ymar robbed and come in pecee, which pleaseth no man, for all his apparell. Wherefore berthe and his sebe shalbe sent awaye, and cast out in to a lode, that they knowe not.

E O thou earth, earth, earth: heare the woode off the LORDE. Whye this man amonge the outlawes, for no prosperite shall this man haue all his life longe. Whether shall any of his seede be happie, as to sye vpon the seat of Dauid, and to beare rule in Iuda.

The XXXIII. Chapter.

W O be vnto the shepherdes, that despoyle, and scatter my stocke, saith the LORDE. Wherefore, this is the commaundment of the LORDE God of Israel, vnto the shepherdes that feede my people: Ye feare ad shrinke out my stocke, and loke not vpon them. Therfore, now will I visit the wickednes of youre ymaginacions, saith the LORDE: And will gather to gather the remnant of my stocke, from all londes that I haue dryuen them vnto, and will bringe them agayne to their pastures, that they maye growe and increace. I will set shepherdes also amonge them, which shall feede them. They shall in no more feare and diebe, for there shall none off them be lost, saith the LORDE. Beholde, the tyme cometh, saith the LORDE, that I will raise vpon the righteous brinards off Iuda, which shall beare rule, and dispoise maner with wysdome, and shall sit vpon equitye and righteuousnes agayne in the earth.

22
16. 1. e

In his tyme shall Iuda be saued, and Iudonias shall dwell without feare. And this is the name that they shall call him: euen the LORDE oure righteuous maker. And there shall be the tyme cometh (saith the LORDE) that it shall no more be sayde: the LORDE Iynch, which broughte the children off Israel out of the londe of Egypte: But the LORDE Iynch, which broughte forth, ad led the seede of the house off Israel, out of the north londe, and from all countrees where I had scattered them, and they shall dwell in their owne londe agayne.

Whye here brakech in my body because of the false prophetes, all my bones shalbe: I am become like a brondren man (that by the reason of vyne can take no rest) for very reason of the LORDE, and of his holy wordes: because the londe is full of aduocates, wher the tyme is destroyed and morneth, and y pleasant pastures of the desire are dryed up. For the waye that men take, is wiche, their gouernance is neching like the drye worbe of the LORDE. For the prophetes and the prestes them selues are polmed hypocrites, ad their wickednes haue I founde in my house, saith the LORDE. Wherefore, the house shall be slippery in the darke, when in they maye sticke and fall, for I will bringe a plage vpon them, euen the year of the ir visitacion, saith the LORDE. I haue fearefully amonge the prophetes of Samaria, if they preached for Baal, ad discontemnyd my people off Israel. I haue sene also amonge the prophetes off Ierusalem foule aduocates, and presumptuous lies. They take the my shamefull men by the hode, flatering them, so that they can not returne from their wickednes. All these with their cities, as well as well come, as Sodom, and as the inhabitants off Gemoire.

Therfore thus saith the LORDE of Iuda concerninge the prophetes: Beholde, I will feede them with worme woode, I will make them drye vnto the weate of gall. For sye the pre-pieces of Jerusalem is the sickness of Apocri his come to all the land.

And therefore the LORDE of hoostes geneth you this warning: heare not the wodes of the prophetes, that preach unto you, and disceaze you: for they speake the mea-nyng of their owne herte, and not out of the mouth of the LORDE. They saye unto them, that despyse me: The LORDE hath spoken it: Tush, ye shal prosper right well.
And unto all them, that waite after the lust of their owne herte, they saye: Tush, there shall no mysfortune happen you. For who hath spoken in the counsell of the LORDE, that he hath herbe and vnderstonde, what he is aboute to do? Who hath marked his beeres, and herde it? Beholde, the stormy weber of the LORDE (that is, his indignacion) shal goe forth, and shal fall downe vpon the base of the mygodly. And the wrath of the LORDE shal not turne agayne, vntill he performe, and fulfill the thought of his herte. And in the latter dayes ye shall knowe his meanyng.

I haue not sent these prophetes, (saith the LORDE) and yet they ranne, I haue not spoken to them, and yet they preached. But if they had continued in my counsell and herde my wordes: they had turned my people from their euill wayes and wicked imaginacions. Am I the God that seeth but the thinge, which is nye at honde, and not that is farr off? (saith the LORDE) Wylle any man hye him self, that I shal not see him? saith the LORDE. Do not I fulfill beauen and earth? (saith the LORDE) I haue herde well ynough, what the prophetes saye, that preach in my name, sayenge: I haue dremed, I haue dreamed. How longe will this dremme in the prophetes herres, to tel lyes, and to preach the crafty sorlyce of their owne herte: Whose purpose is, (with the dre-mes that eury one telle) to make in my people forget my name, as their fore fathers byd, wher Daal came vp. The prophet that hath a dreame, let him tel it: and be char vnderstonde my wordes, let him shewe it faithfully.

For what hath chaffe and wheat to do together? (saith the LORDE) Is no my woode like a fyre, (saith the LORDE) and like an hammer, that breaketh the harde stone?
Therefore thus saith the LORDE: beholde, I will vpo the prophetes, that steale my wo-de pryde from eury man. Beholde, here am I (saith the LORDE) agaynst the prophetes, that take vpon their tongues to speake:

The LORDE hath sayde it. Beholde, here am I (saith the LORDE) agaynst the prophetes, that barre prophesyng, and disceaze my people with their vanities and miracles, wherof I neuer sent, nor commaunded them.
They shal doo this people greaue harme, (saith the LORDE).

If this people, echer eny prophete or prest saye the, and saye: what is the burthen of the LORDE? Thou shal saye unto them: What? burthen: Therfore will I cast you fro me (saith the LORDE) because ye yourselues are a burthen. And the prophete, prest or people that wiche this terme (the burthen of the LORDE) him will I vuse, and his house also.

But thus shall ye saye, eury one to another: What answer hath the LORDE geuen ou, what is the LORDES commaundement?
And as for the burthen of the LORDE, ye shal speake no more of it: for eury mans owne woode is his burthen, and because ye haue altered the wordes of the luyng God the LORDE of hoostes oure God.

Thus shall eury man saye to the prophetes: what answer hath the LORDE geuen the? Or, what saith the LORDE? And not once to name the burthen of the LORDE.
Therefore thus saith the LORDE: For somoch as ye haue vsed this terme (the burthen of the LORDE) where as I nor watch-stoninge sent vnto you, and forbade you to speake of the LORDES burthen:

Beholde therefore, I will repute you as a burthen, and will cast you out of my presence: ye and the cite also, that I gaue you and your fathers: and will bringe you to an curtaining confusion, and in to such a shanne, as shal neuer be forgotten.

The XXXIII. Chapter.

The LORDE shewed me a vision. Beholde, there stode two manudes of fyres beside yf Temple of the LORDE a fiery Tabachodonosor kyng of Babil had led a waye captiue Jehonias the sonne of Jea-chim kyng of Iuda, with the workemasters and co-nyngemen of Jerusalem, vnto Babilon. In the one manude were very good fyres, euen like as thest that be first ripe. In the ocher manude were very naughtie fyres, which myghte not be eaten, they were so euill.

Then sayde the LORDE vnto me: what seist thou Jeremy? I sayde: fyres, where of some be very good, and some so euill, that no man maye eate them.

Then came the worde of the LORDE vnto me, after this maner: Thus saierh y^e LORDE the God of y^e Israel: like as thou knowest the good fyges, so shal I knowe the men led awaye, whom I haue sent out of this place in to the londe of the Caldees, for their profice: and I will set myne eyes vpon them for the best, for I will brynge them agayne in to this londe: I will buyde them vp, and not breake them downe: I will plante them, and not rote them out. And I will geue them an herte, to knowe, howe that I am the LORDE. They shal be my people, and I will be their God, for they shal retorne vnto me with the ir whole herte.

Jer. 29. 4

Jer. 29. 5

And like as thou knowest the naughty figge, which maye not be eat, they are so euill: Thus saierh the LORDE: Ier Sede thus the Kinge of Iuda, (ye and all his pryinces, & the residue of Jerusalem that remayne ouer in this londe, & them also that dwell in Egypce) so be wored & plagued in all kingdome & londes. And will make them to be a re profie, a comon by worde, a laughinge stocke & shame, in all the place, where I shal seee them. I will sende the swaerde, hunger & pestilence amonge them, vntill I haue done consumed them out of the londe, that I gaue vnto them & their fathers.

The XXV. Chapter.

A Sermon that was g.uen vnto Jeremy, vpon all the people of Iuda: In the fourth yere of Ioaquim the sonne of Josias Kinge of Iuda, that was, in the first yere of Nabuchodonosor Kinge of Babylon. Which sermone, Jeremy the prophet made vnto all the people of Iuda, & to all y^e Inhabitours of Ierusalem, on this maner:

From the xiiij. yere of Josias the sonne of Amon Kinge of Iuda, vnto this present daye, (that is euen xliij. yere) the worde of the LORDE haeb bene committed vnto me. And so I haue spokt to you, I haue ryen vp early, I haue greuf you wartyng in Iason, but ye wolde not heare me. Though the LORDE haeb sent his seruantes, all the prophetes made vnto you in Iason: Yet wolde ye noe obeye, ye wolde not endine y^e cares to heare.

Jer. 29. 6
34. 21

Jer. 29. 8

Ye saye: turne agayne every man from his euill waye, & from youre wicked ymaginacions, & so shal ye dwell for euer in the londe, that the LORDE promised you & youre fore fathers: And goe not after straunge goddes, seruetheem not, worshippe them not, & an greue me not with the woikes of youre hōdes; then will not I punysh you. Ternerthales, ye wolde not heare me (saierh the LORDE) but haue desied me with the woikes of youre hōdes, to youe owne greate harme.

Wherfore, thus saierh the LORDE of y^e Heaues: Because ye haue not hearkend vnto my worde, so, I will sende ouer, & call for all the people, y^e dwell in the north (saierh the LORDE) & will paye y^e Labudodonosor the Kinge of Babylon my seruante, and will brynge them vpon this londe, and vpon all y^e that therein, & vpon all the people that are aboute them, and will utterly rote them out: I will make of them a wildernes, a mocke age, & a continuall deserte.

Moreover, I will take from them the voyce of gladnesse and solace, the voyce of the byrd, the voyce of the byrd, the voyce of the nyghtingale, with the cressethere: & this whole londe shal become a wildernes, & they shal serue the sayde people and the Kinge of Babylon, thre score yeres and ten. When they yeres are expyred, I will visite althe meekenesse of the Kinge of Babylon & his people, saierh the LORDE: yet the londe of y^e Caldees, & will make it a perpetuall wildernes, & will fulfil all my woikes vpon that londe, which I haue dryed agaynst it: yet all that is written in this booke, which Jeremy hath propheted of all people: so that they also shal be subdued vnto youre natione greate kynges, for I will recompense them, accordinge to their dobes & woikes of th^e owne hōdes.

For thus haeb the LORDE God of y^e Heaues spoken vnto me: Take this wyne cuppe of indignacion fro my hōde, that thou maye cause all the people, to whom I sende the cuppe to drinke of it: that when they haue drunke thereof, they maye be madd, & out of their wytes, when the swaerde commeth: the I will sende amonge them. Then toke I the cuppe from the LORDES hōde, & made althe people drinke thereof, vnto whom the LORDE had sent me.

But first the cite of Jerusalem, & all the cities of Iuda, their kinges & prynces: & all the cite desolate, wast, despyed & cursid, as thou drinke of it: so come to passe this daye. Yet Pharaos Kinge of Egypce, his seruantes, his prynces & his people altogether: & all the Kinges of the londe of Egipt, all the Kinges of the Philistynes londe, Assur, Gusa, Accaron & the remnant of Babylon, the Edomites, the Moabites & the Ammonites: all the Kinges of Turus & Sidon: the Kinges of the Ies, that are beyonde the Iordan, & the Ies, that haue y^e Iordan: & all the Kinges of Arabye, & generally all the king: that dwell in the desert: all the kinges of Sumir, all the kinges of Elam, all y kinges of the Medes, all kinges towards the north (whiche they be farre of nye) eue-ry one with his neighbours: Ree and all the kingdomes that are upon the whole earth. The kinge of Sefach (sayde he) shal drinke with them also.

1) And saye then vnto them: this is the com- mandement of the LORDE of hostes the God of Israell: drinke and be dronken, spe- ke, and fall: that ye reauer rise: and that tho- row the sworde, which I wil sende among- ge you. But yf theye will not receaue the cup- pe of thy wrath, and drinke it, then tell them: Thus doth the LORDE of hostes threaten y^bou: drynke it ye shal, and that shortly. For
2) I begyne to plage the cite, that my ma- nne is geam vnto: thynke ye then, that I will lase you vpon synners? Ye shall not ge- quyre. For why, I call for a sworde vps all the inhabitants of the earth, saith the LORDE of hostes.

Therefore call them all these wordes, and saye vnto them: The LORDE shal crye from shewe, and let his voyce be heard from his holy habitation. With a greates noise shall he come from his countre againe. He shal geue a greates voyce (like the grape gatherer) and the spunde thereof shal be heard vnto the en- des of the world. For the LORDE hath a iudgement to geue vpon all people, and will holden his countre of iustice with all flesh and purghe the vnrighteous, saith the LORDE.

3) For thus saith y^d the LORDE of hostes: He hold, a mistakable plage shall goe from one people to another, and a greates stormy wa- ter shall arise from all the endes of the earth. And the same daye shall the LORDE himselfe saye them, from one ende of the earth to a- nother. There shall no moue be made for e- ny of them, none gathered vp, none buried: but shall lie as dung vpon the ground.

4) Some (o ye shepherdes) crye: spuinc- Myre slues with ashen, o ye rammes of the flocke: for the crye of youre slaughter is fulfilled, and ye shal fall like vessels con- sumptly made for pleasure.

5) The shepherdes shall haue no waye to fle, and the rammes of the flocke shall not scape. Then shal the shepherdes crye how- ly, and the rammes of the flocke shall mour- ne: for the LORDE shal consume their pas- ture, and their best feldees shal lie dead because of the horrible wrath of the LORDE. Theye shall forsake their foldes like as a lyon: For their lombes shal be waist, because of the wrath of the destroyer, and because of his fearfull indignation.

The XXVI. Chapter.

JET the begynnyng of the reigne of Joachim the sonne of Josias kynge of Juda, came this word from the LORDE, sayenge: Thus saith the LORDE: Stande in the countre of the LORDES house, and speake vnto all them which (one of the cities of Juda) come to do worship- pe in the LORDES house, all the wordes of Jeremy: and rebe to saye. I obe that thou kee- pe not one worde backe, yf (peradventure) theye will heere, and turne euery man from his vici- ted waye: that I maye also repace of the plage, which I haue deemed to brynge vpon them, because of their wicked inuen- tions.

And after this maner shalt thou speake vnto them: Thus saith the LORDE: yf ye will not obeye me, to walke in my lawes, which I haue geuen you, and to heare the wordes of my seruantes the prophetes, whom I sent vnto you, risinge up amonge, and still sendinge: yf ye will not folowe the (I saye) then will I do to this house, as I dyd vnto Silo, and will make this cite to be abhored of all the people of the earth. And the prestes the prophetes and all the people heere Jeremy prayde these wordes, in the house of the LORDE.

1) Now when he had spoken out all the wor- des, that the LORDE commaunded him to preach vnto all the people, then the prestes, the prophetes and all the people kee holde vpon him, and sayde: thou shalt dye. How darrest thou be so bolde, as to saye in the na- me of the LORDE: it shal happen to this house as it dyd vnto Silo: and this cite shall be so wast, that no man shal dwell therein?

2) And when all the people were gathered aboute Jeremy in the house of the LORDE, the pryces of Juda heere of this rumour, & theye came: soone one of the kinges pa- lace into the house of the LORDE, and fac- ed them downe before the new doore of the LORDE. Then spake the prestes and the prophete vnto the rulers: & to all the people, these wordes: This man is worthy to dye, for he hath preached agaynst this cite, as ye your- selues haue herde with youre eares.

3) Then sayde Jeremy vnto the rulers and to all the people: The LORDE hath sente me to preach agaynst this house & agaynst this cite: all the wordes that ye haue herde. Theye soue amende youre wayes, and youre ad- uer- sementes, and be obedient vnto the voyce of the LORDE youre God: so shal the LORDE repit of the plage, yf he had deuylid agaynst you. How as former: I am in youre hendes,

But this shall ye knowe: yf ye put me to dea-

DE hath sene me vnto you, to speake all these wordes in youre eares.

Then sayde the rulers and the people vnder the prestes and prophetes: This man maye not be condemned to death, for he hath plea-ched vnto vs in the name of the LORDE our God. The Elders also of the londe stode vp,

Mich. 2. 2

7 sayde thus vnto all the people: Nidzeas the Mesasce, which was a prophet vnder Ezechias kinge of Iuda, spake to all the people of Iuda: Thus saith the LORDE of ho-lies: Sion shalite plowed like a filde, Ierusale shalbe an heape of stones, 7 the hill of the LORDES house shalbe turned to an hie wood.

Byd Ezechias yf kinge of Iuda 7 the people of Iuda put him to death for this: To wery-ly, but rather feared yf LORDE, 7 made their prayer vnto him. For the which cause also yf LORDE repented of the plage, yf he had deuyled agaynst them. Shulde we then do such a shamefull deede agaynst oure soules: There was a prophet also, that preached stiffly in the name of the LORDE, called Vrias the sonne of Semia of Cariatiarum: this man prached also agaynst this cite 7 agaynst this lōde, accordinge to all as Jeremij saith, To w-when Joachim the kinge with all the estates 7 princyes had herde his wordes, the kinge wrote a bouce to slaye him. When Vrias perceaued that, he was a frayed, 7 fled, 7 departed in to Egipte.

Then Joachim the kinge sent seruantes into the lōde of Egipte, to wch: Elnathā the sonne of Achoi, 7 certayne men w him in to Egipte, which fetched Vrias out of Egipte, 7 brought him vnto kinge Joachim that slew him with the swerde, 7 cast his dead body in ea yf coms peoples graue. But Abicam the sonne of Saphan helped Jeremij, that he came not in to the bondes of the prey, to be slayne.

The XXXVij. Chapter.

2. In the begynnyng of the reigne of Joachim the sonne of Josias kynge of Iuda, came this moude vnto Jeremij from the LORDE, which spake thus vnto me: Take the bondes 7 chaynes, and put them aboute thy neck, 7 sende thy to the kinge of Egipte, the kinge of Moab, the kinge of Amon, the kinge of Tyros, 7 to the king of Sidon: that by the messengers, which shal come to Ierusalem vnto Sedechias kinge of Iuda, and byd them saye vnto the masters: Thus saith the LORDE of ho-lies the God of Israel, speake thus vnto yf Mestere: I am he that made the earth, there-7 yf cattle that are vpon the ground, wch my greate power 7 outstretched arme, the ue geuen it vnto whom it pleasd me. Acknowe will I deliuer all these lōdes in wch power of I Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Ba-bilon my seruant. The bestes also of the fildes shal I geue him to do him seruys. All the people shal serue him, 7 his sometym childe children, vntil the tyme of the small deede come also: For many peoples graues shal serue him.

Moreover, that people 7 kingdome which wil not serue Nabuchodonosor, and that wil not put their neckes vnder yf yoke of cha-ge of Babilon: the same people will I wh-with swerde, with hunger, with pestilence, vntil I haue consumed them in his bondes, saith the LORDE. And therefore, so wch your prophetes, for this cause, expounded dieames, chaunero 7 wicheas, which saye to you: ye shal not serue the kinge of Ba-bilon. For they preach you lies, to bringe yf sare from youre lōde, 7 that I mighte you out, 7 destroye you. But the people that put their neckes vnder the yoke of the kinge of Babilon, 7 serue him, the yf I will maye staye in their owne lōdes, saith the LOR-DE: 7 they shal occupie it, 7 dwell therein.

All these thinges tolde I Sedechias the kinge of Iuda, and sayde: Put youre necke vnder the yoke of the kinge of Babilon, and serue him 7 his people, that ye maye lye.
Why wilt thou and thy people perish with the swerde, with hunger, with pestilence as the LORDE hath occupie for all people, that wil not serue the kinge of Babilon?
Therefore geue no iare vnto those prophets that tell you: For ye shall not serue the kinge of Babilon: for they preach you lies, rather ye I sent them, saith the LORDE: how because they are bolde, falsly for to prophete in my name: that I mighte yf sooner dystroye you out, 7 that ye mighte perish with yf preachers.

I spake to the prestes also and to all the people: Thus saith the LORDE: I am the wordes of those prophetes, that preach vnto you, saye: Beholde, the vessels of the LORDES house shall shortly be brought to the agayne from Babilon: for the people of Egipte lie vnto you. Hate them not, but the King of Babylon, y remayne here. When he shall see this cite to be destroyed: hee if they be true prophetes in very dede, and if the woordes of the LORDE be commyng vnto them, then let them praye the LORDE of hostes, that the remanance of the ornaments (which are in the house of the LORDE, and remayne yet in the house of the Kinge of Iuda and at Jerusalem) be not caried to Babylon also. For thus hath the LORDE of hostes spoken concerninge the pylers, the altar, the steare and the residue of the omeasures that yet remayne in this cite, which Nabuchodonosor the Kinge of Babylon toke, when hee caried awaye Iechonias the sonne of Ioadim Kinge of Iuda, with all the power of Iuda and Jerusalem, from Jerusalem vnto Babylon, captiue.

Jerthas hath the LORDE of hostes the God of Israel spoken, as touchinge the residue of the ornaments of the LORDES house, for the Kinge of Iudaea house, and of Jerusalem: They shall be caried vnto Babylon, and there they shall remayne, vntill I visit them, saith the LORDE. Then will I bringe them further agayne. And this was done in the same yere: and in the beginninge of the reigne of Sedechias Kinge of Iuda.

The XXXIII. Chapter.

IN the fourth yere of the reigne of Sedechias Kinge of Iuda, in the fifth moneth, It happened, that Hananiah of some of Assur the prophet of Babylon, spake to me in the house of the LORDE, in the presence of the priestes, & of all the people, he sayde: Thus saith the LORDE of hostes the God of Israel: I haue broken the yocke of the Kinge of Babylon, and after two yere will I bringe agayne in to this place, all the ornaments of the LORDES house, y Nabuchodonosor Kinge of Iuda caried awaye from this place vnto Babylon. And I will bringe agayne Iechonias the sonne of Ioadim the Kinge of Iuda himself, with all the prisoners of Iuda, y are caried vnto Babylon, in to this place, saith the LORDE, for I will breake y yocke of the Kinge of Babilon.

Then the prophet Jeremie gan: firste reuerse vnto that prophet Hananiah, before the priestes & before all the people that were present in the house of the LORDE. And the prophet Jeremie sayde: Alas, the LORDE doth saye: & I hauee the thinge, which thou hast prophesied: that hee maye din ye agayne all the ornaments of the LORDES house, & restore all the prisoners from Babylon in to this place. Howbeit, yet saye thou also, what I will saye, that thou & all the people maye heare: The prophetes that were before vs in tymes past, which prophesied of warre, of trouble, of pestilence, ether of peace, vpon many nations, & greete Kingdomes, were proued by this yf God had sente them in very dede) when the thinge came to passe, which that prophet tolde before.

And Hananiah the prophet tolde the chayne from the prophet Jeremias neck, & brake it: & with that sayde Hananiah, that all the people might heare: Thus hath the LORDE spoken: Euen so will I breake the yocke of Nabuchodonosor Kinge of Babilon, from the necke of all nations, yee & that within this two yere. And so the prophet Jeremie wente his waye. After now that Hananiah the prophet had taken the chayne from the prophet Jeremias neck, and broken it: The worde of the LORDE came vnto the prophet Jeremie sayenge: Go, and tell Hananiah these wordes: Thus saith the LORDE: Thou hast broken the chayne of woodd, but in steade of woodd, thou shalt make chaynes of yron. For thus saith the LORDE of hostes the God of Israel: I will put a yocke of yron vpon the necke of all this people, that they maye see the Nabuchodonosor the Kinge of Babylon, yee & his shalchevde. And I will reue him yf hee stee in the felde. Then sayde the prophet Jeremie vnto y prophet Hananiah: Leave me (I praye the, Hananiah: The LORDE hath not sent the, but thou bringest this people in to a falshe beleue. And therefore thus saith the LORDE: beholde, I will sente the out of the lende, & within a yere thou shalt die, because thou hast falsly spoke agaynst the LORDE. So Hananiah the prophet died the same yere in the seventh moneth.

The XXXIX. Chapter.

IN this the Copie of the lecture, y Jer. 24 saye the prophet sent from Jerusalem vnto the prisoners: the Senecours, priestes, prophetes, & all the people, whom Nabuchodonosor had led vnto Babilon: after y tyme y Kinge Iechonias & his Queene, his chambelaines, the prisoners of Iuda & Jerusalem & the women: men of Jerusalem were departed thither. Which lecture, I lasa y some of Saphaz Tamnia y dimes of Beldaya dyd beare, whō Sedechias the Kinge of Iuda sent vnto Babilon to Nabuchodonosor y Kinge of Babilon: thei were y wordes of Jeremias lecture: Thus hath y LORDE of hostes y God of Israel spoken, vnto all the prisoners, y were lead fro Jerusalem vnto Babilon: I will geue you houses to dwell therein: I will place you

 9^a wyes, to heare you sonnes and daughters: pious be wyes for your sonnes, & husbands: for your daughters: that they maye see your sonnes & daughters, and that ye maye multiplie there. & aborne not to be fene, but seke after peace & prosperite of the cite, where in ye be prisoners, & saye vnto God for it. For in the peace there of shall ye peace be.

For thus saith the LORD of hostes the God of Israel: Let not these prophets and soothsayers be amonge you, because you:

14^c they preach you lies in my name. & I haue not sent them, saith the LORD. But thus saith the LORD: When ye haue fulfilled 15^e yeares at Babilon, I wil bunge you home, and of myne owne goodnes I will carie you higher agayne vnto this place. For I knowe, what I haue deuyed for you, saith the LORD. My thoughtes are to geue you peace, & not trouble, which I geue you all redde: & that ye might haue hope agayne. Ye shall crye vnto me, ye shall goe to call vpon me, & I shall heare you. Ye shall seke me, & I synde me: Yee, yf so be that ye seke me with your whole herte, I will be founde of you, saith the LORD. And wil deliuer you out of prison, & gather youe together agayne out of all places, where in I haue scattered you, saith the LORD: and wil bunge you agayne to the same place, from whence I caused you to be caried a waye captyue.

But where as ye saye, that God hath trayfed you vpon prophets at Babilon: Thus hath the LORD spoken concerninge theinger that syneth in the stole of Dauid, and all y people that dwell in this cite, youre brethren that are not gone with you in to captiuite. Thus I saye speaketh the LORD of hostes: Beholde, I wil sende a starcke, hunger & pestilence vpon them, & wil make them like vnto my fyge, that maye not be eatte for byeternes. And I wil persecute them with the sword, with hunger & deathe.

I will deliuer them up to be veyed of all Kingdomes, to be cursed, abhorred, laughed to scorne, & put to confusion of all the people, amonge whom I haue scattered them: & that because they haue not bene obedient vnto my commandementes, (saith the LORD) which I sent vnto them by my seruantes the prophetes, I stode vp early, and sent vnto them, but they wolde not heare, saith the LORD. Heare therefore the worde of the LORD, all ye prisoners, whom I sent from Ierusalem vnto Babilon: Thus hath the LORD

DE of hostes the God of Israel spoken, of Achab y forme of Colaias, & of Seodias the forme of Masias, which prophetes haue vnto you in my name: Beholde, I wil deliuer them in to the honde of Nabudodonosor the kinge of Babilon, that he maye see them be fore your eyes. And all y persons of Iuda that are in Babilon, shall see them this terme of cursinge, and saye: The God do vnto the, as he dyd vnto Seodias & Achab, when the kinge of Babilon was in the fyre, because they synned against in Israel.

For they haue not onely besied their tongues with wyes, but also preached lyinge vnto me in my name, which I haue not commaunded them. This I see, saith the LORD. But as for Semcia the Tabelean, thou shalt speake vnto him: Thus saith the LORD of hostes the God of Israel: Because thou hast sealed letters vnder thy name, vnto all the people that is at Jerusalem, & to Sophonias the sonne of Maia the prest, & sent them to all the prestes where in thou wyldest thus vnto him: The LORD hath ordered the to be prest in the be of Joiada the prest, that thou shalt be in the chiefe in the house of the LORD. And of all the prestes, & teachers, & that thou mightest put them in prison, or in y stocks, how hast thou peneth it then, that thou hast not repoynded Jeremy of Anathot, which neuer taught his propheetinge. And beside all this, he hath sent vs worde vnto Babilon, and bidde vs planely, that our captiuite shall longe endure: that we shalde be yde vs house to dwell therein, & to plante vs gardens, that we might enioye the frutes thereof. Whillette Sephonias the prest byd vs, saith Jeremy the propheet.

Then came the worde of the LORD vnto Jeremy sayenge: Sende wordes to all them that be in captiuite, on this maner: Thus hath the LORD spoken concerninge Semcia y Tabeleanite: Because that Semcia hath prophesied vnto you without my commission, & broughte you in to a false hope, for thus the LORD beeth curseth you: Beholde, I wil vnto Semcia the Tabeleanite & his sebe: so that none of his shall remaine amonge this people, & none of them shall see the good, & I will do for this people, saith the LORD. For he hath preached falsly of the LORD.

The XXX. Capite.

These are the wordes, that the LORD shewed vnto Jeremy, saing: Thus 14^c 14^a ai saith the LORDE God of Israel: Whyte up diligently all the wordes, that I haue spoken vnto the, in a booke. For so, the ryme cometh (saith the LORDE) that I will hainge agayne the prisoners of my people of Israel and Juda, saith the LORDE: For I will restore them vnto the sonde, that I gave to their fathers, and they shall haue it in possession.

Agayne, these wordes saith the LORDE, concerning Israel and Juda: Thus saith the LORDE: We heare a terrible crie, feare and disquietesse. For what els doth this signific, that I se: Wamey, that all stronge men maye, carry man his honde vpon his knyes, as a woman in the payne of hir tra-uayle. Who euer saue a man trauayle with duke? Wnequer there fire, 2 fe. Xcc all their faces are maruelous pale.

b Alas for this daye, which is so drede full, that none maye be licenced vnto it; and alas for the ryme of Jacobs trouble, from the which he shall yet be deluyered. For in that daye, saith the LORDE, I will take his yoc from of thy neck, 2 breake thy boundes. They shall nomie seme straunge goddes vnder him, but they shall doo for iuycc vnto God the ai LORDE, and to Dauid their kinge, whom ai I will raise vp vnto them. And as for the, o my seruant Jacob, feare not (saith y LORDE) ai and be not affrayed, o Israel. For so, I will helpe the also from satre, 2 thy se from the sonde of their captiuyte.

And Jacob shall turne agayne, he shall be in rest, and haue a prosperous life, and no man shall make him a frayed. For I am with the, to helpe the, saith the LORDE. And though I shall destroye all the people, among ge whom I haue feared the, yet will I not destroye the, but correcte the, and that with discression. For I knowe, that thou art in no doubt without saue. There fore thus saith y LORDE: I am for thy hurte and woundes.
There is no man to helpe with thy cause, o to vynde up thy woundes: there maye no man helpe the.

But thy flouers haue forgotten the, and care nothinge for the. For I haue geuen the a small shote, and chastened the roughly: and that for the multitude of thy mysdoes, for thy synnes haue had the ouer hande. Why makest thou moone for thy harme? I my self haue pitye of thy sorowe, but for the multitude of thy mysdoes and synnes, I haue done thus vnto the.

And therefore all they that deuour the, shall be deuoured, and all thyne enemies shall be led in to captiuyte. All they that make the wast, shall wast them selues: and all those that robbe the, will I make also to be robbed. For I will geue the thy healeth agayne, and make thy woundes whole, saith the LORDE: because they ruyled the, as one cast awaye and despised, o Sion.

For thus saith the LORDE: Beholde, I will set up Jacobs tenenes agayne, and desce-de by his dwellinge place. The cite shall be buy-ded in hir olde estate, and the house shall haue their righte foundation. And out of thim shall go thankesgeuyng, and the voyce of ioye.

I will multiplie them, and they shall not mynishe: I shall endue them with honoure, and no man shall subdue them. Their children shall be as a fore ryme, and their congregacion shall continue in my sight. And all those that were them, will I visit.

A captiuyne also shall come of them, and a prynce shall spunge out from the myddest of them: him will I chalenge to myself, and he shall come vnto me. For what is he, that geuech ouer his bette, to come vnto me: saith the LORDE. He shall be my people also,
and I will be your God. Beholde, on the other syde shall the mouth of the LORDE beate out as a stormy water, as a mighty rhyual wynde: and shall fall vpon the heades of the wygodly.

The terrible displeasure of the LORDE shall not leaue of, vntill he haue done, 2 per-fourmed: the intent of his bette, which in the latter daye ye shall vnderstonde. At the same ryme: saith the LORDE I shall I beche God of all the generacions of Israel, 2 they shall be my people.

The xxxi. Chapter.

Thus saith the LORDE: The people of Israel which escapet in y reuer-
ence from the swerde, founde grace to come in to their rest. I vnto shall the LORDE DE no w also appeare vnto me from fare, and saye: I loue the with an euerslastinge loue, thou fore o I speide my mercy be fore the. I will repaue the agayne: o thou daughter of Israel that thou mayest be fast and sure.
Thou shalt take thy tabrettes agayne, 2 go forth with them, that lede the danche.

Thou shalt plante vynes agayne vpon y hilles of Samarita, and the grape gatherers shall of thim.

And when it is tyme, the watchmen vpon the mountes of Ephraim shall crie: Al ye. let vs go vp vnto Sion to crite LORDE God,

ioye.

I will multiplie them, and they shall not
mynishe: I shall endue them with honoure,
and no man shall subdue them. Their children shall be as a fore ryme, and their congregacion shall continue in my sight. And all those that were them, will I visit.

A captiuyne also shall come of them, and
a prynce shall spunge out from the myddest
of them: him will I chalenge to myself, and
he shall come vnto me. For what is he, that
the LORDE. He shall be my people also,
and I will be your God. Beholde, on the
other syde shall the mouth of the LORDE
beate out as a stormy water, as a mighty
of the wygodly.

shall not leaue of, vntill he haue done, 2 per-fourmed: the intent of his bette, which in the latter daye ye shall vnderstonde. At the same ryme: saith the LORDE I shall I beche God of all the generacions of Israel, 2 they shall be my people.

The xxxi. Chapter.

Thus saith the LORDE: The people of Israel which escapet in y
reuer-
ence from the swerde, founde grace
to come in to their rest. I vnto shall the LORDE DE no w also appeare vnto me from fare, and
saye: I loue the with an euerslastinge loue, thou fore o I speide my mercy be fore the. I will repaue the agayne: o thou daughter
of Israel that thou mayest be fast and sure.
Thou shalt take thy tabrettes agayne, 2 go
forth with them, that lede the danche.

Thou shalt plante vynes agayne vpon y
shall of thim.

for thus saith the LORDE: Reioyce with gladnes because of Jacob, crye vnto the heade of the Gentiles: speake out, synge, and saie: The LORDE shall deliuer his people, the remnant of Israell, make them whole Beholde. I will bringe them agayne from out of the north lode, and gather them from the endes of the world, with the blinde and lame that are amonge them, with the women that be greace with childe, and such as be also deliuered: and the company of them that come agayne, shall be greace.

They departed from hence in heuynes, but with ioye will I bringe them hither agayne. I will lede them by the ryuers of water in a straighe waye, where they shall not stormle: for I will be Israels father, and Ephraim shall be my firstborne.

Scare the worde of the LORDE, o ye Gentiles: pteach in the Isles, that lie farre off, and saie: he that hath feared Israell, shall gather him together agayne, and shall kepe him as a shepheard doth his flocke. For the LORDE shall rebeme Jacob, and rpe him from the bonde of the violent. And they shall come, & reioyce vpon the hill of Zion, & shall haue plentuousnes of goodes, which the LORDE shall geue them: namely, wheat, wyne, oyle, yonge shepe and calves. And their consciences shall be as a well watered garden, for they shall nomore be hongrie.

Chen shall they mayde reioyce in the daunce, ye both yonge and olde folkes. For I will name their ioyes in to gladnesse, and will comforte them, and make them ioyfull, euen from their herces. I will poure plentuousnes vpon the herces of the priestes, and my people shall be iustified with good thinges, saith the LORDE.

Thus saith the LORDE: The voyce of heuynes, wepyng and lamentacion came vp in to heauen: euen of Rachel mournynge for hir children, and wolde not be comforted, because they were awaye.

But now saith the LORDE: leave off from wepyng and crying, withold thyne eyes from teares, for thy labour shall be rewarded, saith the LORDE. And they shall come agayne out of the londe of their enemies: For euen thy posterite shall haue consolation in this (saith the LORDE) that thy children shall come agayne in to their owne londe.

Moreover I herbe Ephraim, (that was led awaye captiue) complaine on this manner: O LORDE, when hast correcte me, and thy chastyngge haue I receaved, as an vn-tamed calfe. Correcte thou me, and I shall be correcte, for thou art my LORDE. See, see as soone as thou turnest me, I shall forsake my self: and when I understande, I shall sinne vpon my chee. For verily I haue comitted shamefull thinges: so let me not beare this reproofe and confusion.

Vpon this complaine, I thought thus by myself: is not Ephraim my deare sonne? Is he not the childe, with whom I haue had all my chere and pastyme: For I sawe they me that I first comened with him, I haue him euer in remembrance: therefore my deare herce driuech me vnto him: gladly and willingly will I haue mercy vpon him, saith the LORDE. See the watchmen, pteache teachers for the seeke thine herce vpon the right waie, that thou shalt best walke, and come agayne: (othou daughter of Israell), turne agayne to these cities of heuyn. How longe wilt thou go a straie, o thou strikinge daughter: for the LORDE will make a new chymge vpon earth: A woman shall compass a man.

For thus saith the LORDE of hostes the God of Israell: I will come there, when I haue broughte Iuda out of captiuee, these wordes shall be vnto me in his cities: The LORDE, which is the sayre bydegreeme of righteousness, made the fructifull, o thou holy hill: And there shall dwell Iuda and all hir cities, the shepberdes and husbande men: for I shall sate the hongrie soule, and restreth all sayne herces. When I herde this, I came agayne to myself, and mused, like as I had bene wath out of a swete slepe.

Beholde (saith the LORDE) the dayes come, that I will sowe the house of Iuda, and the house of Iuda, with men and with cattell. See it shall come thereto, that like as I haue gone aboute in cyrcles past to receyue out, to scaue them, to breake them downe, to destroye them and chaste them: Euen so will I also go diligently aboute, to laye them vp agayne, and to plant them, saith the LORDE.

Then shall it no more be sayde: y fathers haue eaten a sower grape, and the childrens teeth are set on edge: for every one shall by his owne mysdoes, so that he be so correcte a sower grape, his teeth shall be set on edge.

Beholde, the dayes come, saith the LORDE: I will make a new covenante with the house of Israell, & with the house of Iuda: a fier the covenante that I made with their fathers, when I toke them by the hande, led them out of the londe of Egipce: which comenaueth they baste, wherfore I punished them for, saith the LORDE: But this shal be the comenauent that I will make with the house of Israel after those daies, saith the LORDE: I will plant my lawe in the inward partes of them, and write it in their hearts, and wilcher they God, and they shal be my people.

And from thence forth shall no man teach his neighbour or his brother, and saie: knowe the LORDE: But they shall all knowe the LORDE. For I will forgue their mysdoes, and wil neuer remembre their synes any more. Thus saith the LORDE which gaue the sunne to be a light for the daie, and the Moone and starres to shine in the night: which moueth the see, so that the floodes thereof maye faare: his name is the LORDE of hostes. Like as this ordinaunce shal neuer be taken out of my sight, saith the LORDE: So shal the side of Israel neuer cease, but all waye be a people before me.

Moreover, thus saith the LORDE Like as the braun above can not be measured, and as the foundations of the earth beneath maye not be sought out: So will I also not call out the whole side of Israel, for that they have commyzed, saith the LORDE. Beholde, the daies come saith the LORDE, if the cite of Jerusalem shal be enlarged from the towre of Hananeel, unto y gate of the corner wall. From thence shal the right measure be taken before her unto the hill toppes of Garab, and shal come aboute Gaacha, and the whole valley of the dead carcases, and of the ashes, & all Seremoth, unto the hute of Cebion: and from thence unto the corner of the house gate towards the east, when as the Sanctuary of the LORDE also shal be. And when it is now buylded, & set vp of this fashion it shall neuer be broken, nor cast downe any more.

The XXXII. Chapter.

These wordes spaketh the LORDE vnto Jeremy, in the tenth yeare of Sebedias Kinge of Iuda, which was y first yeare of Nabuchodonosor, what tyme as the Kinge of Babylons hostes laye siege vnto Jerusalem. But Jeremy the prophete was bounde in y court of the prison, which was in the Kinge of Judas house: where Sebedias the Kinge of Iuda caused him to be layd, because he had propheted of this maner: Thus saith the LORDE: Beholde, I will deliuer this cite in to the bondes of the Kinge of Bablon, which shal take it. As for Sebedias the Kinge of Iuda, he shal not be able to scape the Caldees, but surely he shal come in to the bondes of the Kinge of Bablon: which shal speake with him mouth to mouth, and one of them shal lode another in the face. And Sebedias shal be carried vnto Bablon, and there shall he be, vntill the tyme that I wyser him, saith the LORDE. But yf thou takest in hede to fight agaynst the Caldees, thou shalt not prosper.

And Jeremy sayde: Thus hath the LORDE spoken vnto me: Beholde, Hananeel the sonne of Stellan thine Oncle sonne shall come vnto the, and requyre the redeme of londe, that lieth in Anathoth vnto thy self: for by reason of thy red it is thy parte to redeme it, and to bye it out.

And so Hananeel myne Oncle sonne came to me in the court of the prison, (according to the wordes of the LORDE,) and sayde vnto me: Bye my londe (I praye the): that lieth in Anathoth, in the countre of Beniamyn: for by heretage thou hast rightes lowse it out for thy self, therfore redeme it. Then I precead, that this was the cecommandment of the LORDE, and so I lowsed the londe from Hananeel of Anathoth, myne Oncle sonne, and weyed him there the monyes euen ten syles, and ten silver pens.

I caused him also to make me a writtinge, and to seale it, and called recorde there by, and weyed him there the monye upon the waighes. So I toke the euydence with the copie (when it was orderly seald and red over) and I gaue the euydence vnto Baruch the sonne of Nerias the sonne of Maasia in the sight of Hananeel my cosen, and in the presence of the witnesses, that be named in the euydence, and be fore all the Jewes that were therby in the court of the prison.

Jchazub Baruch also before them, saien ge: The LORDE of hostes the God of Israel commaundeth the, to take this seald euydence with the copie, and to laye it in an erthen vessell, that it maye longe continue.

For the LORDE of hostes the God of Israel hath deterned, that heuses, sildes and wyndowes shal be possessed agayne in this londe.

Now when I had deliuered the euydence vnto Baruch y sonne of Nerias, I besoughte the LORDE, sayenge: O LORDE God, it is thou that hast made heauen and earth with thy greates power and his arme, and the re is nothing to harde for y. Thou shewest mercy vpon thei andes, thou recompencest the wickednes of the fathers, in to the befome of the children that come after them.

Thou art the greates and mighty God, whose name is the LORDE of hostes: greates in counsell, and infinite in thought: Thine eyes loke vpon all the wayes of mans children, to rewarde euery one after his waye, and according to the frutes of his inuan-cions: Thou hast done greates tokens and wonders in the londe of Egypte (as we se this daye) vpon the people of Israel and vpon thei men: to make thy name greates, as it is come to passe this daye: Thou hast brought thy people of Israel out of the lon-de of Egypte, with tokens, with wonders, with a mighty honde, with a stretchd out arme and with greates terriblenes: and hast geuen them this londe, like as thou haddest promysed vnto their fathers: I namely, that thou wouldest geue them a lode, that flourisheth with myke and honye.

Now when they came therin, and possessed it, they followed not thy voyce, and wol-ded not in thy lawe: but all that thou com-maunddest them to do, that haue they not done, and therfore come all these plagies vpon them.

Beholde, there are inuoides made now agaynst the cite, to take it: and it shal be won-ne of the Caldees that besige it, with sweare de, with hunger and death, and loke what thou hast spoken, that same shal come vpon them.

For lo, all thinges are present vnto the:
For sayest thou vnto me (O LORDE God) and commaundest me, that I shall loofe a peece of londe vnto my self, and take wien-nesse thereto: and yet in the meane season the cite is deliuered in to the power of the Caldees.

Then came the worde of the LORDE vnto me, sayenge: Beholde, I am the LORDE God of all flesh, Is there any thinge that thou sayest to harde for me? Therfore thus sayde the LORDE: beholde, I shal deliuer this cite in to the power of the Caldees, and in to the power of Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babilon, they shall take it in: For the Caldees shall come, and wyne this cite, and see fyre vpon it, and burne it: with the gegeous houses, in which parlors they haue made sacrifice vnto Baal, and poured drinke offerings vnto strange goddesses, so psonate me vnto wrath.

For sange the children of Israel and the children of Juda haue wrought the wickednes before me ever from their youth vp, whan haue they els done, but promoted me with the workes of their owne honde: sayeth the LORDE.

Oh, what hath this cite bene do, but promotinge of my wrath, ever since the be-yebath I bayled it, vnto this houre: Why rin I cast it out of my sight, be cause of the greates blasphemies of the child of Israel and Juda, which they haue done to proke me: yee they, their kinges, their priues, their priestes, their prophetes, whelch Ioue, and all the citizens of Ierusalem.

When I stode vpon earth, and taught them and instructed them, they turned their backs to me, and not their faces. They would not heare, to be reformed and conuted: They haue se their goddesses in y bouche, is balowd vnto my name, so desyre it. They haue buyled his places for Baal in the vil-ley of the children of Sennon, to vowe the sonnes and daughters vnto Moloch: which I neuer commaunded them, neher came I euer in my thought, so make Juda sound with such abhominacion.

Moreover thus hath the LORDE God of Israel spoken, concerninge this cite, which (as ye your selues confesse) shalbe deliuered in to the honde of the kinge of Babilon, when it is moone with the swerde, with hunger and with pestilence. Beholde, I will gether them together from all londees, when I haue feared them in my wrath, in my firarfull and greates displeasure: and will burne them agayne vnto this place, wher they shal dwell safely. And they shall be my people, and I will be their God.

And I will geue them one herte and one waye, that they maye feare me all the daies of their life, that they and their children feer them maye please. And I will geue an euerlastinge couenaunt with them, I namely: that I will neuer cease to do them good, and that I will put my feare in that hereto, so that they shall not turne away from me.

For I will haue a last and pleasure in them good, and faithfully to plant them in this londe, with my whole herte, and with all my soule.

For thus saith the LORDE: like as I haue brought all this greates plage vpon this peeple: so will I also geue vpon them all the good, that I haue promysed them.
And men shall haue their possessions in this lande, wherof ye saye now, that it shal nether be inhabited of people ner of cattell, but be deliuered in to the hōdes of the Caldees: yett lande shalbe boughte for money, & eythē as made ther vpon & sowed before tūntēnes in the countrey of Ben Jamin, & rounde abou in Jerusalem in the cities of Juda, in the cities that are vpon the mountaynes, & in them that lie betwixt, yett & in the cities that are in the deserte. For I will bringe their prisoners hithe agayne, saith the LORDE.

The XXXIII. Chapter.

Wherof the worde of the LORDE came vnto Jeremy on this maner, whē he was yett bounde in the cour te of the prison: Thus saith the LORDE, which fulfiller the thinge that he speaketh the LORDE which perfourmeth the thinge that he taketh in hande: euen he, whose name is the LORDE: Thou hast cried vnto me, and I haue heretofore: I haue stremed greaus and hie things, which were vnknewen vnto you.

Thus (I saye) spake the LORDE God of Israel, concerninge the houses of this cite, and the houses of the Kinges of Juda: that they shalbe broken thorum the ordinaunce and weapens, whene the Caldees come to be segethem: and they shalbe fylled with the dead carcases of men, whom I will slaye in my wrath and displeasure: whē I turne my face from this cite, be cause of all hir wickednes. Beholde, (saith the LORDE) I will heale their woundes, and make them whole: I will open them the treasure of peace and treuch.

And I will retorne the captiuitie of Juda and Israel: and will set them vp agayne, as they were afore. From all mysdoes (whē they haue offendēd agaynst me) I will disse them: And all their blasphemies which they haue done agaynst me, whē they regarded me not, I will forgifue them.

And this shal geue me a name, a prayse and honoure, amonge all people of the earth, which shall heare all the good, that I will shewe vnto them: Yee they shall be a frayed and astonied at all the good dedes and benefites, that I will do for them. Moreover, thus saith the LORDE: In this place, whē of ye (I saye) that it shalbe a wyl: earnest, whē in neither people ner cattell shal dwell: In like maner in the cities of Juda and without Jerusalem (which also shalbe so voyde, that neither people ner cattell shall dwell there) shal the voyce of gladnesse be herde agayne, the voyce of the bybear come and of the byrte, the voyce of them that shall synge (Prayse the LORDE of hoodes, for he is louynge, and his mercy endureth for euer) and the voyce of them that shall offre vp giftes in the house of the LORDE. For I will restore the captiuitie of this lande, as it was afore, saith the LORDE. Thus saith the LORDE of hoodes. It shall come yett therto, that in this lande, which is voyde from men and cattell, and in all the cities of the lande, there shall be set vp shepherdes cottages: in the cities vpon the mountaynes, and in the cities that lie vpon the playne, and in the deserte.

In the lande of Ben Jamin, in the felde of Jerusalem, and in the cities of Juda shal the shepe be nombred agayne, vnder the hande of him, that telleth them, (saith the LORDE. Beholde, the tyme cometh) (saith the LORDE) that I will persumme that good thinge, which I haue promised vnto the house of Israel and to the house of Juda. In those daies and at the same tyme, I will bringe forth vnto Dauid, the braminch of righteuousnes, and he shall be quiet and righteousnesse in the lande. In these daies shall Juda be helpe, and Jerusalem shall dwell safe, and he that shall call her to euen God our righteous maker. For thus the LORDE promyseth: Dauid shal neuer want one, to lye vpon the stole of the house of Israel: neither shall the prestes and Leuites want one to offre all wayes be fixe we, burnt offeringes, to byble the meat offeringes, & to prepare the sacrifices.

And the worde of the LORDE came vnto Jeremy after this maner: Thus saith the LORDE: Make yett the couenaunt which I haue made with Dauid and night, be broken, that there shulde not be daye and night in the season: Then maye my couenaunt also be broken, which I made with Dauid my seruant, and so he be not to haue a sonne to reigne in his Throne. So shall also the prestes and Leuites neuer sayle, be stricken me.
 For like as the starres of heauen maye not be nombred, neither the sonde of the see mesured: so will I multiplie the sede of Da-uid my seruant, and of the Leuites my ministers.

Moreover, the worde of the LORDE came to Jeremy, saing: Considrest thou not what this people speaketh? Two kynnedes (saye they) had the LORDE dyen, & thofe same two hath he cast awaye. For so faire is my people count, y they haue no hope to come to gether: any more, and to be one people agayne. Therefore thus saith the LORD: If I haue made no couenaunt with daye & night, and geue no statute vnto heauen and earth: then will I also cast awaye the sede of Dauid my seruauant: so that I will take no pynce out of his sede, to rule the posterite of Abrahā, Isaac and Jacob. But yet I will raise agayne their captiuite, and be mercifull vnto them.

The XXXIII. Chapter.

These are the wordes which the LORD spake vnto Jeremyp, what tyme as Tabuchodonosor the kinge of Babilon, & all his hostes (out of all the kingdome of yere were vnder his power), and all his people, soughte agaynst Ierusalem and all the ciues thereof. Thus saith the LORD God of Israel: Go, & speake to Sedechias the kinge of Iuda, & tell him: The LORD sente vnto thee this word: Beholde, I will deliuer this cite in to the hōde of the kinge of Babilon, he shal burne it, and thou shalt not escape his hondes, but shalt be led awaye prisoner, and deliuered into his power. Thou shalt loke the kinge of Babilon in the face, and he shal speake with the mouth to mouth, and then shalt thou go to Babilon. Yet heare the word of the LORD, o Sedechias thou kinge of Iuda: Thus saith the LORD vnto thee: Thou shalt not be slayne with the sword, but shalt die in peace. Like as yf fore fathers, the kinges, thy progenitors were brennt: so shalt thou be brennt also, & in the mountynge they shal saye: Ah loide, for thus haue I deuermed, saith the LORD.

Then spake Jeremyp the prophet all these wordes vnto Sedechias kinge of Iuda in Ierusalem: that tyme as the kinge of Babilon hooste besieged Ierusalem, and the remnant of the ciues: Iamely, Ladaius & Zedechia, which yet remained of the stronge besieged ciues of Iuda.

These are the wordes that the LORD spake vnto Jeremyp the prophet, when Sedechias was agreed with all the people at Ierusalem, that there shulde be proclaimed a libertie: so that every man shulde let fre his seruant and handemaide, hebrewe & hebrewe, & no Iew to holde his brother as a bondema. How as they had conspired, euen so they were obedient, & let them go fre. But afterwards they repented, & toke agayne the seruantes and handemaydens, whom they had letten go fre, and so made them to be agayne.

Then saith the LORD: For the which cause the word of the LORD

DE came vnto Jeremyp from the LORD himself, sayenge: Thus saith the LORD God of Israel: I made a couenaunt with your fathers, when I brought them out of Egypte, (that they shulde no more be bondema) sayenge: When seven yeares are out, every man shal let go fre his brother seruants as hebrewe, yf he haue serued him six yeares. But ye fathers obeyed me not & heerd me vnto me. As for you, ye were no wiser, & dyd righe be fore me, in yf proclaimed, every mā to let his neyghbour go fre, & in yf made a couenaunt before me, in the temple: ye beareth my name: But yet ye haue not yf done: ye are slues agayne, and blaipmed my name: In this, yf every man hath requyred his seruante and handemaide as agayne, wher ye had letten go quyre and fre, and compelled them to serue you agayne, and to be yere bondema. And therefore thus saith the LORD: Ye haue not obeyed me, every mā to proclame fre home vnto his brother and neyghbour: wherfore, I will call you vnto a fin dōme, saith the LORD: men vnto the fowde, to the pestilence, and to hunger, and will make you to be plagued in all the byngdomes of the earth. Yet those men that haue sold my couenaunt, and not kepte the wordes of the apoyntēte, which they made before: when they herded the cause in two, & when there wente thowse the two halfe that of the pynces of Iuda, the pynces of Ierusalem, the gilded men, the prestes and all the people of the land: which wote thowse the two sydes of the cause. Those men will I use in to the power of their enemies, and in to the hondes of them that folow vnto thei lyues.

And their deed bodies shall be made in the fowles of the ayre, and bestes of the fielde. As for Sedechias the kinge of Iuda his pynces, I will deliuer them in to the power of their enemies, and of them that I will use to slaye them, and in to the hondes of the kyng of Babilons hooste, which now is parted from you: But thowse my remnant dement, (saith the LORD) they shal come agayne before this cite, they shall sighe agaynst it, wmyne it, and burne it. I will laye the ciues of Iuda so wast: that no man shall dwell therein.

The XXXV. Chapter.

The wordes which the LORD spake vnto Jeremyp, (in the reigne of Zedechim the sonne of Josias kinge of Iuda) are these: So vnto yf hooste of the Rechabites, & call them out, & bunge the to yf hooste of

LORDE in to some commodious place, and gave them wyne to drynke. Then tolke J Ja sanas the some of Jeremj, the some of Sa basans, and his brethren and all his sonnes, and the whole household off the Rechabi tes: and brought them to the house off the LORDE, in to the closter of the children off Janan the some off Jgdalia the man off Go: which was by the closter off the pry nces, that is adowt the closter of Masia the some of Sellum, which is the closte off the treasury. And before the sonnes of the kyned of the Rechabites, J Jec portes full of wy ne, and cuppes, and sayde unto them: dryn ke wyne. But they sayde: we drynke no wyne. For Jonadab the some of Rechab our father commaunded vs, sayenge: Ye and your sonnes shall neuer drynke wyne, buyt ke no houles, so we no fide, plante no wynea, ye ye shall haue no wyngardes: but for all your tyme ye shall dwell in cities, y yenna ye hve lōge in the lōde, wherin ye be strangers.

B Thus haue we obeyed the commaundment of Jonadab y some of Rechab our father, in all y he hath charged vs, and so we drynke no wyne all oure daye long: we, our wyues, of sonnes, & oure oungthers. Whether by the meany house of daniel therein, we haue also a moung vs necher wyngardes, ner come lōde to bre: but we bred in cenes, we of eye, & be according vnto all, that Jonadab our father commaunded vs.

When now y Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilis came vp in to the lōde, we sayde: comes vs go to Jerusalem, y we maye esta pe the house of the Caldees and the Assirias: so we dwell now at Jerusalem. Then came y word of the LORDE vnto Jeremj, sayenge: Thus saith the LORDE of heostes the God of Israel: So z tell whole Juda z all the in habitours of Jerusalem: Wyl ye not be resour ced, so obeye my wordes. Saith the LORDE.
 The wordes which Jonadab the some off Rechab commaunded his sonnes, y they shul be drynke no wyne, are fast z surely kepte: for vnto this daie they drynke no wy: & but obe

C y their fathers commaundment. But as for me, J haue slyde vpon early, J haue spokē vnto you, z geuen you earnest warnynges: z yet haue ye not bent of chert vnto me. Yet J ha ue sene my seruantes, all the prophetes vnto you, Jrose vpon early, z sent you wordes, sayen ge vnto you, every man from his wicked waye: amede ye' leues, z go not after stra nge goddes, so woustrappe the: y ye maye co tinue in the lōde, which J haue geuen vnto you and your fathers, but ye wolde necher heare me, ner folowe me.

The childre of Jonadab Rechabs some haue steadfastly kepte their fathers comma ndment, y he gaue them, but this people is not obedient vnto me. And therefore thus saith the LORDE of heostes y God of Israel Beholde, J wil bringe vpon Juda z vpon eu eryone y dwelleth in Jerusalem, all the trouble y J haue deuyed agaynst the. For J haue spokē vnto the, but they wolde not folowe: J haue called vnto them, neuertheless they wolde geue me no answer. Jeremj also spa ke vnto the household off the Rechabites: Thus saith the LORDE of heostes the God of Israel: For so much as ye haue obeyed y commaundment of Jonadab y' father, z kep te all his piecepces, z done according vnto all y he hath bydden you: Therefore thus saith the LORDE of heostes the God of Israel Jonadab the some of Rechab shal not faile, but haue one out of his stocke, to slyde a ll waye to seime me.

In the fourth year of Joadah the sonne of Josias kynge of Juda, came y word of the LORDE vnto Jeremj, sayenge: Take a bolte, z write therein all y wo des, y J haue spokē to the, to Israel, to Juda z to all the people, fro the tyme y' J began to speake vnto the in y' reigne of Josias vnto this daie. That when the house of Ju da heareth of the plage, which J haue deuy sed for the, they maye peradventure turne, and ryman fro his wicked waye, that J maye see geue their offences and synnes.

Then byd Jeremj call Baruch the some of Nerias, z Baruch wrote in the bolte at y mouth of Jeremj, all the wordes of the LOR DE, which he had spoken vnto him. And Je remj commaunded Baruch sayenge: I am in prison, so that J maye not come in to the house of y LORDE: therefore thou shouldest z rece the bolte, that thou hast writte at my mouth: I namely, the wordes off the LORDE, z rece the in the LORDES house vpon the sa crifice daie: that the people, whole Juda, z all they that come out of the citie, maye hea re. Peradventure they will piyng melle be fore the face of the LORDE, and come, euery one from his wicked waye. For greate is the wrath and displeasure, that the LOR DE hath taken agaynst this people.

So Baruch the some of Nerias byd, a cordinge vnto all that Jeremj the prophet commaunded him, readinge the wordes off the LORDE out off the bolte in the LORDES hou se. And this was done in the fyfth year off Joadah y' sonne of Josias kynge of Juda, in

17. a the ix. moneth when it was commanded, that all the people of Jerusalem shulde fast before the LORD, and they also that were come from the cities of Juda vnto Jerusalem.

Then red Baruch the wordes of Jeremy out of the booke within the house of the LORD, out of y^e treasury of Gamarias the sonne off Saphan the scribe, which is besyde the hyer loffe off the new doore of the LORDS house: that all y^e people might heare. Item. 21. d When Michaas the sonne off Gamarias the sonne of Saphan had herde all the wordes of the LORD, one of y^e booke, he wrote downe to the kinges palace in to y^e scribes chāmbre for there all y^e pynces were sit: Elisama the scribe, Dalas the sonne of Semai, Elnathā the sonne off Achob, Gamaria the sonne of Saphan, Sedechias the sonne of Gamarias, with all the pynces. And Michaas tolde them all the wordes, y^e he herde Baruch rede out of the booke before the people.

Then all the pynces sent Jehudi y^e sonne of Tachmas the sonne of Salamis the sonne of Chusi, vnto Baruch, sayenge: Take in thine honde the booke, without theu hast red before all the people, and come. So Baruch the sonne of Terias toke y^e booke in his honde, and came vnto them. And they sayde vnto him: Sit y^e downe, and rede the booke, y^e we may heare all d. So Baruch red, y^e they might heare. Now when they had herde all the wordes, they were abashed one vpon another, and sayde vnto Baruch: We wil certifie the kinge of all these wordes. And they examined Baruch, sayenge: Tell vs, how dost thou wyte all these wordes out off his mouth? Then Baruch answered them: He spak all these wordes vnto me with his mouth, and I alone was with him, and woote them in the booke.

Then sayde the pynces vnto Baruch: Go thy waye, and hyde the wyche Jeremy, so that no man knowe where ye be. And they went in to the kinge to the court. But they kepe the booke in the chāmbre off Elisama the scribe, ad tolde the kyng all the wordes, that he might heare. So the kyng sent Jehudi to seche him y^e booke, which he broughte out of Elisama y^e scribes chāmbre. And Jehudi red it, that the kyng and all the pynces, which were aboute him, might heare. Now the kyng sat in the wyner house, for it was in the xij. Moneth, and there was a good fyre before him. And whē Jehudi had red the o^r foure leaues therof, he cast the booke in pecea with a penne knyfe, and cast it in to the fyre vnder the hearth, vntill the booke was all burnt in the fyre vpon the hearth.

No man was abashed therof, or was his conscience: neither the kyng him selfe, ne his seruantes, though they herde all the wordes. Neuertheles Elnathan, Dalas & Gamarias, besoughte the kyng, that he wolde not burne the booke: not with standing y^e kyng wolde not heare them, but commaunded Jeremy the sonne off Amalech, Serias the sonne of Esriel and Schemia y^e sonne of Abdiel, to laye honde vpon Baruch the scribe, and vpon Jeremy the prophete, but the LORD kepte them out off sight. After now that the kyng had burnt the booke, ad y^e summe which Baruch woote at y^e mouth off Jeremy: The wordes of the LORD came vnto Jeremy sayenge: Take anechebete, and write in it all the foresayde firmos, that were written in the first booke, which I adhim the kyng off Juda hath burnt.

And tell Joachim the kyng off Juda. Thus saierh the LORD: thou hast burnt y^e booke, and thoughtest within thy selfe: When hast thou written therein, that the kyng of Babilon shal come, & make this lode waye so that he shall make bery people and canie to be out of it? Therfore thus the LORD saierh, of Joachim the kyng of Juda: The re shall none of his generation sit vpon the throne of Dauid. His deed conse shall cast out, that the heat off the daye, and the frost of the nighte maye come vpon him: And I will vyse the wickēnes of him, of his site, and of his seruantes. No wonder all the while that I haue promised the: though they be de me noe, will I bringe vpon them, vpon y^e inhabitants of Jerusalem, and vpon all Juda. Then tolde Jeremy another booke, and gaue it Baruch the scribe the sonne of Nerias, which woote them in out of the mouth off Jeremy: all the firmos that were in the first booke, which Joachim the kyng off Juda had burnt. And there were addeed vnto that many more firmos, then before.

The XXXVII. Chapter.

Sedechias y^e sonne of Josias which was made kynge thome Nabonodonosor kyng of Babilon) reigned in the londe of Juda, in the steade off Joachim the sonne of Joachim. But neither his seruantes, ner the people in the londe wolde obeye the wordes of y^e LORD, which he spak by the prophete Jeremy. Then tolde Sedechias the kyng y^e sonne of Joachim the sonne of Elmasia and Sophonias the sonne of Elmasia the priest to the prophete Jeremy, yeingd praye thou vnto the LORDE oure God for vs. Now Jeremy walked sic among the people as that tyme, and was not put in prison as yet. Pharaos hooste also was come out of Egypte: which when the Caldees that besieged Ierusalem, perceaued, they departed from thence.

Then came the worde of the LORDE vnto Jeremy the propheet, sayenge: Thus saith y LORDE God of Israel, Thy answer shall be yee to the kynge of Iuda, that sent you in to me for counsell: Beholde, Pharaos heeste which is come forth to helpe you, shall returne to Egypte: in to his owne londe: But the Caldees shall come agayne, to fight agaynst this cite, wyntime it, and set fyre vpon it. For thus saith the LORDE: because not yd euen mynde, chynkyng on this manner:

Tush, the Caldees go now their waye frem vs: To, they shall not go their waye. For though ye had slayne the whole hooste off the Caldees: that besige you, and every one of the slayne laye in his tent, yet shulde they stande vp, and set fyre vpon this cite. Now whē the hooste of the Caldees was brokt vp from Ierusalē for feare of the Egyptians at mye, Jeremy went out of Ierusalē toward the lōbe of Ben Jamin, to do certayne busynesse there amonge y people. And whē he came vnder Ben Jaminus Pouze, there was a porter called Jeras the sonne of Selamias y sone of Samanias, which fell vppō him & toke hym, sayenge: mynde is to runne to the Caldees. Then sayte Jeremy: It is not so, I goe to the Caldees. & neuer theles Jeras wol becom beleeve him, but broughte Jeremy hōū to be before the prince. Wherefore the prince was angrie with Jeremy, causinge him to be taken, & to be layed in prison in the house of Ionathas the scribe. For he was the ruler of the prison. Thus was Jeremy put in to the dongeon to prison, and so laye there a lōge tyme. Then Sedechias the kynge sent for him, & called him, & asked him quietly in his owne beufe, sayenge: hynkest thou this busynesse that now is in honde? some of the LORDE: Jeremy answered: yee y te doth: & thou sayste he: shall be deliuered in to the kynge of Babylons power.

Moreover, Jeremy sayde vnto kynge Sedechias: What haue I offended agaynst y, agaynst thy seruantes, or agaynst this people, that ye haue caused me be put in prison? Where are youre propheetes, which haue prophced vnto you and sayde, that y kynge of Babylō shulde nee come agaynst you & this lōde: And therefore heare now, o my lorde the kynge: let my prayer be accept before the, & sende me now in to y house of Ionathas the scribe, that I dye not there. Then Sedechias the kynge commaunded to put Jeremy in the fore entrie off the prison, and daily to the geuen him a cake of bread, and els no dryght meate, & small all the bread in the cite was eaten vp. Thus Jeremy remained in y fore entrie off the prison.

The XXXVIII. Chapter.

Sedechias the sonne off Mathias, & Sedechias the sonne of Paschur, Judah the sonne of Malchias perceaued the wordes, y Jeremy had spokē vnto all the people, namely on this manner: Thus saith the LORDE: Who so remaineth in this cite, shall perish, ether with the sword, with hunger, or with pestilence: But who so shaller vnto the Caldees, shall escape, wyntynge his soule for a pray, & shall lyue. For thus saith the LORDE: This cite (no doube) must be deliuered in to y power of the kynge of Babylō, & he also shall wyntime it. The sayde the prince vnto y kynge: By, & re desyd you let this man be pur to death, for thus he discouereth the hōdes of the souldiers y be in this cite, & the hōdes of all the people, whē he speaketh such wordes vnto the. This mā verely laboureth not for peace of y people, but maketh. Sedechias the kynge answered and sayde: lo, he is in y hōdes, so y fige maye denye you nerburge.

Then toke they Jeremy, and cast him in to the dongeon off Malchias the sonne off Amalech, that dwelt in the fore entrie off the prison. And they let downe Jeremy w' ceaves in to a dongeon, where there was no water, but myre. So Jeremy stode fast in the myre. Now when Abdemelech the Moian becom a chamberlaine in the kynges court, vnderstande, that they had cast Jeremy in to the dongeon: he came out off the kynges heufe, and spake to the kynge (which the sae vnder the porte off Ben Jamin) these wordes: My lorde the kynge, where as these men meble with Jeremy the propheet, theye him wronge: Truly, in that they haue put him in prison, there to dye of hunger, for there is no more bread in the cite. The kynge commaunded Abdemelech the Moian, and sayte: Take them be ceave, men whom thou wilt, & bringe vp Jeremy the propheet out of the dongeon, before he dye. So Abdemelech reffered the men to him, & wente y house of Amalech, & there vnder an almyre he gaue vnder ragges & wine clowes, & let the downe by a coorde, in to the dongeon to Jeremy.

And Abdemelech the Moitan sayde vnto the prophet Jeremyp: O put these bagges and cloues vnder thine arme holes, & write the and the coarces: ad Jeremyp dyd so. So they dicke vp Jeremyp with coarces and toke him out of the dongeon, and he remained in the foue entrie of the prison. The Sebedchias the kynge sent and caused Jeremyp the prophet be called vnto him, in to the thirde entrie, that was by the house off the LORDE. And the kynge sayde vnto Jeremyp: I wil see the somwhat, but hyde nothing fro me. The Jeremyp answered Sebedchias: If I be plaine vnto the, thou wilt cause me suffice death: yf I geue the cōfession, thou wilt not folowe me. So the kynge saide an oech secretly vnto Jeremyp, sayinge: As trulyp as the LORDE I sware, that made verchse soules, I wil not laye the, nor geue the in to the hōdes of ehem, that seke after thy life.

Then sayde Jeremyp vnto Sebedchias: Thus saith y LORDE off hoostes the God of Israell: If case be, that thou wilt go forth vnto the kynge off Babylons prynces, thou shalt saue thy life, and this cite shall not be bise, yet both thou and thy household shall escape with youre lynes. But yf thou wilt not go forth to the kynge off Babylons prynces, then shall this cite be deliuered in to the hondes of the Caldees which shall ster fyre vpon it, and thou shalt not be able to escape ehem. And Sebedchias sayde vnto Jeremyp: I am afraid for the Jewes, that are fled vnto the Caldees, lest I come in their hōdes, and so they to haue me in derision.

But Jeremyp answered: To, they shal not betraye the: O heken vnto the voyce off the LORDE (I beseech y) which I speake vnto the, so shalt thou be well, and saue thy life. But yf thou wilt not go forth, the LORDE hath tolde me this plainly: Beholde, all the women that are left in the kynge of Judas house, shal go out to the kynge of Babylons prynces. For they thyne, y thou art disceaued: and that y men in whom thou bidest put thy trust, haue gotten the vnder, and set thy feet fast in the myre, and gone their waye from the. Therefore all thy wyues with their children shall ste vnto the Caldees, and thou shalt not escape their hondes, but shalt be y kynge of Babylons prisoner, & this cite shall be bise. Then sayde Sebedchias vnto Jeremyp: I no body knowe off these wordes, and thou shalt not dye. But yf the prynces perceaue, that I haue talked with the, and come vnto the, sayinge: O speake, what sayde the kynge to the: hyde it not from vs, and we wil not put the to death. Tell vs what sayde the, what sayde y kynge to the: And geue them this answer: I haue humbly sought the kynge, that he wold let me lye more in Jonathas house, that I dye not here: Then came all the prynces vnto Jeremyp, and aged him, And he tolde ehem, after the manner as the kynge had him. Then they bidde their peace, for they perceaued nothing. So Jeremyp abode still in the foue entrie of the prison, vntill the daye that Ierusalem was wonne.

The XXXIX. Chapter.

When the cite off Ierusalem was taken: (so in the ix. yere of Sebedchias kynge of Iuda in the tenth moeth, came Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylons and all his hoostes, and besiged Ierusalem. And in the xi. yere of Sebedchias the fourth moeth of y. daye of y. moeth, he brake in to the cite). Then all the kynge of Babylons prynces came in, & faste they were vnder the pozte: Nerghal Sarsar, Sam gameho, Sarschim, Rabaris, Nerghal Sarre, Rabmag, with all the other prynces of the kynge of Babylons. And when Sebedchias the kynge of Iuda with his sodaynes sawe them, they fled, and departed out off cite by nyghte throughe the kynge gate, and throughe the pozte that is betwene the new walles, and so they wente towarde the wilderness.

But the Caldees hooste folowed fast after them, and toke Sebedchias in the side of Jericho, and brought him prisoner to Nabuchodonosor the kynge off Babylons vnto Belshazar, that lieth in the soude off Hamath, where he gaue iugment vpon him. So the kynge of Babylons caused the children of Sebedchias and all the nobles off Iuda to lye ne, before his face at Belshazar. And thus Sebedchias eyes be put out, and he lye with chayne, and sent him to Babilon.

Moreover, the Caldees bite up the kynge palace, with y other houses of the people, and brake downe the walles off Ierusalem. As for the remanent of the people that were in the cite, and soch as were come to helpe them: what so ever was left of the cite, Ierusalem, Nabuzardan the chefe captaene came thence to Babilon. But Nabuzardan the chefe captaene let the rascall people (and they that had no bing, & well still in the side of Iuda, and gaue them vnyardes and cornfeldes at the same yere. Nabuchodonosor the chefe captaene a charge, & comynge now strengre take and cherishe him, and make much off him: for thou do him no harme, but increase him after his owne desire.

So Nabuzaradā y these captayne, Nabuzaradā the chefe chambelaine, Tergalisur the treasurer and all the bynne of Babilus lorde, sent for Jeremij, & caused him to be set out off the foue entrie off the prison, and committed him unto Godolias the sonne off Ahicam the sonne of Saphan: that he shulde carie him home, and so he dwelt amonge the people. Now whye Jeremij laye outt bounde in the foue entrie of the prison, yf word off the LORDE came unto him say- inge: Go, and tell Abdemisch the Moan: Then saith the LORDE off hostes y God off Israe: Beholde, the cruell and sharpe plague that I haue denysed for this cite, will I layne upon them, that thou shalt se it: but I will deliuer the sayeth the LORDE and thou shalt not come in the bondes off this men, whom thou fearest. For boundes I will saue the, so chace thou shalt not perish with the sword: but thy life shalbe saued, and that because thou hast put thy trust in me, saith the LORDE. The XL. Chap.

His is the manner, how the LORDE increased Jeremij, when Tebuzaradan the chefe captayne had let him goe from Anna, together as he had led him home, amonge all the prisoners, that were caried from Jerusalem and Juda unto Babilon. The chefe captayne called for Jeremij, and sayde unto him: The LORDE thy God hath mightely before off the misery upon this place: Now the LORDE hath sent it, and performed it, as he had promised: For ye haue synned agaynst the LORDE, and haue not bene obedient unto his voyce, therfor commeth this plague upon you. Beholde, I haue the bondes from thy hōdes this daye: yf thou wilt now go with me unto Babilon, up the: For I will set the, and prouyde for the: But yf thou wilt not go with me to Babilon, then remaine here. Beholde, all the londe is at thy will: loke where thou thinkest conuenient, it good for the to abyde, the dwell alone. If thou canst not be content to dwell alone, then remaine w Godolias the sonne off Ahicā the sonne of Saphā, whom the kynge of Babilus hath made gouernoure ouer yf cities of Juda, & dwell w him amonge the people, or remaine, where so euer it please yf. So the chefe captayne gaue him his ptes w a reward, & let him goe. Then went Jeremij unto Godolias yf sonne of Ahicā Masphar, & dwelt there w him amonge the people that were left in the londe.

Now when yf captaynes of the hooste of Juda (which w their felowes were scattered abroad on euery syde in yf lōde) vnderstode, yf the bynne of Babilus had made Godolias yf sonne of Ahicā gouernoure in the lōde, & yf man, wife & childe, yee & the poore men in the lōde (yf were not led captiue to Babilon) shulde be vnder his Jurisdiction: They came to Godolias unto Masphar: Lamdy, Jnsar the sonne of Tachanias, Johāna & Jona thas the sonnes of Carea, Sarcas the sonne of Canhorrech, the sonnes of Ophus & Tophreze, Jesanias yf sonne of Machazi, w their companyons. And Godolias the sonne of Ahicam the sonne off Saphā, swore vnto the & their felowes on this maner: Hee not a fraye to feare the Caldees, dwell in the lōde, & do the bynne of Babilon seruice, so shal ye prospere. Beholde, I dwell at Masphar to be an officer in the Caldeas behalfe, & satisfieth such as comye to vs. Therfore gather youe wme, come and oyle, and let them in youe ware houses, and dwell in your cities, that ye haue in keepinge.

Now all the Jewes also yf dwelt in Moab vnder yf Ammonites, in Ibanuz & in all collectes, whē they herde, yf the kynge of Babilus had made Godolias the sonne of Ahicā the sonne of Saphā, gouernoure vps the yf were left in Juda: Althe Jewes (I saye) returned out off all places where they were fled vnto: & came in to the lōde of Juda to Godolias vnto Masphar: & gathered wyne and other wares, and that very much.

Moreover Johanna the sonne of Carea & all yf captaynes of yf hooste, yf were scattered on euery syde in the lōde, came to Godolias in Masphar: & sayde vnto him: knowest thou not yf Baalis kynge of yf Ammonites hath sent Jsmayl yf sonne of Tachanias, to slaye the: But Godolias yf sonne of Ahicā beleued the not. The sayde Johāna the sonne of Carea vnto Godolias in Masphar these wordes secretly: Let me goe (I praye the) I will slaye Jsmael the sonne of Tachanias, so yf no body shal knowe it. Wherefore will he kill the, yf all the Jewes which resorte vnto the, might be slayed, & the remnant in Juda perish? The sayde Godolias the sonne of Ahicā vnto Johanna the sonne of Carea: Thou shalt not do it, for they are but lies, charmen saye of Jsmael. The XL. Chap.

In the seventh Moneth it happened, yf Jsmael the sonne of Tachanias yf sonne of Elshama (one of yf bynnes bloude) came vnto the: that were gathered aboute the kynge, 7 ten men that were sworne with him: vnto Godolias the sonne off Abicam off Masphat, and eate there together. And Jsmael y some of Nathanas w those ten men that were sworne to him, starte vp, and smote Godolias the sonne off Abicam the sonne off Saphan w the sword, 7 slewe hym, whom the kynge off Babilis had made gouernoure off the londe. Jsmael also slew all the Jewes that were with Godolias at Masphat, and all the Caldees that he founde there waitinge vpon him.

The nexte daie after that he had slayne Godolias (the matter was yet vnknoone) there came certayne men from Sichen, frō Silo and Samaria, to the northe off Ierx. which had shauen their beedes, rent their clothes, 7 were all benye, bringinge meares of fringes and incense in their handes, to offer in the house off the LORDE. And Jsmael the sonne off Nathanas went forth off Masphat to punge, so meece them. Now whē he met them he sayde: Go youre waye to Godolias the sonne off Abicam. And when they came in the myddest off the cete, Jsmael the sonne off Nathanas (with them that were sworne vnto him) slewe them, euē at the myddest off the pye. Amonge these Ierx, mē there were ten. y sayde vnto Jsmael: Oh slaye we not, for we haue yet a greates treasure in the felde, off wheate, barley, oyle and hony. So he sparede the, and slewe them not with their brethren. Now the pye wherin Jsmael dyd cast the deede bodies off the mē (whom he slewe because off Godolias) had kynge

Alia caused to be made, for feare off Baasht the kynge off Jisrael, and the same dyd Jsmael jill wth slayne men. As for the remnant off thē people, the kynge doughteas and all the people that were yet left at Masphat, vpon whom Nabnistraban the chefe Capteyne had made Godolias the sonne off Abicam gouernour: Jsmael the sonne off Nathanas caried them awaye prisoners towarde the Ammonites. But when Johanna the sonne off Carea and all the other which had bene captaynes ouer the kynge boeste with hym, herte off all the wickednes that Jsmael the sonne off Nathanas had done: they toke their companys, and wente out for to fight with Jsmael the sōne off Nathanas, and founde him by the waters of Rabim in Gaboon. Now when all the people, wherin Jsmael led captaynes, sawe Johanna y some off Carea and all the other captaynes off the hoste, they were glad. So all the people that Jsmael had caried awaye frō Masphat, were broughte agayne.

And whē they returned, they came to Johanna the sonne off Carea. But Jsmael the sonne off Nathanas fled from Johanna y eight off his sworne companys, 7 wente to the Ammonites. Then Johanna the sonne off Carea and all the captaynes off the hoste that were w him, toke the remnant off the people, whom Jsmael the sonne off Nathanas had led awaye. When he had slayne Godolias the sonne off Abicam, whom he also had rescued from his fightinge many men 7 children, and geled men, whom he broughte agayne from Gaboon: and went from thence, and sat them downe at Gerd Chimham, which lieth besyde Beelias, wher they mighte go in to Egipce for feare off the Caldees: off whom they were a feare. Now se that Jsmael the sonne off Nathanas had slayne Godolias Abicam y some, whom the kynge off Babilon had made gouernour the londe.

The XLII. Chapter.

SO all the rulers, and Johanna the sonne off Carea, Jeranias the sonne off Shas came with all the people wher the leest vnto the most, 7 sayde vnto Jerm the prophet: O heare oure petition, that we mayest praye for vs vnto the LORDE y God and for the remnant, wherof there be few left off many, as thou seist vs: that the LORDE thy God maye heere vs a waye go in, 7 tell vs, what we shalde do. Thus remy the prophete sayde vnto them: Thus herde you. Behelde, I will praye vnto the your LORDE, as ye haue requyred me: and he what answer the LORDE geueth you, I shall certifie you theroff, and depende on his word frō you. And they sayde vnto Jerm: The LORDE off treuth 7 faithfulness is our recorde, that we wil do all, that the LORDE thy God commaundeth vs, whether it be od or euell. We will hearken vnto the wyse off oure LORDE God, so when we sende that we maye prospere, when we haue shewed the voyce off the LORDE oure God.

And after ten dayes came the word off the LORDE vnto Jeremij. Then called he Johanna the sonne off Carea, and all the captaynes off the people that were with him: 7 all the people from the leest to the most. I sayde vnto them: Thus saeth the LORDE God off Jisrael vnto whom ye seist me, wher ye seist youre prayers before him: If ye dwell in this londe, I shall burye you: If ye not breake you downe, I shall plant you: If ye not rote you out: for I am pacified, as the wynge the trouble that I haue done to you. Feare not the kynge off Babilon, off whom ye stonde in awe: O be not afrayd off him, saith the LORDE: for I will be with you, to helpe you, and deliuer you from his hande. I will pardon you, I will haue mercy vpon you, and bringe you agayne into your owne londe.

Teuretheis, yf ye purpose not to dwell in this londe, ner to folowe the voyce off the LORDE your God: doe will saye thus: we will not dwell here, but go in to Egipte: where we shall neither se warre, heare the noyse off battell, ner suffre hunger, there will we dwell. After foire heare now the worde of the LORDE, o ye remnant of Iuda. Thus saith the LORDE of hostes the God of Israel: If ye be whole purposed to go in to Egipte, to be there as strangers: the swerde that ye feare, shall ouer take you in Egipte, and the hunger wheroff ye be here afrayd, shall hang vpon you in to Egipte, and there ye shall dye. For all they, that off set purpose undertake to go in to Egipte, they receiue them selues off their misery, shall perish with the swerde, with hunger and pestilence: not one off them shall remayne, that shall none escape the plague, that I will bringe vpon them.

For thus saith the LORDE off hostes the God off Israel: like as my wrath and indignacion is come vpon the inhabitours of Ierusalem, so shall my displeasur go forth vpon you also, yf ye go in to Egipte: For there ye shall be reuyled, abhord, brought to shame and confusion: and as for this place, ye shall neuer se it more. The LORDE foirethreddeth you, o ye remnant of Iuda: that ye shall not go in to Egipte. And forget not that I haue warned you earnestly this daye: as I shall ye begyle youre selues. For ye sent me into the LORDE your God, and sayde: O praye thou the LORDE our God for vs: and loke what answer the LORDE our God geueth the, that bringe vs agayne, ad we shall do the same. Now haue I shewed, and declared vnto you the voyce off the LORDE your God, for the which cause he hath sent me to you. If ye will not folowe it, be sure, yf ye shall perish with the swerde, with hunger & pestilence: as in the same place, wher your lust was to go, and dwell.

The XLIII. Chapter.

Uow when Jeremy had ended all y^e wordes of y^e LORDE God vnto y^e people, (for their sakes to whom God had sent him) Asaria the sonne of Othias, & Johanna y^e sonne of Carea, with all the people performed, sayde vnto Jeremy: Thou lyeist, the LORDE our God hath not sent vs to speake vnto vs, that we shulde not go in to Egipte, and dwell there: But Baruch the sonne of Nerias prouoeth the agaynst vs, that he mighte bringe vs in to the captiuitie off the Caldees: that they mighte slaye vs, and carie vs awaye prisoners in to Babilon.

So Johanna the sonne of Carea, and all the captiuites of the hooftes, and all the people folowed not the commaundement of the LORDE: Namely, to dwell in the londe off Iuda: But Johanna the sonne of Carea, & all the captiuites of the hooftes, caried awaye all the remnant in Iuda, that were come together agayne from the Sythen (as moche whom they had bene caried, so dwell in the londe of Iuda: Men, women, childre, the kynnes doughers: all those that Tabularadan the chefe captiaine had left with Godolias the sonne of Ahicam. They caried awaye also the prophet Jeremy, Baruch the sonne of Nerias, and so came in to Egipte: for they were not obedient vnto the commaundement of God. Thus came they to Taphnis.

And in Taphnis the wordes off the LORDE happened vnto Jeremy, sayenge: Take greate stones in thine hds, and hyde them in the back wall, vnder the doore off Pharaos house in Taphnis, that all chieftain of Iudamaise, and saye vnto them: Thus saith the LORDE of hostes the God of Israel: Behold, I will sende and call for Tabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon my seruant, and will set his seate vpon these stones that I haue hyd, and he shall speake his sente our them.

And when he cometh, he shall smyte the side of Egipte with slaughter, with prisonment and with the swerde. He shall set fyre vpon the temples of the Egiptians goddes, and burne them up, & take them selues prisoners. Moreover he shall araye himselfe wth the side of Egipte, like as a shepheard putteth on his coat, and shall departe his hande y^e from thence in peacc. The pillars also off the temple of the Sonne that is in Egipte, shall be breake in pecc, and burne the temples of the Egiptians goddes.

The XLIII. Chapter.

In is the wordes that shewed to Jeremy concerninge all y^e Iudaea, which dwells in Egipte: at Iahogal at Ta.

phus, at Memphis, & in the londe of Paraire. Thus saith the LORD of hostes the God of Israel: Ye haue sene all y^e misery, y^e I haue brought vpon Ierusalem, and vpon all the cities of Iuda: so that this daye they are desolate, and no man dwelling therein: & y^e because of the greate blasphemies, whiche they committed, to prouoke me vnto anger: In that they wente backe to do sacrifice ad wooshipe vnto strange goddes: wher in neither they, ner ye, ner yo^r fathers haue know-ne. So we be it, I sent vnto them my seruants all the prophetes: I rose vp early, I sent vnto them, and gaue them warninge: O do no such abominable thinges, & thinges that I haue. But they wolde not solumer herke, to come from their wickednes, and to do no more so crinie vnto strange goddes.

Wherefore my indignacion & wrath reas-yned, and it came vnto the cities of Iuda, the felde with the streets off Ierusalem: so that they were made waste and desolate, as it is come to passe this daye. Now therfore thus saith the LORD of hostes the God of Israel: Some hath happened it, that ye do so greate euill vnto youre ormesoules, thus to despise ye the men and women, childre and babes of Iuda: so that none of you is left, because ye prouoke me vnto wrath with the rootes of youre owne hondes: wher ye offre vnto strange goddes in the londe off Egip-te, wher as ye be gone to dwell: Ther ye might vnto perishe, and that ye might be reyled and shamefully intreated of all nations. Or, haue ye now forgotten the wickednes off yo^r forefathers, the wickednes off y^e Kinges of Iuda and their wyues, y^e wickednes that ye youre selues ad youre wyues haue done in the londe of Iuda, in the cite and in the londe off Ierusalem?

Ye are ye not fory this daye, ye feare not, neither walke ye in my lawe and in my commandment: ne, that I haue geue vnto you and vnto yo^r forefathers.

Therfore thus saith the LORD of hostes the God off Israel: I amstedfast ad vysed and determyned, to punyssh you, and to rote out all Iuda. As for the remnant off Iuda that purposly wente in to Egipce, the ye to cast them off their misery: I will take them, and they shall all be destroyed. In y^e londe of Egipce shall they perishe, beyng consumed with the swerde and with hen-ger. For if any of leste vnto y^e most, they shall perishe with the swerde and with henger.
No more they shall be reyled, abhorred, shamed, and confounded. So: I will visite them this dwell in Egipce, as I haue visited Ie-rusalem: with the swerde, with henger and with pestilence: So that none off the remnant off Iuda, which are gone to dwell in Egipce, shall be left to come agayne in to y^e londe off Iuda: all though they theynto come thurber agayne, and to dwell there, for none shall come agayne, but soch as are left awaye.

Then all the men which knewe that their wyues had offered vnto strange goddes, & a greate force off wyues that stode there, and all the people that dwelt there in Egip-te in the cite of Paraire, answered Jeremy sayde: As for the wyues that thou hast spoken vnto vs in the name of the LORD, we will in no wise heare them: but what shall we geue out of our owne mouth, that wil we do: We will do sacrifice, and offre oblacions vnto the Quene off heauen: like as we ad of our fathers, our Kynges and oure hea-dres haue done in the cities off Iuda, and in the streets and felde of Ierusalem. For thus we were plentifully off vyales, then we were in prosperite, and no mysfortunes came vpon vs.

But sith we left, to offre, and to do sacifice vnto the Quene of heauen, we haue had scarcenes of all thinges, and perishe with the swerde and henger. Last of all, when we women did sacrifice and offre vnto the Quene of heauen, did we make her cakes ad peure vnto her drinke offeringes, so to her service, with our oure husbandes wyues?

Then sayde Jeremy vnto all the people, both the men, to the women and to all the children, which had geuen him that answer: Dye not the LORD remember the sacrifices that ye, yo^r forefathers, youre kynges & rulers of all the people haue offered in the cities of Iu-da, in the streets and londe off Ierusalem: and hath he not censured this in his myn-de? In so much, that the LORD might no longer suffre the wickednes off your inventions, and the abominable thinges whiche ye byd: In ner your londe desolate wyde, yet and abhorred, so that no man shall therein any more, as it is come to passe this daye?

Dye not all this happen vnto you, because ye made such sacrifice, and sinned agaynst the LORD? Ye haue not sokened his lawe, to walke in his lawe, in his ordinances and statutes.

Ye this is the cause, that all mysfortunes happened vnto you, as it is come to passe this daye.

The prophet Jeremij.

Moreover, Jeremij spake vnto all the people and to all the women: heare the worde off the LORDE all Iuda, ye that be in the londe off Egypte: Thus saith the LORDE off hoopes the God of Israel: Ye and your wives haue spoken with youre owne mouth, the change that ye haue fulfilled in be de.

142 Jerchobabane ye sayde: We will not feyde, but do the thinge that pleaseth vs: we wil do sacrifice and pour out drinkeoffringes to the Queene of heauen. Purposly haue ye set vp youre owne good meanynges, & hastily haue ye fulfilled youre owne intention. And herfor, heare the worde of the LORDE all Iuda, ye that dwell in the londe off Egypte.

143 Beholde, I haue sworne by my greates name saith the LORDE, that my name shal not be heard, & thou shalt not be named in any mans mouth of Iuda, in all the londe off Egypte: to saye: The LORDE God spued, for I wil watch, to plague them, and noe for their wealch. And all the men of Iuda that be in the lode of Egypte, shal perishe with the swearde and with hunger, until they be vtterly destroyed.

144 And herfor, heare that which I haue sayd for yf sworde, shal come agayne in to the lode of Iuda, but there shal be very fewe of them) And all the remnant off Iuda, that are gone in to Egypte, there to dwell, shall knowe, whose wordes shal be founde true: theirs or myne. Take this for a token, that I wil vi set you in this place saith the LORDE, and that ye maye knowe, how that I (without doute) wil performe my purpose vpon you,) to punyshe you. Beholde (saith the LORDE) I wil deliuer pharaos Ophiam kynge of Egypte in to the bondes of his enemies, yf he after his life: euen as I gaue Sedechias the kynge of Iuda in to the bondes of Nabuchodonosor Kinge of Babilon, which sought after his life.

The XLV. Chapter.

145 I shal shewe the wordes of Jeremij the prophet spake vnto Baruch the sonne of Nerias, after that he had writtethis Sermon in to a booke at the mouth of Jeremij. In the fourth yeare of Ioaquim the sonne of Josias kynge of Iuda.

Thus saith the LORDE God of Israel vnto the, O Baruch: In so much as thou thoughtest thus (when thou wast writinge) Wo is me, the LORDE hath geuen me payne for my nauayle: I haue weered my self wth soppinge, and shall I fynde no rest: Therfor,

The xlvi. Chap. Ho. xliiij.

reuell him (O Jeremij) of the LORDE saith the LORD: Beholde, The charge that I haue layd vnto thee, wil I breake downe agayne, and take out the change, that I haue planted, yee this whole londe. And I sette thee yet promocios: Loke not for it, and desyre it noe. For I will bringe a miserable plague vnto all flesh, saith the LORDE. But thy life wil I geue thee for a pray, where so euer thou goest.

The XLVI. Chapter.

146 I shal shewe the wordes of the LORDE to the prophet Jeremij, which he spake vnto the Gentiles. These wordes solomunge preached he to the Egyptians concerninge the hoost off Pharaos the chiefe kynge off Egypte, when he was in Characmis beyde the water off Euphrates: what tyme as Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon sawe him, In the fourth yeare off Ioaquim the sonne off Josias kynge off Iuda.

147 He make rebv bucker and shyde, ye go forth to fight: see harness your horses, & set your selues vpon them: see set your feete laces fast on, ye bringe forth speares, ye couer your sweardes, & put on your best plate.

148 But alas, how happeneth it, that I see you so a frayd: why shiede ye backe: where fore are your worthies slayne: see they run so fast awaye, that none off them looth behynde him. Fearfulnesse is fallen vpon euerydome off them, saith the LORDE. The lightest off fore shall not fle awaye, and the worthies shall not scape.

149 Towarde the north by the water of Euphrates they shall stembled and fall. But what is he this, that swelleth vp, as it were a floude, roaringe & raginge like the streames off water: It is Egypte that ryseth vp like the floude, and casteth out the waters w^{ch} so greateso yf.

150 For they saye: We will go vp, and will couer the earth: we wil destroye yf cities, with them that dwell therein. Get you to boue bacle, roll forth yf Charettes, come forth ye wode thies: ye Morians, ye Libeans with your buclers, ye Libeans with your bowes: So shall this daye be vnto the LORDE God of hoopes, a daye of vengeance, that he maye avenge him of his enemies. The swerde shal deuoure, it shal be satisfied and bated in the i blood: For the LORDE God off hoopes shall haue a slayn offeringe towarde the North, by the water of Euphrates. Go vp (o Galan) & bringe triacle into the bougeter off Egypte:

But in wayne shalt thou go to forgerie, for thy wounde shall not be stopped. The shepher shall heare off thy shame, and the londe shall be full of thy confucion: for one stronger man shall stonble upon another, how then shalde they not fall both together?

C These are the wordes that the LORDE spake to the prophet Jeremyp, concerninge of hooff of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, which was to destroye the londe off Egypte: Prcach out thow the londe off Egypte, and cause it to be proclaimed at Migdal, Memphis and Taphnis, and saye: Stonde still, make the rebie, for the sworde shal consume the rounde aboute.

How happeneth it that thy mightie wordes are fallen: why stobd they not fast? Even because the LORDE thrust them downe. The slaughter was greute, for one fell ever still upon another. One cried upon another: Up, let us go agayne to oure owne people, and to oure owne naturall countre, from the sworde of oure enemye.

One crye then: O Pharao kynge of Egypte, the tyme wil bringe sciocon. So truly as I live (saith the Kyng, whose name is the LORDE of hostes) it shall come as if moante of Tybode, and as Libanus if it stode in the ice. O thou daughter of Egypte, make redy thy peer to flye. For Memphis shalte voyde and desolate, socharnema shal dwell therein. The londe of Egypte is like a goodly fayre calfe, but one shall come out of the north to drye her forwarde. Her wagged feald yeres that be with her, are like fat calnes.

They also shall fle awaye together, and not abyde: for the daye off their slaughter and the tyme off their vifitation shall come upon them.

The crye off their enemies shall make a noyse, as the blast of a tremper. For they shall crye in with their hooffe, and come waxes, as it were herens downe of wode. And they shall cut downe hir wode (saith the LORDE, with out any discretion. For they shal be mo in nobte then the greshoppers, so that no man shalbe able to tell the. The downe here of Egypte shalbe confounded, wher she shalbe deluyered in to the hondes off the people off the north.

E Moreover thus saith the LORDE of hooff the God of Israel: Scholde I wil vifet that restless people off Alexandria, Pharao and Egypte, yett both their goddes and their kynge: even Pharao, and all them y lizen unto him. See I will deluyet them in to the hondes off choyse, that like as their lyes: Namely, into the power off Nabuchodonosor the kynge off Babylon, and in to the power off his seruantes. See after all these thynges, it shalbe inhabited as afore tyme, saith the LORDE

But be not thou afraid (o my seruante Jacob) feare not thou, o Israel. Gode, wil helpe the from farre, and thy side from the londe off thy captiuyte. Jacob also shall come agayne, and be in rest: he shall be rich, and no man shall do him harme. See therefore (o Jacob my seruante) saith the LORDE, for I am with the: and wil destroye all nacions, amonge whom I haue scatched. Therefore I wil not consume the, be chafte the and couerte the: yett and that with discretion: neither wil I spate the, as yett that were faultlesse.

The XLVII. Chapter.

C These are the wordes, that the LORDE spake unto Jeremyp the prophet agaynst the Phylisines, before that Pharao smote the cite off Gaza. Thus saith the LORDE: Beholde, these shall moue arise out off the north: and shall greue us greute stoude, runnyng euer and couerynge the londe, the cities and them that dwell therein.

And the men shall crye, and all they that dwell in the londe, shall moue at the noise and stampynge off their stronge hard hooffe, at the shakynge off their charretts, and at the rymblyng off the wheles. The fathers shall not loke to their chyldren, nor scible and wery shall their hondes be: at the same tyme, when he shal be there, to destroye the whole londe off the Phylisines: he shall make wast both Tyrs, Sidon and all other that are swonne unto them.

For the LORDE wil destroye all Palestina, and the ocher Iles, that be beynd his countre. Baldnesse is come upon Gaza, Asecalon with his ocher valleys shall be hir peace.

Howe longe wilt thou laye. O thou shalt be off the LORDE: Turne agayne in to thy streth, rest, and leaue off. But how canst cease, when the LORDE himself hath giuen it a charge agaynst Asecalon, and setted it up agaynst the cries off the sea off asst?

The XLVIII. Chapter.

C Thus saith the LORDE off hooff the God of Israel against Iacob: Woe is to thee of cite off Tybo, for it shal be lye

148 will broughen comfort and taken. The 149 strange cite of Carisbachim shall be brought of shame, and strayed: Moab shall nomo-re be had in honoure: Wicked counsell shall be taken vp on her fobon. Come shall they sa-ye for to rite them out, what they may be counted amonge the nombre of the Gentiles, yet that they maye remoue be thoughte vpon:
 Thus the frende shall persecute y.
 A voyce shall rise from Horonaim: With great wailing and destruction, is Moab made desolate.

150 And this crye shall be here in all hir cities.
 151 And goinge vp vnto Beth there shall be a lamentacion and vnto Horonaim, there shall be herde a cruell and a deadly crye: Get you awaye, save youre lyues: be like vnto the heeth in y wilderness. For, because thou hast trusted in thy stronge holdes, and treasure, thou shalt be taken.

152 Chamos hath his prestes and pynces shall go awaye in to captiuyte.

153 The destroyre shall come vpon all cities, none shall escape. The walles shall be destroyed, and the felde shall be layed waste: It is as the LORDE hath determined.

154 Make a crye vnto Moab, that she yet be awaye spedely: for hir cities shall be made so desolate, that no man shall dwell therein.
 Until be that hath docthe worke of the LORDE negligently, and caused be the death had this wards from sheddyng off bloud.

155 Moab hath euer bene rich and carelesse from hir youth vp, she hath syzen and take hir ease with hir treasure. She was neuer yet put out off one vessell in to another: y she neuer wente awaye in to captiuyte, therefore hir case remaineth, and hir sauaire is not yet changed.

156 But lo, the tyme cometh (saith the LORDE) that I shall sende hir trusters to truste her vp, to prepare and reason her vesell: yet her trusters shall, and shalte to sit. And Moab shall be ashamed off Chamos, like as Israel was ashamed off Bethel, when she put hir trust.

157 Wherefore do yethynke thus: we are mighty, and stronge men off warre: Moab shall be destroyed, and hir cities waunte vp: hir docthe young men shall be slayne, saith the LORDE, whose name is the LORDE off hostes. The destruction off Moab cometh on a pace, and hir fall is at hande.

158 All hir neighbours shall moure for her, and all they that knowe hir name, shall saye: O how happened it, that the stronge staff and the goodly reb is thus broken! And thou doste see Dib, come downe from thy glory, and sit in pouerte. So be that destroyre Moab, shall come vp to the alfo, and beate downe thy stronge holdes.

159 And thou that dwellest in Ader, get the to y street, & loke aboute the cite: thin that are fled and escaped, and saye: what chynge is happened? O Moab is confounded and cast downe.

160 Moure and crye, tell it out at Arnon, that Moab is destroyed. And misery shall come vpon the plaine lande: Tancij, vnto holon, and Jaza: vpon Mephac and Dib, vpon Libo: vnto the house off Drachaim, vpon Carisbachim and Bethgamul, vpon Bethnaton and Cariob, vpon Dofia and all the cite in the lode off Moab, whether they lye sate or iourne.

161 The home off Moab shall be smyre downe, & hir arme broken, saith the LORDE. Make hir drunken, for she magnified hir self aboue the LORDE: Shear men maye clappe thei holdes at hir vomyte, and that she alfo maye be layed to scorn. O Israel, shall thou not laugh him to scorne, when he is taken amonge the gentes?
 He because off thy meane that thou hast spoken agaynst him, thou shalt be dishonoured. The Arabites shall leaue the cities, and dwell in rockes off stone, and become like bones, that make thei nestes in holes.

162 As for Moabs pryde, we haue herbe off it, she is vnto hir mynde. I knowe hir stoutnesse, hir boofyinge, hir arrogancy and the pryde off hir stomack, saith the LORDE.
 For hir surdnesse maye neether vpholde her: y stranger they deride. Therefore shall thei moure myne betwixte for Moab, and crye: Moab shall die for Moabs sake: a lamentacion shall be made, betwixen that stone vpon the wall. So will I mourne for the alfo (Jaser), and for the, O thou wyrtarde off Sybom.

163 Thy wyne dailiches shall come ouer y se, and the busches off Jazer but vnto the se: the destroyer shall beate in to thy barnes and grape gatheringe.
 Myrrh and cheere shall be taken awaye from the cymbre fele, and from the whole lode off Moab.

164 Ther: shall be no sweete wyne in the priefe: the creator shall haue no stomacke to crye, yet there shall be none to crye vnto him: which a fore tyme were hade from the seibon to the lode off Joz, which lifted vp thei voyce from Beor vnto Horonaim, that buld off thei yearre olde. The waters alfo off Jaramus shall be drich vp.

Moreover I will make Moab chaste (saith the LORD) from the offerings and censings that she hath made unto her goddesses in her places. Wherefore my heret mourning for Moab, like a crowde playenge an heuy songe: and for the mens sake off the buche I will my heret mourning also, euen as a pype, that pipeth a dolefull songe: for they shall be very fewe, and destroyed.

All heuens shall be shaven, and all herdes dipped off: all bondes bounde, and all loynes gyted aboute with sack cloth. And all the house of coppes and strates off Moab, there shall come ynyng: For I will breake Moab like an vnprofitable vessell saith the LORD. O how sorrowfull is she: O how mournefull she: O how doeth Moab hang downe her heade, and is ashamed: Thus shall Moab be a laughing stocke, and had in derision off all them, that be remide aboute her.

For thus saith the LORD: Beholde, the enemye that come synging as an Aegle, and spede his wynges upon Moab. They shall clymme ouer the wallis, and wyne, the strong holdes. Then the mighty men hereto in Moab, shall be like the herte off a woman traueling with child.

And Moab shall emade so desolate, that she shall no more be a people, because she hath lett up her selfe agaynst the LORD. Scare, pte, and snare shall come vpon the: o Moab saith the LORD. Who so escapeth the scare, shall fall in the pte: and who so getteth out off the pte, shall be taken in the snare.

For I will bunge a yere off vntacion vpon Moab, saith the LORD. They that are able to fle, shall stonde vnder the shadowe off Gesebon. For there shall go a fyre out off Gesebon, and a flame from Sion, and shall burne vpon that proude people off Moab, both before and behynde.

Who be vnto the (o Moab) for thou people off Chamos shall perish: See thy synnes and doghters shall be led awaye captiue. Yet as the last will I bunge Moab out off captiue agayne, saith the LORD. Thus fare off the plage off Moab.

The XLIX. Chapter.

Concerning the Ammonites, thus saith the LORD: Each Israel no child vnto, nor to be without an heire: Why hath your synge them taken Gad in: wherefore doeth his people dwell in his cities: Beholde therefore, the tyme cometh (saith the LORDE) that I will bringe a noyse of warre into Rabath off the Ammonites.

Rabath shall be desolate, and her cities taken vp: and the Israelites shall be loosed out of thole, that had the in possession a fewe, saith the LORD. Gesebon shall mourne, for she shall be roced out off the grounde, saith the LORD. The cities off Rabath shall be taken, and gyde them selues with sack cloth they shall mourne, and ranne aboute the wallis for their synge shall be led awaye prisoner: yet his priestes and pryces will be.

Wherefore trustest thou in the water fountes, that flowe to and fro, o thou founte doghter: and thy nyghts are so, saye thy reason off thy creatur: that no man shall come to the:

Beholde, I will bringe a streame vpon the, saith the LORD God off hostes, from all these that be aboute the: so that ye shall be feared every man from another, and no man shall gather them together agayne, that be fled. But as for the, I will bringe Chamonites also out off captiue agayne.

Vpon the Ammonites heere the LORD off hostes spoken in this maner: Is there so moie wysdome in Cherman: Is there so moie good counsell amonge his people: Is their wysdome then turned cleau in us ager: Or yet hence, turne your backe, as ye do mane in the depe, o ye cities off Ba ban.

For I will bunge destruction vpon them, yet and the daye off his visitacion. If the grape gatherers came vpon the, shall they not leaue some grapes: If the night robbers came vpon the, shall they not take so much, as they thought were ynough:

But I will make them bare, and deserue his secretes, so that he shall not be able to hyde them. His rde shall be manifest awaye, yet his birthum and his neyghbours, and he himselfe shall not be left behinde.

Thou shalt leaue thy fatherlesse children behinde the, and I will kepe them and thy wydowes shall take their comfort in me. For thus hath the LORD spoken: Beholde, they that men thought be vnto the: the of the cuppe, haue dynten with the fist: and thynkest thou then to be free:

No, no: thou shalt neuer be any more free, but thou must dye: also: For why, I haue sowne by my selfe, saith the LORD: that Desra shall become a wyrdomess: an open shame, a laughing stocke and cursyng: and her cities shall be a continual deserte.

The 1. Chap. Fo. xlii.

For I am perfectly informed of the LORD, that he hath sent a message all ready vnto the shepher. Gather you together, and go forth agaynst them: make you ready to the damage, for lo: I will make the but small amonge the shepher, and litle regarded among men.

Thy hie stomache & thopyde of thy herde hath increased y, because thou wilt dwell in the holes of stony rocks, and haue the hie mountaynes in possession. Therefore thou though thyself were as hie as the Eagles, yet wilt cast the downe, saith the LORD. Whosoevr IJoumea shall be a wilderness: who so goeth by it, shall be abashed, and won be at all his miserable plagis. Like as Sedon, & Gomor and the cities that laye there aboute, were turned vpon yde downe (saith y LORD) so shall no body dwell in Ioumea, and no man shall haue his habiteacion there. Beholde, like as the Lam cometh vp from the pleasant meadowes of Iordane vnto y grene pastures of Kirshā, so wilt I drye him, & make him runne agaynst her. But who is the yonge man that I will ordene herto? Who is like, vnto me? What is he that wilt styre with me? What shepherde maye fynde in my handes?

Thou here heare the counsell of the LORD, that he hath taken vpon Ioumea: & his purpose, that he hath deuyed vpon the cities of them: that the leaft of the stocke shall want them in piece, & loke what saie theym: ge they haue, they shall make it wast, & them (sins also). At the noyse of their fall y earth shall quake, the crye of their voyce shall be heard vnto the reed sea. Beholde, y enemy shall come and ste vpon her, like as it were an Eagle, & prede his wynges vpon Bofra. Then shall the hartes of the worthies in Lebanon be as the herte of a woman trauelinge of child. Vpon Damascus, Hama, and Arpad shall come confusion, for they shall heare euill tydings: they shall be cossed to and fro like the see that can not stonde still. Damascus shall be foue a stayde, & shall ste, trembling shall come vpon her. Howe and payne shall our take her as a woman trauelinge of child. But howe shallde so worshipfull and glorious a care be forsaken? heare therfore the yonge men shall fall in the stretes, and all the men of warre shall be take awaye in that tyme, saith the LORD of hoostes. I will fynde a fyre in the walles of Damascus, which shall consume the palace of Benadab.

As for Cedar and the King dome of Isafai, whom Labachodonosor the kynge of Bablon smote downe, the LORD hath spoken thus vpon them: Arise, and ge you vnto Cedars, and destroye the people that dwelle the east. Their tentes and their stockes shall they take awaye, yet their hangings and their vessels. Their Camels also shall they carie awaye with them. They shall come aduise them on every syde with a fearful crye.

Ye, ge you soone awaye, crepe into caves, theye maye dwell there: & y inhabiteours of Isafai, saith the LORD: for Labachodonosor y kynge of Bablon hath holden a counsell concernyng you, & concluded his deuys agaynst you. Arise, & ge you vpon agaynst yonder rich & carelesse people, saith the LORD, which haue neither gates nor doore barret, & that dwell not together. Their Camels shall be stollen, & the vienes of their cattell dryen awaye.

Moreover, these that be shaven wil I scatter towards all the wyndes, & bringe them to destruction: see & that showe their owne familiaris, saith the LORD. Isafai also shall be a dwellinge for dragons, and an dwellinge wilderness: so that no body shall dwell there, and no man shall haue there his habitacion.

These are the wordes, that the LORD spake to the prophet Jeremie concernyng Elam, in the begynnyng of the reigne of Sebedias kynge of Iuda. Thus saith the LORD of hoostes: Beholde, I will breake the boue of Elam, and take awaye their strength: and vpon Elam I will bringe the four wyndes from y four quarters of heauen, & wil scatter them agaynst the same four wyndes. And there shall be no people, but some of Elam shall ste vnto them.

For I wil cause Elam to be a yayed of their enemies, & of them that sette their lyues: & wil bringe vpon them the indignacion of my wrath, saith the LORD. And I wil persecute them with the swerde so longe as I haue broughte them so naught. I wil see my foes in Elam, I wil destroye bodye the kynge & y prynces from thence, saith the LORD. Thus in processe of tyme, I wil bringe Elam one of captiuitie agayne, saith the LORD.

The 1. Chapter. These wordes y the LORD spake vnto the prophet Jeremie, concernyng Bablon, & the lorde of the Caldees: Prynces amonge the Gentiles, let youre voyce be heard, make a toll: crye out, hepe no silence, but saie: Bablon shall be wonne. He shall be founded, and Merodach shall be ouercome.

See their goddesses shall be brought to shame, and their ymagines shall stand in feare. For out of the north there shall come a people agaynst her, which shall make her londe so waste, that no body shall dwell therein: neither man nor beast, for they shall stele and departe from thence. Yerobob be ye ze at that tyme (saith the LORD) he shall be of Israel shall come, they & the children of Juda, weeping & makinge haire, & they shall see the LORD their God. They shall see the waye to Sion, they shall see their faces, & come, and hang upon the, in a courtaine: that neuer shall be broken.

My people hath bene a lost flocke, my shepherdes have disceined them, & haue made them go astraye vpon the hilles. They haue gone from the mountayne to the litle hill, & forgotten their foldes. All they y came vpon them, haue deuoured the: & their enemies say be: We haue made no fauour agaynst them, for they haue displeasid the LORD, yet euen the LORD Emph is the bewtie of their righteousness, & y founde their fathers. Yet shall ye ste from Babilon, & departe out of y lande of the Caldees, and ye shall be as the rammes that go before the flocke. Jer lo. I will waite vpon a hoost of people from y northen londe, & bringe them vpon Babilon: thes shall laye siege to it, & wyne it: Their arrows shall not misse, like as a connyng archer sheweth not wronge. And the Caldees shall be spoyled, & all they that spoyle them, shall be satisfied, saith the LORD: because ye were so chearfull & glad, to treade downe myn heretage, & fulfilled youre pleasures, as the calves in the grasse: and triumphed ouer them like the bulles, when ye had gotten the victory. Your mothers shall be sore confounded, and they that bare you, shall come to shame. She shal be the leest fet by amonge the nations, wyde, wast, & dued up. To man shall be able to dwell there, for the feare of y LORD, but she shall be whole desolate. All they that go by Babilon, shall stande still, & be abashed, & shall woude at all hir plagas.

So forch in ye araye agaynst Babilon rounde aboute, all ye that can habde bowes: shute as her, spare no arrows, for she hath synned agaynst the LORD. Crie out: vpon her, vpon her, agaynst her rounde aboute: she shall ye be her selfe, her foundacions shall fall, & hir walles shall come downe, for it shall be the vengeance of the LORD. Her vengeance shall be taken of her, & as she hath done, so shall she be dealt wathall. They shall rote out the tower from Babilon, & him y hantheth the selfe in harness. For feare of the smite of the enemy, euery man shall geue him his owne londe. Israel is a scaterd flocke, & yons haue disperd them. Sir the kinge of the Assirians deuoured them, last of all this Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon hath busst all their bones.

Therefore thus saith the LORD of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I will reuise the kinge of Babilon & his kingdome, as I haue visid the kinge of the Assirians: and will bringe Israel agayne to his pleasaure pasture, that he maye fede vpon Chama: Basan, and be satisfied vpon the mounte of Ephraim & Galaad. In those dayes & at the same tyme (saith the LORD) y shall reuise the kinge of the Assirians: for theye shall haue no more: y men enquire for the smite of Juda, there shall be none: for I will be mercifull vnto them, whom I suffer to remayne oner.

Go downe (o thou avenger) in to the emittes londe, & visit them that dwell therein: downe with them, and smyte them vpon the backes, saith the LORD: do a cowardise to all, that I haue commaunded the. This is gone aboute the londe a crye of a langour & greate murthar, namely on the mounte: howe happeneth it, that the hammer of the whole world is thus broken & busst in sunder: howe chaunceth it, that Babilon is become a wilderness amonge the heathen in this maner: I myselfe haue layed mayne for the, & thou art taken: manwarres art thou spoiled & starrd: for why, thou hast pieced of LORD into anger: The LORD hath opened his house of ordinaunce, & brought forth the weapons of his wrath. For the thinge that is done in the londe of the Caldees, is the LORD of hostes wote.

These thinges shall come vpon her at the last, they shall breake in to hir piety children, they shall leane her as bare as stones, that be layed to gether vpon heapes. They shall so destroye her, y nothinge shall be left. They shall slaye all hir maghetie (sub)uers, and put them to death. Woe be vnto the, for theye & tyme of their visitacion is at hande. We thinke I heare already a crye, of them that be fled & escaped out of the londe of Babilon, which sheweth in Sion the vengeance of the LORD ouer God, the vengeance of his temple: For a voyce of them, that are agaynst Babilon: Call vp all the archers agaynst Babilon, ynto your tentes rounde aboute her, that none of scape. her, as she hath defamed: and according as she hath done, so deale with her againe: for she hath set up her self agaynst the LORDE, agaynst y^e holy one of Israel. Therfore shall her yongemen fall downe in the strettes, & all her men of warre shall be roted out in y^e daye, saith the LORDE. Beholde, I speake vnto the, o thou proude: saith the LORDE God of hostes: for thy daye shall come, and the try me of y^e iusticia. And the proude shall steme: & fall, & no man shall helpe him up. I will come up his cities with syc, & it shall consume all that is rounde aboute him.

¶ Thus saith the LORDE of hostes: The children of Israel & Iuda shall see violence together. All they that haue them in captiuitie, kepe them fast, & wil not let them go: but their aduerser & redemer is mightie, whose name is the LORDE of hostes: he shall maner for their cause, he shall make the londe shall be, & adue them that dwell therein, one with another. The swearde shall come vpon the Caldees, saith the LORDE vpon them that dwell in Babilon, vpon their princes, & vpon their wise men: The swearde vpon their soych sayres, (as for chiefe), they shall become folles: The swearde vpon their whories, so that they shall stonde in fiare: The swearde vpon their husbandmen and charettes, & vpon all the comen people that dwell vnder the: so that they all shall become like women: The swearde vpon their treasure, so that it shall be stoln awaye: The swearde vpon their wares, so that they shall be diued up: For the londe will shippeth ymagos, & deliuereth in straunge wondre full things. Therfore shall wilde bestes, & pes & w^e striches dwell therein: for there shall neuer man dwell there, necher shall any man haue his habitation there for euer more. Like as God destroyed Sodon & Gomorrah, with the cities that laye there aboute, saith the LORDE: So shall no man dwell there also, necher shall any man haue there his habitation. Beholde, there shall come a people from the north, with a greate bombe of men, & many thinges shall stonde up from the midde of the earth: They beate bowes & bucles, & shall be theyr vnmerefull.

¶ Their voyce roareth like the raging see, they rye vpon hoies, & come we opened to fight agaynst the: O Babilon. As soone as the kinge of Babilon heareth tell of them, his bowes shall make scable: So rowe and braynes shall come vpon him, as a woman reasoning with child. Beholde, like as the L^o cometh up from the pleasant meadows of Iordane vnto the grene pastures of Iethan, so will I drye the fow, and make them runne agaynst her. And whom shall I chose out, & ordene to such thinge: For who is like me, or who will stryue with me: who shall shepherde maye stonde agaynst me: Therfore heate the council that the LORDE hath geuen vpon Babilon, and the deuice that he hath taken vpon the londe of the Caldees. The leest amonge the people shall reare them in pecco, & take what please them they beue: they shall laye it wast. The noyce of wyninge of Babilon shall be: w^e the earth, & the erie shall be herde amonge the Scites.

The li. Chapter.

¶ Thus hath the LORDE sayde: Beholde, I will raise up a perilous wynde agaynst Babilon & hir queene, y^e beare euill will agaynst me. I wil sende also in to Babilo fannere, so fanne her out, & to destroye hir towne: for in the daye of hir trouble they shall be aboute her on every syde. Moreover, the LORDE hath sayde vnto the bowe men, & to them y^e chymie ouer the walles in best places: Ye shall not spare hir yongemen, I will bowe all hir hoofs. Thus the same shall fall downe in the londe of the Caldees, and they wounded in the strettes. As for Israel & Iuda, they shall not be forsake of their God, of the LORDE of hostes, of the holyness of Israel: no, though they haue filled all their londe full of synne. Get awaye from Babilon, every man saue his life. Let no man holde his tongue to hir wickednes, for the tyme of the LORDES vengeance is come, yee he shall rewarde her agayne. Babilon hath bene in the LORDES hande a golden cuppe, y^e maketh all londe drunken. O f^r his wyne house all people drunken, therfore are they out of their wittes. But soeailly is Babilon fallen, and destroyed. Mourne for her, bynne plasters for hir woundes, yf she maye peraduenture be heale agayne. We wolde haue made Babilon wretched, saye they: but she is not recovered. Therfore wil we let her alone, & goe vnto his owne countre. For hir iudgement is come in to heauen, it is gone up to the clowdes. And therfore come on, we will shewe Ston the worke of the LORDE oure God.

¶ Make sharpe the arrowes, and fill the quyvers: for the LORDE shall raise up the spere of the kynge of the Medes, which hath already a desyre to destroye Babilon. This shall be the vengeance of the LORDES, and the vengeance of his temple. See you tokens vpon the walles of Babilon, make youe watch stronge, let youe watch men in aray, yee holde p^reynt watches: yea for all that shall the LORDE go forth with the deuice, which he hath taken vpon them that dwell in Babilon.

Whou thou dwellest by the greare waters, o thou that hast so greate treasure and riches, chyme ende is come: the reftenynge of thy wyngynges. The LORDE of hoostes hath sworne by himself, that he wil ouerthelme the wich men like grasshoppers in nombre, which with a couage shall crie Alarm Alarm agaynst the. Recuen the LORDE of hoostes, that with his power made the earth, with his wysdomme prepayed yf thou deuoile, & with his discrecion spied out the heuens. As soone as he leauez his voyce be herde, the waters in the ayre warr feare: so c vauerth vp the cloudes from the endes of the earth. He turneth yf lightenynge to rayne, he bringeth the wyndes out of their secrett places. Why the reason of wysdomme, all men are become foolcs. Censounded be all the casters of ymages: for yf thinge that they make, is but disceate, it hath no breath. Wayne is it, it wourhy to be laughed at: in the tyme of visitacion it shall perish.

D Therefore, the poicion of Jacob is no nesoch: but he hath made all thinges, whose name is the LORDE of hoostes, he is the rebde of his inheritaunce. Thou breakest my weapens of warre, & yet thou wote I haue feared the nacions & kyngdomes: Thou wote thou haue I feared horse & horseman, yet the charrettes, & such as sat vpon them: Thou wote thou I haue feared man & woman, olde and yonge, bachelor & mayden. Thou wote I haue feared the shepherde & his flocke, the husbandman & his camel, the pynce & the rulers. Therefore wil I rewarde the cite of Babilon & all hir citefyns the Caldees, with all the euill which they haue done wito Sion: Rec that ye youre selues shall se it, saith the LORDE. Beholde, I come vpon the: thou no yf some hill saith the LORDE, thou that destroyest all londe. I wil stretch out my hande ouer the, & cast the downe from the stony rock: & wil make the a brime hill, so that ne ther coiner stones, ne pinnacles, ne foundation stones shall be taken any more out of the: but wast & desolate shalt thou lie for euermore, saith the LORDE.

E Sit vp a colt in the londe: blowe the trompettes amonge the heathen, proude the nacions agaynst her, call the kyngdomes, of Ararat, Minni & Alcaens agaynst her: nombre out Tapfar agaynst her, bringe as greate a hoste of hoises agaynst her, as yf they were grasshoppers. Prepare agaynst them yf people of the Medes w their kynges, & yee & all their chiefe rulers, yee and the which londe that is vnder them.

The londe also shall shakte & be asham, when the deuice of the LORDE shall come forth agaynst Babilon: to make the londe of Babilon so wast, that no man shall dwell any more therein. The Worthies of Babilon shall leaue the batell, & feper them selues in strange holdes, their strength hath fayled them, they shall ce like women. Their dwelling places shall be bent up, their barres shall be broken. One pursuauit shall meete another, yf one poste shall come by another: to bringe the kyng of Babilon vnto bynges: that his name taken in curry syde, the foordes occupie, the somes bent up, and the soulyen in a frayed.

Therefore saith the LORDE of hoostes the God of yfrael: The daughter of Babilon hath bene in hir tyme like as a chieffest floure, but shortly shal hir barres cast. Tu bucho donoso, the kyng of Babilon hath ke uouered and destroyed me, he hath waded an empie vessell. He swallowed me vnto the Diagon, and fylled his belly with my bowels: he hath cast me out, he hath calked my sinne a waye, & the thinge that was in me hath he caried wito Babilon, saith the daughter, that dwelleth in Sion: I am in bloude also, wito the Caldees, saith Jerolim. Therefore thus saith the LORDE: Beholde, I wil defende thy cause, & avenge the: I wil drynke vp hir ste, & drye up hir waer spynge.

Babilon shall become an heape of ston, a dwelling place for dragons, a fearfull & woundinge, because no man dwelleth there. They shall roare together like Lyons, & the yonge Lyons when they be angry, shall they bite them selues. In their heat I shall set drynke be foue the, & they shall be downe for ioie: Then shall they slepe an euery one of slepe, & neuer wake, saith the LORDE: I shall carie them downe to be slawne like shepe, like weethers & gootes. O how was desah wonne: O how was the glory of yf the londe taken: how happened it, that Babilon is so wondrous at: amonge the heathen. The ste is ryfen ouer Babilon, & hath ouerred her with his greate waters. Her citie is in yed wast, the londe lieth vnto the wast, & yf it is a londe, where no man dwelleth, & where no man traueleth thowere. Therefore I wil vnto Del at Babilon: the cheeryng shall he hath waled up, that same shall I shall ke out of his mouth. The Gemes also shall men more vnto him, yee and the walles of Babilon shal fall.

Ony man maye save his life, from the fearfull wrath of the LORDE. We noe saynte heron, & feare noe at euery tyme that shal be herde in the londe: for euery year bringeth new cybings, yee straunge wickednes and foulespe. And so, the tyme cometh that I will visite the ymagis of Babilis, and the whole londe shalbe confounded, yee and his shame shal lie in the myddest of her. Ye can and earth with all that is therein, shall reioyce ouer Babilon, when the destroyers shal come vpon her from the north, saichy of LORDE.

Like as Babilis hath beaten downe and slayn many one of I Israel, so shal there fall many, and be slayn in all his kyngdome. Ye that haue escaped the sweate, haist yen, its deare fill, remembre the LORDE a sarr of: and thinke vpon Jerusalem, for we reete a shew to heare the blaspheemie: our faces are in covered with shame, because the strange skauces came in to the Sanctuary of the LORDE. Therefore beholde saichy the LORDE the tyme cometh, that I will visite the ymagis of Babilon, and thoro the whole londe they shal mourne and fall. Though Babilon dymned vpon in heauē, and kepte her power on his eye shal I sende her destroyers saichy the LORDE.

A pituous crye shall be herde from Babilon, and a greete mystry, from the londe of the Caldees: when the LORDE destroyeth them, and when hee byruch out the his stomack & preade hoostinge, where wich they haue bene as furiaes, as the waues of great water flowes, and made greete crades with their wordes. For the destroyers shall come vpon her (euen vpon Babilon) which shal rate hir mouthes, and make their bowes: for God is disposed to avenge him self vpon them, & sufficientlye recompence the. Yee saichy the LORDE I will make their prouces, their wys men, their chefe rulers & all their worthies, diuident so that they shal spee an euerlasting slepe, and neuer wake: Thus saichy the kinge, whose name is of LORDE of hoostes.

Moreover thus saichy the LORDE of hoostes: The third wall of Babilon shal be broken, and his proude gates shal be viented vpon. And the thinge that the Gentes and the people haue wrought with greete tranayle and labour shal come to naughte, and be confuted in the fyre.

The liij. Chap. Ho. xlvij.

This is the charge that Jeremy gaue vnto Saris the some of Uerian, the some of Maasia, when he wente towards Babilon with Sedechias the kinge of Iuda, in the fenshy year of his reigne. Now this Saris was a peaceable pryuce. Jeremy wrote in a booke, all the misery that shoulde come vpon Babilon, yee and all the best sermons that he writt in agaynst Babilon, and gaue Saris this charge: When thou comest vnto Babilon, se that thou reade all these wordes, and saye: O LORDE, thou art determined to rote out this place, so that neither people nor cattell shal dwell there any more, but to lie waste for euer: and when thou hast reade out the booke, bynde a stone to it, and cast it in the myddest of Ephraim, and saye: As thus shal Babilon synke, & be thurst downe with the burthen of herenable, that I will bringe vpon her: so that she shal neuer come vpon agayne. Thus sarrt are y preachings of Jeremy.

The liij. Chap.

Sedechias was 21. year old, when he was made kyng, & he reigned 21. years in Jerusalem. His mothers name was Hamithal, Jeremies daughter of Labna. He lyued wickedly before the LORDE euen as Iochim v. yd. Wherefore the LORDE was angry at Jerusalem & Iuda, so longe till he had cast the out of his presence. And Sedechias fel from the kyng of Babilon. But in y. year of his reigne, in the 23. Moneth, the tenth daye of the Moneth it happened, that Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babilon with all his hooste came before Jerusalem, & besyged it, & made them bulwarkes rounde aboute it. And this besyginge of the cite endured vnto the 21. year of kyng Sedechias.

And in the fourth Moneth, the 12. daye of the Moneth, there was so greate hunger in the cite: that there were no more vitayles for the people of the londe. So all the sondryers brake awaye, and fled out of the cite by night, thoro the waye of the pome betwene the two walles by the kynges garden. Now y Caldeas had compassed the cite rounde aboute, yee wente these men their waye towarde the wilderness.

And so the Caldeas folowed vpon them, and rote Sedechias the kinge in the side of Jericho, when his hoost was runne from him. So they carried the kyng awaye prisoner to Rebarba, vnto the kinge of Babilon in the londe of Gemath, where he gaue iudgment vpon him.

The kinge of Babilis also caused Sedechias sones be slaine before his face, yet I put all the princes of Iuda to death at Babeltha. Moreover he put out the eyes of Sedechias, caused him be bounde with cheynes, to be caried vnto Babilon: let him lic in prison, till he dyed.

Now vpon the tenth daye of the fifth Moneth in the sixt yeare of Labudchodonosor kynge of Babilon, Labusaradan the chiefe captayne and the kynge of Babilons seruantes came vnto Ierusalem, & bient vp the house of the LORDE. he bient vp also the kinges palace, all the houses & all the gorgeous buyldings in Ierusalem. And the whole hoost of the Caldees yf were with the chiefe captayne, brake downe all the walles of Ierusalem rounde aboute.

- C As for the poore people & such folke as yet was left in the cite, which also were fallen to the kynge of Babilon, yet I what people as yet remained: Labusaradan the chiefe captayne caried them awaye prisoners. But yf poore people of the countre, byd Labusaradan the chiefe captayne leane in the londe, to occupie the vnynar tree & felde, The Caldees also brake the brasen pilers, that were in the house of the LORDE, yet the staire and the brasen lauer that was in the house of yf LORDE: & caried all the metall of them vnto Babilon. They toke awaye also the Cauldrons, shoules, flesh hokes, spinklers, spones & all the brasen vessel that was occupide in the seruyce: with the basens, colepannes, spinklers, pottes, candillstickes, spones, and cappes: wherof some were of golde, and some of syluer.

- The chiefe captayne toke also the two pilers, the lauer, the xij brasen bullockes yf stode vnder yf staire, which kynge Salomon made in the house of the LORDE: & all the vessel concerned so much metall, that it might not be weyed. For euery piler was xviij cubites hie, & the rope that went aboute it, was xij cubites, & foure fingers thicke and rounde: Now vpon the rope were brasen knoppes, & euery knoppe was fyve cubites hie: & vpon the knoppes were whoopes, & pomgranates rounde aboute of cleue brass.

After this maner were boch the pilers fashioned with the pomgranates, wherof there were an hundred and xxviij, which han ged vpon the whoopes rounde about. The chiefe captayne also toke Sarias yf the king & Sophonias that was chiefe next him, and the thre depers of the tresury yf the king, of the cite a chamberlayne which was captayne of the foaldycro, & fouer men that were the kinges seruantes, which were found in the cite: & Sopher a captayne that he to master the men of warre: which were of the countre that were taken in the cite. These Labusaradan the chiefe captayne with him caried them to the kynge of Babilon, and he caried them to the kynge of Babilon, and he caried them to be put to death at Babeltha: which he did of Semach. And thus Iuda was brake awaye captayne, out of his owne londe.

This is the summe of the people, whom Labudchodonosor ledde awaye captayne.

In the seventh yeare of his reigne, he tried awaye of yf Jewes, thre thousande and twenty. In the xviij yeare Labudchodonosor caried awaye from Ierusalem eight hundred & xxxij persones. In the xxij yeare of Labudchodonosor Labusaradan the chiefe captayne, toke awaye suten hundred & xlv Jewes prisoners. The whole summe of all the prisoners, is foure thousande and eighty.

In the xxxviij yeare after that Iuda the kynge of Iuda was caried awaye the xxv daye of the xij Moneth, Evilmerod kinge of Babilon (the same yeare yf he reigned) gaue Iochim the kynge of Iuda pardon, and let him out of prison, and shewed courtesy to him: And set his throne above the thrones of the other kynge that were with him in Babilon. he changed also the clothes of his prison, yet and he ate with his all his life longe. And he had a cecill bynyng genen him of the kynge of Babilon, euery daye a certayne chinge allowed him, all the dayes of his life, until he dyed.

The ende of the prophet Jeremie.

The Lamentations of Jeremyp.

And it came to passe (after Israd was brought into captiuitie, and Jerusalem destroyed:) that Jeremyp the prophet sat weeping, mourninge and makin-ge his moone in Jerusalem: so that w^{ch} an hewy herte he sighed, & sobbed, sayenge:

The first Chapter.

IN some tyme was full of people: how is she become like a widowe, which was the lady of all nacions: how is she brought vnder tribuz, that ruled all honde: she weepeth sore in the nyght, so that teares turne downe hir cheekes: for amonge all hir louers, there is none, that geueh her any comforte: yee hir nexte frendes abhorre her, & are become hir enemies.

Juda is taken prisoner, because she was despised: for seruyng so many straunge god-des, she dwelleth now amonge the heathen, she findeth no rest, all they that persecute her, take her, and so she dwelleth amonge hir enemies.

The streets of Sion moorne, because no man commeth more to the solempne fastes: All hir gazes are desolate, hir priestes make lamentacion, hir maydens are carefull, and she herself is in greate heuynesse.

hir enemies are fallen vpon hir heade, & haue put her to shame: because the LORDE hath chastened her for hir greates wickednes: hir children are ledde awaye captiue before their enemye.

All the bewtie of the daughter of Sion is awaye, hir prynces are become like wethers, that fynde no pasture. They are dry-ed awaye before their enemye, so that they haue no more power.

How doeth Jerusalem remembre the tyme of hir misery & disobedience, yee the ioye & pleasure of she hath had in tymes past: seyng for people is brought downe thow the power of their enemye, & there is no man for to helpe her: hir enemies s^halbe lookinge at her and laugh hir Sabbath dayes to scorne.

Jerusalem synned euer more & more, therfore is she come in decaye. All they that habe in donoure, despise her: for they haue sene hir synnes. See she sigheth, and is a shamed of herselfe.

For synners are defyled, she remembred not what woide folowe: therefore is hir fall so greate, and there is no man to comforte her.

LORDE: shew my trouble, for myne enemye hath the upper honde.

The enemye hath put his honde to all the precious thinges that she hath, yee euen before hir eyes came the heathen in and out of the Sanctuary: whom thou (newerthelss) Deu. 11.11 hast forbiddon to come within thy congregacion.

All hir people sike their bread with heuynesse, & loke what precious thinge euery man hath, they geueh he for meate, to save his life. Consolue (O LORDE) and se, how vile I am become.

O ye all that go fore by, beholde and se, if there be any comforte like vnto myne, wher with the LORDE hath troubled me, in the daye of his fearefull wrath.

From aboue hath he sent downe a fire, in to my bones and chastened me: he hath layed a net for my feet, and he hath made me open: he hath made me desolate, so that I must euer be mourninge.

The yode of my transgression is come at the last, with his honde hath he taken it vp, and put it aboue my neck. My strength is gone: the LORDE hath deliuered me in to those hondes, wherout I can not quyte myself.

The LORDE hath destroyed all the mighty men, that were in me. he hath proclaimed a fast, to slaughter all my best men. The LOR-DE hath troben downe the daughter of Juda, like as it were in a wyne presse.

Therefore do I wepe, and myne eyes run she out of water: for the comforter that shalde quyen me, is farre frome. My children are dryed awaye, for why: the enemye hath gotten the ouer honde.

Sion casteth out hir s^hedes, and there is no man to comforte her. The LORDE hath layed the enemies rounde aboue Jacob, and Jerusalem is, as it were a menstruous woman, in the myddest of them.

The LORDE is righteous, for I haue prouoked his countenance vnto anger. Take hebe all ye people, and consolue my hearynes: My maydens and my yonge men are led awaye in to captiuitie.

I calld for my priestes (but they begyled me): for my priestes and counsellors, but they perished: euen while they soughte for meate, to save their liues.

Consolue (O LORDE) how I am troubled, my wombe is disquieted, my herte turneth aboue in reue, and I am full of heuynesse. The sharde hurreth me without, and within I am like vnto death.

¶ Thei hearemy mournynge, but there is none that wil comforte me. All myne enemies haue herde of my trouble, and are glad therof, because thou hast done it. But thou shalt bringe forth thy ryme, when they also shal be like vnto me.

¶ From the shall come all their aduerser: thou shalt plucke them awaye, cutt as thou hast plucked the, because of all my wickednesse.
For my sorow is very greate, and my tye is heuy. The ii. Chapter.

¶ Quod, how hath y^e LORDE darkened the daughter of Sion so sore in his wrath: As for the honoure of Israel, he hath casten it downe from heauen: he happened it, that he remembred not his owne feete sole, when he was angrye.

¶ The LORDE hath cast downe all the glory of Jacob without eny fauoure: All the stronge places of the daughter Iuda hath he broken in his wrath, & thowen them downe unto the gicande: hir kynngdome & hir prynces hath he suspended.

¶ In the wrath of his indignacion he hath broken all the home of Israel: he hath with-drawe his right honde from the enemye: yet a flame of fyre kynbled in Jacob, & hath consumed all rounde aboute.

¶ He hath tent his home like an enemye, he hath fastened his right honde as an aduer-sarye: and every thinge that was pleasaunt to se, he hath smytten it downe. he hath poured out his wrath like a styre, in to the tabernacle of the daughter Sion.

¶ The LORDE is become, like as it were an enemye, he hath cast downe Israel & all his places: yett all his stronges helde hath he destroyed, and filled the daughter of Iuda wth moch sorow and heuynesse.

¶ His tabernacle (which was like a garden of pleasure) hath he destroyed: hir his solempne feastes hath he put downe. The LORDE hath brought it so to passe, that the his solempne feastes and Sabbathes in Sion, are cyme forgotten. In his heuy displeasur hath he made the kynge & pastes to be despised.

¶ The LORDE hath forsaken his owne an-tel, & is wroth with his owne Sanctuary, & hath geuen the walles of their tentes in to the honde of the enemye. Their enemies made a noyse in the house of the LORDE, as it had bene in a solempne feast daye.

¶ The LORDE thought to heale downe the walles of the daughter Sion, he spied out his lyne, & diene not in his honde, all he had destroyed them. Therfore mourne the wmates and the broken walles together.

hir portes are casten downe to the grounde, hir barres are broken & smytten in (soone hir kynge & prynces are carried awaye to the Gicules. They haue nether lawe nor people tes, nor yett eny vision from the LORDE.

The Senatours of the daughter Sion, sit vpon the grounde in silence, they haue streued off shes vpon their heades, and graued them selues with sack cloeth. The wydows of Ierusalem hange downe their hea-des to the grounde.

Myne eyes begynne to sayle nechauntrepynge, my body is disquicered, my leuens peured vpon the earth, for the greate hum-of my people, synging the dyblon and behabyd swewe: in the streets of the cite.

Luci when they spake to their mothers where is meate and drynke? for whyle they so sayde, they fall downe in the streets of the cite, like as they had bene wounded, and somed vpon in their mothers bosome.

What shal I saye of the (O thou daughter Ierusalem) to whom shall I list the to whom shal I compare the (O thou daughter Sion) to compare the withall? Why te is like a mayne sic, who may heale the?

The prophetes haue looked out vpon the lysh thinges for the, they haue not shamed the of thy wickednesse, to kepe the from contynye: but haue on laboure the, and thow falsed feared the abroad.

All they that goe by the, clappe their handes at the byssing and roagging their handes vpon the daughter Ierusalem, and saye is this the cite that men call so fayre, wher the whole londe reioyceth?

All thine enemies gaue vpon the, whyle ring and bytyng their eeth, sayng they denoure, for the ryme that we lofed the, as a me: we haue founde and sene it.

The LORDE hath fulfilled the thinge that he was purposed to do: and perswaded that he had deuysed longe agoon: he hath destroyed, and not spared. he hath caused the aduersarye to triumphe ouer the, and he vpon the home of thine enemye.

Let thine here crye vnto the LORDE, O thou cite of the daughter Sion: let thy ruine downe like a ruyne daye & night not, & let not the apple of thine eye leane of.

Stonde vp, and make thy prayer vnto the fist watch of the night, pouere out thine teares like water before the LORDE: lift vp thine handes, for the lynes of thy young children, that dye of hunger in the streets.

The Lamentacions of Jeremy. Chap. iij. Fo. l.

Behold O LORD: & confide, why hast thou gathered me vp so close: Shal the women eate their owne frute, euen children of a spawne longe: Shal the priestes and prophets be slayne thow in the Sanctuary of the LORD?

Yonge & obdye behinde the stretes upon the gronde, my wyfens & yonge men are slayne with the sword: whom thou in the daye of thy wrath full indignacion hast put to death: Yee enen thou hast put them to death, & not spare d them.

My neighbours that are rounde aboute me, hast thou called, as it were to a feast daye: so that in the daye of the LORDES wrath none escaped, necher was eny left behinde. Those that I had brought vp & not if I had, hath myne enemy destroyed.

The iii. Chapter.

And the mā that is thorow the rodd of his wrath) haue experice of misery. He diuoe me forth, and led me: yee in to darcknesse, but not in to lighte.

Agaynste me only he turneth his honde, & layeth euil vpon me.

My flesh & my lymme hath he made of: and my bones hath he brused.

He hath hurtyd rounde aboute me, & clost me in with gall and trauayle.

He hath set me in darcknesse, as they that be dead for euer.

He hath so begged me in, that I can not get out, & hath layed heavy lymdes vpon me.

Though I crye I call pitously, yet heareth he not my prayer.

He hath stopped vp my wayes with fouersquared stones, & made my paches croked.

He layeth waite for me like a Beere, and as a lyon in a hole.

He hath marred my wayes, and broke me in peeces, he hath layed me rouisf also gather.

He hath bent his bowe, and made me as a mark to shute at.

The arrowes of his quyper hath he shot, and into my eyes.

Jam laughed to scoone of all my people, they made songes vpon me all y daye longe.

He hath fylled me with bytternesse, & gotten me to worme wood to drynke.

He hath smytten my teeth in peeces, & tolde me in the buff.

He hath put my soule out of rest, I forgett all good thinges.

I thoughte in my self, Jam undone, there is no hope for me in the LORD.

O remember yee my misery and my trouble, the worme wood and the gall.

Yee thow shalt remember them, for my foule me lynch awaye in me.

Why I Ieasid: these thinges in my hart, I geue a hope agayne.

Tamely, that the mercies of the LORD are not dene gone, & that his lowngye kynnesse ceaseth not.

His faithfulness is as greace, and remueth it self as the mountyngs.

The LORD is my portcion (saith my soule) he therfore wil I hope in him.

O how good is the LORD vnto the, that wout their trust in him, and to the soule that stretcheth after him?

O how good is it with faithlesse to waite and carie, for the healyng of the LORD.

O how good is it for a man, to take the waye vpon him from his youth vp?

He sitteth alone, he holdeth himself still, and dwelleth quietly by himself.

He layeth his face vpon the earth, yf (per case) there happen to be eny hope.

He offereth his cheke to the smyter, he will be content with reprobacion.

For the LORD will not forsake for euer.

But though he do cast off, yet (accordinge to y multitude of his mercies) he receaueth to graue agayne.

For he doth not plague, & cast out the child of men from his herre.

To create all the prisoners of the earth vnder his site,

To conuene the iudgment of man before the most highest.

To conuene a man in his cause: The LORD hath no pleasure in such thinges.

What is he thou that saith: there shall be somthinge be done without the LORDES commandement?

Out of the mouth of the most highest goeth not well and good.

Whether thou murmureth the lyinge man: let him murmoure at his owne synne.

Let vs loke well vpon oure owne wayes: & remember oure sinnes, and turne agayne to y LORD.

Let vs lift vp oure hartes with oure bondes vnto the LORD, that is in heauen.

We haue bene dyssembled & haue offended, with thou therfore not be increased?

Then hast couered vs in thy wrath, & persecuted vs, thou hast slayne vs without any fauour.

Then hast hyd thy self in a cloude, that oure prayer shoulde not goe thorow.

Thou hast made vs our castles, and to be despysed amonge the heathen.

Wherefore yett oure eyes sayle vs, whyle we lere for yare helpe: seyng we be euer waynyng vpon a people, that can do no good.

The layse of sharpe waite for vs, that we can not go for vs: vpon the streres: for oure en-deio come, oure dayes are fulfilled, oure ende is here.

Oure perse cutters are swifter then the Ae-glos of the aye: they folowed vpon vs ouer the mountaynes, and layed waite for vs in y wildernesse.

The very heeth of oure month: euen the enured LORD E himselfe shalbe take in ou re synnes, of whom we saie: Vnder his shadowes we shalbe preserued amonge the heethen.

And thou O dougheer (Edom) that dwel-lest in the londe of Sins, be glad and reioyce: for the cuppe shal come vnto the also, which wilt thou suppest of, thou shalt be dronke.

Thy synne is wel punished: O thou doughe er (Sion) he shall no suffice the to be caried awaye any more. But thy wickednesse (O dougheer (Edom) shall be wyse, and for thy synnes sake, he shal lere the in to captiuyte.

The V. Chapter.

Alto remembrance O LORD E what we haue suffred, cōside and se oure cōfusiō. Oure enheritaunce is turned to the strangers, 7 oure houses to the alemantes. We are become carefull and facherlesse, and oure mothers are as the wydowes. We are synne to drynke oure owne water for money, and oure owne wod must we bye with money. Oure neckes are vnder persecucion, we are weery, and haue no rest.

A fewe tyme we yelded oure selues to the Egipcians, and now to the Assirians, only that we might haue bried ynough. Oure sa-thers (which now are gone) haue synned, 7 we must beare their wickednesse. Strangers haue the rule of vs, and no man belyueth vs out of their hiden. We must get of sy wyng with the parrell of oure lyues, because of the mouth of the wildernesse.

Oure synne is as it had bene hent in an oven, for very sore donger. The wyues are rauished in Sion, 7 the maydens in the cities of Iuda. The prynces are hanged vp with the bones of the enemies, they haue not spared the olde sage men, they haue taken yon-gers mens lyues from them, and the boyes are hanged vp vpon trees. The olde docters sye no more vnder the gates, and the yong men vfe no more playenge of Musick. The ioyes of oure herbs is gone, oure mery quere is turned in to mourninge. The garlande of oure heade is fallen, alas, that euer we synned so sore.

Therefore oure hart is full of heaynesse, 7 oure eyes v myne: because of y hill of Sion that is destroyed, In so much, that the fores runne vpon it. But thou O LORD E that re-maynest for euermore, and thy state woulde with out ende: Wherefore wilt thou still forget vs, and forsake vs so longe: O LORD E Turne thou vs vnto the, 7 so shal we be turned. Venus: o' daies as in olde tyme, for thou hast now hamshed vs longe ynough, and be ne sore displeasid at vs.

The Propheet
Baruch.

What Baruch conteyneth.

Chap. I. Baruch readeth the booke before the Lyng and all the people, which sente money to Jeruslem.

Chap. II. They knowlege, that they haue destrued panyment: God promyseth them forgouenesse.

Chap. III. They praye hartely beinge in prison, and be exorteth them to amende.

Chap. IIII. A sermon to the people, with an exortacion to patience.

Chap. V. He comforteth them, and sheweth the weccation of the heiden.

Chap. VI. A copie of the epistle, that Jeremy sent to the Iewes, which were led awaye prisoners vnto Babilon.

These are the wordes of the booke, that Baruch the sonne of Nerias the sonne of Maasia, the sonne of Gedachias, the sonne of Sebai, the sonne of Guldias, wrote at Babilon in the fifth yeare the fourth daye of the moneth: what tyme as the Caldees warre Ierusalem and hent it.

The first Chapter.

AND Baruch by order the wordes of this booke, that Jeremias the sonne of Joachin kynge of Juda might heare: and in the presence of all the people, that were come to heare the booke: yet and before all the noble kinges somes, before y^e lordes of the councill and others: and before the whole people, from y^e lowest unto the highest: before all them that dwelt at Babilon, by y^e water of Gode. Which when they herde it, wepte, fasted, and prayed before the LORDE.

B They made a collection also of money, according to every mans power, and sent it to Jerusalem unto Joachin the sonne of Seldias the sonne of Salon priest, with y^e other p^riestes: and to all the people which were within at Jerusalem, what tyme as they had gotte the cinametes of the temple of y^e LORDE: that were taken awaye out of the temple: that they mighte buye them agayne in the londe of Juda, the x. daye of the month Sivan: namely, y^e silver vessel, (which Serachias the sonne of Josias kynge of Juda had made.) After that Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon had take Jeremias, with all his p^rynces, lordes, and all the people, and led them captiue from Jerusalem unto Babilon.

C And they saye: Beholde, we have sent you money, to buye you burnt offeringes and incense withall: make you unleavened bread, & offre for synne upon the alter of the LORDE our God. And praye for the prosperite of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon, and of Balchasar his sonne: y^e their dayes maye be upon earth, as the dayes of heauen: that God also maye geue us strength, and lighten our eyes: that we maye lye vnder the defence of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon, and vnder the protection of Balchasar his sonne: that we maye longe do them seruce, and synce fauoure in their sight. Praye for vs also vnto the LORDE our God, for we haue synned agaynst the LORDE our God, and vnto this daye is not his wrath turned yet a waye from vs. And see that ye rede this booke (which we haue sent vnto you to be recited in the temple of the LORDE) vpon the hye dayes, and at euery comenient.

D Thus shal ye saye: The LORDE of God is righteous, but we are worthy of confusion & shame: like as it is come to passe this daye, vnto all Iuda, & to euery one y^e dwelleth at Jerusalem & of kinges, p^rynces, p^riestes, p^rophets & to oure fathers. We haue synned before the LORDE our God, we haue not put our trust in him, nor gotten him credence: we haue not obeyed him, we haue not hearkened vnto the voyce of the LORDE our God, we walke in the commaundementes that he gaue vs. Hence the daye that he brought our forefathers out of the londe of Egypt vnto this present daye, we haue bene cur and beleuynge and an vnfaithfull people vnto the LORDE our God: destroye our sinnes vnto the LORDE our God, & destroye our sinnes vnto the LORDE our God, & shewing backe, that we shal be not heare his voyce.

Wherefore there are come vpon vs great plagues & dyuers curses, like as the LORDE sayed by Moyses his seruante: which brought our forefathers out of the londe of Egypt to geue vs a lorde, that sheweth wrath with might and honny, like as it is to se this daye. Therefore, we haue not hardened vnto the voyce of the LORDE our God, according to all the wordes of the prophetes, when he sayed vnto vs and to oure rulers: but every man hath loved his owne mynde and wiche imaginations: offre vnto straunge goddes, and dwel in the sight of the LORDE our God.

The II. Chapter.

Wherein which cause the LORDE our God hath performed his dayes. Whereof he certifieth vs, and euen hee descharued in Jerusalem: yet and our p^rinces, oure p^rynces, with all y^e Israel and Juda. And such plagues hath y^e lorde brought vnto vs, as neuer came to passe vnder the heauen: like as it is fulfilled in Hierusalem, according as it is written in the lawe of Moyses: that a man shal deate y^e flesh of his owne sonne, or the flesh of his owne daughter. Moyses hath deliuered them in to the bondes of all the kinges, y^e are rounde aboute vs (as hee founded and desolate) & scattered the abodes all londes & nacions. Thus are we brought in neth & not about, for we haue synned agaynst the LORDE of God, & not bene obedient vnto his voyce. Therefore y^e LORDE of God is righteous, & we with y^e fathers (as reason is) haue brought to our shame, as it is to se this daye. And vnto this daye is not his wrath turned yet a waye from vs. And see that ye rede this booke, y^e LORDE hath denyed that for us yet woulde we not praye vnto y^e LORDE our God, y^e we might euery man come fro his goobly mayes. So y^e LORDE hath caused such plagues to come vpon vs, for he is righteous in all his workes, which he hath done vnto vs: which we also haue not done, nor hearkened vnto his voyce, for to walke in y^e commaundementes of y^e LORDE, y^e he had great wrath.

And now o LORDE God of Israel, thou hast brought thy people out of the lande of Egipt with a mighty hande, with tokens and wonders, with thy greace power ad overtrede arme: and hast gotten thy self a name, as it is come to passe this daye: O LORDE our God, we have synned, we have done wickedly, we have behaved oure selves ungodly in all thy righteousnesse. Turne thy wrath fro vs (we beseeche thee) for we are but a fewe leafe amonge the herben, where thou hast scattered vs. heare o' praye (o LORDE) 2 oure peticions, bringe vs out of captivitee, for thine owne sake: geve vs fauente in the sighte of the which have led vs awaye: y all these maye knowe, that thou art the LORDE our God, and that Israel and his generaci on calleth upon thy name.

O LORDE, loke downe fro thy holy house upon vs: and ymagine thine care, 2 heare vs. See the deeth, y be gone downe to their graues, 2 whos soles are out of their beddes, as berne mee the LORDE neether praye ner righteousnesse: but the soule thac is wept for: the multitude of his synnes, which growe on heauly and marke, whose eyes begynne to fayre: such a soule as cryeth praye and righteousnesse vnto the LORDE. O LORDE, we praye out oure praye before thee, and requyre mercy in thy sighte. O LORDE our God: not for thy godlynesse off oure forefathers, but because thou hast sent our thy wrath 2 indignaci on upon vs: accordinge as thou dydest threaten vs, by thy seruantes the prophete, sayyng:

Thus sayeth the LORDE: Dorne downe were shalderes and needes, and stur the kynge of Babylon, so shal ye remayne still in the lande, that I gaue vnto youre fathers. If ye will not do this, ner heare the voyce of y LORDE your God, do seure the kynge of Babylon: I shall destroye you in the citie of Juda, within Jerusalem and without. I will take from you the voyce off mynch and the voyce of ioye, the voyce of the byrdme and the voyce of the byrde. ad there shal no man dwell more in the lande. But they wold not hearken vnto thy voyce, to do the kynge of Babylon seruyce: and therfor hast thou performed the wordes, that thou spakst by thy seruantes the prophete: name the bones of oure kynge and the bones of oure fathers shalbe de translated out of their place.

And lo, now are they layde out in the heate of Sonne, 2 in the colde of y night, ad in grea mystry: w' hunger, w' sweate, w' pestilence 2 are cleue cast forth. As for the people wherin thy name was called upon thou hast layde it wast, as it is to se this daye: 2 for the wickednesse of the house of Israel 2 the curse of Juda. O LORDE o' God, thou hast increased vs after all thy goodnesse 2 accordinge to all y greace leauinge mercy of thine, like as thou spakst by thy seruante Moses, in: the daye when thou dydest commaunde him, to wyte thy lawe before the children of Israel, sayyng: If ye will not heare vnto my voyce, the shal this greace multitude be turned into a very smal people, for I will scatter the abiode. Not withstandinge Jam surre, that this folke will not beare me: for it is an hardned people. But in y lode of their captivitee, they shal remember them selves, 2 seme to knowe, y Jam the LORDE their God: when I geue the an here to understande, 2 eares to heare. Then shal they prayse me in the lode of their captivitee, 2 thynke upon my name. Then shall they turne them fro their harde backe, 2 fro their ungodlynesse: Then shal they remember the thynge, y happened vnto their forefathers, which synned agaynst me. So will I bringe them agayne into the lande, which I promised vnto an oath vnto their fathers: Abraham, Isaac 2 Jacob: 2 they shal be lordes of it, yec I will increase the, and not minyssh the. And I will make another covenant with them: such one as shal endure for ever: namely, y I will be their God, and they shalbe my people: and I will nomore bryue my people the children off Israel, out of the lande y I haue geue the.

The iiii. Chapter.

And now o LORDE allmightie, thou God of Israel: o' soule y is in trouble, 2 o' spyte y is wept, cryeth vnto thee: heare vs (o LORDE) 2 haue pite upon vs, for thou art a mercifull God: be gracious vnto vs, for we haue synned before y. Then endure rest for ever, shalbe mee the verely perse: O LORDE allmightie, thou God of Israel: heare now y prayer of y deed Israelites 2 of theire childre, which haue synned before y, 2 are hardened vnto the voyce of the LORDE their God, for the which cause these playes haue now vpo vs. O LORDE, remitte not y wickednesse of o' forefathers, but thynke vpo thy power 2 name now at this tyme: for thou art y LORDE o' God, 2 y (o LORDE) and we prayse. For then hast put y feare of hartes, to y intee y we shulde call vpon y name, 2 praye y in oure cetyte: and y we mighte turne from the wickednesse of oure forefathers, y synned before the.

B Beholde, we are yet this daye in oure captiuitie, where as thou hast feared vs, to be an abhominacion, curse, and synne: like as it hath happened vnto oure fathers also, because of all their wickednesse and departinge from the.

O Israel, heare the commandmentes of life: ponde them well with thine eares, that thou mayest learne wysdome. But how happeneth it Israel, that thou art in thine enemies lde: thou art waye olde in a strange countrie, and besied with the deed. Why art thou become like them, that go downe to their graues: Ene because thou hast forsaken the will of wysdome. For if thou haddest walked in the waye of God, truly thou shouldst haue remayned still safe i thine owne londe.

Lerne then where discretion is, where veru is, where vnderstondinge is: that thou mayest knowe also fro whence cometh longe life, a necessary luyunge, the lighte of the eyes, a necessary thinge. Who euer founde out his place: or who came euer in to his treasures?

Where are yf prynces of the heathen become, and such as ruled the beestes vpon the earth? They that had their pastyme with the foules of the ayre, they that boorded vp siluer and golde (wherin men trust so much) and made no ende of their gaderinge. What is worth of them, that coyned siluer, and were so carefull, and coude not bringe their wolkes to passe: They be reed out, and gone downe to hell, and echer man are come vp in their feade: Women haue seene lighte, and dwelt vpon earth: but the waye of reformation haue they not knowen, ne vnderstonde the pathes therof: neither haue their children receaued it, yee righte farre is it fro the. It hath not bene herde of in the lde of Canaan, neither hath it bene seene at Theman.

The Agarenes soughte after wysdome, but that which is earthly, like as the marchantes of the lde do. They of Theman are conynging also, & they labour for wysdome & vnderstondinge: but yf waye of true wysdome they knowe not, neither do they thynke vpon the pathes therof. O Israel, how greate is the house of God: and how large is the place of his possession? Greate is he, and hath none ende: bye and vnummesurable. What is become of those famous gyuantes, that were so greate of bodye, and so worthy men of warre: They had not the LORDE chosen, neither haue they founde the waye of reformation, therfore were they destroyed: and for so much as they had no wysdome, they passed because of their foolishnesse.

Who hath gone vp in to beauen, to take wysdome thence, & brought her downe fro the cloudes? Who hath gone ouer the sea to fetcher, & hath chosyn her aboute golde, and brought her hither? No man knoweth the wayes of wysdome, neither is there any man seke out hir pathes. But he that wotech of thynge, knoweth her, & he hath founde her out with his foule nosegayle. This same he which prepared the earth at the begynnyng, & fylled it with all maner of foules & bestes. When he sendeth out the lighte, it goeth: & when he calleth hit a gayme, it obeyeth his feare. The starres kepe their watch, & gaue their lighte, yee and yf gladly. When he telleth them, they saye: here we be. And when heaure fulnesse they shewe lighte, they haue made the. This is oure God, ad euer hath none echer be compared vnto him: Ieioh, hath founde out all wysdome, and hath giuen her vnto Jacob his seruante, & to Israel his beloued. Afterwarde vpo he shew himself vpon earth, and dwelt amonge vs

The IIII. Chapeer.

This is the boke off the commandmentes of God, and the lawe of ieremye for euer. All they yf kepe, shall come to life: but such as forsake it, shall come to death. Turne the o Jacob, and take heed of it: walke by this waye, & thou shalt be holye and styue. Goe not thynke becomen another, and thy re: shipe to a strange people. O Israel, how happye are we, for the God hath shewed vs such thynge as is pleasaunt vnto him: He of good cheare, his people of God, o then amercies Israel. Where are ye sold amonge the heathen, howe not for youre vnter defraction: but howe ye prouoked God the LORDE to wrath and displeasure, therfore were ye deliuered vnto youre enemies: for ye displeasid the vnterlasinge God that made you, offeringe vnto deuels and not God. Ie haue sought him that broughte you vp, ad youre mouth was ye greued, o Ierusalem.

When she sawe that the wrath off the LORD was conynging vpon you: she sayd: howe o ye that dwell aboute Sion, for God hath broughte me into greate beuynesse: ad now I see the captiuitie of my people, of my wyues and daughter, which the euill shippes God will bringe vpon them. With ioye will I nourish them, but now must I leaue them with weepinge and sorrow.

Let no man reioyce over me wyddorne ad fithem which for the synes off my children, am desolate of euer y man. For why, they departed from the laue of God: they wold not knowe his righteousnes, ner wold they the waye off his commaundementes: and so for the pacches off the treath and godly-nes, they had no lust to go in them.

O ye dwellers aboute Sion: come, and let us call to remembrance the captiuyte, that the euillastinge God hath brought upon my synes and my daughter. He hath brought a people upon them from sarr, an inuicious people, and of a straunge liguage: which nerher regarde the olde, ner pye the yonge.

They haue caried awaye the deare belo-ud of my wyddomes, leauynge me alone, lach desolate and chyldelesse. But alas, what can I helpe you: For whye y hath brought these plages upon you, deluyce you also fro the handes of youre enemies.

So youre waye (O my children) go youre waye: for I am desolate and forsaken. I ha-uerpe of the clothing of peace, and put vpon me the sack cloth off payler, and for my crye I will call upon the most byest. Be off good deare, o my children: one unto the LOR d. Each be shal deluyce you from the power of the pynces, youre enemies.

For whye, I haue euer a good hope off your prosperous health: yee a very gladnes is come upon me from the holy one, because of the mercy that ye shall haue off oure euillastinge Saviour.

With mournyng and weeping dyd I let you go fro me, but with ioye and perpetuall gloriouse, shall the LORDE byynge you agayn unto me. Like as the neighbours of Sion sawe your captiuyte from God, and so shal they also se shortly your health in God, which shal come on you with greates honour and euillastinge worshippe.

O my children, suffre patiently the wrath that shal come upon you, for the enemie hath persecuted the, but shortly thou shalt se his defuccation, and shalt treade upon his necke. His delingtes haue gone rough har-de wayes, for they are led awaye as a flocke that is scattered abroad with the enemies.

Be ye off good confort (o my children) & cri-unto the LORDE: for he that led you awaye, hath you yet in remembrance: and like as ye haue bene trynded to swaine from yo^r God, so shal ye now endeuoure youre selues, & ry-sion, to turne agayne, and to seke him.
 For he that hath brought these plages w^o you, shal byynge you euillastinge ioye agayn ne with your health. Take a good herte unto the, o Ierusalem: for he which gaue y that name, w^ont: & the sece do.

The wicked doers that now put the to trouble, shal perill: and such as haue reioy-sed at thy fall, shal be punysshed. The ciues whom thy children serue, and that haue caried awaye thy synes, shal be correcte. For like as they be now glad of y be caye, so shal they mourne in their owne destruction. The ioye off their multitude shal be taken awaye and their deare shal be turned to sorowe. For a fyre shal fall upon them from the euillastinge God: longe to endure: and it shal be inhabited of devells for a greates season.

The V. Chapter.

Jerusalem, loke aboute the towarde the east, and beholde the ioye, that cometh unto the from God. For lo, thy synes, (when thou hast forsake, and that were scattered abroad) come gathered together from the east and west, reioysinge in the worde of the holy one, unto the honoure off God.

Put of thy mournyng clothes (o Ierusalem) and thy sorrow, and decke the waye the worshippe a id honoure, that cometh unto the from God, with euillastinge glory. God shal put the cloake off righteousness upon the, and set a crowne off euillastinge worshippe upon thine head: for upon the will God declare his bighones, that is vnder the heaven: see an euillastinge name shal be given the of God, with peace of righteousness, & y honoure of Gods feare.

Arise o Jerusalem, stande up on hye: loke aboute the towarde the east, and beholde thy children gathered from the east unto the west: which reioyce in the holy word, haun-ge God in remembrance. They departed from the on see, and were led awaye of their enemies: but now shal the LORDE bringe them caried with honoure, as children off y kyngdome. For God is purposid to byynge domne all those mouraynes, yee and all thy rockes, to fill the valleyes, & to make them eauen with the grounde: y Israel maye be diligit: to lyue unto y honoure of God. The woddes & all pleasaunt trees shal overshado-we Israel, at the commaundement of God.
 For hyer shal God byynge Israel with ioy full mych, and in the lighte of his magnety with the mercy and righteousness, that cometh of himself.

The prophet Baruch.

Excerpt of the epistle that Jeremy the prophet did sende unto the Jewes, which were led away captiue by the kynge of Babilis. Wherin he certifieth them of the thinge, that was comended him of God.

The VI. Chapter.

Because of the synnes that ye haue done agaynst God, ye shall be led away ye captiue unto Babilon, euen off Latachodonsor the kynge of Babilon. So when ye be come in to Babilon, ye shall remaine there many yeares, and for a longe season: namely, viij. generacions: & a star that wil I bringe you a maye peaceably from thence. Now shal ye se in Babilis, goddess of golde, of syluer, of woodd and of stone: boine vpon mens shulders, to cast out a fearefulness before the heichien. But loke that ye do not as the other: be not ye a frayd, and let not the feate of them ouercome you.

Because of the multitude of people worshippinge them behinde & before, sit ye in youre herces: O LORD, it is thou, that on heest only to be worshipped. Myne angel also shal be with you, and I myself wil care for youre soules. As for the cymbles of those goddesses, & carpetes hach polished them: ye are gylted be they, & layed ouer with syluer, yet are they but vayne thinges, & can not speake. Like as a wench of louche paramours is traynly dectre, euen so are these made & hanged w golde. Crowmes of golde vely haue their goddesses vpon their heades: so the prestes them selues take the golde and syluer from them, & put it to their owne vse: yet they reue of the same vnto harlots, & to ymmen their whores withall. Agayne, they take it from the whores, and dectre their goddes therewith, yet can not these goddes deliuer them selues from rafe and mothe. Whe they haue conerd them with clothyng of purple, they wype their faces for the dust of the temple, wherof their is moch amyg: the. One hath a scepter in his honde, as though he were iudge of the countre: yet can he not slaye such as offend him. Another hath a sword as an axe in his honde, for all that, is he nether able to defende him selfe from batayll, ner from murderers.

C Because ye maye vnderstonde, that they be no goddesses: therfore se ye nether worships them, ner feare them. For like as a vessel of a man useth, is no thinge worth when it is broken, euen so is it with their goddesses. When they be set vp in the temple, their eyes be full of dust, tho' in the face of thost that come in. And like as yf doores are shakid, be aboute vpo him, yf hath offensed them: ge: O as it were a deed bodye kept in the grane: Euen so the prestes kept in doores with barres and lectes, lest they shoulde be spoyled with robbers. They are vnder the doore before the yee vndy and yf thanynde of they can not se one, but euen so blood shonde they in the temple. It is sayd, yf the pestes and moomes, which come off the earth, graue out their herces, eatinge them & their clothes also, and yet they sit in me. Their faces are blacke, tho' in the street is in the temple. The oules, swalowes & hedes sit vpon them, yea and the cattes run ouer their heades.

By this ye maye be sure, that they are goddesses, therfore feare them not. The god that they haue, is to make them bewaulke all that, excepte some bodye dighe off the rust, they wil geue no shyne: and when they were cast into a fourme, they felte not. They are bought for money, and haue no bud of life within them. They must be borne vpon mens shulders, as thost that haue no sin: wher, by they declare vnto men, that they is nothyng worth. Confounded be they that worships them. For yf they followe grunde, they can not rise vpon agaynst the selues: Not though one helpe them vp all for them right, yet are they not able to stand alone: but must haue pioppes for vnto them. Like deed men. As for the thinge that offred vnto them, their prestes sell it, and take it: yet the prestes wyues take thereof, as vnto the sick and poore they geue nothing of it, the women with child & the midwives laye bondes of their offerynges. By this ye maye be sure, that they are not goddesses, tho' fore be not ye a frayde of them. From wher ce cometh it, that they be called goddesses. The women sit before the goddesses of golde and woodde, and the prestes synne in the temple, hannyng open clothes, wherof the beards and beardes are shaven, and haue nothing vpon their heades: roaring and crying vpon their goddesses, as men do at the sepulchre wherone is dect.

The prestes also take awaye the garments of the ymagis, and dectre their wyues children withall. Whether it be good or bad, if any man do vnto them, they are not able to recompen it: they can nether serup a praye, ner pur him downe. In like maner they maye nether geue riches, ner reward. Though a man make a vowe vnto them, kepe it not, they wil not recompen it. They neither a lymde mā to his sight, ner hel pe any mā as his rede. They cā shewe no mer cy to the wyddowes, ner do good to y^e father-les. Their goddesses of wodd, stone, golde z sylver, are but cum as other stones, y^e be hūwe of y^e nature of ym. They y^e worshippe thē, shal be affūnded. How shulde they then be taken for goddesses? y^e how barre men call thē god-des. And though the callces mo shypeth thē as hearinge y^e they were but domine z cou-nede speake. Yet they them selues offre viuel. And woloe sayne haue him to speake: as who saye, they comde sele, y^e maye ner mou. But when the seimē come to vnderstōd in-they shal forsake them, for their goddesses haue no selinge. A greate soure off women gōd with coardes, syt in the strettes, z but a vayne venia. L'ow y^e oue off them be con-uerted awaye, z y^e w' any soch as come by she casteth hir neyghboure in the teth, because she was ner so worthel y^e repnted, ner hir coude bioken. What so enter is done for them is is but in vayne ad lost. How maye it be thought or sayde, y^e they are goddesses?

 Capozers z goldsmithes make thē, ner her worshippe ny other thinge, but euen what the wode men wil make of them. Yes the gold-smithes them selues that make thē, are of no longe cōmmaner. How shulde then the things that are made of them, be goddesses? Way-neth for are the things (y^e very shame is to saye) they leaue behinde thē for their poste-ritie, for as soone as then cōmeth any warre or plage upon thē, then the priestes ymagyn, when they maye hyde thē selues with thē, how can men thynke then, that they be god-des, which nerher maye defende them selues from warre, ner deliuer thē fro mys fortune?
 For ymages they be but of wodd, of stone, of siluer, and of golde: all people z kynges shal burne here after, that they be but vayne thin-ges: y^e it shal be openly declared, that they be goddesses: but euen the very woikes off his bible, z that God hath nothinge to do with thē. They can see no kyng in the londe ne geue rayne vnto men. They can geue no sentence of a merrec, nerher defende the lon-de fro a mouge: for they are not able to do so much as a crowe, that flyeth betwixt heauen and earth.

When there happeneth a fyre in to the houses of those goddesses of wodd, of syluer and of golde, the priestes wil scape z save thē selues, but the goddesses burne as the halles therein.
 They can not withstōde any kyng or barrell: how maye it then be thought or graued, that they be goddesses? No: ouer, these god-des of wodd, of stone, of golde z syluer maye nerher defende thē selues from theues ner robbers: y^e very wicked are stronger thā they. These strype them out off their ap-parell, that they be clothed withall, these cake their golde z syluer fro thē, and so get the amayze: y^e cā they ner helpe thē selues. The fore it is much better for a man, to be a tinge z so to shewe his power: or els a profitable vessel in a house, wherein he y^e owesth, might haue pleasure: y^e or to be a done in a house, to kepe soch thinges safe as be therein: thē to be soch a vayne god. The Sonne, the Mōne z all the starrs when they geue their lym-z lichte, are obedient, z do men good: When the lighenynge glistrech, all is cleare: The wynde bloweth in every conner, z whē God cōmandeth the cloudes to go rounde aboute the wholl worlde, they do as they are by-doen: when the fyre is sent downe fro aboue z cōmanded, it burneth up pilles ad woddos: But as for those goddesses, they are noc like one off these thynges, nerher in denye ner strenght. Wherefore me shulde not thynke, ner saye that they be goddesses, for they cā nether geue sentence in iudgment, ner do men good. For so much now as yeare fyre, that they le no goddess, then feare them not: for they can nerher speake euill ner good of ky-nges. They cā shewe no tokens in beaue for y^e father, nerher shyne as the Sonne, ner geue lichte as the Mōne: y^e vntreasonable beas-tes are better then they: for they can get thē vnder thē feet, and do them selues good: So can ye be certified by no maner off mianes, that they be goddesses: therfore feare thē not.

 For like as a fra y boggarde in a garden off Cucumbers kepech nochinge, euen so are the goddesses of wodd, of syluer z golde: and like as a whyte thorne in an orchard, that eny lyde stretch upon: y^e like as a deed body that is cast in the darke, Euen so it is with these goddesses of wodd, syluer and golde.
 By the purple and scarlet which they haue upon thē, ad soone saydeth amayze, ye maye vnderstonde, that they be no goddesses: y^e they them selues shal be consumed at the last, which shal be a greate cōsumion of the londe. Blessed is the godly man, y^e hath no ymages z worshippeddome, for he shal be safe from reproffe.

The first Chapter.

I Chasid, in the xxx. yeare the fifth daye off the fourth Moneth, that I was amonge the prisoners by the ryer off Cobar; where the heauens opened, & James vison of God. Now the fifth daye off the Moneth made out the fyfth yeare off kynge Iochims captiuyte. At the same tyme came y word off the LORDE vnto Ezechiel the sonne off Buzi pnest, in the londe off the Caldees by the water of Cobar, where the bonde off the LORDE came vppon him. And I tolde: & beholde, a stormy wynde came outt off the north with a greate dooze full of fyre, which wth his glister lightned all rounde aboute.

And in y myddell off the fyre it was all deare, and as it were the hidnesse of foure bestes, which were fashioned like a man: sauyng, that euery one had foure faces and foure wynges.

Their legges were straighe, but their feete were like bulloches feete, and they glistered, as it had bene saynt scoured metall. Vnder their wynges vpon all the foure corners, they had mens handes. Their faces and the fyngers were towarde the foure corners: yet were the wynges so, that one euer couched another. When they wente, they turned them not aboute: but ech one wente straighe forwarde.

Vpon the righte side off these foure, their faces were like the face off a man and the face off a Lyon: But vpon the left side, they had the face off an oxe and the face off an Eagle.

Their faces also and their wynges were lipt outt aboue: so that two wynges off one touched euer two wynges off another, and with the other two they covered their bodye. Euery one when it wente, it wente straighe forwarde.

Where as the spere led them, thither they wente, and turned not aboute in their goinge.

The fashion and countenance of the bestes was like hote coales off fyre, euen as though burnyng cresshettes had bene amonge the bestes: and the fyre gaue a glister, and outt off the fyre there wente lightnyng. Whē y bestes were forwarde & backwarde, one wolde haue thoughte it had lightened. Now whē I had well considered the bestes, I sawe a wolfe off wheles vpon the earth with foure faces also like the bestes.

The fashion & worke of the wheles was like the see. The foure wheles were ioyned and made (so loke vpon) as it had bene one whele in another. Whē one wente forwarde, they wente all foure, and turned the not aboute their gouging. They were large, greete and horrible to loke vpon.

Their bodies were full off eyes rounde aboute them all foure. Whē the bestes wēt, the wheles wente also with them: And when the bestes list them selue vpon from y earth, the wheles were lipt vp also. Whyther so euer the spere wente, thither wente they also, & y wheles were lipt vp & folowed the, for y strette of life was in the wheles. Whē y bestes were forth, stode still, or lift them selue vpon from the earth, then the wheles also wente, stode still, & were lipt vp, for y lieth off life was in the wheles.

Aboute ouer y heades of the bestes there was a firmament, which was fashioned as it had bene off the most pure Chistfall, & that was spred outt aboue vpon their heades: vnder the same firmament were their wynges layed abroad, one towarde another, and two wynges covered the bodye of euery best. And when they wente forth, I herde the noyse off their wynges, like the noyse off greate waters, as it had bene the voyce off the greate God, and a rushing together as it were off an hoost off men. And when they stode still, they lett downe their wynges, & when they stode still, and had lett downe their wynges, it thounded in the firmament, that was aboute their heades.

Aboute the firmament that was ouer their heades, there was the fashion off a seate, as it had bene made off Saphir. Vpon the seate there sat one like a mā. I behelde him, and he was like a cleare light, as it had bene all off fyre with in from his loynes vwarde.

And beneath when I tolde vpon him vnder y loynes, methoughte he was like a stony mynge fyre, that ganeth lighte on euery syde. And the shyne and glister y lightened rounde be aboute, was like a raynbore, which in a rayne daye apareth in the cloudes. And so was the similitude, when the glory off the LORDE appeared. Whe I sawe it, I fell vpon my face, and bentened vnto the voyce off him, that spake.

The II. Chapter.

Athen sayde he vnto me: Stande vp vpon thy feete: (O thou some of mā) and I will talke with the. And as he was commonyng with me, the spiere came in come, and steme vp vpon my feete: so that I marked the thynge, that he sayde vnto me. And he sayde: Beholde, the vision me off man: I will sende the to the chylden off Israel, to those runnagates and obstinate people: for they haue cast parte agaynst me, and are runne awaye fro me: both they, and their forefathers, vnto this daye.

And I will sende vnto a people y haue rough wysages and stiff sternaes: vnto whom thou shalt saye on this maner: Thus the LORDE God himself hath spoken, y whether they be obedient or no: for it is a frauward householde; they maye knowe yet that there hath bene a prophete amonge them.

Therefore (thou some off man) feare the me, neither be asayed off their wordes: for they shall rebell agaynst the, and despise y. And thou shalt dwell amonge scorpions: but feare not their wordes, be not abashed at their lokes, for it is a frauward householde.

So that thou speake my wordes vnto them, whether they be obedient or not, for they are obstinate. Therefore (thou some of man) obeye thou alle charges, that I saye vnto y, and denye theu synned, like as they are a stiffned householde. Open thy mouth, and eate that I geue the.

So as I was lokyng vp, beholde, there was sene vnto me an hande, wherein was a closed booke: and the hande opened it before me, and it was writen within and without, full off carefull mourninges: alaa, and moe.

The III. Chapter.

Athen sayde he vnto me: thou some of mā, see that what so euer it be: Doe eate that closed booke, and go thy waye, and speake vnto the chylden off Israel. So I opened my mouth, and he gaue me the booke: so I eate, and sayde vnto me:

Thou some of man, thy belly shall eate, and thy bellyes shall be filled with yf booke, that I geue the. Then dyd I eate the booke, and it was in my mouth swete as chyn honey.

And he sayde vnto me: thou some of mā, see the soone vnto the house off Israel, that I sende the: for I sende the not to a people that hath a straunge, vnkowne or harde speache, but vnto the house off Israel: for to many nations, which haue diuers speaches and diuers languages, whose wordes thou vnderstandest not: Therefore, yf I sende the to the people, they wolde folowe the: But the house off Israel wil not folowe y, for they wil not folowe me: yett all the house off Israel be stiff forcheades and harde hertes. Therefore, I will make thy face as stone, and agaynst their faces, and harden thy forcheades agaynst their forcheades: so that yf some of them shall be asayed then an Adamānt stone: that thou mayest feare them yf left, and be lesse asayed off them, for they are a frauward householde.

And he sayde morouer vnto me: the soule off man, take diligent heed with thine eeres, eo y wordes that I speake vnto the, listen them in thine eeres: and go to the prisoners off thy people, speake vnto them, and saye on this maner:

Thus the LORDE God hath spoken: Whether ye heare, or heare not. Wee that, the spiere toke me vp. And I herde the voyce of a greates rushinge and remouyng off the most blessed glory off the LORDE out off his place.

I herde also the noise off the wynges off the bestes, that rushed one agaynst another, yett the rushinge off the wynges, that were by them, which rushinge was so very greate.

Now when the spiere toke me vp, and carried me awaye, I wente with an hart and a soufull mynde, but the honde off the LORDE comforted me righte soone.

And so in the begynnyng off the thirde moneth Arib, I came to the prisonere, that dyed by the water off Ebar, and remoued in that place, where they were: and so continued I amonge them seven dayes, beinge very sory.

And when the seven dayes were ended, the LORDE sayde vnto me: Thou some of man, I haue made the a watch man vnto the house off Israel: therefore take good heed to the wordes, and geue them message at my commaundement.

Well than, I will graunte the to take comes done, for the donges off a man, and to strake the bled with all, be fore the.

Re. 1. 1
And he layde vnto me: Beholde thou soune off man, I will mynthe all the prouision of bled in Ierusalem, so that they shall weve their bled, and eate it with scarcenesse. But as for water, they shall haue a vry litle measure theroff, to drynke. And when they haue nomore bled ner water, one shall be destroyed with another, and famish awaye for their wickednesse.

3
I keepe then a sharpe knyfe: O thou sonne of man, namely, a rasoure. Take that, and shaue the hayre off thy head, and beard: Then eate the scoales and the waighe, and deuyde the hayre a sander. And burne the thirde parte thereof in the fyre in the myddest off the cite, and cut the other thirde parte in peces with a knyfe. As for the thirde parte that remaineth, cast it in the wynde, and then shewe the bare knyfe.

J shewe rounde aboute youre aulcers, and swellinge places.

The cities shall be desolate, y hillcha pels layd waste: youre aulcers destroyed, & biolye your goodes cast downe, and taken away, y^e epels layde ead with the grouse, your ome woikes cleue rote out. Your b leaue men shall lie amonge you, that ye may lerne to knowe, how y I am the LORDE.
Thos y amoge you haue escaped the swearde, will I leane amonge the Gentiles, for I will swaie you amonge the nations. And d they that escape from you, shall thinke upon amonge the heithen, where they shall be in captiue.

As for that whorish and vnfaithfull her of thea, wherwith they runne awaye fro me, I will beate it: yee t put out those eyes of thea, that committe fornicacion with their Idoles.

Then shall they be ashamed, and displea so with their selues, for the wickednesse ad abominacions, which they haue done: and shall come to knowe, how that it is not in way me, that I the LORDE spake, to bringe soch wray upon them.

The LORDE sayde moreover vnto me: e Smite thine handes together, and stampe with thy feet, and saye: Wo worth all the ab ominacions and wickednesse of the house of Israel, for because of the, they shall perish with the swearde, with honger and with pel sence. Who so is farr of, shall dye off the pellence: he that is nye at hande, shall per ish with the swearde: and y other that are beside, shall dye of hunger.

Thus wil I satisfie my wrothfull displea sur upon them. And so shall ye lerne to knowe, that I am the LORDE, wher youre slay nerum: amoge youre goddes, and aboute your aulcers: vpon all his hilles and tops of off mountaynes, amoge all grene trees, amonge all thide otes: euen in the places, wher they byd sacrifice to all their Idoles.

I will stretch myne hande out vpon them, & will make the londe waste. So that it shall be desolate and voyde, from the wildernes off Beblat forth, thorow all the habitac ions: to lerne them for to knowe, that I am the LORDE.

The vii. Chapter.

1 The words off the LORDE came vnto me, in this maner: The I call, O thou sonne off man. Thus saierth the LORDE God vnto the londe off Israel:
The ende cometh, yee verely the ende com meth vpon: all the fourre coneres off the e arth.

But nere shall the ende come vpon the:
for I will sende my wroth vps the, and wil punyshe the: accordinge to thy wayes, and re warde the: after all thy abominacions. My ne eye shall not ouersee the, neither will I spare the: but rewarde the, accordinge to thy wayes, and declare thy abominacions.
Then shall ye knowe, that I am the LOR DE.

Thus saierth the LORDE God: Behol de, one mysery and plage shall come after a nother: the ende is here. The ende I saye that waiteth for the, is come already, y^e hon re is come agaynst the, that dwellest in the londe.

The tyme is at hande, the daye of sedicio is hard by, & no glad thinges vps the most tynes. Therfore, I will shortly poure out my soe displeasure ouer the, and fulfill my wroth vpon the, I will iudge the after thy wayes, and recompence the all thy abomi nacions.

Myne eye shall not ouersee the, neither wil I spare the: but rewarde the after thy way es, and shewe thy abominacions: to lerne you for to knowe, how y I am the LORDE, y^e I smyterth. Beholde, the daye is here, the daye is come, the houre is runne out, the robbe flouriseth, wysfulnesse mayeeth greue, mali ous violence is growne up, and the vngodly maye to a staff. Yet shall there no com playnte be made for them, ner for the trouble that shall come of these thinges.

The tyme cometh, the daye daureth nye: Who so byeth, let him not reioyce: he that selleth, let him not be sorrye for why, Trouble shall come in the myddest off all rest: so that the seller shall not come agayne to the byer, for neither off them both shall yue. For the vision shall come so greatiouer all, y it shall not be hyndered: to ma also w his wicked nesse shall be able to saue his owne life.

The trompettes shall ye blowe, and ma ke you all ready, but no man shall go to the batal, for I am wroth with all the whole multitude.

The swearde shall be without, pessilence and honger: within: so that who so is in the felde, shall be slayne with the swearde: and he that is in the cite, shall perish with honger and pessilence.

And soch as escape and fle from amonge them, shall be vpon the hilles, like as the do ues in the felde: every one shall be as frayd, be cause off his owne wickednesse.

11. 1. 2. All houbes shalbe latten downe, and all streets shalbe scale as the water: they shall gyde them selues with sack cloth, seare shall fall upon them. Their faces shall be consoiled, and their heades bald: their slycer shall lye in the streete, and their golde shalbe despyred: yet their slycer and golde maye not be slyce them, in the daye of the fearfull wrath of the LORDE.

D They shall not satisfie their hongric soules, neither sell their empires beles therewith: for it is become their owne decaye: for now their wickeditness: because they made therof, not only costly Jeweles for their pompe and pryde, but also abhominable ymages and Idole. For this cause will I make them to be abhoyed. Moreover, I will geue it in to y^e houbes off the straungers to be poyled: and to y^e wiche, for to be robbed, and they shall destroye it.

The face wil I turne from the, my Treasury shall be despyed: for the cheues shall go in to it, and suspende it. I will make diene rybauus, for the londe is whole despyled with unrighteous iudgment of innocent bloude, & the cite is full off abhominacions.

12. Wherefore, I will bringe the most cruell pynantes from amonge the heiden, to take their houses in possession. I will make the pompe off the proude to ceasse, and they shall take in their Sanctuary. When this trouble cometh, they shall see peace, but they shall haue none. One myschance and sorrowe shall folowe another, and one rymoure shall come after another: then shall they see visions in wayne at their prophetes. The lawe shall be gone from the prestes, and wysdome from the eldres. The Fynge shall mourne, the paines shall be clothed with heynesse, and y^e hodes off the people in the londe shall tremble for feare. I will do vnto them after their owne wortes, & accordinge to their owne iudgements will I iudge them: to lerne them for to knowe, that I am the LORDE.

The viij. Chapter.

13. It happened, that in the sixte yeare, the fifti daye of the sixte Moneth I sat in my house, and the LORDES off the counsell off Iuda with me: and the honde off the LORDE GOD fell vpon me.

And as I looked vp, I sawe as it were a sicke off fyre from his loynes downwarde, and from his loynes upwarde it shyned maruolous cleare.

This similitude stretched out on houbes, and toke me by the hayric lockes off my head, and the spere like me vp betwix my head and earth: and God broughe me in a wayne to Jerusalem, in cothe contrie off the ierusalem: that lieth toward the north: that stode an ymage, with reborn be that had all thinges in his reborn, was very much.

And beholde, the glory off the Godd of Israel was in the same place: as an I had sene it afore in the fesse. And he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne off man, lift vp thine eyes, and loke toward the north, and behold: I vpon mine eyes toward the north, and behold: Beside the porte northward was an auker made vnto the ymage off innocacion in the very entreeing in.

And he sayde furthermore vnto me: Thou sonne off man, cast thou what thou seest: seest thou the greete abhominacions that the house off Israel commyt in this place: whiche oughte not to be done in my sanctuary?

But turne the aboute, and thou shalt see yet greater abhominacions. And with that he broughe be me to the contrie gate: and as I looked, beholde, there was an hole in the wall.

Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne off man, dygge thou in the wall, beholde, there was a doue. And he sayde vnto me: go thy way in, & loke what wiche abhominacions they do there.

So I wente in, and sawe: and beholde, there were all maner ymages off women & beastes, all Idols and abhominacions off y^e house off Israel paynted euery ydole made aboute the wall.

There stode also before the ymages lordes off the counsell off the house off Israel: and in the myddest off them stode I sawe I sawe the some off Saphan: and one off them had a censure in his houbes out off the incense, there wente a smoke, as it had bene a cloude.

Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne off man, hast thou sene what the Sathanes off the house off Israel do secretly, as one in his chambere? for they saye: The LORDE seeth vs not, the LORDE regardeth not the woulde. And he sayde vnto me: Take the yet agayne, and thou shalt see the greete abhominacions that they do.

And with that, he broughe me to the reborn off the porte off the LORDES houbes, toward the north. And beholde, there women mourning for Thomas. Then say-he unto me: hast thou sene this, thou soule of mi: Turne if aboute, & thou shalt se yet greater abhominacions. And so he bringe me to the inward court of the LORDES house: he beholde, at the poynt of the LORDES house, betwixt the fore entrie and the aulter, there were fyve and twenty men, that turned their backs vpon the Temple of the LOR-DE, & their faces toward the east, and the syde wher they stood.

And he sayde vnto me: hast thou sene this, thou soule of man? Thinke the house of Israel, that it is but a crisse, to do these abho-minacions here: Shulde they fill the lon-de full of wickednesse, and vnder take to profane me vnto anger? See & purposely to cast vpon their noses vpon me: Therfore wil I also do some thinge in my wrath full displeasur, for that myne eye shall not ouersee them, nether wil I spare them. See and though they are in myne eares with loude voyce, yet wil I not heare them.

The IX. Chapter.

I Ezeck also walk with a loude voyce in myne eares, sayinge: Come here ye ru-ders of the cite, euery man with his weapon honde to the slaughter. Then came there fyve men out of the strete of the vpp-er poynt toward the north, and euery man waspou in his honde to the slaughter. The remas one amongst them, that had on him a lymyng garment, and a twayers yuch houat by his syde.

They wente in, and stode beside the diagramaker: for the glory of the LORDE was gone awaye from the Cherub, and was come downe to the threshold of the house, & he called the mā, that had the lymyng garment vpon him, and the writers yuch houc by his syde, and the LORDE sayde vnto him: Sothly was ye to go to the cite of Jerusalem, and set this marke vpon the four hea-des of them, that mourne, and are sory for all the abhominacions, that be done therin.
 And to the other, he sayde that I might heare vnto ye after him that go to the cite, slaye, euerisone, spar none: A yll, & byt ye both olde men and yonge, maydens, children, and wyues.

As for those, that haue this marke vpon their backs: I will not touch them, nether wil I be gnyne at my Sanctuary. Then they began at the elders, which were in the Temple: he had sayde vnto them: When ye hauen sene the Temple, and fylled the court with the slayne, then go youre waye forth.

 So they wente out and stode to the north of the cite. From when they had done of slaughter, & I yet escaped: I fell downe vpon my face, & cried, sayinge: O LORDE, wilt thou then destroye all the residue of Israel, in thy fore displeasur, that thou hast poured vpon Jerusalem?

Then sayde he vnto me: The which tres-se of the house of Israel and Iuda is very greateso that the lode is full of bloude, and yf cite full of vnfaich fulnesse: For the y saye: Tush, yf LORDE regardeth not the earth, he seyth so not. Therfore wil I vpon them, in myne eye shall not ouersee them, neher wil I spare them, but will recompence their roic fednesse vpon their brades.

And beholde, the mā that had the lymyng garment vpon him, and the writers, yuch houc by his syde: tolde all the matter how it happened, and sayde: LORDE, as thou hast commaunded me, so haue I done.

The X. Chapter.

I As I looked, beholde, In the firmament: that was aboue the Cherubins there appeared the similitude of a floke of Sapphir vpon them: Then sayde he that sat therein, to him that had the lymyng garment vpon him: Crepe in betwene the wheles that are vnder the Cherubins, and cate thine honde full of hote coales out from be-twene the Cherubins, and cast them ouer the cite. And he crepe in, that I might se.

Then the Cherubins stode vpon the right syde of the house, when the man wente in, and the cloude fylled the ynnner court. Then the glory of the LORDE REMOVED FROM THE Cherubins, and came vpon the threshold of the house: so that the Temple was full of cloude, and the court was full of the shyne of the LORDES glory. And also the sounde of the Cherubins wynges was hered in to the fore court, like as it had bene the voyce of the almyghtie God, when he speaketh. Then when he had bydden the man yf was clothed in lymyngs, to go and take the hote coales from the myddest of fyue wheels, which were vnder the Cherubins: he wente and stode besyde the wheels. Then the one Cherub reached forth this honde from vnder the Cherubins, vnto yf fyue that was be-twene the Cherubins, and toke therof, and gaue it vnto him: that had on the lymyng garment in his honde: which toke it, and wente out. And vnder the wynges of fyue Cheru-bins, there appeared the likenes of a mā ho-te: I sawe also foure wheels besyde the Che-rubies, so that by every Cherub there stode a whele. And the wheeles were (so toke upon) a fier of fashion of y precions stone of Tharsis: And vnto the sight were they fashioned like, as yf one whele had bene in another.

When they wente forth, they wente all iij together, not turninge aboute in their goinge: But when the first wente, thither wente they after also, so that they turnede not aboute in their goinge.

xx. b

Their whole bodies, their backes, their hodes & wynges, yee & the wheeles also, were all full of eyes rounde aboute them all four. And I herde hym call y wheeles, Galgal (that is) a rounde boull. Every one of them had foure faces: so that the one face was the face of a Cherub, the seconde of a man, the thirde of a lyon, the fourth of an Aegle, & they were lifted vp about. This is the best, that I sawe at the water of Cobar.

¶ Now when the Cherubins wente, the wheeles wente with them: when the Cherubins shoke their wynges to lift them selues vpward, the wheeles remayned not behynde, but were with them also. Shortly, when they stode, these stode also: And when they were list vp, y wheeles were list up also with the, for the spere of life was in the wheeles.

Then the glory of the LORDE was lift up from the threshold of the temple, and remayned vpon the Cherubins: And the Cherubins flattered with their wynges, and lift the selues up from the earth: so that I sawe when they went, and the wheeles with them, And they stode at the east syde of the porte that is in the benefe of the LORDE: So the glory of the LORDE was vpon them. This is the best that I sawe vnder the God of Israel, by the water of Cobar. And I perceaued, that it was the Cherubins. Every one had foure faces, & euery one foure wynges, & vnder their wynges, as it were mens hondes.

¶ Now the figure of their faces was, euen as I had sent hym, by the water of Cobar, & so was the countenance of the: Every one in his goinge wente straight forward.

¶ WHEN, the spere of the LORDE lift me vp, & brought me vnto y east porte of the LORDES house. And beholde, there were iij men vnder the doore: and y whom I sawe Jaasaniah the sonne of Azur, Pbelias the sonne of Bamas, the rulers of the people. Then sayde the LORDE vnto me: Thou sonne of man: These men ymagin my thete, and a wicked council take they in this cite, sayenge: Tush, there is no deliueracion at hande, let vs buye houses:

This Jerusalem is the cauldron, & we be the flesh. Therefore shall thou prophete vnto them, yee prophete shall thou vnto them, yee sonne of man. And with that, fell the spere of the LORDE vpon me, and saye thus: Speake, thus saith the LORDE: O whelmer haue yee spokē: O ye house of Israel! I knowe the ymaginacions of your hertes. Many one haue ye murdered in this cite, filled the stretes full of the slayne.

Therefore, thus saith the LORDE God: The slayne men that ye haue layed on the grounde in this cite, are the flesh: & this is the cauldron: But I wil bringe you out of it: ye haue drawe out yf swarte, cut so wil I also bringe a swarte vnto you, saith y LORDE God. I wil dryue you out of this an and deliuer you in to youre enemies hande, & wil condemne you. Ye shal be slayn all the coastes of Israel. I wil be avenged of you: to lerne you so to knowe, that I am the LORDE. This cite shal not be your cauldron, neher shal ye be the flesh therein: but in the coastes of Israel wil I purify you, that ye maye knowe, that I am the LORDE: in whose commaundementes ye haue not walked, nee keptes his lawes: but haue done after the customes of the heitben, that liue aboute you.

¶ Now when I preached, Pbelias the sonne of Bamas dyed. Then fell y downe vnto my face, & cried with a loude voyce: O LORDE God, wile thou then surely destroye all the remnaunt in Israel? And so the word of the LORDE came to me on this maner: Thou sonne of man: Thy bretheren, thy kynnesmen, yf whole house of Juda, which dwell in Jerusalem, saye: They be gone farre from the LORDE, but the londe is geuen vs in possession. Therefore tell them, thus saith the LORDE God: I wil sende you farre of amonge the Gentiles, & scatter you amonge the nacions, & I wil haleme you but a litle, in the londe where ye shall come. Tell them also, thus saith the LORDE God: I wil gather you together out of the nacions, & bringe you from the countrees where ye be scattered, & wil geue you the londe of Israel agayne: & there shal ye come. And as for all impudencies, & all youre abhominacions: I wil take them awaye.

And I wil geue you one herte, & wil putte a newe spere within yf bonde. That shal y herte wil I take out of youre body, & wil geue you a fleshy herte: that ye maye walk in my commaundementes, & keepe my lawes, & do them: that ye maye be my peple, and I your God. But loke whose hermes are disposed to followe their abominations and wicked saynges: Those mens deeds will I bringe upon their owne heades, saith the LORD God. After this vj the Cherubims lift up their wings, and the robes were with them, and the glory of the LORD was upon them. So the glory of the LORD rose up from the myddell of the cite, & stode upon the mount of the cite to ward the east. But the wynde took me up, & was in vision which came by the spere of God) a troughe me agayne in to Caldea amonge the prisoners. Then the vision that I had seen, was shewed to me yf fro me. So I spake vnto the prisoners, all the wordes of the LORD, which he had shewed me.

The XII. Chapter.

The worde of the LORD came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of mā, thou dwellest in the myddell of a fraumer householde: which haue eyes to see, & yet see not: eares haue they to heare, and yet heare they not, for they are an obstinate householde. Charge them, O thou sonne of man, make theym to see daye after daye, and go forth by saye daye light, yf they maye see. See cut in their sighte, saith thou go from thy place to another place yf peraduenture they wil confesse, yf they be an obedient householde. They here that thou hast made reddy to flie withall, shall thou heare cut by saye daye light, that they maye see: thou yf wilt shall go forth also at cut in their sighte, as amā doth in the fliteth.

Byng the: on the wall, that they maye see, and heare the worde of the LORD, that thou shalt go forth in their sighte. As for thy self, thou shalt go forth in the darcke. Gyde thy foot that thou sit not yf earth, for I haue made thee a shewoode vnto the house of Israel. Thus saith the LORD God, I had made reddy, brought I out by ye. After that I brake downe an hole throught the wall with my hende: & when it was made, I sete the gere vps my shuldere, and breche them out in their sighte.

And in the moynng, came the worde of the LORD vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, yf Israel, yf fraumerde householde age the, and saye: what dost thou there? Then tell them: Thus saith the LORD God, I will punishement condey the dese rulers of Jerusalem, and all the house of Israel, that dwell amonge them; Tell them: I am vnto them as a shewoode, as I haue done, so shall it happen vnto you: I ye shall ye also, and goe in there captiue, & be the best that is amonge you, shall lade his shuldere in the darcke, and gett him awaye. He shall breake downe the wall, & carie stuffe there thoro: & shall cover his face, that he se not the grounde, with his eyes.

My lyne will I spredde out vpon him, and catch him in my net, and carie him to Babylon, in the lōde of the Caldees: which he shall use se, & yet shall he bye there. As for all his helpers, and all his hoopes that be aboute him: I will scaere them towardes all the wyndes, & diaue out a swerde a fier thyn. So when I haue scaered them amonge the heathen, and strowed them in the lōdes: they shall knowe, that I am yf LORD God. But, I will leaue a litle rembe of them, from the swerde, hunger & pestilence: to sell all their abominacions amonge the heathen, where they come: that they maye knowe, howe that I am the LORD.

Me toger, the worde of the LORD came vnto me sayenge: Thou sonne of man: with a fear full reblynge shalt thou eate thy bred, with care fulnesse & sorrowe shalt thou drynke thy water. And vnto the people of Iherusalem, speake thou on this maner: Thus saith the LORD God, to them that dwell in Jerusalem, and to the lōde of Israel: Ye shall eate youre bred with sorrowe, and drynke youre water with heynesse: yet the lōde with the fulnesse thereof shall laye waste, for yf wickednesse of them that dwell therein. And the cities that now be well occupied, shall be voyde, and the lōde desolate: that ye maye knowe, howe that I am the LORD.

See came the worde of the LORD vnto me agayne, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, what maner of dyworde is that, which ye vse in the lōde of Israel, sayenge: Cushi, sayenge that the daies are so slacke in commynge, all the visōe are of none effecte: Tell them therefore, thus saith the LORD God, I will make that by wordes ceasse, so that it shall neuer be commonly used in Israel.

But saye this vnto them: The daies are at hande, that eury thinge which hath bene prophesied, shall be fulfilled. There shall no visōe be in waye, neither any prophesie sayle amonge the children of Israel: for it is I the LORD God, that speake it: and no man so euer I yf LORD God, it shall be performed, and not be slacke in commynge.

See came in youre dayes (O ye fraumerde householde: will I beuise some thinge, & bringe it to passe, saith the LORD God. And the worde of the LORD came vnto me sayenge: Deholde, thou sonne of man: The house of Israel saye in this maner: Tush, as for the vision that he hath sene, it will be many a daye as it came to passe: Is it farre off yet, the thinge that he prophesied. Therefore saye vnto them: Thus saith the LORD E God: All my wordes shall come to passe: For what I speake, that same shall come to passe, saith the LORD E.

The XIII. Chapter.

And the worde of the LORD E came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, speake prophesie agaynst those prophetes, that preach in Israel: & saye thou vnto them that prophesie out of their owne heeres: Heare the worde of the LORD E, thus saith the LORD E God: Doe be vnto those foolish prophetes, that followe their owne speeche, and speake, where they se nothinge. O I fear, thy prophetes are like the forces vpon the due side. For they stande not in the gappe, neither make they an hedge for the house of Israel: for as muche as theye abide the parrill in the daye of the LORD E. Manye thinges they se, & tell lies, to sayneme their peachinges withall. The LORD E saye theye harsh spoke it, when in verye deede the LORD E hath not sent them. Manye visions haue ye sene, & spoket falsse prophesies, when ye saye: the LORD E hath spoken it, where as I neuer saye it.

And therefore, thus saith the LORD E God: Because your wordes be vayne, & ye see our lies: Behelde, I wil vpon you, saith the LORD E. Myne hondes shall come vpon the prophetes, that loken our vayne thinges, and preach lies: they shall not be in the council of my people, nor written in the booke of the house of Israel: neither shall they come in the lode of Israel: that ye maye knowe, howe that I am the LORD E God. And that for this cause: they haue disceined my people, & tolde them of peace, where no peace was. One steeth vpon a wall, & theye darre be it with lowse claye.

Therefore tell them which darre be it with vntempered mortar, that it shall fall. For there shall come a greateshowre of rayne, greates stones shall fall vpon it, & a soie storme of wynde shall breake it, so shall y wall come downe. Shall it not then be saye vnto you: where is now the mortar, that ye darred it withall? Therefore thus saith the LORD E God: I wil breake out in my woechfull displeasure with a stormy wynde, so that in myne anger there shall come a mightie shower of rayne, & hale stones in my woech, to destroye withall.

As for y wall, that ye haue dawbed with vntempered mortar, I wil breake it downe, & make it euen with the grounde: so shall the foundation thereof shall remoue, & it shall be ye your silues shall pench into the dust thereof: to lerne you so to knowe, that I am the LORD E. Thus wil I pfectly woech vpon this wall, & vpon them that are dawbed it with vntempered mortar, when wil I saye vnto you: The wall is gone, & the dawbers are awaye. These shall be the wordes of Israel, which prophesie mouthes of Jerusalem, & take out visions of peace for them, where as no peace is, saith the LORD E God. Wherefore (o howe shamefull) set thy face agaynst the daughter of y people, which prophesie out of their owne heeres: & speake thou prophesie agaynst them saye: Thus saith the LORD E God: Wher vnto you, that sowe pilowes vnder allegholes, and balsters vnder the heades of yongie and elde, to catch soles withal. For when ye haue gotten the soles of y people in your captiuiuy, ye pmoouen for life, and dishonoure me to my people, sin hand full of barly, & for a pece of bread: ye sell the soles of them that buye not, & my selfe lise to them, that lye not: Thus wil I semble with my people, y beloued ym.

Wherefore thus saith the LORD E God: Behelde, I wil als vpon the pilowes, wherewith ye catch the soles in styenge: the wil I take from your armes, & let the soles, that ye catch in styenge. Your balsters shall I tear in peeces, & deliuer my people out of your hondes: so that they shall come out in your hds to be spoiled, & ye shall see, that I am the LORD E. Singe y with your lyes ye discomfote the hart of the righteous, whom I haue not discomfoted: Agayne: For so much as ye couage the dede of the wicked, so that he maye not come from his wicked waye, & lye: therefore shall ye spee out nomore vayne, nor prophesie of your owne gessinges: for I wil deliuer my people out of your hondes, that ye maye knowe, howe that I am the LORD E.

The XIII. Chapter.

Here referred vnto me carayme off elders of Israel, & sat downe by me. Then came the worde of the LORD E vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, thou men beate their Idols in their breues, & purposely vpon the stumbling blocke of thine owne wickednesse: how darre theye be in council at me? Therefore speake vnto them, & saye thus saith the LORD E God: O my man of the house of Israel that breach the Idole in his heart, purpose yge to stande his owne wickednesse, and commeth to a prophet, to enquire any thinge at me by him: vs with a man wil I the LORDE myself geue answere, according to the multitude of his Iniquities: that the house of Israel maye be satisfied in their owne hartes, because they be declined from me, for their Idols sake.

Then saie, all the house of Israel: thus sa-ieth the LORDE God: He conuerted, forsake your Idols, and turne your faces from all y^e abominacions. For enery man, wher-euer he be of the house of Israel, or a stranger, what so cometh in Israel, wherby he par-ticipeth from me, and carieth Idols in his hart, purpoisinge to go still stumblinge in his owne wickednesse, and commeth to a prophet, for to seeke counsell atime the ro to him: vnto of me wil I the LORDE geue answer, by my owne self.

I wil fix my face agaynst that man, and wilt make him to be an example for other, yet not a signe by word: and wil rece him out of my people, that he maye knowe, how y^e am the LORDE. And yf that prophet be de-ceiued, when he telleth him a worde: then the LORDE myself haue disceined that prophet, and wil stretch forth myne hande vpon him, to rece him out of my people of Israel: and they both shall be punished for their wickednesse.

Accordinge to y^e synne of him that against, shall he synne of the prophet be: that y^e house of Israel be led nomore fro me thow iniquities, and be nomore defyled in their wickednesse: that they maye be my people, and I their God, saith the LORDE God. And the worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, when the londe stretcheth out a wastfull me, and goeth forth in wickednesse, I will stretch out myne hande vpon it, and destroye all the prouision of their food, and sende death vpon them, to destroye the same: and I wil be as a besse in the londe. And though I be, and Iob these thre men were among them, yet shall they in their rightuousnesse deliuer but their owne soules, saith the LORDE God.

If I bringe noysome bestes in to the lon-de, to waste it vp, and it be so desolate, that no man maye go therein for bestes: yf these thre men also were in the londe, as truly as I the LORDE God, they shall saue neither sonnes ner daugthers, but be only deliuered them selues: and as for the londe, it shall be wastfull.

Or, yf I bringe a swerde in to the lon-de, and charge it to go thow the londe: so

The xv. Chap. Ho. lx.

the I shall: y^e man and best in it, and yf these thre men were therein: As truly as I lyue (saith the LORDE God) they shall deli-uer neither sonnes ner daugthers, but only be saued them selues.

If I sende a pestilence in to the londe, and peure out my fore indignacion vpon it in bloude, so that I rote out of it both man and best, and yf I be, Daniel and Iob were therein: As truly as I lyue (saith the LOR-DE God) they shall deliuer neither sonnes ner daughters, but saue their owne soules in their rightuousnesse.

Moreover, thus saith the LORDE God:
Though I finde my foure trubous plagis vpon Jerusalem, the swerde, hongre, pestilens bestes and pestilence, to destroye man and best out of it: yet shall there a remnant be saued therein, wherby shall bringe forth their sonnes and daughters. Beholde, they shall come forth vnto you, and ye shall se their roayes, and what they call: in hande, 2 ye shall be comforted, as touching all the plagis that I haue brought vpon Jerusalem.

They shall comforte you, when yf see their roayes and workes: and ye shall knowe, how yf it is not without a cause, that I haue done so agaynst Jerusalem, as I dyd, saith the LORDE God.

The XV. Chapter.

The worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man: What cometh of the wyne amonge all other trees: and of the wyne stocke, amonge all other tymber of the groue: Do me take woodd of it, to make eny worke withall?
Or maye there a hale be made of it, to hange enys thinge vpon? Beholde, it is cast in the fyre to be burnt, the fyre consumeth both the endres of it, the myddest is burnt to ashes. I am there then for eny worde. To.

Seeinge then, that it was mete for no woke, beinge whole: much lesse maye there eny thinge be made of it, when the fyre hath consumed and burnt it. And therefore thus saith the LORDE God: Like as I cast the wyne in to the fyre: so to be burnt, as other trees of the woodd: Euen so wil I do with them that dwell in Jerusalem, and set my face agaynst them: they shall go out from the fyre, and yet the fyre shall consume them. Then shall ye knowe, that I am the LORDE, when I set my face agaynst them, and make the londe wastfull: because they haue so foue offended, saith the LORDE God.

The XVI. Chapter.

21 Quayn, the words of L O R D E spake unto me saying: Then forme of sinners, I sawe the case of Jerusalem their abominacions, and sa ye thus saith the L O R D E God unto Jerusalem: Thy pudgery and thy meate came out of the lande of Canaan, thy father was an Amouree, thy mother a Chethite. In y daye of thy byrth when thou wast borne, y stringe of thy navel was not cut of: thou wast not baptyzed in water to make thee cleane: Thou wast neither rubbed w' salt, nor swarded in cloutes: A man regarded the so much, as to do eny of these thinges for y, or to shewe the soch favour, but thou wast verely cast out upon y felde, yee despyfed wast thou in the daye of thy byrth.

Then came I by thee, and sawe thee croden downe in thine owne bloude, & sayde unto thee: thou shalt be purged from thine owne bloude, for thine owne bloude: I saye: shalt thou be cleansed. So I planted thee, as the blossome of thy felde: thou art growen vp, & wast greate: thou hast gotten a marvellous pleasant beare, thy bestes are come vp, thy byrth is goodly growen, where as thou wast naked and bare a fore.

11. 12. c.

22 Thou when I came by y, I looked upon thee: beholde, thy ryme was come, yee ened the ryme to moue thee. Then spied I my clothes over thee, to coner thy dishonour: Yee I made an ooth unto thee, & married myself with thee: (saith the L O R D E God) & thou becamest myne owne. Then washed I the with water, & pouerged thy bloude from thee. I annoynted the with oyle. I gave thee chaunge of raymentes, I made thee shooes of Tarsus leather: I girted y a boure w' white sylke, I clothed the with kerchens, I decked the w' costly apparell. I put rynges upon thy fyngers: a chayne aboute thy necke, spages vpo thy foreheade, eare rynges upon thine eares, & for a beuerfull crowne upon thine heade. Thou wast thou decked with syluer & golde, & thy rayment was of fyne white sylke, of noble wyke: & of dyuerse coloure.

Terc. x.
Ofr. a. c.

Thou didest eate nothinge but symels, honny & oyle: marmelous goodly wast thou & beutifull, yee euen a very Quene wast thou: in so much, that thy beuty was spoken of amonge the Gentren, for thou wast excellente in my beuty, w' hich I put vpo thee, saith the L O R D E God. But thou hast put confidence in thine owne beuty, & played the harlot, when thou haddest gotten che a name. Thou hast committed whoredome, with all that wente by thee: hast fulfilled their desires: yet thou hast taken thy garmentes of dyuerse coloure, & decked thine antlers therewith, when thou mightest fulfill thine whoredome, in such a fashion, as neuer was done, nor shal be. The goodly ornaments & Jewels which I gave thee of myne owne golde and silver, hast thou takē, & made the same images of, and committed whoredome withall.

Thy garmentes of dyuerse coloure, thou eatest, and decked them therewith: oyle & incense hast thou set before thee, thine meate whych I gave thee, as w' symels, thine honny: (to fede thee withall) that hast thou set before them, for a sweete savoure. And thou came also to passe, saith the L O R D E God. Thou hast take thine owne, somes & daughters, whom thou haddest begotten name, and these hast thou offered up unto them, as be their meate. In this but a small part of thine: (thinkest thou) that thou hast my children, and givest them over to be sold unto them: And yet in all thy abominacions and whoredomes, thou hast not remembred the dayes of thy youth, how naked wast thou wast at that tyme, & troubled wast in thine owne bloude. As for all thy wickednesse, two roddes vnto thee, saith y L O R D E thou hast bayled thy fyngers and laded houses in every place: yee at the head of every streete hast thou bayled the an ooth. Thou hast made thy beuty to be abhorred: thou hast layed out thy legges to every man that came by, and multiplied thine whoredome. Thou hast committed fornicacions with the Egipcians thy neighbours, which is much fleshy: & thus hast thou used thyne house, to anger me.

Beholde, I will stretch out myne hande over thee, and wil mynch thy stones of thine, and delayer the over in to the walls of thy Phylistynes thine enemies, which are the med of thy abominable waye. Thou hast played the whore also with the Assyrians, which mighte not satisfie thee: yet thou hast played the harlot, & not had ynough. Thou hast thou still committed thy fornicacions in the lande of Canaan unto che Abores, and yet thy lust not satisfied. Som shalbe I came to thee hertze: saith the L O R D E God. In so much, that thou dost all these thinges, thou art a whore: buydinge thy streets at the heade of every streete, and thy bodell houses in all places: Thou hast not bene as an other whore, y maketh booste of her whoredome: but as a wife y breaketh wedlocke, & hath entered in steade of hir husbande. Thou art gotten to all other whoredome, but thou wast rewarded vnto all thy lovers: & thy them gifts, to come vnto the out of all places, & to committe fornicacion with the. It is come to passe with the in thy whoredomes, comyng to the use of ocher women: yee the in hath no such fornicacion bene committed after the, singe that thou profrest giftes vnto ocher, & no remembrance geuen that this is a contrary thinge. Therefore heare the worde of the LORDE, o thou harlot: Thus saith the LORDE God: So fo much as thou hast spce thy moneye, & discouered thy shame, thou wast whoredome with all thy louers, and with all the Toole of thy abhominacions in the bloud of thy children, whom thou hast gotten: Beholde therefore, I wil gather together all thy louers, vnto whom thou hast made thy self comon: yee & all them whom thou fauourest, and euery one that thou hast: and will discouer thy shame before the, that they all may see thy fylchynes.

Moreover, I wil iudge the as a breaker of wordes, and a murderer, and recompence the thine owne bloud in wrath and gelouy: I wil geue the ouer in to their power, that shal make doome thy steeles, and destroye thy wood houses: they shal stripe the out of thy clothes, all thy sayre & beautifull Jewels they take from the, and solet the sye naked bare: yee they shal bunge the comon people vpon the, which shal stone the, & slaye the downe with their sweardes. They shall burne vp thy houses, and purrysh the in the fyre of many womē. Thus wil I make thy whoredome to craffe, so that thou shalt geue them no rewardes.

Shalde I make my reuach to be still, take my gelouy from the, be content, and nomore to be displeasid: seinge thou rememberst noe the daye of thy youth, but hast prouoked me to wrath in all these thinges: Beholde therefore, I wil bunge thine owne wayes vpon thine heade, saith the LORDE God: how ben I neuer vnto vnto the, a cordinge to thy wickednesse and all thy abhominacions. Beholde, all they of use comon prouerbe, shall see this prouerbe also agaynst the: God a mother, such a daughter.

Thou art caryed by motheres owne daughter, that hath cast o of hir house bonde and hir children: yee thou art the sister of thy sisters, which soughte their best boddes and: heir children. Your mother is a Cethite, and youre father an Amozite. Thine eldest sister is Samaria she, and hir daughters that dwel vpo thy left bonde.

But thy youngest sister that dwelleth on y right hōde, is Sodoma and hir daughters.

Yet hast thou not walked after their wayes, ner done after their abhominacions: But in all thy wayes thou hast bene more corrupte then they.

As truly as I lym, saith the LORDE God: Sodoma thy sister with hir daughters, hath noe done so euil, as thou and thy daughters. Beholde, the synnes of thy sister Sodoma were these: pryde, fullnesse of meate, abundaunce and Ioulesse: these thinges had she and hir daughters. Besides that, they reached not their honde to the poore and nedry, but were proude, and byd abhominable thinges before men: for I toke them amysse, when I had sene it. Neither hath Samaria done half of thy synnes, yee thou hast exceeded them in wickednesse. In so much that in comparison of all the abhominacions which thou hast done, thou hast made thy sisters good women. Therefore beare thine owne shame, thou that in synne hast out come thy sisters: seinge thou hast done so abhominably, that they were better then thou. Be ashamed therefore, I saye, and beare thine owne confusion, thou that makest thy sisters good women.

As for their captiuitee, namely the captiuitee of Sodoma and hir daughters: the captiuitee of Samaria and hir daughters: I wil bunge them agayne, so will I also bunge agayne the captiuitee and geue them: that thou mayest take thine owne confusion vpon the, and be ashamed of all that thou hast done, and to comforte them.

Thus thy sisters (namely) Sodoma and hir daughters: Samaria and hir daughters with y self & thy daughters, shal be brought agayne to your owne place. Whe thou wast in thy pryde, and before thy wickednesse came to lichte: thou woldest not heare speake of thy sister Sodoma, vntill the tyme that the Sircio with all their townes, and the Philistynes with all the laye rounde aboute them, brought the to shame and confusion: that thou mightest beare thine owne fylchynes and abhominacion, saith the LORDE.

So it is saith the LORDE God: I shal de (by nyght) deale with the, as thou hast done. Thou hast despysed the oeth, and broken the couenant. Therefore, I wil remember the couenant, that I made with the in thy youth, in so much that it shall be an everlasting couenant: So that thou also remember thy wayes, and be ashamed of the: then shalt thou receaue of me thy elder and younger sisters, whom I wil make thy daughter.

ere, and that beside thy covenante. And so I will reuere my covenante with the, & thou mayest knowe, that I am the LORD: that thou mayest thinke vpon it, be ashamed, and excuse thine owne confusion no more: when I haue forgiven the, all that thou hast done, saith the LORD God.

The woide of the LORD came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man; put forth a darke speakeyng and a parable, vnto the house of Israel, and saye: Thus saith the LORD God: There came a greete Aegle with greete wynges, yee w^o mighte longe wynges, and full of feathers of dyuerse colours, vpon the mount of Libanus, and roke a biauuch from a Cedre tre, and brake of the copp of his wygge, and caried it in to the lonbe of Canaan, and set it in a cite of marchawntes. The roke also a biauuch of the lembe, and planted it in a fructefull ground, he brought it vnto greete waters, & set it as a willye tre therby. Then dyd it growe, and was a greete wyne stocke, but love by the ground: thus there came of it a wyne, and it brought forth blossomes, & spied out biauuches.

But there was another Aegle, a greete one, which had greete wynges and many feathers and beholde, y^e rotes of this wyne had an hinger a fer him, and spied out his biauuches toward him, to water his frutes: Where thes it was placed vpon a good ground beside greete waters: so that (by reason) it shulde haue brought out biauuches and frute, and haue bene a goodly wyne. Speake thou therfore, thus saith the LORD God: Shall this wyne prosper: shall not his rotes be plucked out, his frute broken of, his grene biauuches withered and fade awaye: yee withoute ether stronge arme or many people, shall it be plucked vp by the rotes. Beholde, it was planted: shall it prosper therfore: It shall it not be dryed up and withered, yee euen in the shruicing out of his blossomes, as some as y^e east wynde bloweth.

Meaneer, the woide of the LORD came vnto me sayenge: Speake to the frauwarder householde: knowe ye not, what these thinges do signifie: Tell them: Beholde, the kinge of Babilon came to Jerusalem, and toke the kinge & his prynces, and ledde them to Babilon.

He toke of the kinges side, and made a covenante with him, and toke an oath of him: The prynces of the lonbe toke he with him also, that the lonbe might be holden in subjection, and not to rebelle, but kepe the covenante, and fulfill it. But he fell from him, sent his Ambassadors in to Egyppe, that he mighte haue hoises & moche people, that they shulde prosper: Shalde he be kepte left, that doth such thinges: Or shalde he scape, that braketh his covenante.

As truly as I lyue, saith the LORD God: He shall dye at Babilon, in y^e place wher the kinge dwelleth, that made him bren whose oath he hath despised, and whose covenante he hath broken. Whether shall perase with his greete hoost and multitude of people, maye theye him in the marte: wher they cast vpon dyces, and set vpon bulwarkes destroye moche people. For saing he hath despised the oath, and broken the covenante (wherons he yee gaue his honde therupon) and done all these thinges, he shall not scape.

Therefore thus saith the LORD God: As truly as I lyue, I will bringe anyone such that he hath despised, and my covenante that he hath broken, vpon his owne head. I will cast my net aboute him, and catch him in my yame. To Babilon will I carry him, there will I punyssh him, because of the greete offence that he made me. As for thos that fle from him out of y^e boost, they shall flye with the frowarde. The residue shalbe ledder towarde all the wyndes: and y^e residue, that I the LORD God haue spoken it.

Thus saith the LORD God: I will also take a biauuch from an hie Cedre tre, and will sette, and take the vppermost twigge, that yee is but tender, and plant it vpon all his hill: Namely, vpon the hie hill of Sion will I plant it: that it maye bringe forth twigges, and geue frute, and be a greete bieu tre: so that all maner of foules maye be in it, and make their nestes vnder the shadowe of his biauuches.

And all the trees of the filde shall knowe, that I the LORD God haue broughte done the hie tre, and set the lower vpon it: I haue dryed vp the grene tre, and made the drye tre to flourish: Alen I the LORD God y^e spake it, haue also broughte it to pass.

The XVII. Chapter.

The woide of the LORD came vnto me, on this maner: what meaneth this this comon prouerbe, that y^e eaten the lonbe of Israel, sayenge: The fathers haue eaten foure grapes, and the children are set on edge: As truly as I lyue, saith the LORD God, y^e shall yete this by doothe in Israel.

Beholde, all soules are mine. Like as the father is mine, so is yf forme mine also. The father that synneth, shall dye. As a man be godly, and do the thinge that is equall 2 right, he eateth not upon the hilles: he lieth not his eyes up to the Idols of Israel: he defyleth not his neighbours wife: he medleth wth no mans w^{omans} woman: he greutch no body: he greutch his detter his pledge agayne: he eateth none other mans good by violence: he putteth his mee^t wth the hongrie: he clothe the naked: he lendeth nothinge vpon usury: he eateth nothinge ouer: he walketh in his honde from doinge wronge: he hath faith fully because man 2 man: he walketh in my commandementes, 2 keepeth my lawes, 2 performeth the faith fully.) This is a righteous mā, he shall surely liue, saith the LORD E G O B.

3 If he now get a sonne, that is a murderer, a shedder of bloude: yf he be one of these thinges (though he do not all) he eateth vpon the hilles: he defyleth his neighbours wife: he greutch the poore and needy: he robbeth and spoyleth: he greutch not the detter his pledge agayne: he lieth vpon his eyes vnto Idols, 2 medleth wth abhominable thinges: he lendeth vpon usury, and eateth more ouer.) Shall this man liue? he shall not liue. Beinge he hath done all these abhominacions, he shall dye: his bloude shall be vpon him.

Now yf this man get a sonne also, that lieth all this fathers synnes, which he hath done and feared, neither doeth soch like:) Tame-ly, he eateth not vpon the mountaynes: he lieth not his eyes up to the Idols of Israel: he defyleth not his neighbours wife: he eateth no man: he keepeth no mans pledge: he neither spoyleth, nor robbeth any man: he medleth his meate wth the hongrie: he clothe the naked: he oppiesseth not the poore: he receaueh no usury, ner any thinge ouer: he keepeth my lawes, and walketh in my commandementes: This man shall not dye in his fathers synne, but shall liue without feare. As for his father: because he oppiesseth and spoyleth his brother, and byd wyckedly amonge his people: lo, he is deed in his owne synne. And yet saie ye: Wherefore the shall be not this sonne beare his fathers synne? Therefore: because the sonne hath done equy and righte, hath kepte all my commandementes, and done them: therefore, shall he liue in dobe.

16 The same soule yf synneth, shall dye. The 16 same shall not beare the fathers offence, ne-neither shall the father beare the sonnes offence. The righteousnesse of the righteous shall be vpon himself, and the wickednesse of the wicked shall be vpon him self also. But yf yf vngodly will turne a waye, from all his synnes that he hath done, and kepe all my commandementes, and doeth thinge yf is equall 2 right: doules he shall liue, and not dye. As for all his synnes that he byd before, they shall not be thought vpon: but in his righteousness that he hath done, he shall liue. For haue I any pleasure in the death of a synner, saith the LORD E G O B: but rather that he conuert, and liue?

Agayne: yf the righteous turne a waye from his righteousness, and do iniquyte, a cominge to all the abhominacions, that yf wicked mā doeth: shall he liue? All the righteousnes that he hath done, shall not be thought vpon: but in the same that he hath offended withall, and in the synne that he hath done, he shall dye.

And yet ye saie: Tush, the waye of yf LORD E G O B is not indifferēt. Heare therefore ye house of Israel: Is not my waye right? Ye are not your wayes rather wicked? When a righteous mā turneth a waye from his righteousness, and medleth wth vngodlynesse: he must dye therin: Res for the wickednesse that he hath done, must he dye. Agayne: when the wicked man turneth a waye from his wickednesse, that he hath done, and doeth the thinge which is equall and right: he shall saue his soule al iue. For in so much as he remembereth himself, and turneth him from all the vngodlynes, that he hath vsed, he shall liue, and not dye.

And yet saith the house of Israel: Tush, the waye of the LORD is not equall. Are my wayes vngight, o ye house of Israel? Are not your wayes rather vngodlynesse? As for me, I will iudge every man, accordinge to his wayes. O ye house of Israel, saith the LORD E G O B. Where for, be conuerted, and turne you close from all your wickednesse, so shall there no synne do you harme. Cast a waye frō you all your vngodlynesse, that ye haue done: make you new hertes and a new spere. Wherefore wil ye dye, O ye house of Israel: so yng: I haue no pleasure in yf death of him that dyeth, saith the LORD E G O B. Turne you then, and ye shall liue.

whelpes: One of hir whelpes she brought vp, it became a lyon: it learned to spoyle, and to deuoure folke. The ſeithen herde of him, & toke him in their nettes, & brought him in chaynes vnto the londe of Egipte.

Now when the damme ſawe, that all hir hope & comfort was awaye, ſhe toke another of hir whelpes, and made a lyon of him: which wente amonge the lyons, & became a ſquare lyon: learned to spoyle and to deuoure ſelſe: he deſtroied their palaces, and made their cities waſte: In ſo much that the whole londe and euery thinge therein, were verely deſolate, theyd heare the very voyce of his rearinge.

Then came the ſeithen together on euery ſide out of all countrees agaynſt him, layd their nettes for him, and toke him in their pytes. So they bounde him with chaynes, and brought him to the kinge of Babylon: which put him in priſon, that his voyce ſhoulde not be heerd vpon the mountaynes of Iſrael. The XX. Chapter.

A In the xviij. year the x. daye of the month, it happened, that certaynes ſons of the elders of Iſrael came vnto me for to aſke counſell at the LORDE, and ſaw theiſe things by me. Then came the worde of the LORDE vnto me in this maner: Thou ſon of man: Speake to the elders of Iſrael, and ſaye vnto ehem: Thus ſaith the LORDE God: Are ye come hither to aſke any thinge at me? As truly as I liue, ſaith the LORDE, I will gene you no anſwere. While they ſeeke to reſpoue them: (they ſonne of man) wilt thou not reſpoue them? Shewe them the abhominacions of their forefathers, & tell the: Thus ſaith the LORDE God: In the daye when I diſte Iſrael, and liſt vp myne hande upon the ſede of the houſe of Jacob, I ſhewed my ſelf vnto ehem in the londe of Egipte: See when I liſt vp myne hande vnto ehe, and ſayde: Jam the LORDE your God: ſuen in the daye that I liſt vp myne hande vnto ehem, to bringe ehem out of the londe of Egipte: in to a londe that I had promiſed for ehem, which ſloweth with myſte and in my, and is a pleaſure lode amonge all ehe: Then ſayde I vnto ehem: Caſt awaye your maner the abhominacions that he hath beſe him, and deſyre not your (claus) with the Idols of Egipte, for Jam the LORDE your God.

But they rebelled agaynſt me, and wolde not ſolow me: to caſt awaye euery maner the abhominacions of his eyes, and to ſeize the Idols of Egipte. Then I maden poure my indignacion ouer ehem, and toſtiffic my wrath vpon ehem: yet queninde my deſte of the londe of Egipte. But I wolde not do it, for my names ſake: that it ſhoulde not be ſhalowed beſore the ſeithen, amonge who in they dwel, and amonge wher I ſhewed my ſelf vnto ehem, that I wolde bringe ehem out of the londe of Egipte. Now when I had caried ehem out of the londe of Egipte, and brought ehem into the wilderneſſe: I gaue ehem my commaundement, & ſhewed ehe my lawes: which whiſo keepeth ſhall lyue in ehem. I gaue ehem alſo myſte dayes, to be a token betwixe me and ehem, and therby to knowe, that Jam the LORDE, which haloweth ehem. And yet the houſe of Iſrael rebelled agaynſt me in the wilderneſſe, they wolde not walke in my commaundementes, they haue caſt awaye my lawes: (which whiſo keepeth ſhoulde lyue in ehem,) and my Sabbath daies haue they greatly ſhalowed.

The I made me to poure out my indignacion vpon ehem, & to conſume ehem in the wilderneſſe. See I wolde not do it, for my names ſake: leſt it ſhoulde be diſhonoured before the ſeithen, from the which I had caried ehem awaye. But I ſawie vnto ehem in the wilderneſſe, that I wolde not bringe ehem into the londe, which I gaue ehem: a londe that ſloweth with myſte & honey, is a pleaſure of all londes: & y^e becauſe they reſuſed my lawes, & walked not in my commaundementes, but had ſhalowed my Sabbathes, ſeithen herbe was gone after their Idols. Hence theles myne eyes ſpared ehe, ſo y^e I wolde not verely ſlaue ehe, & conſume ehe in the wilderneſſe. Moreover, I ſayde vnto ehe ſonnes of Iſrael: I wolde not in the ſtatutes of forefathers, kepe not their ordinnances, and defile not your felues with their Idols, for I am the LORD E your God. But walke in my ftatutes, kepe my lawes & do them, halowe my Sabbathes: for they are a token betweene me & you, that ye maye knowe howe I am the LORD E. When with ftandinge, their founte rebelled againft me alfo: they walke not in my ftatutes, they kepe not my lawes to fulfill them: which be thate doch fhall yet in them neuer halowed they my Sabbath daye. The LORD E made me agayne to poure out my indignacion ouer them, and to fauiffie my wrath vpon them in the wilderneffe. The wordes that I wote be me my honde for my name fake, leff it fhulde be unhalowed amonge the heathen, be fore whom I had broughte them forth. I lift up myne honde ouer them alfo in the wilderneffe, that I woulde fauiffe them amonge the heathen, and ftrowe them amonge the nations: becaufe they had not kepte my lawes, but caft afyde my commaundementes, unhalowed my Sabbathes, and lift up their eyes to their fathers Idols.

 Wherefore I gaue them alfo commaunde-mentes not good, I lawes choifore the which they fhulde not lye, & I unhalowed them in their owne giftes: (when I appoynted for my felf all their iust borne) to make them deflake: that they mighte knowe, howe that I am the LORD E.

D The foure (O thou fome of man) tell the houfe of Ifrael, thus faith the LORD E God: Befide all this, youre forefathers haue yet blifphomed me more, and greatly offended agaynst me: for after I had broughte them in to the londe, yf I promysed to geue them, when they faw eury hie hill & all the ebie-terne: they made there their offeringes, and promised me with their oblacions, makinge fweete fagoures there, they poured out their burnt offeringes. Then I aied them, what haue ye doo with all, that ye go thither? And therefore is it called the hie place vnto this daye. Wherefore, fpeake vnto the houfe of Ifrael: Thus faith the LORD E God: Be atezous as vnto as youre forefathers, & com-mize with thome alfo with their abhominations. In all youre Idols, where vnto ye bin ge your oblacions, to whose honoure ye burne youre chidren: ye defyle youre felues, euen as much as theye: howe darre ye be come, and aie any queftion at me: O ye houfeholde of Ifrael! Not truly as I lye: (faith the LORD E God) ye geue no anfwere of me: as fe the thinge that ye go aboute, it fhall not come to paffe, where as ye faye: we wil be as the hee-nen.

then, & do as other people in the londe, woth & fow: wil we worfhippe.

As truly as I lye: (faith the LORD E God) I my felf, wil rule you with a mighty honde, with a ftretched out arme, and with indignacion poured out ouer you: I wil bunge you out of the nations and londes, where in ye are fcattered: and gather you together with a mighty hnde, with a ftretched out arme: & w indignacion poured out vpon you I wil bunge you in to the wilderneffe of the people, & there I wil reafon with you face to face. Like as I punished yo forefathers in the wilderneffe, fo wil I punish you alfo, faith the LORD E God. I wil bunge you vnder my iurifdication, and vnder the bonde of the couenaunt. The fofoakers alfo and the tranfgreffours wil I cafte from amonge you, & bunge: ban out of the londe of youre habi-tacion: as for the londe of Ifrael, they fhall not come in thate: that they maye knowe, howe that I am the LORD E.

So now then (faith the LORD E God) ye houfe of Ifrael, caft awaye, and deftroie eury man his Idols: then fhall ye beare me, and nomore blifpome my holy name with youre offeringes and Idols. But vpon my holy hill, and vpon the hie hill of Ifrael fhall all the houfe of Ifrael and all that is in the londe, worfhippe me: and in the fame place wil I fauoure them, and there wil I require youre heauy offeringes, and the fuffi-cinges of youre oblacions, with all youre holy thinges.

I wil accepte youre fweete fagoures, when I bunge you from the nations, and gather you together out of the londes, wherein ye be fcattered: that I maye be halowed in you before the heathen, and that ye maye knowe, that I am the LORD E, which haue broughte you in to the londe of Ifrael: yet in to the fame londe, that I fauoured geue vnto youre fare fathers. There fhall ye call to remembraunce your owne wayes and all youre ymaginations, wherein ye haue bene defyled: and ye fhall be difpleafed with youre owne felues, for all youre wickednes, that ye haue done.
 And ye fhall knowe, that I am the LORD E: when I entrece you a fter my name, not after yo wicked wayes, nor accordinge to your corrupte wordes: o ye houfe of Ifrael, fa-terch the LORD E.

Thy our the wordes of If LORD E came vnto me, fauenge: Thou fome of man, feerch face towarde the feuth, & fpeake to the feuth wynde, and faye to the woodde towarde the feuth: whate the wordes of the LORD E, thus saith the LORD God: Beholde, I will bynd le a syc in the, y shall consume the grene trees w the drye. No man shall be able to quench his flame, but all that toketh from the south to the north, shall be burnt therein: z all flesh shall fe, that I the LORDE haue bynded it. So that no man maye quench it. Then saye I: O LORDE, they wil saye of me: Tush, they are but fables, that he telleth.

The XXI. Chapter.

21 The word of the LORD came to me, sayenge: Thou some of man, sit thy face towarde Jerusalem, speake against the Sanctuary, z prophesie agaynst the londe of Irael, saye to the lode of Irael: Thus saith the LORD God: Beholde, I wil open the, z wil dyanne my swerde out of y shech, z rote out of y beeth the righteous z the wicked. Seinge then that I will rote out of the beeth the righteous z wicked, ther fore shall my swerde go out of his shech, a-gaynst all flesh from the north to the south: that all flesh maye knowe, howe that I the LORDE haue dyaunen my swerde out of the shech, z it shall not be put in agayne.

Thoure therfore (o thou some of man) y ther lynes cracke withall, yet meure byrre ly forthem: And yf they saye, wherfore meur est thou: Then telle them: for the cyonge es t ear cometh, at the which all heres shall mle, all hendes shall be latten doune, all stomacks shall sayre, and all knees shall waie feble. Beholde, ic cometh z shall be fulfilled, saith the LORD God.

22 Agayne, the word of the LORD came to me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, prophesie, and speake: Thus saith the LORD God: speake, the swerde is sharpened z wel scoured. Sharpned is it for the slaughter, z secured yf it maye be bright. O the destroyen ge itaiff of my some, shall bunge doune all wodde. He hath put his swerde o y dighninge, y good holden maye be take of it. This swerde is sharpened z dighe, yf it maye be geuen in to the honde of the manslayer.

. 10 a

Eric (o thou some of man) and howe, for this swerde shall smyte my people, z all the rulers in Irael, wch with my people shall be layne doune to the grounde there to this swerde. Smyte thou vpon theye, for, wker fore shall be the place z staffe of iudmēe comē: Prophecyr thou some of man, z smyte thinchidres to gett er make the swerde too ged, yet make it the edged, y manslayers swerde, ic swerde of the greate slaughter, which shall smyte them, euen in their pieuy chambere: to make them at a flesch z sayn te at the herce, z in all gares to make some of them fall. O howe bright and sharpe is, howe well dighe z mere for y slaughter: So the to some place aloie, ether vpon the right honde or en the lefte, w hitber so euer the syde turneth, I wil smyte my honde to the also, and sacrific my wch full indignomē Lēuē I the LORDE haue saye.

The word of the LORD came yet to to me agayne, sayenge: Thou some of man, make the cro swertes, that the swerde of y kinge of Babilō maye come. Both the swertes shall go cut of ene londe. He shall set up a place, at the heade of the street shall the chieftaine a corner. Make yf a fress, that the swerde maye come warder Nabab of the Ammonites, and to the stronge citē of Jerusalem. For the kinge of Babilō shall siede in the turninge of the waye, and heade of the two swertes: to arc counsell at the soyth sayers, casting the lōtes wch are to, to arc counsell at the Jdols, and to loke in the Ipur. But the soyth sayers shall poynt to the right syde vpon Jerusalem, that he maye set men of warre, to smyte z with a greatesoyfe, to criē cut Ammon for batell amonia agaynst the gates, to gene vpon ydres, z to make buitwoles.

Therfore, as for y soyth sayers, they shall holde it but for vanire, euen as though a iest woe tolde them: Yet and they thus selua remember their wickednesse, is that by right they must be take and wome. The fore saith the LORD God: Sois much as ye youre selua shewe youre offence, and be ye opened youre wickednesse, so that in al youre woles men maye se youre synnes: So in so much (I saye) that ye youre selua be ue made mencion therof, ye shall be at my violence.

O thou shameful wicked gyde of Ijud, whose daye is come: euen the cymer hat me kednesse shall haue an ende: Thus saith the LORDE God: take a waye the myre, and pō of the crowne, and so is it a waye: the chā kle is equalled, and the proude broughte re. Punyssh, punyssh, yet punyssh them all I, and destroye them: and what shall not fulfilled, until he come, to whom the mem belongeth, and to whom I haue pō ic. And thou (o sonne of man) prophesie, thus ke: Thus saith the LORD God to the chē dien of Ammon, z to their blasphemis, speach then: The swerde, the swerde, is dyaun sich already to the slaughter, z secured ic glisteth (because the chē hast lete the panities, z prophecied lyce) yf it maye upon thy necke, like as vpon the other vngob ly, which be slayne: whiche boye came, when there mischiefes was full.

Though it were put up agayne into the sheath, yet will I purghe the, in the londe where thou wast norished & boine, and pou remy indignacion upon the, and will blowe vpon the in the fyre of my wrath, and deli-uer the into cruell people, which are lerned to deffroye. Thou shalt fede the fyre, and y blonde shall be shed in the londe, that thou mayest be parent of remembrance. Thus I the LORDE haue spoken it.

The XXXI. Chapter.

When I the LORDE ca me vnto me, & sayde: Thou sonne of man, wote thou not reponne this blow vpon the? & howe thei their abho-minacions, & tell them: Thus saith the LOR DE God: Thou cite, of sheddest bloude in y middest of the, & thy eyne maye come also:
and maist the ydoles as desyre the withall.
Thou hast made thy self guiley, in y blonde of thou hast shed: & desyred of i y ydoles, which thou hast made. Thou hast caused thy daies to waite vnto, & made the tyme of thy yeares to come. Thus saith the LORD: Thou shalt be confounded amonge the heithen, & to be despised in all the londes, whether they be nye or farre fro: whether they shall laugh of to scoone, thou y halt goe: thei shall soule a name, & are full off wylde fyre. Beholde, the rulers of Iherusalem haue bought every man his power, so theyd bleu-de in the. In the haue they despised father & mother, in the haue they opprest the stranger, in the haue they vnto the wyddore & the fatherlesse, Thou hast despyed my Sactuary, and vnhalowed my Sabbath. Murders are there in the, that shed bloude, & are vpon the hilles, and in the they vse un-happynesse.

If y haue they disconterd their fathers in the, in the haue they vnto me in the in the. Enter y into the haue deale shamefully: thys negre ure wife, & abhominably ydoles haue bought in lerne. In the hath e-uer man forced his owne sister, euen his sa-ther: daughter. The giftes haue bene recea-ued in the, so theyd bloude. Thou hast taken thy ymercia, thou hast opprest thy neghes by extortion, and forgotten me, saith the LORDE God. Beholde, I haue myte-ned my londe vpon thy conuention, that then hast vnto, and vpon the bloude which hath bene shed in the. In thy heretake to entruce, or maye thy honde defende them there, in the tyme that I shall bringe vpon the: Euen I the LORDE that speake it, will bringe it also to passe.

I will scaere the amonge the heithen, & strove the aboute in the londes, and will case thy fyre by myse to cease out off the: yet and I will haue the in possession in the sight of the heithen, that thou mayest knowe, that I am the LORDE.

And the worde off the LORDE came vnto me, sayyng: Thou sonne of man, the house of Iherusalem is turned to drosse. All they that shulde be kepte, ynto z leade, are in the fyre become drosse. Therfore, thus saith the LORDE God: Thou so much as ye all are turned into drosse, beholde: I will bringe you together into Jerusalem, like as synler, blas-fy, you, tyme and leade are put together in the furnace, and the fyre blowen eber vnto to melle them: Euen so will I gather you, put you in together, and melle you in my wrath and indignacion. I will bringe you together, and kynble the fyre of my cruell dispas-sure vnder you, that ye maye be melted therin.

Like as the synler is melted in the fyre, so shall ye also be melted therein: that ye maye knowe, howe that I the LORDE haue purged my wrath vpon you.

me, sayyng: Thou sonne of man, tell her: Thou art an vnclene londe, which is not rayned vpon in the daye off the cruell wrath by prophets that are in the, are swaine together to deuoure soules, like as a rearinge Lyon, that pynch by his pray. They receaue riches and good, and make many wyddomes in y.
Thy prestes breake my lawe, and desyre my Sanctuary. They put no difference betweene the holy and unholy, neither discerne betwene the cleane and vnclene: they turne their eyes fro my Sabbathes, and I am vn-halowd amonge them.

Thy rulers in the are like vanyshinge woolues, so theyd bloude, and to destroye sou-les, for their owne covetous lucre. As for thy prophets, they dawbe with untempe-red claye, they se vanities: and prophetic lies vnto them, sayyng: the LORDE God sayeth so, where as the LORDE hath not spoken. The people in the londe which we-red extortion and robbery. They were the wore and nedyn: and oppresse the stranger ag-aynst right. And I soughte in the londe for a man, that wolde make vnto the peche, and see him self in the gappe before me in the londe behalf, y I shulde not venterly bespoyne z but I coude fynde none. Therfore wil I pou-re out my wrath vpon you.

Exe. i. 10.

Thou shalt eate of thy sisters cuppe, how depe z farre is it beo the become. Thou shalt be linged to some, and had as greatly in deson, as is possible. Thou shalt be full off wodeanes and forome. Thou shalt be full off sifer Samaria is a cuppe of destruction z washing: the same shalt thou drynte, and sipe it one eate of y dringges, yet thou shalt eate up the broken peeces off it, and so create thee some bestles: For euen I haue spoken it, saith the LORDE God.

Thereon thus saith y LORDE God: For so much as thou hast forgotten me, z cast me asyde, so haue now thine owne sylehinesse z meane. The LORDE sayde moiauer into me: Thou sonne of sma, wilt thou not reprove Oda z Ooliba: Sheweth they their abhominacione namly, y they haue broke their weblocke z slayned their hodes w' bloude: yet euen w' their doles haue they committed aduonny, z offred them their owne children to be deuored: ynd they had boune into me. Yee z they haue they boue into me also: they haue siffed my Sanctuarie in that same daie, z haue inhonored my Sabath, for when they had slayned their children for their doles, they came the same daie in to my Sanctuarie drynt. E. o. this haue they done in my hous. Besyde all this, thou hast sent y messengers for men out of farre countrees: and whē they came, thou hast bathed, trimmed, and set south thy stiff off the best fashion: thou settest up agoodly bed, z a table spied w' the: wher upon thou hast set my incense and myne oyle.

Then was there greete cheare w' her, z themen y were sent hit farre countrees ouer the deserte: unto thes they gaue dialectes vpon their houbes, z set glouious cronnes vpon their heades. Then thoughte I: no doubt, these w' of their harlotry also w' ynder the whor. And they went in to her, as w' in a comon harlot: Euen so wente they also to Oda z Ooliba, thes filthy women.

O ye all that loue vertue and rightuous me, iudge the, punish them: as aduocates and murderers ought to be iudged and punished. For they are breakers off weblocke, and the bloude is in their houbes. Wherefore thus saith the LORDE God: bringe a greete multitude off people vpon them, and make them be fattered and spoiled: thes shal sone them, and goure them w' their swordes. They shal slay their sunnes and daughteres and burie vpon their henses w'ch fyre.

Thou wilt destroye all thes sylehynes out off the londe: that all women may learne, noc to do after youre wickednesse. And so they shal laye youre sylehinesse vpon youre owne selues, and ye shalte punished for the synnes, that ye haue committed w'ch youre doles: z ye shal knowe, that I am the LORDE.

The XXIII. Chapter.

In the 5. year, in the 5. Moneth, the 5. daie off the 11. Moneth, came the word of the LORDE vnto me, sayeinge: O thou sonne off man, wryte vp the name off this daie, yet eue y houre of this present daie: when the kynge of Babilon set himself agaynst Ierusalem. Shewe y obstinate houbolde a parable, z speake vnto the: Thou saie the LORDE God: Seeth a potter sit on z poure water in to it: pas all the peeces together in it, all the good peeces: the layne and the shulder, z fill it w'ch the best bones. Take one off the best shepe, z an heape off bones w'ch shall set it doyle well, z let the bones seeth well therein.

Wich that, sayde the LORDE God on this maner: Wo be vnto the blowy aze of y pot, wher vpon the rustynesse hager, and is not yet scoured awaye. Take oue the peeces that are in it, one a fter another: therec noc no lorde to be cast therfore, for the bloude is in it. Vpon a playne daie stone hath she poured it, and noc vpon the grounde, that it might be couered w'ch dust. And therfore haue I letten her poure hir bloude vpon a playne daie stony rocke, because it shuld not be hid, and that I mighte bange my wrochfull indignacion and vengeance vpon her.

Wherefore, thus saith y LORDE God: O, wo be vnto that blonde hurstie aze, for: whō I will prepare a heape off wode: beate thou y' bones together, kymbel thou the fyre, seeth the flesh: all be well sodd, that the bones maye be sucked out. Moreover, set the potemp eye vpon the coales, that it maye be warme and the metall boe: that the sylehand rustynesse maye be consumed. And it will noc goe off, cheere is so much off it: the rustynesse must be burnt out. Thy sylehinesse is abhominable, for I wolde haue clenst the, but thou woldest not be clenst. Thou canst not be poured from thine wickednesse, till I haue poured my wrochfull indignacion vpon the. Euen Ie the LORDE haue so deuyd: yete it is come therto allredy, that I will do it. I will noc go backe, I will noc spare, I will noc be intreated: but a cord into to thy wayes and ymaginacions, thou shalt be punished, saith the LORDE God.

C And the worde off the LORD came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne off man, beholde, I will take awaye the pleasure off thine eyes w^a a plague: yet shalt thou neither mourne ner wepe, ner water thy chekes therfore: thou mayest mourne by thy selfe alone, but use no vrbail lamentacion. So lide on thy bones, and put on thy shues upon thy face, coe not thy face, and eate no monners bread. So I spake vnto the people by ymes in the mourninge, and at euen my wyfe dyed: then upon the nexte morow, I dyd as I was commaunded. And yf people saye vnto me: wilt thou not tell vs, what that signifieth, which thou doest? I answered them, the worde off the LORD came vnto me, sayenge: Tell the house of Israel, thus saith y^e LORD God: beholde, I will suspende my Sanctuary: and the glory of your power, the pleasure of y^e eyes, and the thinge that yeloue: your sonnes and daughters whom ye haue left, shal fall thowm the swerde.

D Like as I haue done, so shall yee do also: Ye shal not hyde youre faces, ye shal eate no mourners bread: your bonettes shal ye haue upon youre beades, 7 shues upon youre feete. Ye shal neither mourne ner wepe, but in youre firmes ye shal be soion full, and one repete wth another. Thus Ezechiel is youre shepheard. For loke as he hath done, so (when this cometh) ye shall do also: that ye maye lerne to knowe, that I am y^e LORD God. But beholde, O thou sonne of man: In the daye when I take from them their power, their toye and honoure, the lust off their eyes, the burthe of their bodie: namely, their sonnes and daughters: the shall there one escape, and come vnto the, for to shewe the. In that daye shal y^e mouth be opened to him, which is escaped: that thou mayest speake, and be nomee domme: yee and thou shal be their shepheard, that they maye knowe, howe that I am the LORD.

The xxv. Chapter.

E The worde of the LORD came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, see thy face agaynst y^e Ammonites, and saye vnto the Ammonites: heare the worde off the LORD God. Thus saith the LORD God: For so much as thou speakest ouer my Sanctuary: A ha, I trow it be now suspended: and ouer the londe of Israel, I trow it be now desolace: yee ad ouer the house of Iuda, I trow they be now led awaye prisoners: Beholde, I will deliuer y^e to the people of the east, yf they maye haue the in possession: these shal see their cal tels and houses in the. They shall eate thy frute, and drynke vp thy mylke. As for the barh, I wil make of it a stall for camels, and of Ammon a shepe fold: and yeshai knowe, that I am the LORD.

For thus saith the LORD God: For so much as thou hast clapped wth thy hands, and stamped wth thy feete, yee miste in thine herte ouer the londe of Israel w^{ch} despyre: beholde, I wil stretch out my hande ouer the also, and deliuer the: to be spoiled off the Gachon, and rote the out from amonge the people, and cause the be despoiled out off all londes: yee I will make the in la yed wast, that thou mayest knowe, that I am the LORD.

Thus saith y^e LORD God: For so much as Moab and Seir do saye: As for the house off Iuda, it is but like as all other Gitions be: Therfore beholde, I will make the cite off Moab weakelesse, and take awaye y^e strength their cities and the confins of their londe, which are the pleasures off the countree: As namely, Beresimoth, Baalim, and Cariachaim: these will I open wth out off the east, yf they maye fall upon the Ammonites: and will geue it them in possession: so that the Ammonites shal no more be hab in remembrance amonge the Gachon. Thus thus will I punysh Moab also, that they maye knowe, howe that I am the LORD.

Moreover, thus saith the LORD God: Because that Edom hath avenged y^e selfe himselfe vpon the house off Iuda, therfore thus saith the LORD: I will reach mye hande vpon Edom, and take awaye his name and best out off it. From Thama vnto Dedan wil I make it desolace, they shal be slaine wth the swerde. Therfor my people of Israel, wil I avenge me agayne vnto Edom: they shal haile him, accordinge to my wrath and indignacion, so that they shal knowe my vengeance, saith the LORD God.

Thus saith y^e LORD God: For so much as the Philistynes haue done this: namely, taken vengeance wth despisefull shewes, and off an elde euell will set them about to destroye: Therfore thus saith the LORD God: Beholde, I wil stretch out my hande ouer the Philistynes, and destroye the by the yere, and cause all the remnant off the coaste to perish. A greate vengeance wil I take vpon them, and punysh them w^{ch} that they maye knowe, howe that I am the LORD, which haue avenged me off them.

The xxv. Chapter.

T happened, that in the xi. yeare, the first daye off the first Moneth, the worde of the LORD came vnto me, sayenge: Thou some of Ieru. Because that Tyre hath spoken vpon Jerusalem: A ha, now I will open the portes of the people be broken, and I will stand vnto me, for I haue destroyed my city full. See therefore saith y^e LORD God: Beholde O Tyre, I will vpon the, I will bring a greate multitude off people agaynst y^e, like as whē the sic aryseth with his waues: They shall beate the milles off Tyre, and cast downe hir come: I will scrape the grounde from her, and make her a bare stone: yee as the dryng place, where the fishers hang vpon their nettes by the see syde. Then I haue spoken it, saith the LORD God. The Cities shall spyle her: hir bougheers vpon the side shall perish with the swearde, y^e they maye knowe, howe that I am the LORD.

For thus saith the LORD God: Beholde, I will bringe hither Nabuchodonosor (which is the kynge off Babylon) a kynge off kynges from the North, vpon Tyre, with hoies, charrettes, horsemen and with a great multitude of people. Thy bougheers that are in the londe, shall he slaye with y^e swearde: Dnt agaynst y^e, he shall make bullworke to graue vpon thy ches aboute the, z lift vpon his shilde agaynst y^e. His synges z baderams shall he prepare for thy walles, z wth his weapons beate downe thy towres. The dust off his horses shall couer y^e, they shall be so many: y^e walles shall shake at the noyse off y^e horsemen, charrettes z wyeles: when he cometh to thy portes, as men do in to an open cite. With the bowes off his house see, shall he made downe all thy steres.

He shall slaye thy people wth the swearde, z beate downe the pilers off thy strength. They shall make awaye thy riches, z spoyle y^e marchandise. Thy walles shall they beate downe, z destroye thy houses off pleasure. Thy stones, thy symbles z foundations, shall they cast in the water. Thus wil I bringe the melody of thy songes, z the voyce off thy minstrelly to an ende, so that theye shall nomore be here. I wil make a bare stone off the, yea a bynging place for nettes, and shall neuer be byrde agayne: For wil I y^e LORD God haue spoken it, saith the LORD God thus sayeth the LORD God spoken concernyng Tyre: The Isles shall be moued at the noyse off thy fall, z at the crye off the slayne, y^e shall be marchured in the. All kynges off the see shall come downe from their seates: gally they shall laye a maye their robes, and put off their costly clothinge: See with tremblinge shall they be clothed, they shall sit vpon the ground: they shall be a trayed at thy sodane fall, and be abashed at the.

They shall mourne for the, and saye vnto the: O thou noble cite, y^e hast bene so greatly occupied off olde, thou that hast bene the strongest vpon the see wth thine inbalouours off whom all men stode in feare: howe art thou now so vcerely destroyed? I wth at the tyme off thy fall the inhabitours off the Isles, yee and the Iesethens felous shall stonde in feare at thine ende. For thus saith the LORD God: when I made the a desolate cite (as other cities be, that no man dwell in) and when I bringe the downe vpon the, y^e greates waters maye cover the: Then wil I cast the downe vnto them, that defende in to y^e pyrr: vnto a people that hath bene lge beed, and set the in a londe y^e is beneth, like the olde wyldernes, with them which go downe to their graues, so y^e nomalshall dwell more in the. And I wil make the to be no more in bone, in the lode off the lymyng. I wil make an ende off the, ad thou shalt be gone.

Though thou be sought for, yet shalt thou noe be founde for evermore, saith y^e LORD God.

The XXVII. Chapter.

The worde off the LORD came vnto me, sayenge: O thou soune off ma, make a lamentable cople ynce vpon Tyre, z saye vnto Tyre, which is a poite off the see, y^e occupieth with moch people: and many Iles: thou speakest y^e LORD God: O Tyre thou hast sayde: what, I am a noble cite, thy borders are in the myddest off the see, and thy buryers haue made the maruelous goodly. All y^e tables haue they made off Cipre: trees off the mount Senir. Fro Libanus came they take Cedre: trees, to make the mastes: z the Oles off Basan to make the rowers.

Thy boodies haue they made be of yuccy, z off costly wood out off the Ile off Cethim. Thy sale was of whyte small noble woode out off the londe off Egypte, to haige vpon thy mast z thy hanginges off yallow sylde z purple, out off y^e Ile off Elifsa. Theye off Sidde z Arab were thy marmars, z the myst in Tyre were thy shipmasters. The elbest and wysest at Shebal were they, that mended z stopped thy shippes.

All shippes off the see with their shipmes occupied their machauntries in the. The Perfes, Lybians and Lybians were in thynesse hooft, and helped the to fight: theye hangd vpon their shildes z helmettes with the, the see feteth thy beery.

sis wro the chey: off thy occupyng.

C Thus thou art full, and in greates wosthype, cun in the myddel off the see. Thy mar-chauntes were euer bringyng into the oue of many wares. But of easie wynde shal ouerbear the in the myddel off the see: so y' thy wares, thy marchauntes, thy rydes, thy marcheres, thy shipmasters, thy helpers, thy occupiers: that broughte the thynges necessary the men off warre that are in the yee and all thy comons shal perishe in the myddel off the see, in the daye off thy fall. The suburbes shall shake at the londe crye off thy shippmen. All wherry men, and all way-ners vpo the see, shall leape out of the see, and set them shildes upon the side. Thy shal lise vp their voyce because off the, and make a lamentable crye. They shal off dust vpon their heades, and lye downe w' as flou. They shal shane their shildes, & pa-sacke cloch vpon them for thy fall.

They shal moune for the woth heral soou, and heuy lamentacion, yet the heraldion also shall wepe for the: Alas, what ou-er hath so bene destroyed in the see, as Tyre: When thy wares & marchauntes cometh the see, thou gauestt all people yongh. The kynges off the earth hast thou made rich, thorow the mulcitude off thy wares and occupyng: But now art thou cast downe into the depe of the see, all thy restore of people is pershed with the. All they that dwell in the Isles are abashed at the, and all the kynges are a frayeb, yet their faces haue deuinged colour. The marchauntes of the comons rounde at the, in thar chere art so dne broughte to naught, & comestt nouer up.

The xxxviii. Chapter.

D The wodes of the LORDE come into my sayng: Thou sonne of man, at the pryncce of Tyre: Thou saiest the LORDE God: because thou hast a powere, and hast sayde: I am a God. I haue my saure in the myddel off the see: I am a god: w' re as thou art but a man & not God, & y' standest in thine owne conceyte, that thou art God: Beholde, thou chynkest thy self w' set then Daniel, that there is no fearer but from y'. With thy wysdome & thy wyldedinge, thou hast gotte the greates richyse, and gathered treasure off syluer & golde.
With thy greates wysdome and occupyng, hast thou increased thy power, and becom of thy greates riches thy hert is proud.

Therefore thus saith y' LORDE God: Juso much as thou hast lise vp thine hert, as though thou werst God: beholde, I will geuenemies vpon thee, euen the ryuages of the see: thesif shal drawe out their fowdes vpon thy beery and wysdome, and shal desfile thy glory. They shal cast the downe to the pyre, so that thou shalt be in the dust of the see, as they that be slayne. I say yff thou wilt saye then: for the the sonne of y' I am God: where as thou art but a man, and not God, in the hondes of them that lye the. Dye shalt thou, euen as the wrec-ched in the hodes of y' enemies: for I say haues poten it, saith the LORDE God.

The prophet Ezechiel.

The xxix. Chap. Fo. lxxij.

Moreover, the worde off the LORDE came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne off man, make lamentable complayntes ouer the kynge of Tyre, I call him: Thus saith the LORDE God: Thou art a scale of a lickenesse, full off wyrdome & excellent beuty. Thou hast bene in y^e pleasur garde off God: thou art deceyted with all maner of precyous stones: with Rubie, Topas, Chystrall, Jacynth, Ony, Iaspis, Sappir, Smaragde, Carbucle, & golde. Thy beauty & y^e holas y^e be in y^e wete: for thou hast bene made the day of thy creation. Thou art a sayic Cherub, stretched wyde out for to couer.

I haue set the vpon the holy mount off God, there hast thou bene, and walsted amyd the sayic gliffling stones. From the rynde off thy creation thou hast bene ryght excellent, till wiche lickenesse was founde in the.

Because off thy greete marchaundise, thy heris full off wiche lickenesse, & thou hast offended. Therfor will I cast the from the mount off God: & thou coueringe Cherub hand desceythe amyg the gliffling stones. Thy her was proude in y^e sayic beuty, & thoro w thy knyght thou hast destroyed thy wysdome. I will call y^e downe to the grounde, & y^e in y^e sight off rygges. Thou hast defyled thy Sacrame, w^{ch} the greete wiche lickenesse off thy onryghuous occupyng. I will bunge a fyre from the myddel off the, to consume the: & I will make the of ashes, in the sight off all the y^e w^{ch} lye vpon the. All they that haue bene acquainted with the amonge the heithen, shall be abashed at the: singe thou art so cleue broughte naught, and comest no moie vp.

And the worde off the LORDE came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne off man, set thy face agaynst Sydo, prophete vps it, and speake.

Thus saith the LORDE God: Beholde o Sydon, I will vps the, & get me honoure in the: that maye be knowen, how that I am y^e LORDE, when I pynish her, & get me honoure in her. For I will sende pestilence & bloud in dovyng in to hir streetes, so y^e those which be slayn with the sword, shall lye rounde abowt in the myddel off her: & they shall knowe that I am the LORDE. She shall no more be a prynginge thorne, & an hurtynge breere in the house off Israell, nor into the that lye rounde aboute her and haue her: and they shall knowe, that I am the LORDE.

Thus saith the LORDE God: when I gaue the the householde off Israell together agayn, from the nacions togher whom they be scatered: then shall I be sanctified in the, in y^e sight off the Gentiles: & they shall dwell in the lode, y^e I gaue to my seruante Jacob. They shall dwell safely therein, buyde houlas, and plante & yn garden: & ye safely shall they dwell therein, when I haue pynished all those, that despyse them: rembe abowt: and then shall they knowe me, y^e I am the LORDE their God.

The xxx. Chapter.

In the x. yere, vpon the xij. daye off the x. Moneth, the worde off the LORDE came vnto me, sayinge: O thou sonne off man, set now thy face agaynst Pharao the kynge off Egipce, prophete agaynst him and agaynst the whole lode off Egipce: Speake, and tell him, thus saith the LORDE God: beholde, o Pharao thou kynge off Egipce, I will vps the, thou greete wchall fish, y^e lyeft in y^e waters: & thou y^e sayest the water is myne, I haue made it myself, I will put an holte in thy chame, & haue all the fish in thy waters vps thy skales: after y^e I will diuice the our of thy waters, yete & all the fish off y^e waters that change vpon thy skales.

I will cast the out vpon the dry lode with the fish off thy waters, so that thou shalt lye vpon the selde. Thou shalt not be gathered ner taken vp, but shalt be meate for the bestes of the selde, & for the foules off the aye: that all they which dwell in Egipce, maye knowe, that I am the LORDE God: because thou hast bene a staff of redbete the house off Israell. When they toke holde off y^e w^{ch} their hode thou wast off, and prycedest them on euery syde: and yff they cleaned vps the, thou wast off, & I will diuice the ryemes of their backes. Therfor, thus saith the LORDE God: beholde, I will bunge a swerde vpon the, and rote out of the both man and best. & the lode off Egipce shall be desolate and wast, & they shall knowe, that I am the LORDE: & because he sayeth: the water is mine, I myself haue made it. Beholde therfor, I will vpon the, & vpon thy waters: I will make the lode off Egipce wast and desolate, from the towne off Syene vnto the borders of the Moiaus lode: so that in xl. yeres there shall no fere off man walke there, neither fote off cattell go there, neither shall it be inhabited. I will make the lode off Egipce to be desolate amonge vther wast countrees, and her cities to lye vnde xl. yeres, amonge other wyde cities: And I will scatter the Egipcians amonge the heathen and nacions.

Agayne, thus saith the LORDE God: Wch the xl. yeres are expyred, I will gather the Egipcians togher agayne, out off the nacions, amonge vther they were scattered, and will bunge the prysoners off Egipce agayne in to the lode off Pharao: ther o some na-your countre, that they maye be there a lowly small kynge dome: yee they shal be the smal lest amonge of her kynge dome, lest they equal ce them selues above the heathen: for I will somynish them, that they shall nomore rule the heathen. They shall nomore be an hope vnto the house of Israel, neither proud the enemye to wickednesse, to cause them turne backe, and so folowe them: ad they shal knowe, that I am the LORD God.

C In the xxxij. yeare, the first daye of the first Moneth, came I worde off the LORD vnto me, sayenge: Thou some of man, Nabuchodonosor the kynge off Babylon hath made his hooff, with greates traunce and labour to come beset Tyre: that eury head maye be balde, and eury shoulder bare. Yet hath Tyre geuen nether him ner his best enemye towards, for y greates traunce y he hath taken there. Therfore thus saierh y LORD God: beholde I will geue the lode of Egypce vnto Nabuchodonosor the kynge off Babyls, y he maye take awaye all his substauce, to take his robberies, ad spoyle his spoyle, to paye his hooff their magico withall. I will geue him the lode of Egypce for his labour, that he cote for me before Tyre. At the same tyme wil I cause the home off the house of Iuda to greete forth, 7 open thy mouth agayne amonge them: that they maye knowe, he wote that I am the LORD.

The XXX. Chapter.

2 When the worde off the LORD came vnto me sayenge: Thou some of man, prophesy 7 speake: thus saierh the LORD God: I mourn, no weert this daye, for the daye is here, the daye of y LORD is come: the badde daye of y heich the houre is at hande, the swerde cometh vpon Egypce. When the wounded men fall downe in Egypce, when his people are taken awaye, and when his foundacions are destroyed: the Moarians londe shal be astrayed, yee the Moarians londe, Lybia 7 Lybia, all their comon people, 7 Chub, 7 all y be confederate vnto the, shal fall w' the rhouery of swerde.

Thus saierh y LORD: The manyeyners of the lode of Egypce shal fall, the pryde of his power shal come downe: eue vnto the reuer off Syene shall they be slayne demone w' the swerde, saierh y LORD God: amonge other desolate countrees they shal be made by lode, 7 amonge other wast cities they shal be maist. And they shal knowe, y I am y LORD, when y Tyde a syene of egypce, 7 when all his helpe are destroyed.

At that tyme, shal there misfoungers go forth frome in shippe, to make y canyff Moarians astrayed: and forewe shal come upon them in the daye of Egypce, for vnto it shal come. Thus saierh the LORD God: I will make an ende of the people of Egypce thowen the hoide of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon. He and his people with him, yee and the cruel ryaunter of the heich shal be brought to destroye the londe. They shal beare out their swerde vpon Egypce and fill the londe full of slayement. I will drye vpon their floudes of water, ad fill the lode in co the hondes of wicked people. Thus be and all y is therein, wil I destroye them the enemye. Eue I the LORD have sayed.

And thus saierh the LORD God: I will destroye the Tyde, and bringe the ymag of Toph to an ende. There shal come a prince of Egypce, and a fearfulnesse wil I sende in rest the Egypcians londe. As for pharaue, I will make it desolate, ad Pharaue in Zoan Alexandria wil I pursh, 7 I will my wroth full indignaci vpon him, which is the strenght of Egypce. All the sinesse of Alexandria wil I destroye, and Pharaue a syene of Egypce.

Sin shal be in greates heuynesse. Alexandria shal be roted out, and Toph shal be vnto the foire we. The est men off Helepolis: Zabasto shal be slayne with the swerde, ad carried awaye captyue. At Taphno the day shal be darde, when I breake there the enter of the lende of Egypce, and when y enter of his power shal haue an ende. A dard shal couer her, and his daughter shal be a waye into captyue. Thus wil I punish Egypce, that they maye knowe, howe I am the LORD.

It happened in the xi. yeare, vpon the fiftieth daye of y first Moneth, y the LORD worde came vnto me, sayenge: Beholde the some of ma, I will breake y ame of pharaue kynge of Egypce: and lo, it shal not be heale vnto be healed, nether shal any piayff be layed vpon it, for so caste it, so to make a fi stroke, as to helde a swerde. Therfore thus saierh the LORD God: beholde, I will vnto pharaue y kynge of Egypce, 7 breake his piyge ame (ye is it but a broken one) 7 will purge the swerde out of his hoide.

As for the Egypcians, I will reate them amonge the heathen, 7 strenght in the lodes aboue. Agayne I will strenght y ame of the kynge of Babyls, 7 geue him my iustice in his hoide: but I will breake pharaue in me, so y he shal holde it before him pyned, ly, lyfe a wounded man.

For I will stablisy the kynge of Babilon and the arme of Pharaos shal fall downe: that is maye be knowne, that I am the LORDE, which geue the kynge off Babilon my swaure in his hōde, that he maye diaure it off vpon the londe of Egipte: and that when I saure the Egiptians amonge the Gentiles, and browe them in y lōdes abou te they maye knowe, y I am the LORDE.

The XXXI. Chapter.

In the daye when he gooch downe to the grave, y first daye of the thirde Moneth, that the worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, spea ke vnto Pharaos the kynge of Egipte, so to all his people: Whom art thou like in y great nesse? Beholde, Assur was like a Cedre tre vnto the mounte of Libanus, with fayre brau che: so heide, that he gaue shadowe, and shot out very hye. His toppre reached vnto the cloudes. The waters made him greate, and the depe frō him up an hye. Roūde abou te the trees of hum came there fountes of wa ter, he sent our his litle ryuers vnto all the wea of the fēlde. Therfore was he hyer thā all the trees of the fēlde, and thowm y mul titude of waters that he sent frō him, he op erated many and longe braunches. All fou les of the ayre made their nestes in his brau ches, vnder his bowes abred all the bestes of y fēlde, y vnder his shadow dwelt all peo ple. Fayre and beautifull was he in his great nesse, and in the length of his braunches, for his rotes stode besyde greate waters: no Ce dre might hyde him. In the pleasūre gar den of God, there was no fyre tre like his braunches, the plāynes trees were noe litye y bo we of him. All the trees in the garden off God mighte not be copared vnto him in his beuty: so fayre and goodly had I made him weth the multitude of his braunches: In so moch, y all the trees in the pleasūre garde of God haden we ac hi. Therfore, thus saith the LORDE God: So so moch as he hath lift up himselfe so hye, y stredyed his toppre in to the cloudes, y reingc his hert in proude in his beauty: I will deliyer him in to y hondes of y mightiest amonge y heithe, which shall rote him out: Accordyng to his wickednes will I cast him awaye, the enemies shal destroye him, y the mighty men of the heithe shall so saure him, that his braunches shal lye v pon all mountaynes y in all valleyes: his bo wes shall be broden downe to the grounde thowm oue the londe. Then all the people of the londe shal go from his shadowe, and for sake him. When he is falle, all y foules of y ayre shal sit vpon him, and all wilde bestes of the fēlde shal go aboute amonge his brau ches: so that from hence forth, no tre in the water shall ateaueo his bynesse, nor reach his toppre vnto the cloudes, nether shall any tre off the water stonde so hye, as he hath do ne. So vnto deach shall they all be dedye red vnder the carth, and go downe to y gra ue, like other men.

Moreover, thus saith the LORDE God:
In the daye when he gooch downe to the grave, I will cause a lamentacion to be ma de. I will couer the depe vpon him, I will staunch his fountes, and the greate waters shal be restrained. I shall cause Libanus to be sorowfull for his sake, and all the trees off the fēlde shall be mysred. I will make the he then shate at the sounde of his fall, when I cast him downe to hell, weth them y descen de in to the pyre. All the trees of Uden, w all the chosen and bestrees of Libanus, yee and all they that are plantid vpon the wa ters, shal mourne weth him also in the lower habitacons: for they shal go downe to hell w him, vnto the that be slayne weth the swar de, which dwelt a fore vnder the shadowe off his arme amonge the heithe. To whom shal they be likened, that are so glouous y grea te, amonge the trees off Uden? Art art thou cast downe vnder y earth amonge the trees off Uden: where thou must lye amonge the vncircumcised, weth them that be slayne w the swerde. Euen thus is it weth Pharaos all his people, saith the LORDE God.

The XXXII. Chapter.

In the xij. yeare, the first daye of the xij. Moneth, the worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, take up a lamentacion vps Pharaos the kynge of Egipte, y saye vnto him: Thou art reputed as a Lyon of the heithe, y as a whollysh in the see. Thou castest y waters aboue the heithe troutheless the waters weth thy feete, and stampst in their fountes. Thus sa yeth the LORDE God: I will speake my nec o uer y, namely, a greate multitude of people: they shal byue the into my yarne, for I will cast the vps the fēlde, and let the lye vps the fēlde, that all the foules of the ayre maye lye vps the: I will geue all the bestes of the fē de ynough off the. Thy fish will I cast vps the hilles, and fill the valleyes weth thy bynesse. I will water the londe weth the abundance off thy londe enen to the most taynes, y y valleyes shal be full off the.

When thou art put out, I will couer the heauen, and make his starres bymme. I will spede a cloude euer the Sonne, ad the Moon shall not geue hir lighte. All the lightes off heauen will I put out ouer the, and bringe darcknesse vpon the londe, saith y^e LORD God. I will trouble the hertes off many people, when I bringe thy destruction and iudge the heithen and countrees, whom thou knowest not. See I will make many people with their prayes ad a praye theow y^e, that their haye shall forde vp. the I shall make my sworde at their faces. Sodenly shall they be astonnyed, euery man in him self, at y^e daye of thy fall.

Soi thus saith y^e LORD God: the kynge of Babylone sworde shall come: vpon y^e, with y^e swordes of the warres will I smyte eadonne thy people. All they that be mighty in amonge the heiles, shall wast the piewe pompe of Egipte, and bringe downe all hir people. All the carrell also of Egipte will I destruye, that they shall come nether vpo the water: so that nether mias fence nor beastes clawe, shall stee them any more. Then will I make their waters cleare, and cause their floodes to runne like oyle, saith y^e LORD God: when I make the londe of Egipte desolate, and when y^e countree with all that is therein, shall laye waste: and when I smyte all the which dwell in it, that they maye knowe, that I am the LORD. This is the mournyng, that the daughters off the heithen shall make: see a sord and lamentacion shall they raise vp, vpon Egipte and all hir people, saith y^e LORD God.

In the xij. year, the xv. daye of the Month, came the worde off the LORD vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man. Take vp a lamentacion vpon the people of Egipte, and cast them downe, yee ad the mighty people of the earth also, euen with the that dwell therein: and with them that go downe in to the graue. Downe (thow saye) souer thou be) and laye the rotte the vncircumcised. Amonge those that be slayne with the sworde, shall they lye. The sworde is geuen alreadye: shall be diuyned forth and all his people. The mighty mochijs and his helpers, y^e be gone downe and lye with the vncircumcised and with them that be slayne with y^e sworde: shall sperte eo him out of the hell.

Asur is there also with his company, ad their graues rounde aboute, which were slayne ad fell all with the sworde, whose graues lye betwixt him in the lower pyres. His cembs are buried rounde aboute his graue: all those that wounde and slayne with the sworde, which men a fore tyme broughte seate into y^e londe off the luyng.

There is Eiam also with all his people and their graues rounde aboute: they all beinge rounde and slayne with the sworde, are gone downe vncircumcised vnder the earth, which neuerthelesse tyme broughte seate in to the londe off the luyng: for the which they beate the graue, with the other that be gone downe in graue.

Their buryall is geuen them and all their people, amonge them that be slayne. The graues are rounde aboute all them, which vncircumcised, and with them that be slayne theow the sworde: for smyte the names past they made the londe off the luyng a fraye, they must now beate their own shame, with them that go downe in to the pyre, and lye amonge them, that be slayne.

There is also Mesch also and Tubal, with their people, and their graues rounde aboute. These all are amonge the vncircumcised, and them that be slayne with the sworde, because a fore tyme they made the londe off the luyng a fraye.

Shalbe not they then lye also amonge y^e wethers, and vncircumcised Gianses: which y^e their weapons are gone downe hel: whose swordes are layd vnder their heades, whose wickednesse is vpon their noses: because that as wethers, they haue brought seate in to y^e londe of y^e luyng: so amonge the vncircumcised shall they be destroyed, and slepe with them, that perished thow the sworde.

There is the lode off E dom with his kynges and prynces also, which were their synne layd by them that were slayne with the sworde, yee amonge the vncircumcised, and them which are gone downe in to the pyre. Moreover, there be all the prynces of the north, with all the Sidonians, which are gone downe in to the luyng.

With their feare and strengthe I came to confucion, and lye there vncircumcised, amonge those that be slayne with the sworde: and beate their owne shame, with them that be gone downe in to the pyre. How when Pharaos seeth this, he shall be confuted ouer all his people, that is slayne with the sworde: both Pharaos and all his people, which y^e LORD God. For I haue gent in to the londe off the luyng. And Pharaos all his people shall lye amonge the vncircumcised, and amonge them that be slayne with the sworde, saith y^e LORD God.

The XXXIij. Chapter.

Againe, the worde off the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou some off man, speake to the children of thy people, and tell them: When I sende a swearde vpon a londe, yf the people off the londe take a man off their countre, and set him to be their watchman: yf same man (wha he seyth) the swearde come vpon the londe: shall blowe the trompet, and warne the people.

If a man now heare the noyse off the trompet: will not be warned, and the swearde come ab take him awaye: his bloude shall be vpon his owne heade: for he herde the soude of the trompet, and wolde not take hede, therefore his bloude be vpon him. But yff he will receaue warnynge, he shal saue his life. Againe, yf the watch man se the swearde come, and shewe it not with the trompet, so yf the people is not warned: yff the swearde come then, and take eny man from amonge the: the same shall be taken awaye in his owne synne, but his bloude will I requyre off the watchmans honde.

And now (O thou sonne of man) I haue made the a watchman vnto the house of Israel: that where as thou hearest eny thinge out of my mouth, thou mayest warne them enny behalfe. If I saye vnto the wicked: thou wicked, thou shalt surely dye: and thou gessit him not warnynge, that he maye beware off his vngodly waye: then shall the wicked dye in his owne synne, but his bloude will I requyre off thy honde. Therefore if thou warne the wicked off his waye, to tume from it, where as he yet wil not be turned from it: then shal he dye because off his synne, but thou hast deliuered thy soule.

Therefore (O thou some off man) speake vnto the house off Israel. Ye saye thus: Our offences and synnes lye vpon vs, and we be corrupte in them: how shulde we then be rescued vnto life? Tell them: As truly as I lye (saith the LORDE God) I haue no pleasure in the death off the wicked, but moche rather that the wicked turne from his waye and lye. Turne you, turne you from yo^r vngodly wayes, o ye off the house off Israel. Oh wherefore will ye dye?

Thou some off man, tell the children off thy people: The righteousness of the righteous shall not saue him, when so euer he turne awaye vnto faithfull: Againe, the wickednesse off the wicked shal not hurte him, when so euer he conuerteth from his vngodlynesse.

And yf righteousness off the righteous shal not saue his life, when so euer he syn-nethe. If I saye vnto the righteous, that he shall surely lye, and so he trust to his owne righteousness, and do synne: then shall his righteousness be no more thought vpon, but in the wickednesse that he hath done, he shall dye.

Againe, yff I saye to the wicked: thou shalt surely dye: and so he turne fro his synne, and do the thinge that is lawfull and right: In so much that the same wicked ma geueth the pledge againe, restouch that he had taken awaye by robbery, walfeth in the commandmentes off life, and doeth no wronge:

Then shall he surely lye, and not dye. Yet the synnes that he had done, shal neuere be thought vpon: for in so much as he doeth now the thinge that is lawfull and right, he shall lye. And yet the children off thy people saye: Tush, the waye of the LORDE is not right, where as their owne waye is rather wright.

When the righteous, turneth from his righteousness, and doeth the thinge that is wicked, he shall dye therfore. But yf the wicked turne from his wickednesse, doinge the thinge that is lawfull and right, he shall lye therfore. Yet ye saye: he maye of y^e LORDE is not equal. O ye house off Israel, I will iudge euery one of you a fier his wayes.

In the xij. yeare, the v. daye of the moneth of oure captiuyte, it happened, that one which was fled out of Ierusalem, came vnto me, and sayde: yf cite is destroyed. How the honde of the LORDE had bene vpon me the euynynge, afore this man (which was escaped) came vnto me, and had opened my mouth, vntyll the morninge that he came to me: yet he opened my mouth, so yf I was no more denie. Then came the worde of y^e LORDE vnto me, and sayde: Thou some off man, therfore that dwell in the waisted londe off Israel, saye: As abraham was but one man, ad he had the londe in possession: now are we many, and the londe is geuen vnto possesse also. And therfore tell them: Thus saith the LORDE: In the bloude haue ye eaten, your eyes haue y^e lift vnto Idols, and haue shed bloude: shal ye then haue the londe in possession?

Ye cleame vpon youre sweardes, ye worke abhominacions, euery one desyleth his neyghbours wife: and shal ye then possesse the londe? Saie ye thus wordes vnto the: Thus saith the LORDE God: As truly as I lye, and ye that dwell in this wilderness, shall be slayne wth the sweardes: what so is vpon the felde, will I geue vnto the bestes to be deuoured: those that be in stronge holdes and donnes, shall bye off the peisullee. For I will make the lorde desolate and wastif, and y^e p^e off his strenght shall come to an ende. The mountaynes in Israel shal be so wastif, that no man shal trauaile thery.

Eze. 33 c
3 Then shall they lerne to knowe, that I am the LORDE, when I make the lorde wastif and desolate, because off all their abhominacions, that they haue wrought. And thou some off man, the children off thy people of talke of the, by the wallis ad in the doores of their houses, sayenge one to another: come, let vs heare, what woode is gone forth from the LORDE. This is come vnto the, a fier of maner of a greates people: yet my people sty downe before the, and heare thy wordes, but they do use the rather: For in their mouthes they shewethem selues, as though they were firm, but their hertes goeth a fier their owne conuiciousure. And as a baler y^e hath a sircer come, ad is pleasur to synge, so shalt thou be vnto them: thy wordes shal they heare, but they will n^edo thereafter. Why this cometh to passe (for so, it cometh in deuce) thou shal they knowe, that there hath bene a prophet amonge them.

The XXXIII. Chapter.

2 Unto the woode off the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne off man, prophete agaynst the shepherdes off Israel, prophete, and speake vnto them: Thus saith the LORDE God: Wo be vnto the shepherdes off Israel, that feede them selues. Shulde not the shepherdes fede y^e flockes?

Eze. 34 a
10. 14. b
15. a.

3 Ye haue eaten vp the fette, ye haue clothed you with the woll: the best fedde haue ye slayne, but y^e flocke haue ye not nourished: The weakke haue ye not holden vp, the sicke haue ye not healed: the biiden haue ye not bounde together, the outcastes haue ye not brought agayne: y^e lost haue ye not sought, but curiously and cruelly haue ye ruled the. Thus are they scard here and there without a shepherde: yet all the besties off the felde beuere them, and they go astray.

10. 4. b

My shepe goe wandringe upon all mooneynes and upon eery hye hill, yet they be scard abode in all feldes, and there is no man, that careth for them, or seeketh a fier the.

4 Therefore o ye shepherdes, heare the woode off the LORDE. Thus saith the LORDE God: As truly as I lyue, for so much as my

shepe are robbed, and deuoured off all the wyde bestes off the felde, hauyng no shepherde: and senger hat my shepherdes: they n^e regard off my shepe, but feede them selues only, and not my shepe: Therefore haue I reuocd off the LORDE, o ye shepherdes: Thus saith the LORDE God: Beholde, I myself will upon the shepherdes, and requyre my shepe from their handes, and make the lorde waste from feeding of my shepe: yet the shepherdes shall fede them selues nemo: for I will deliuer my shepe out off their mouthes, so that they shall not deuoure them the.

For thus saith the LORDE God: Beholde, I will lode to my shepe myself, and fet them. Like as a shepherde amonge the flocke seeketh a fier the shepe that are carred abode, euen so will I sette a fier my shepe, and gather them together out off all places, where they haue bene scard in the cloudy and darcke daye. I will bringe them out from all people, and gather them together out of all londes, I will bringe the in to their owne lode, and fede them upon the mountaynes off Israel, by the ryuers, and in all the places of the countrey. I will fede them in right good pastures, and upon the hie mountaynes off Israel shall there folde be. There shal they be in a good folde, ad in a fat pasture: shall they fede: euen upon the mountaynes off Israel.

I will fede my shepe myself, and bringe them to their rest, saith the LORDE God. Soch as be lost, will I sette: soch as go astray, and I bringe agayne: soch as be weakke, will I bynde wth qth as be weakke, will I make stronge: soch as be fat and well shap, the se will I preferre, and fede them wth y^e thinge that is lausfull. And as for you, o my shepe, saith the LORDE God: I will put a difference amonge the shepe, amonge the withers ad the goaces. Was is not ynough for you, to eat up the good pasture, but ye must treade downe the residue of yours pasture wth youre feete also? Was is not ynough for you to drynke cleare water, but ye must trouble the residue also with your feete?

Thus my shepe must be sayne to eat y^e thinge, that ye haue troden downe wth y^e feete, and to drynke it, that ye wth your feete haue defyled.

Therefore, thus saith the LORDE God vnto them: Beholde, I will sear the fat shepe from the leane: for so much as ye haue slayn the weakke shepe a p^e y^e good shepolders, and runne upon them wth your hens, so long as ye haue utterly scatered them abroad. I wil helpe my shepe, so yf they shal nomore be spoyled: yet I wil susterne of in shepe from another. I wil raise vp into them one only shepherde: each my scrumme Dawd, he shal feede the, and he shal be their shepherde. I the LORDE wil be their God, and my sheuauure Dawd shal be their prince: Euen I the LORDE haue spoken it.

Moreover, I wil make a couenaint of peace with them, and bryue all euell beastes out of the londe: so that they maye dwell safely in the widonnesse, and slepe in the weddes.
Good fortune & prosperite wil I geue them, and vnto all that be rounde aboute my hill.
A prosperous shower and rayne wil I sende down in due season, that the trees in the woode be mayeburme forth their frutes, & yf groun be hit increase. They shal be safe in their lon-de, and shal knowe, that I am the LORDE, which haue breke their yoke, and deliuered them out of the hondes of those, that helde them in subiectiō.

They shal nomore be spoyled of the hethen, ne deuoured with the beastes of the lōde: safely shal they dwell, & no man shall fear them: I wil set vp an excellent place for them, so yf they shal suffre no more hunger in the londe, neither beate the repose of yf hethen any more. Thus shal they vnderstande, that I the LORDE their God am wth them, & yf they tūen the house of Israel, are my people, saith the LORDE God. Ye men are my shepe, ye are the shepe of my pasture: and I am your God, saith the LORDE God.

The XXXV. Chapter.

Mourner, the woide of the LORDE
came vnto me, sa yenge: Thou sonne of man, turne thy face towarde the mount Seir, prophcey vpon it, & saye vnto it: Thus saith the LORDE God: Beholde, o thou mount Seir: I will vpon thee, I will teache thee myne hōde ouer thee, yet wast I de-slate wil I make thee. Thy cities wil I brynde downe, & thou shalt be voyde: that thou mayest knowe, how that I am the LORDE.
If sombody as thou bearest an olde enemye against the children of Israel, & with a cruel hōde hast made them afraid, what tyme as they were troubled & pynnyshed for their synne: Therefore, as truly as I lyue, saith yf LORDE God: I wil prepare the vnto bloude, ye bloude shal folowen vpon the: saing: thou layest waite for bloude, therfore shall bloude passe the. Thus wil I make the mount Seir desolate & wast, and brynge to passe, that there shall no man go thither, ne come from thence. His mountaynes wil I fill wth his slayne men: thy hills, dales and valleyes shall ye full of them, that are slayne with yf inward. I wil make the a perpetuall wudernesse, for hat noman shal dwell in thy cities: yf ye maye knowe, how yf I am the LORDE.

And because thou hast sayde: what, both these nations and both these londes must be myne, & I wil haue them in possession, where as the LORDE was there. Therefore, thus saith the LORDE God: As truly as I lyue, I will brynge the according to thy wyach and gelousy, like as thou hast dealt cruelly with them: that I maye be knowen amonge them, how I haue pynnyshed the. Yet and that thou also mayest be sure, that I the LORDE haue had be all thy despyrefull wordes, which thou hast spokē agaynst the mountaynes of Israel, sa yenge: Lo, they are made wast, and geuen vnto deserte.

Thus with your monthes ye haue made your boof agaynst me, yet I multiplied your reproche wordes agaynst me, which I haue herde altogether. Where vnto, thus saith yf LORDE God: when the whole woode is in woacht, then wil I make the wast. And like as thou wilt (mount Seir) wast glad, because the heritage of the house of Israel was destroyed: euen so wil I do vnto the also, that thou and whole Edom shall be destroyed, & knowe, that I am the LORDE.

The XXXVI. Chapter.

In some of man, prophcey vpon the mountaynes of Israel, & spake: I heare the woide of the LORDE, o ye mountaynes of Israel: Thus saith the LOR-DE God: Because yo^r enemye hath sayde vpon you: A ha, yf hee euellastynge placee are now become ours: prophcey therfore, & speake: thus saith yf LORDE God: Sainge ye be wastid & trode downe on euery syde, & become a possession vnto yo^r residue of yf Gethes, which haue brought you in to this mouthes: & vnto an end name amonge yf people: Therfore, heare the woide of the LORDE God, o ye mountaynes of Israel: Thus saith the LOR-DE God vnto the mountaynes and hills, valleys & dales, to the voyde wilderness & desolate cities, which are spoyled, and had in derision on euery syde, amonge the residue of the Gethes: Hee euell thus saith the LORDE God: In the eye of my gelousy haue I eaten a de-uice, agaynst the residue of the Gethes, and agaynst all Edom: which haue eate my lōde vnto the selues for a possession: which also reioysid in the whole heritage of a despyrefull stomacke, to wast it, and to spoyle it.

25 Prophecy therfore upon the londe of Israel, speake vnto y^e mountaynes and hilles, to valleys and dales, thus saith the LORDE God: Beholde, this haue I deuised in my gelesy and terrible wrath: for so much as ye haue suffered repoufe of the heiden, therfore thus saith the LORDE God: I haue sworne, that the Gentiles which lye aboute you, shal beare youre confusion them selues. And as for you (o mountaynes of Israel) ye shall shute out youre braunches, and bringe forth youre frute to my people of Israel, for it is harde by, that it wil come.

Beholde, I come vnto you, and vnto you will I turne me, that ye maye be ryllid and sowed. I wil sende you much people, which shalbe all of the house of Israel: the cities shalbe inhabited, and y^e decayed places shal be repayed againe. I will multiplye you much much people and cattell, which shal increase & bringe frute. I wil restore y^e olde estate, and shewe you more kindness the more ye had before: wherby ye shall knowe. I am the LORDE. Yee people will I sende vnto you (o my folke of Israel) which shal haue the in possession, and thou shalt be their inheritaunce, so that thou shalt nomore be with out them. As gayne, thus saith the LORDE God: for so much as they saie vnto you: thou art an eater vp of men, and a waister of thy people: therfore thou shalt eate no more men, neither destroye thy people any more, saith the LORDE God. And I wil not suffre the, for to heare thine owne confusion amonge the Gentiles from henceforth. Thou shalt not beare the reprofe of the nations, ner cast out thine owne people any more, saith the LORDE God.

Moreover, the worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayinge: O thou sonne of ma, when the house of Israel dwelt upon their owne grounde, they defyled them selues with their owne wayes & imaginations: so that in my sight their waye was like the vncleanness of a menstruous woman. Wherfore I poured my rochfull displeasure vpon them, because of the bloude that they had shed in the londe, & because of their Idols, wherwith they had defyled them selues. I scattered them also amonge the heiden, so that they were strewed aboute in the londes. A couding to their wayes & after their owne inventions, so dyd I punish them.

Now when they were gone vnto the heiden, and come in amonge them, they dishonoured my holy name: so that it was sayde of them: Are these the people of God, & wast go out of their owne londe: then shall my holy name, which y^e house of Israel dishonoured amonge the Gentiles, when they came. Therfore will y^e house of Israel thus saith the LORDE God: I do not thinke for yo^r sake (O house of Israel) that my holy names sake, which y^e dishonoured amonge the heiden, when ye came to them. Therfore, I wil halowe my greate name againe, which amonge the Gentiles is euill spoken: for ye youre selues haue dishonoured & made them. And the Gentiles shal knowe, that I am the LORDE, when I am honoured in you before their eyes, saith y^e LORDE God.

As for you, I wil take you from amonge the heiden, and gather you together out of all countrees, and bringe you agayne vnto youre owne londe. Then will I pour out water vpon you, & ye shall be cleane: yea, I will all yeure vncleynesse and from all ye Idols, that I cleanse you. A new herte also will I geue you, and a new spirite will I put in you. As for that story her, I wil take it awaye from youre body, and geue you a fleshy herte. I will geue you my spere amonge you, to cause you to walke in my commaundement, & kepe my lawes, and to fulfill them.

And so ye shall dwell in the londe, that y^e gave to yo^r forefathers, & ye shall be my people, and I will be youre God. I wil helpe you out of all youre vncleynesse, I wil call you to come, and wil increase it, and wil see you be uenoughonger. I will multiplye the frute of the trees and y^e increase of the selde of you, so that ye shal beare nomore reprofe of yo^rger amonge the heith. Then shal ye remaue yo^r owne wicked wayes, and youre imaginations, which were not good: so that y^e shall take displeasure at youre owne selues, by reason of youre synnes and abominacions.

But I wil not do this for youre sake, saith the LORDE God: be ye sure of it. Therfore, y^e house of Israel, be ashamed of youre synnes. Moreover, thus saith the LORDE God: what crime as I shal cleanse you from all youre offences, then will I make the cities to be occupied agayne, and wil repaire the places that be decayed. The desolate londe shal be buylded agayne, which afore tyme laye waste, in the sight of all them, that were there. Then shal it be sayde: This wast londe is come like a garden of pleasure, and the wyde, desolate and broke downe cities, are now stronge, and sensid agayne. Then the ryght of the heiden that lye rounde aboute you, shal knowe, that I am the LORDE, which paye that was broken downe, and plant again, that was made waste. When I the LORDE haue spoken it, I will do it in due.

Thus saith the LORDE God: I will yet once be founde againe of y^e house of Israel, I will see you againe in your owne lande, and ye shall knowe, that I am the LORDE, which haue sayde it, and fulfilled it in due.

The xxxvij. Chapter.

In the hande of the LORDE came open me, I caried me out in the spere of the LORDE, I let me downe in a plaine side, that laye full of bones, I let me reuise be aboute by them: I behelde, the bones that laye upon the side, were very many, I maruailed bye also. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of man: thinkest thou these be-nones maye lyue againe? I answered: O LOR-DE God, thou knowest. And he sayde vnto me: Proue thy thou upon these bones, I speake vnto them: O drye bones, heare the worde of the LORDE. Thus saith the LORDE God vnto these bones: Beholde, I will put breth into you, they maye lyue: I will geue you synners, I will make flesch growe upon you, I will cover you ouer with skynne: I will geue you breth, that ye maye lyue, and knowe, that I am the LORDE.

So I prophesied, as he had commaunded me. And as I was prophesyinge, there came a noise, and a great motion, so that the be-nones came euery one to another. I sawe as he I had seld, beholde, they had synners, and flesch grewe upon them: and aboute they were covered with skynne, but there was no breth in them. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, prophesie thou towards the wynde: prophesie, and speake to the wynde: Thus saith the LORDE God: Come (o thou wynde) from the four wyndes, I blowe vpon these drye, I shall that they maye be restored to lyfe. So I prophesied, as he had commaunded me: Then came the breth vnto them, and they receaued lyfe, and stode vp upon their feet, as a maruolous greace sore.

Wherupon, he sayde vnto me: I thou some of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel. Beholde, they saye: our bones are dried vp, our hope is gone, we are cleue cut of. Therefore prophesie thou, I speake vnto them. Thus saith the LORDE God: Beholde, I will open youre graues (o my people: I will take you out of youre sepulchres, and bringe you into the lande of Israel againe. So shall ye knowe, that I am the LORDE, when I open your graues, and bringe you out of them. My spere also will I put in you, I ye shall lyue: I will see you againe in your owne lande, and ye shall knowe, that I am the LORDE, which

haue sayde it, and fulfilled it in due.

The wynde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, take a stick and wyte vpon it: vnto Iuda I geue the children of Israel his companyens. Then take another stick, and wyte vpon it: vnto Ioseph the sonne of Ephraim, and vnto all the householde of Israel his companyens. And thou take both these together in thine bon-de, so shall there be one stycke thereof. I will geue the child of thy people saye vnto the: wilt thou not shewe vs, what thou meapest by these? Then geue them this answer: Thus saith the LORDE God: Beholde, I will take the stick of Ioseph, which is in the bonde of Ephraim: and of the trybes of Israel his seloues, and will put them to the stick of Iuda, I will make them one stick, and they shall be one in my bonde. And the two sticks wher I have written vpon, shall be one in thine bonde, that they maye lyue, and shall saye vnto them:

Thus saith the LORDE God: beholde, I will take awaye the children of Israel from amonge the heathen, vnto whom they be gone, and will gather them together oute every place, and bringe them againe in to their owne lande: yet I will make one people of the in y^e lande, vpon the mountaine of Israel, and they shall haue but one kinge. They shall not be two peoples from henceforth, nether be denyed in eowse kingdomes: they shall also desyle the selues neuer with their abominacions, Idols and all their wicked-doings. I will helpe the one of all their dwelllinge places, wher in they haue sinned: I will so cleanse them, that they shall be my people, and I their God.

Dauid my seruante shall be their kinge, I they all shall haue one shepheard only. They shall walke in my lawes, and my commaundementes shall they both kepe I fulfill. They shall dwell in the lande, that I geue vnto Jacob my seruant, where as your fathers also haue dwelt. Yet will in the same lande shall they, their children, I their childrens children dwell for euermore: and my seruant Dauid shall be their euersyluenge pryncer. Moreover,
I will make a bonde of peace with them, which shall be vnto them an euersyluenge covenant. I will scatter the also, and multiplye them, my seruant I will I see amonge the for euermore.

Ezech.

Ezech. 37.

The prophet Ezechiel.

My dwellings shall be wth them, yet I will be their God, & they shall be my people. Thus the seventh also shall knowe, that I the LORD am y^e holy maker of Israel: wher my Sanctuary shall be amongst them for ever more.

The XXXVIII. Chapter.

AT the wordes of the LORD came unto me, saying: Thou some of man, curne thy face towardes God in the land of Magog, which is the chiefe prynces at Mesched and Tubal: prophesy agaynst him, and saye: Thus saith the LORD God: O God thou chiefe prynces of Mesched and Tubal: behold, I will upon thee, and will turne thee aboute, and put a byrre in thy charytes: I will brynge the south and all thine hoost, both horse & bowmen, which be all weapened of the best fashion: a greates people, that handle aliogether speares, shyldes, and swordes: the Perses, Moryans and with them the Lybians, which all beare shyldes and helmetaes: Gomer, and all his hoostes: the house of Thogomaus out of the north quarters, and all his hoostes, yete and moche people with the.

Therefore prepare thee, set thy self in aray with all thy people, that are come unto the byrre, and be thou their defence. A few many dayes thou shalt be visited, and in the latter yeres thou shalt come in to the lode, that hath bene destroyed with the swordes, & now is replenished agayne wth diverse people vpon the mountaynes of Israel, which haue lyegeyn wast. Yet they be brought out of the nacion, & dwell all safe. Thou shalt come vp like a stormy wyther, to cover the lode, and as it were a darcke cloude: thou with all thine hoostes, and a greates multitude of people with the.

Moreover, thus saith the LORD God: At the same tyme shall many thinges come in to thy mynde, so that thou shalt ymagyn myschance, and saye: I will vp to yonder place, seinge they s^{yt} at ease, and dwell so safely: for they dwell all without any walles, they haue neither barres nor doores) to spoyle them, to robbe the, to laye honte vpon their so wil inhabited wildernesses: a gaynst that people, y^e is gathered together from amonge the Geths, which haue gotten cattell and good, and dwell in the myddel of sthe londe. Then shall Gaba and Deban and the marchantes of Tarbis wth all their Douthies, saye unto the: Art thou come to robbe? Hast thou gathered thy people together, because thou wilt spoyle: to take silver and golde: to carry away cattell and good: and to haue a greates pray?

The xxxix. Chap.

Therefore, o thou some of man, prophesy agaynst the LORD God: In that daye thou shalt knowe, that my people of Israel dwell in safety: and shalt come from thy place, out of the north partes: thou and moche people wth the, which ryde vpon horses, a number of thee: a greates multitude: and an innumerable host. Yet thou shalt come vpon my people of Israel, as a cloude to cover the lode. Thus shall come to passe in the latter dayes: I will linge the vp in to my londe, that the heathen maye knowe me, when I geue me honour vpon thee (O God) before their eyes.

Thus saith the LORD God: Thou he, of whom I haue spoken a fewer tyme, in my seruantes y^e prophesies of Israel: thus prophesied in those dayes 2 yeres, that I shall brynge the vpon them. At the same tyme, when God commeth vp in to the land of Israel (saith the LORD God) shall indignacion go forth in my wrath. In my gealousy and bece displeasur I haue bene, that there shall be a greates trouble in the land of Israel at that tyme. The very synners in the felde, the foules of the ayre, the bestes of the felde, and all the men of y^e earth shall tremble for feare of me.

The hilles also shall be turned vpon the one, the steyres of stone shall fall, and all walles shall syncke to the grynnde. Thus will I a swerde vpon them in all my mountaynes, saith the LORD God: so that every walle of swerde shall be vpon another. With pestilence and bloude will I purgish him: stormy wyther and hale stones, fyre and byrre shall I cause to rayne vpon him and all his host, yete and vpon all that greates people that are with him. Thus will I be manifested, how red, and enoyme amonge the heathen: that they maye be sure, how y^e I am y^e LORD.

The XXXIX. Chapter.

Therfore o thou some of man, prophesy agaynst God, and speake: Thus saith the LORD God: Behold, I will vpon thee, and turne thee aboute: and brynge the vp to the mountaynes of Israel. As for thy bowe, I will synner it of thy left honde, and cast thine arrowes out of thy right honde. Thou with all the heathen, and all the people that is with the, shall fall vpon the mountaynes of Israel. Thus will I geue the unto y^e fowles and wilde bestes of the felde, to be deuoured: thou shalt thou lye vpon the felde: fowles shall have spoken it, saith the LORD God.

1 In a Waggon, and amongst those that sit in chariots in the field: and I finde a fire, and they shall knowe, & I am the LORD. I will make also the name of my holynesse to be knowne among my people of Israel: and I will not let my holy name be euil spoken of any more: but the very heathen also shall know it, that I am the LORD, the holy one of Israel. Behold, it cometh, and shall be fulfilled in the daye, wherof I haue spoken: They that dwell in y^e cities of Israel, shall go forth, and lie fire upon the weapons, and burne them bydes and spears, bowes and arrows, bylles and clubbes: seven yeares shall they be burninge thereof, so that they shall be burnt no more from y^e feilde, neither ha-uende to be burnt any out of the wodde: for their shall haue weapons, y^ere to burne them. They shall robbe those that robbed them, and spoyle those that spoiled them, saith y^e LORD God.

2 As for some y^e will I geue vnto Gog, a place to be buried in, in Israel: and the valley, wher theyo men go from the east to the sea warre: those that are exauple therby, shall burne it. There shall Gog and all his people be buried: and it shall be called the valley of the people of Gog. Seven monethes long shall the house of Israel be burninge of them, that they maye cleanse the lode: see all the people of the londe shall burie them, O respelde a glorious daye, when I geue the honour, saith the LORD God. They shall be dead men also to be dead buriers, eue giuinge thow the lode, and appoynte them certaine places to burye those in, which re-maine vpon the felde, that the londe maye be cleanse. From ende to ende shall they sit, and that vj monethes longe. Tow those that go thow the londe, wher they see a mans bone, they shall set vp a token by it, till the burieria haue buried it also, in the valley of the people of Gog. And the name of the cite shall be called Hamons: Thus shall they make the londe cleane.

And thou some of man thus saith the LORD God: Speake vnto all the foules and every hyde, see and to all the wilde beas-tes of the feild: heape you together and comme together, you rounde aboute vps my slaughter, that I haue slayne for you: euen a greate slaughter vpon the mountaynes of Israel: 144 eate flesh, and drynke bloude. Ye shall eate y^e flesh of the mortuies, and drynke the bloude of the prynces of the londe: of the wetters, of the lames, of the goates, and of the open that be all slayne at Basan. Eate y^e fat you, re belly full, and drynke bloude, till ye be bone-ten of the slaughter, which I haue slayne vnto you. Y^el you at my table, with bowes & stronge beames: with captaynes and all mate of warre, saith the LORD God.

I will bringe my glory also amonge the Gentiles, that all the heathen maye see my iudgment, that I haue kept, and my holynesse, which I haue layed vpon them: that y^e house of Israel maye knowe, howe that I am y^e LORD their God, from that daye forth: And the heathen shall knowe, that where as the house of Israel were led into captiuitie: it was for their iniquities sake, because they offended me.

Soe the which cause I hyd my face from them, and deliuered them into the handes of their enemies, that they might all be slayne with the sword. Accordinge to their wickednesse I was faithfull dealinges, so haue I entreated them, and hyd my face from them.
Therefore thus saith y^e LORD God: Tow will I bringe agayne the captaynes of Jaccob, and haue mercy vpon the whole house of Israel, and be glous for my holy names sake. All their confusion and offence, that they haue done agaynst me, shall be taken awaye: and so safely shall they dwell in their londe, that no man shall make them a praye.
And when I haue broughte the agayne from amonge the people, when I haue gathered them together out of their enemies londes, and am prynced in them before many heathen: then shall they knowe, that I am the LORD their God, which suffred them to be led into captiuitie amonge the heathen, but now haue broughte them agayne in to their owne londe, and not left one of them yonder.

After that, will I hyde my face never from them, but will poure out my spycie vpon the house of Israel, saith the LORD God.

The xl. Chapter.

In the xxxiij. yeare of oure captiuitie, x x
In the begynnyng of the yeare, the xxij. daye of the month: that is the viij. yeare, after that y^e cite was smyten downe the same daye came the bonde of the LORD vpon me, and carid me forth: and in to the londe of Israel broughte he me in the visions of God: and set me vpon a maruolous hile mountayne, wher vpon there was a burldunge (as it had bene of a cite) counterte north.

Whether he carried me, and beholde, there was a man, whose similitude was like brass, which had a thiede of flay in his hande, and a mezerodde also. He stode in the doie, & sayde vnto me: march thou well with thine eyes, herken to mych thine eares, and fasten in thine heart, what I saie: for I shal shew the, for to the intent that they might be shewed the, therfore art thou brought hither. And what soeuer thou shalt see, thou shalt certifie the house of Israel therof.

Beholde, there was a wall on the outsyde rounde aboute the house: the mezerodde that he had in his hande, was six cubites longe & a spaine. So he measured the breadth of the bygginge, which was a mezerodde; and the heyth also a mezerodde. Then came he vnto the east doie, and wente vp the staires, & measured the postes of the wyndowes: for there was a mezerodde longe. The postes of the chambers were six cubites high: the postes of the doie within the house were a mezerodde. He measured also the outsyde of the ynnner court, which contayned a mezerodde. He measured by the entrie of the court, that contayned ege cubites, and his pilers two cubites: and this entrie stode inwarde.

The chambers of the doie castwarde, were thie on euery syde: alike brade and longe. The pilers also that stode of both the sydes, were of one measure. After this, he measured the wyndowesse of the doie: which was x cubites, & the heyth of the doie six cubites. The edge before the chambers was one cubite: hodie vnto both the sydes, & the chambers six cubites wyde of either syde. He measured of doie from the rygge of one chamber to another, whose wyndowesse was xxv cubites, & one doie stode agaynst another. He made pilers also: six cubites high, rounde aboute the court doie. Before the outwarde parte vnto the feet entrie of the ynnner doie, were fiftie cubites. The chambers and their pilers within, rounde aboute vnto of doie, had syde wyndowes: So had the foie entries also, whose wyndowes wente rounde aboute within. And vpon the pilers there stode date trees.

Then brought he me in to the foie court, where as were chambers & paued woikes, made in of foie court rounde aboute: xxx chambers vpon one paued woike. Now the paued woike was a luge besyde the doies, and that was the lower paued woike. After this, he measured of ludge from the lower doie, vnto the ynnner court of the out syde, which had an hundred cubites vpon the east & the north parte. And the doie in the ynnner court towarde the north, was fiftie cubites the length and breadth: his thie chambers were on either syde, with his pilers x fute wyde, which had euen the measure of the first doie. His heyth was fiftie cubites, the length xxx cubites: his wyndowes & poyches were like date trees, had euen like measure as the first doie: there were xij wyndowes on either syde, & their poyche were fiftie cubites. The ynnner court stode rounde aboute the first doie, that was towarde the north east. From one doie to another, was fured an C cubites.

After that, he brought me to the south doie, where there stode a doie towarde the south: whose pilers and poyches were measured, like the first measure, & with their postes they had wyndowes rounde aboute: like the first wyndowes. The heyth was cubites, fiftie & xxv, with steeppes to go vp vpon the doie: there stode before him, with his pilers and date trees on either syde. And the doie of the ynnner court stode towarde the south, & he measured from one doie to another, an C cubites. So he brought me in to the ynnner court, that was the doie of the south: which he measured, & it had the measure like the first. In like manner, his chambers, pilers and foie entries, had euen the foie sydes: the measure also. And he had with his poyches were aboute, wyndowes of l cubites high, & xx cubites brode. The poyches rounde aboute were xxv cubites longe, and v cubites brode: and his poyche reached vnto of vnto the outte: vpon his pilers there were date trees, and with steeppes to go vp vpon.

He brought me also in to the ynnner court vpon the east syde, and measured the doie, accordinge to of measure afore sayde. His chambers, pilers and poyches had euen the first measure, as the first had: & with his postes they had wyndowes rounde aboute. The length was l cubites, of breadth xxv cubites: his postes reached vnto the vnto the outte: his pilers also had date trees on either syde, and with steeppes to go vp vpon. And he brought me to the north doie, and measured it, which also had the foie syde measure. His chambers, pilers and poyches had wyndowes rounde aboute: whose heyth was l cubites, of breadth xxv. His pilers stode towarde the vnto the outte court, and vpon them were date trees, and with steeppes to go vp vpon. There stode a chamber also, whose measure was as the doie pilers, and there the burnt offeringes were made.

There were four porches, there stood on either syde two tables for the slaughtering: to slaye the burnt offerings, synne offerings and trespass offerings ther upon. And on the one syde as men go forth to the north doore, there stood two tables. Four stables stood on either syde of the doore, that is viij tables, wher upon they slea beede. Four tables were of basen stone for the burnt offerings, of a cubite and a half longe and brode, and one cubite hie: wher upon were layed v vessels and ornaments, which were used to, the burnt offerings, when they were slaughtred. And within there were holtes four synners beede, fastened rounde aboute, to hangeflesh upon, & vpon the tables was layed the offering flesh. On the outsyde of the inner doore were the synners chambers: in the inward court besyde y north doore & agaynst the south. There stood one also besyde the east doore north ward.

¶ And he sayde vnto me: This chamber is the south syde belongeth to the prestes, that is the habitacion: and this toward the north, is the prestes that was vpon the altar: which be the somes of Sadoch, that do serue before the LORDE in steade of the children of Levi. So he measured the foire court, which had its length an C cubites, and as much in bredth by the foure corners. Northward stood before the house: And he taught me to the foire court of the house, and measured the wallen by the entre doire: which were sixe cubites longe on either syde. The thicknesse also of the doire on either syde, was thre cubites. The length of the porch was xx cubites, the bredth xj. cubites, and vpon steppes went man vp to it: by the wallen also were pilers, on either syde one.

¶ I sawe this he brought me to the temple, and measured the postes: which were of both the sydes vii. cubites thicke, according to the wybenesse of the tabernacle. The bredth of y doire was x. cubites, & the wallen of the doire on either syde sixe cubites. He measured the length thereof, which cometh to i. cubites, and the bredth xx. The wente he in, and measured the doire postes, which were two cubites thicke: but the doire itself was sixe cubites, and the bredth of the doire was vii. cubites. He measured the length and bredth thereof, which were euery one xx. cubites, before the temple.

¶ And he sayde vnto me: this is the holyest of all. he measured also the wall of the house, which was sixe cubites. The chambers y

stood rounde aboute y house, were euery one foure cubites wyde, and one syde hadde vps another, wherof there were xxxiiij. And there stood postes beneath by the wallen rounde aboute the house, to beare the vp: one in y wall of y house they were not fastened: The syde chambers were the hyer the wyder, and had steppes ther to the inner rounde aboute y house. Thus was it wyder aboute, than from the lowest men might goe to the hyer: & wyde chambers. I sawe also that the house was very hye rounde aboute. The foundation of the syde chambers was a meter wyde (that is sixe cubites) brode. The thicknesse of the syde wall without, cometh yeth sixe cubites, & so the wall of the chambers in y house.

The chambers, was the wyder rounde aboute y house. The postes were set ouer agaynst the one wall toward the north, y the other toward the south: and the thicknesse of the wall was i. cubites rounde aboute. Alonge that was separated from the wall, was iij. cubites wyde: the wall of the buyldinge was v cubites thicke. I tolde all oute, and the length foure score cubites and ten. So he measured the house whiche was an C. cubites longe, and the separated buyldinge with the wall were an C. cubites lōge also. The wydenesse before the house and of it y was separated toward the east, was an C. cubites.

¶ And he measured the length of the buyldinge before and behinde with the chambers vpon both the sydes: and it cometh to an C. cubites. The innermost temple, the porch of the foire court, y syde postes, the thicke had syde wyndowes, and pilers rounde aboute ouer agaynst the postes, from the grounde vp to the wyndowes: The wyndowes chens selues were syled ouer with bores: & thus was it aloue the doire, vnto the ynnest house, and without also: Recche the whole wall on euery syde both within and without was syled ouer w greater bores. There were Cherubins and date trees made also, so that one date tree stood ouer betwixt two Cherubins: One Cherub had two faces, y face of a man lookinge asyde toward the date tree, and a Lyons face on the other syde. Thus was it made rounde aboute in all the house: Recche the Cherubins and date trees were made from the grounde vp aboue the doire, and so stood they also vpon the wall of the temple.

The hypostes of the temple were foure squared, and the fashion of the Sanctuary was, euen as it appeared vnto me as fore in y vision. The table was of wodde, the cubites bre and two cubites longe: his couners, the length and the waller were of wodde. And he sayde vnto me: This is the table, that shal stonde before the LORD. The temple and the holiest of all had ether of them two doores, and euery doore had two litle wickettes which were soulden in one upon another, on euery syde two. And vpon the doores of the temple there were made Cherubins and bate trees, like as vpon the waller: and a greate chiefe balke of wodde was before on the our syde of the poyche. Vpō both the sydes of the waller of the poyche, there were made depe wyndowes and bate trees, hauynge beames and halles, like as the house had.

And when he carried me out in to the fore court towarde the north, & brought me into the chambie, that stode ouer agaynst the back chuylinge northward, which had the length of an C. cubites, whose doore turned towarde the north. The wyde nesse conteyned L. cubites, ouer agaynst the xx. cubites of the ynnemur court, & agaynst the poyche wickette that was in the fore court. Beside all the chieftie there stode pilers, one ouer agaynst another: And before this chieftie there was a walkinge place of r. cubites wyde, and within was a waye of one cubite wyde, and their doores towarde the north. Thus the hysel chambies were all waye narrower then the lowest and myddelmōst of buildinge: for they bare chambie vpon chambie, and stode thie together one vpon another, not hauynge pilers like the fore court: the fore were they smaller then those beneath and in the myddelst, to reken from the grounde upward.

And the wall without that stode by the chambies towarde the vntermōst court vpon the fore syde of the chambies, was L. cubites lēge: for the lēth of the vntermōst chambies in the fore court was L. cubites also: but the length thereof before the temple was an C. cubites. These chambies had vnder them an entrance of the east syde, wher y a man might go into them out of the fore court, thow the chieftie wall of the fore court towarde the east, right ouer agaynst the separated byldinge. Before the same byldinge vpo this syde there were chaiters also which, had a waye vnto them, like as the chambies on the north syde of the same length and wyde nesse.

Their entrance, fashion and doores were all of the same maner. Thee euen like as the other chamber doores were, so were the walls of the south syde. And before the wyndowes the syngers stepped on the east syde, there stode a doore to go in at. Then I sayde vnto me: The chambers towarde the north, the south, which stode before the back chuylinge: those be holy habitacions, wherin the priestes that be seruyce before the LORD, must eat: the most holy offerings: and then must they saye the most holy offerings: and the offerings, synne offerings & trespass offerings, for it is an holy place. When the people come therein, they shal not go ouer in to the court: but saynge they be holy they shal leaue the clothes of their ministracion, and put on other garmentes, when they haue any thinge to do with the people.

Now when he had measured all the innermost house, he brought me southward to the east parte, and measured the same rounde aboute. He measured the east syde with y meter odde, which rounde aboute conteyned v. C. meter odde. And the north syde measured he, which conteyned rounde aboute some so much. The other two sydes also towards the south and the west, which he measured conteyned ether of them v. C. meter odde. So he measured all y fore syde wher he wente a wall rounde aboute v. C. meter odde longe, and as doores also, which separated the holy from the vnholy.

When he brought me into y doore which was towarde the east, beholde, it came the glory of the God of Israel from out of the east, whose voyce was like greate noise of waters, and the earth was lightened with his glory. His sighte toled vpon me like the sighte, that I sawe, when I wente in, what tyme as the cite I sawe had bene destroyed: and like the vision that I sawe by the water of Eubar. Then fell I open my face, but the glory of the LORD did not come in to the house thow to the east parte. So a voyde tok me vp, and brought me into ynnemur court: & beholde, the house was full of the glory of the LORD.

Then heere one speakinge vnto me out of the house, and there stode one by me, the same maner as I sawe in the vision that I sawe in the vision of the LORD: and he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, this vision is my secrete, and the place of my secrete, wher as I wil dwell amonge the children of Israel for evermore: so that the house of Israel shal nomore be fylle my holy name, neither their kinges, thow they shall come thow theire their hie place, & thow they shall and by dies of their kinges: which haue buyt with their sholdes in manner harde upon my chesnes, and their postes almost at my postes: so that there is but a bare wall be weene me and them.

Thou haue they defyled my holy name with their abominacions, that they haue committed. Wherefore I haue destroyed them in my wrath: But now they shal put awaye their whoredome and the dead bodies of their kinges out of my sight, that I maye dwell amonger them for evermore. Therfore thou sonne of man shewe thou the householdes of Israel a temple, that they maye be ashamed of their wickednesse, and measure them sel-ues an temple therat.

And when they be ashamed of all their wikes, then shewe them the fourme and fashion of the temple: the conuenge in, the gange out, all the manner and description therof, yre all the vses and ordinamices of it, if they maye depe & fulfill all the fashions and customes therof.

C This is the description of the house: A bowe vps the mounerounde aboute all the cornars, it shalbe of holset of all. Beholde, that is the description and fashion of the house.
This is the measure of the auter (a fete the me cubite, which is a spanne longer then another cubite) his becomen in the myddest was a cubite longe and wyde, and the ledge that wente rounde aboute it, was a spanne bode. This is the heighth of the auter: From the grunde to the toppe the lengthe is two cubites, and the bredth one cubite:

23 The auter was foure cubites hie, & from the auter upwarde stode foure honics, and it was xij cubites longe and xij cubites brode, vpon the foure corners: the coveringe of the auter was xiiij cubites longe and bode vpon the foure corners, and the ledge that wente rounde aboute, had half a cubite: and the becomen therof: rounde aboute one cubite: the steepe side towarde the east. And he saide vnto me: Thou sonne of man, thus saith the LORDE God: these are the ordi-namices and lawes of the auter, in the daye when it is made, to offre burnt offerings, and to sprinkle bloude ther vpon. To the prestes, and to the Levites that be of the side of Saboth, and to the becomen to do me seruyce, saith the LORDE God: Vnto these geue thou a yong bullocke, for a synoffringe, & take the blou-de of him & sprinkle his foure heines withal, & the foure corners of the auter coveringe, with the ledge that goeth rounde aboute the re with shal: thou cleanse it, and reconceite it.

Thou shal take the bullocke also of the syn-offringe, & burne him in a seuerall place with out the Sanctuary.

The nexte daye, take a goodbeest without blemish for a synoffringe, to reconceite the auter withal: like as it was reconceited with bullocke. Now when thou hast made it cle-ne, then offre a yonge bullocke without blemish and a ramme out of the flocke without blemish also: Offre them be fore the LORDE, and let the prest cast salt therupon, and geue them so vnto the LORDE for a burnt-offringe. Seven dayes shalt thou bringe, euery daye a goodbeest. A yonge bullocke & a ram-me of the flocke (both without blemish) shal they offre. Seven dayes shalt they reconceite and cleanse the auter, & offre vpon it. When these dayes are expired, then vpon the viij daye and so forth, the prestes shal offre their burnt-offringes and healthoffringes vps of auter: so wil I be mercifull vnto you, saith
the LORDE God.

The XLIII. Chapter.

D I sawe this, he brought me agayne to ourwarde doore of the Sanctuary ou-the east syde, and that was shute. Then saide the LORDE vnto me: This doore shal be shute still, and not opened for eny man go therout: but only for the LORDE God of Israel: yet he shal go therout, els shal it be shute still. The prynce himself shal come ther-out, that he maye cate drinke before the LOR-DE. Yet the pouche shal be come in, and there shal he go out agayne. Then brought he me to the doore, vpon the north syde of the house. And as I looke aboute me, beholde, the glory of the LORDE filled the house: and I fell downe vpon my face. So the LORDE spake vnto me: O thou sonne of man, fasten thine eynes herte, beholde, and take diligent hede to all that I wil saye vnto the, ceasinge al the ordinamices of the LORDE and all his lawes: ponde well with thine herte the conuenge in of the house and the gange forth of the Sanctuary: and telle the obstinare householdes of Israel: Thus saith the LORDE God: O house of Israel, ye haue now bode ynough with all youre abominacions, seyng that ye haue broughte in to my Sanctuary strange, hauyng weyrcamified heres & flesh, where thow to my Sanctuary is befitte, wher ye offre my bread, fat, & bloude.
Thus wil all youre abominacions ye haue broken my couenaunt, and not kepte the holy ordinamices of my Sanctuary but ſaith ſpurs of my Sanctuary, euen after your owne mynde. Therefore thus ſaith the LORD E God: Of all the ſtraungers that dwell amonge the childre of Iſrael, no ſtraunger (whoſe heret z ſteſh is not circumciſed) ſhal come within my Sanctuary: No nor the Leuites that be gone backe fro me, and haue diſceined the people of Iſrael with errorres, goinge after their Idols: theſe ſhal thei beare their owne wickednes. Shal be they be ſer and oidened to miniſtre, vnder the doores of the houſe of my Sanctuary: and to do ſeruyce in the houſe: to ſlaue burn offringes and ſacrifices for y people: to ſtode beſore them, and to ſerue them: ſerue the ſeruyce that they do them, as beſore their Idols, and cauſe the houſe of Iſrael to ſhame befoore my wickedneſſe!

R. 19. 1 For the which cauſe I haue plucke out myne honde ouer them (ſaith the LORD E) ſo that now they muſt beare their owne iniquyte, and neede to come nyeme, to ſerue me with their preſheade, in my Sanctuary, and moſt boyel of all: that they maye beare their owne ſhame and abhominacions, which they haue done. Shalbe I ſe them to be porters of the houſe, and to all the ſeruyce y is done therein: But the prieſtes of Leuites the ſonnes of Sadoch, that keepe the holy ordinaunces of my Sanctuary, when the children of Iſrael were gone fro me: ſhal come to me, to do me ſeruyce, to ſtode beſore me, and to offre me the fat and the bloude, ſaith the LORD E God.

C. 17. 4 Ez. 41. 4 18. 4

They ſhall go in to my Sanctuary, and treade beſore my zable, to do me ſeruyce, and to waice vpo myne ordinaunces. Now why they go in at the doores of the ynnner court, they ſhal put on ſynnynge clothes, ſo that no wollme come vpon them: whye they do ſeruyce vnder the doores of y ynnner court, and within. They ſhal haue ſayc ſynnynge benettes vpon their heades, and ſynnynge burches vpon their loymes, which in their labour they ſhal not put aboute them: And when they go forth to the people in the outwarde court, they ſhal put of the clothes, wherin they haue miniſtre, and laye them in the habitation of the Sanctuary, z put on other apparell, leſt they on halowne y people with their clothes.

D They ſhal not ſhawe their heades, nor noriſh the buſhe of their haye, but roude their heades only. All the prieſtes that go in to the ynnner court, ſhal drinke no wyne. They ſhall mary no wydome, neyher one that is put from hir huſbonde: but a maye of the ſide of the houſe of Iſrael, or a wydome that hath had a prieſt beſore.

They ſhal ſerue my people the diſtincte becauſe the holy and vnhol, becauſe the cleme and vnclene. If any diſceine, they ſhal diſcerne it, and geue ſentence vpon my iugmentes. My ſolemne feaſtes, my lawes and ordinaunces ſhal they kepe, and halowe my Sabbathes. They ſhal come: no deed perſone, to deſyle them ſalues: ne ceptre be father or moether, ſonne or brother, brother or ſiſter that hath had yermoſt bonde: in ſoch they maye be deſyle.

And when heis clenſed, there ſhal bened vnto him vj daye: and y he go in the Sanctuary agayne to do ſeruyce, he ſhal bringe a ſynoffringe ſaith the LORD E God. They ſhall haue an heretage, ye I maye wilbe their heretage: do ſhall ye geue them poſſeſſion in Iſrael, for I am their poſſeſſion. The meate offringes, ſynoffringes and ſpace offringes ſhal they eate, and eury becauſe thinge in Iſrael, ſhal be theirs. Theſe thinges of all the fiſt frutes, and all fiſt offringes ſhal be the prieſtes.

Ye ſhall geue vnto the prieſt alſo the ſhelinges of youre dome, that God maye poſſere the reſydue. But no deed caron ſhal the preſente, ne ſoch as is deuour of al be beſore, ſoule or caſell.

The XLV. Chapter.

When ye deuide the lode by helme: ye ſhal put a ſide one parte for the LORD E, to be holy from other in doſe meſure, xvj M meter odde long, and M brode. This ſhal be holy, as wyde as it rounde aboute. Of this parte there ſhal longe vnto the Sanctuary v C meter odde in all the ſoure corners; and I cubite wyde rounde aboute to the ſuburbes. And ſom this meaſure, namely of xvj M meter odde longe, and xvj M brode, there ſhal be maſer, wherin the Sanctuary and the helme of al maye ſtode.

The reſydue of that holy ground ſhal be the prieſtes, which do ſeruyce in the Sanctuary of the LORD E, and go in beſore the LORD E to ſerue him, that they maye haue roume to dwell in.

As for the Sanctuary, it ſhal ſtode ſix ſelf, and to the Leuites the ſerue in that ſelfe: there ſhal be geuen xvj habitacions, of the xvj M ligh z xvj M burch: ye ſhal geue al vnto the one a poſſeſſion of v M meter odde brode, z xvj M longe, beſide the parte of the Sanctuary: that ſhal be for the helme of Iſrael. Vpon both the ſides of the Sanctuarys parte, z by the cite, there shal be geuen unto the pynce, whatso euer hath our agaynst the cite, as farre as reacheth westerward and eastward: which shall be as long as one parte, frō y west end y east.

This shalbe his omie lōde in y Israel, what my pynces be no more chargeable unto my people. And soch as remaineth yet ouer in the lōnde, shalbe geuen to the house of y Israel according to their trybes. Thus saith the LORD E God: Ye pyinces, ye haue now opprest and destroyed ynough: now leaue of, handle new according to the thinge, that is equal and lausfull: and thus out my people nomore, sayeth y LORD E God. Ye shal haue arme might, a true Epha, z a true Bat.

The Epha z the Bat shalbe a like. One Bat shal cōteyne y eith parte of an Homer, and so shal one Epha do: their measure shal be after y Homer. One Cycle maketh xx. Bat. So y. Sydes, and xxv. z xv. Cycles make a pounte. This is the heane offryng, that ye shal geue to be heaued: namely, the xvi. parte of an Epha, out of an Homer of wheat: and the xvi. parte of an Epha, out of an Homer of barley. The oyle shal be measured with the Bat: such the x. parte of one Bat out of a Coi.

Ten Baxes make one Homer: for one Homer maketh ten Baxes. And one lābe from two handiath shepe out of the pasture of y Iud, for a meacoffryng, burnt offryng and health offryng, to recōcile them, sayeth the LORD E God. All the people of the londe shal geue this heane offryng with a fre wil. Agayne, it shal be the pynces parte to offe burnt offrynges, meacoffrynges and burnt offrynges unto the LORD E, in the ho lydayes, new Moones, Sabbathes, and in all the hie festes of the house of y Israel. The synoffryng, meacoffryng, burnt offryng z health offryng shal be geue, to recōcile the house of y Israel. Thus saith y LORD E God: The first daye of the first moneth thou shalt take a yōge bullocke without blemish, and cleanse the Sanctuary.

So the prest shal take of the blonde of y synoffryng, and sprenkle it upon the postes of the house, and upon the foure comers of the altar, with the douer postes of the ymer mer corner. And thus shalt thou do also the seventh daye of y moneth (for soch as haue sinned of ignorance, or be ynge dyseasued) to reconcile the house withall. Upon y xiiii. daye of the first moneth ye shal kepe y Easter. ¹¹ Seven dayes shal the feast come yne, when ¹² there shal no fouer mer leuaded bled be eate.

Upon the same dayes shal y pynce geue for himself and all the people of the londe, a bullocke for a synoffryng. And in the first of the seven dayes he shal offe euer y daye a bullocke z a ram, that are with out blemish, for a burnt offryng unto the LORD E: z an he goaze bayle for a synoffryng. For the meacoffrynges he shal geue euer an Epha to a bullocke, an Epha to a ram, z an Hin of oyle to an Epha. Upon y xv. daye of these seuen moneth, he shal kepe the seuen dayes holy one after another, cut as the other vij. dayes: with the synoffryng, burnt offryng, meacoffryng, and with the oyle.

The XLVI. Chap. p̄er.

Thus saith the LORD E God: y doore of the ymermer corne towards the east, shall be shut the vi. woode dayes: but in the Sabbath and in the daye of the new Moone, it shalbe opened. Then shal the pynce come vnder the doie poiche, z sōnde still without by the doie doie. So y prestes shall offe up his burnt z health offrynges. And he shal worshippe at the doie poste, and go his waye south agayne: but y doie shal nomore be shut till the eacnyng.

On the same maner shal the people of the londe also do their worshippe before the LORD E, without this doie upon the Sabbathes and new Moones. This is now the burnt offryng, that the pynce shal bringe unto the LORD E upon the Sabbath: sice lamber without blemish, z a ram without blemish, and an Epha for a meacoffryng, with y ram. As for the lamber, he maye geue as many meacoffrynges to them, as he wil, z an Hin of oyle to an Epha. In the daye of the new moneth, it shalbe a yōge bullocke without blemish, sice lamber z a ram also without blemish. With the bullocke he shal geue an Epha, and with the ram an Epha also for a meacoffryng: but so y lamber, what he maye come by. And euer an Hin of oyle to an Epha. When the pynce cometh, he shall go vnder the doie poiche, and euen there be parte south agayne. But when the people of the londe come before the LORD E in the hie solempne feast, as many as come in by the north doie to do worshippe, shal go out agayne at the south doie. And they that come in at the south doie, shal go south agayne at y north doie. There shal none go out at the doie where he came in, but shal go south righte out on the other syde, and the pynce shall go in and out amonge them.

Upon the solempne and hie feast dayes, this shalbe the meacoffryng: An Epha to a bullock and an Epha to a ram and to the lambs, as many as he will, but euer an Eph of oyle to an Epha . Now when the prince bringeth a burnt offeringe to a health offeringe with a fre will into the LORDE , the east doore shall opene vnto him, yf he maye do with his burnt & health offeringes, as he doeth vpon the Sabbath: and when he goeth forth, the doore shall be shut after him againe. He shall daylie bringe vnto the LORDE a lambe of a yeare olde without blemish for a burnt offeringe: this shall he do euery morninge. And for a meac offeringe he shall geue the sixte parte of an Epha , & the thirde parte of an Eph of oyle (to mingle with the cakes) euery morninge. And this shall be a daylie meac offeringe vnto the LORDE , for an euertastinge and iudgement: & thus shall the lambe, the meac offeringe and oyle be geuen euery morninge, for a daily burnt offeringe.

Moreover, thus sayeth the LORDE GOD : If the prince geue a gifte vnto any of his sonnes, then shall it be his sonnes heritage perpetuall, yf he maye possesse it. But yf he will geue one of his seruantes some of his heritage, it shall be his to the fire yeare, and the oyle to returne againe vnto yf prince: for his heritage shall be his sonnes only. The prince also shall take none of the peoples inheritance, nor put the same their possession: but to his owne sonnes shall he geue his possession, that my people be not scattered abroad, but that euery man maye haue his owne.

And he brought me thowen the entrance at the syde of the doore of habitation of the Sanctuary, that belongeth to yf priestes and stode towards the north, & beholde, there was a place vpon the west syde, then sayde he vnto me: This is the place, where the priestes shall digge the cresspae and syn offeringes, & bake yf meac offeringes: that they nebe not beate the in to the outwarde court, and so to unbalowe the people. So he brought me in to the vtmost court, rounde aboute all the foure corners. Beholde, in euery corner of yf foure court, there was yet a litle court. There in all the foure corners of the court, there was made a litle court of xl cubites longe, and xxx cubites broad: these foure litle courts were of one like measure, & there went a rygge wall rounde aboute them all foure, vnder the which there were barthes made rounde aboute. Then sayde he vnto me: This is the Echin , where the sinners of the house shall digge the syn offeringes of the people.

The XLVII. Chapter.

After this he brought me againe into the doore of the house: & beholde, there gusheth out waters from vnder yf posico of the house eastwarde (for the doore stode towards the east) that same waters vnto the right syde of the house, which ledde to the auiler south warte. There cometh the water to the north doore, and brought me forth there rounde aboute by the vtmost doore, yf curueth eastwarde. Beholde, there came forth the water vpon the right syde. Then when the man yf had the merretode in his honde wente out vnto the east doore, he measured a M . cubites, & the he brought me the tow yf water, cut to the angles: so he measured yet a thousande, & brought me thowen water againe vnto the fress: yet measure he a thousande, and brought me thowen water vnto the loynes. After this he measured a thousande againe, then was it such a ryuer, yf I mighte not wade thowen it: the water was so depe, that it was needful to haue swymmed, for it mighte not be waded thowen. And he sayde vnto me: hast thou seen this, o thou sonne of man: and with that he brought me to the ryuer bank againe.

Now when I came there, there stood many trees vpon either syde of the ryuer ledde. Then sayde he vnto me: This water that floweth out towards the east, and runneth downe in to the playne felde, cometh in to the sea: and from the sea it runneth out, & maketh the waters whole. See all that liue about me, where vnto this ryuer cometh shall recover. And where this water cometh shall be reshalbe many fish. For all that cometh to this water, shall be lufy and whole. By this riner shall the fysshers stonde from the gaddi vnto the Egipt , & there shall be their nettes: for there shall be great herds of fish, like as in the manye sea. So in the claye and pyres, they shall not be whole: why, it shall be occupie for sale.

By this ryuer vpon both the sydes of the shore, there shall growe all maner of fructifull trees, whose leaues shall not fall of, neither shall their fruite perishe: but euery tree at their monethes, for their water runneth out of the Sanctuary. His fruite is good to eate, and his leaf profitable for remedye. Thus sayeth the LORDE GOD : Let this be the border, wherein yf shall be the doore vnto the city, & ryues of I rael, with the same. Parte it indifferently vnto one as vnto another of the which liue yf fathers vnto your fathers, that it shalbe fall to your inheritance.

This is the border of the londe upon the north syde, from the mayne sea, as men go to Sabada: namely, Hemath, Bercotha, Sabama: from the borders of Damascus and Gemath unto Hazer Tichon, that lieth upon the coastes of Hamath. Thus the borders fro the sea south, shalbe Hazer Euan, the border of Damascus the north, and the borders of Hemath the north.

The east syde shal ye measure from Hauzan and Damascus, from Galad and the leide of Jisraël by Jordane and so forth, from the sea coast, that lieth eastward: and this is the east parte.

The south syde is, from Thamar south to the waters of Siris unto Cabes, the ryuer, and thence you see: and that is the south parte.

The west parte: namely the greace fra from the borders therof, till a man come unto Hemath: this is the west parte.

This londe shal ye parte amonge you, accordinge to the crybe of Jisraël, and becom to be an heritage for you, and for the strangers that dwel amonge you, and begette children.

For ye shal take them amonge the childre of Jisraël, like as though they were of youre com household and countrie, and they shal have heritage with you amonge the childre of Jisraël.

Lette in what crybe the stranger dwel- leth, in the same crybe shal ye geue him his heritage, saith the LORD E God.

The XLviii. Chapter.

These are the names of the crybes that lye upon the north syde, by the maye of Hebron, till thou comest unto the marsh and Hazer Enam, the borders of Damascus toward the north by syde Hemath: Dan shal have his poeie from the east quarter unto the west. Upon the borders of Dan from the east syde unto the west, shal Asser haue his poeie. Upon the borders of Asser fro the east parte unto the west, shal Tephthai haue his poeie.

Upon the borders of Tephthai from the east quarter unto the west, shal Danasse haue his poeie. Upon the borders of Manasse from the east syde unto the west, shal Ephraim haue his poeie. Upon the borders of Ephraim from the east parte unto the west, shal Ruben haue his poeie. Upon the borders of Ruben from the east quarter unto the west, shal Juda haue his poeie. Upon the borders of Juda from the east parte unto the west, ye shal see a syde one poeie of xxv. M. meter obbes longe and brode (like as another poeie from the east syde unto the west), wherin the Sanctuary shal stonde.

As for the poeie, that ye shal separate for the LORD E, it shalbe xxv. M. longe, and x. M. brode. Which separated holy poeie shal belonge unto the: namely to the poeies, toward the north xxv. M. 1. toward the west x. M. brode, toward the east x. M. brode also, 2 toward the south xxv. M. longe, wherin the Sanctuary of the LORD E shal stonde. Yet this same place shal be the priestes, 3 are of the dulcal of Sabod, 7 haue kepe my holy ordinance: which wente nor astraye in the erreure of the children of Jisraël, like as the Leuites are gone astraye and this separated pece that they haue of the londe, shalbe the most holy, harde upon the borders of the Leuites. And mette unto the priestes, shal the Leuites haue xxv. M. longe and x. M. brode. This shal be an eury syde xxv. M. longe, and x. M. brode. Of this poeie they shal fill no bing, nor make eny permutation therof, lest the chiefe of the londe fall unto ether, for it is halowed unto the LORD E.

The other v. M. after the dyebeth, 3 lye by the xxv. M. shalbe comon: shal belonge to the cite and to the suburbs for habitacions, and 4 cite shal stonde in the myddell therof. Let this be the mesure: toward the north parte, v. C. 7 iiij. M. toward the south parte, v. C. 7 iiij. M. toward the east parte, v. C. and iiij. M. toward the west parte, v. C. and iiij. M.

The suburbs hard upon the cite, shall haue toward the north, L. and ii. C. toward the south, L. and two C. toward the east, L. and two C. toward the west also, L. and two C. As for the residue of the length, that lye hard upon the separated holy ground: namely, x. M. toward the east and x. M. toward the west, next unto the holy poeie it and the increase therof shal serue for their meace, that labourer in the cite. They that labour for the welch of the cite, shall mainteine this also, out of what tribe so ever they be in Jisraël.

All that is separated of the xxv. M. longe and xxv. M. brode on the four parties, 3 shall ye see a syde for the separated poeie of the Sanctuary, 7 for the possession of 4 cite. The residue upon both the sydes of the Sanctuary and possession of the cite, shall belonge to the pynce, before the place of 4 xxv. M. into the east ende, 7 before the place of 4 xxv. of 3 cities: his shalbe 3 princyes portes. This shalbe the holy place, and the house of the Sanctuary shal stande in the myddest. Moreover, from the Levites and the cities possession, 3 lye in the myddest of the princyes part: so that what remaineth betwixte the border of Juda & the border of Ben Jamin, it shal be the princyes.

Now of the other trybes.

If the east parte vnto the west, shal Ben Jamin haue his portion. Vpon the borders of Ben Jamin fro the east syde vnto 3 west, shal Symeon haue his portion. Vpon the borders of Symeon from the east parte vnto the west, shal Iachar haue his portion. Vpon the borders of Iachar from the east syde vnto the west, shal Sabulon haue his portion. Vpon the borders of Sabulon from the east parte vnto the west, shal Gad haue his portion. Vpon the borders of Gad southwarde, the coastes shal reach fro Thamar south vnto the waters of strits to Cabes, and to the floude, euen vnto the mane sic.

The prophet Daniel.

IN the 3rd year of the reigne of Iudas the kyng off Iuda, came Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon vnto Ierusalem, & besiged it: and the LORDE dehyd Iudas the kyng off Iuda in to his hande, with certayne ornamentes of the best off Iuda, which he caried away vnto the house of Samar, to the house of his god and there he ordeyned them in to his gods treasury. And the kyng spake vnto Achibenes of the chemberlaine, that he shoulde bryng the chylidren of Iuda, that were come of the kynges side and of pryntes, yonge sprynghalbes with out any blemish but fyne and well shapred, instructed in all wysdomes, conynge and vnderstandinge: which were able to stonde in the kynges palace, to tewe, and to lerne for to speake Caldeish.

¶ Vnto this the kyng appointed a certayn portion of his owne meate and of the wyne, which he vsed himselfe, so to nourish the chylidren: & he ordeyned they might stonde before the kyng. Amonge these now were certayne of the chylidren off Iuda: namely Daniel, Ananias, Misael and Sarias. And these the chif chemberlaine gaue other names, and called Daniel, Belthassar: Ananias, Sitrach: Misael, Misic: and Sarias, Adonaga. But Daniel was at a poynt to himselfe: that he wolde not be defyled with the meate, ner of wyne which he vsed. And this he desired off the chif chemberlaine, left he shoulde defyle himselfe. So God gaue Daniel favour and grace before of the chif chemberlaine, that he sayde vnto him: I can assure off my lorde the kyng, which hath appointed you youre meate and drynke, that he wyll youre faces to be worse lyfynge: then the other sprynghalbes of youre age, and so ye shal make me to lose my heade vnto of the kyng.

¶ Then Daniel answered to Melissar, whom the chif chemberlaine had set ouer Daniel, Ananias, Misael and Sarias, and sayde: O praye for ten dayes with thy seruantes, and let vs haue pottage to eate, and water to drynke: for we wolde not eate, and water to drynke off the kynges meate. And as thou firste do deal with thy seruantes. So he consented to them in this matter, and proued the ten dayes. And after of ten dayes, their faces were better lifyng: & fatter, then all the yonge sprynghalbes, which are of the kynges meate.

The ij. Chap. Ho. lxxvij.

¶ Thus Melissar toke awaye their meate and wyne, and gaue them pottage therfore. God gaue now these foue sprynghalbes conynge and leryng in all sensure and wysdomes: but vnto Daniel specially, he gaue vnderstandinge off all visions and dreames. ¶ Now when the tyme was come, that the kyng had appointed to bryng in the yonge sprynghalbes vnto him: the chif chemberlaine brought them before Nabuchodonosor, and the kyng communed with them. And amonge them all were founde some such as Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Sarias. Therfore stode they before the kyng, which in all wyse and maners off vnderstandinge, that he enquired off them, founde them certyne to be wiser, then all the soothsayers and chymers, that were in all his realme. And Daniel abode still, vnto the firste year of the kynges tyme.

The lii. Chapter

IN the secde year off the reigne of Nabuchodonosor, had Nabuchodonosor a dreame, where thow his speeche was weerd, and his slepe dreke from him. ¶ Then the kyng commaunded to call together all of soothsayers, chymers, witches and Caldees, for to shewe the kyng his dreame. So they came, and stode before the kyng. And the kyng sayde vnto them: I haue dreamed a dreame, & my speeche was so troubled therwith, & I haue clew forgotten, what I dreamed. Upon this, the Caldees answered the kyng in the Syriane speach: O kyng, God saue thy life for euer. Shewe thy seruantes the dreame, and we shal shewe the, what it meaneth. The kyng gaue the Caldees their answers, and sayde: It is gone from me: If ye wil not make me vnderstonde the dreame with the interpretation theroff, ye shal dye, and youre houses shal be destroyed. But yff ye tell me the dreame and the meaninge theroff, ye shal haue off me gyfte, rewardes and greates honoure only, because the dreame and the significacion of it. ¶ They answered agayne, and sayde: The kyng must shewe his seruantes the dreame, and so shal we declare, what it meaneth.

¶ Then the kyng answered, sayenge: I praye off a trespas, that ye do be porged of your selfe: so much as yf, that the dreame is gone from me. Therfore, yff ye wil not tell me the dreame, ye shal all haue one iudgement. But ye saye and dyssemble with wyse words, which ye speake before me, agayne off the tyme. Therfore tell me the dreame, and so shal I knowe, yff ye can shewe me, what it meaneth.

meth. Upon this, the Caldees gave answer before the kynge, and sayde: there is no man upon earth, that can tell the thinge, which yf kynge speaketh of: For there is neither kynge prince nor LORDE, that ever aged such thinges as a ioybysyer, charmer or Caldeer: for it is a very harde matter, that the kynge requyret. Neither is there any, that can certifie the kynge theroff, excepte the goddes: whose dwellinge is not amonge the creatures.

C For yf which cause the kynge was wroth with greete indignacio, and comaunded to destroye all the wyse men at Babilon: and yf proclamacon wote forch, that the wyse me shulde be slayne. They soughte also to slaye Daniel with his companions. Then Daniel enquired Arioch the kyngees steward, off the iudgment and sentence, that was gone forth aleyde to kill such as were wyse at Babilon. He answered, and sayde vnto Arioch beinge then the kyngees deuyer: Why hath the kynge proclaimed so cruell a sentence? So Arioch tolde Daniel the matter. Upon this, wente Daniel vnto, and besyde the kynge, yf he might haue leysure, to shewe the kynge the interpretation: and then came he heme agayne: shewed the thinge vnto Ananias, Misael & Azarias his companios: yf they shulde besite the God of heauen for grace in this secreete, that Daniel and his felowes with other soday as were wyse in Babilon, pershed nor. Then was the mystery shewed vnto Daniel in a visio by nyght. And Daniel prayed yf God of heau, Daniel also cryed loude, and sayde: O that the name of God might be prayed for euer and euer, for wysdome and strengthe are his owne: he chaungeth the tymes and ages: he putteth downe kyngees, he setteth up kyngees: he getheth wysdome vnto the wyse, and enderstandinge to those that vnderstande he openeth the depe secretes: he knoweth yf the thinge that lyeth in darcknesse, for the light dwelleth with him. I thanke the, and praye the: O thou God off my fathers: what thou hast lent me wysdome and strengthe, & hast shewed me the thinge, that we besyde off the, for thou hast opened the kyngees matter vnto me.

D Upon this wente Daniel in vnto Arioch, whom the kynge had adouened to destroye the wyse at Babilon: he wente vnto him, and sayde: destroye not soday as are wyse in Babilon, but bringe me in vnto the kynge, and I shal shewe the kynge the interpretation. Then Arioch broughte Daniel into the kynge in all the haist, and sayde vnto him: I haue founde be a man amonge the prisoners off Iudey shal shewe the kynge the interpretation. He answered the kynge, and sayde vnto Daniel whose name was Balthasar: Arise thou, & cast shewe me yf dreame, which I haue had: the interpretation therof: Daniel answered the kynge to his face, and sayde: As I haue secretes, for the which the kynge maketh iustification: it is neither the wyse, the charmer, the charmer nor the dwellcomair, that can certifie the kynge off it: Only God in heauen open secretes, and he is it, that sheweth the kynge Tabuchodonosor, what is to come in the latter dayes.

By darame, and that which they had set in thynne heade upon thy bed, in this: O kynge, thou didest cast in thy mynde, that shulde come hereafter: So he that is the opener off mysterics, telleth the, what is in come. As for me, this secreete is not shewed me, for any wysdome that I haue, might any other wysdome: but only that I might shewe the kynge the interpretation, & that I might knowe the thoughtes off his owne herte. So the kynge sawest, and beholde there stode before the a greete ymage, whose figure was marvelous greate, and his vngymme. The ymage heade was off yron gylded, his brest and armes off syluer, his body & loynes were off ceppre, his legges more off yron, his fete were parte off yron, and parte off earth.

This thou sawest, till the tyme that thou out any bondes: here was hene off a stone, which smote the ymage vpon the fete, whiche were both off yron and earth, and bade it to powder: then was the yron, the earth, the copper, the syluer and golde broken altogether in peeces: and be came like the duffe of come, that the wynde bloweth awaye: thus yf some flooca, that they can moue be sette. But the stone that smote the ymage, he came a greate moonteyne, which smote the whole earth: This is the dreame. And now will we shewe before the kynge, what it meaneth.

O kynge, thou art a kynge off kynge: for the God off heauen hath geue the a kyngdome, ryche, strengthe and maiesty: & thou hast deuoyed the all thinges, that are made: & children off men: the beastes off the fild, & the foules vnder the heau, and from the dominion ouer them all. Thou art that gods heade. After yf there shal arise another kynge, which shal be lesse then thou. The thyrde kyngdome shal be yre copper, and he will haue dominacion in all lodes. The fourth kyng some shall be as stronge as yron. For like as yron breaketh and breaketh all thinges: Keepe as yron beareth euery thinge downe, so shall it beate downe and destroye.

Where as thou sawest the feete and toes, parte of each and parte off yron: that is a tempered kyngdome, which neuertheless shall laste some off the yron grounde mixt with ir. for in much as thou hast sene the yron mixt with the claye.

The toes of the feete that were parte off yron and parte off claye, signifiech: that it shall be kyngdome partly stronge and partly weak. And where as thou sawest yron mixt with claye: they shall myngle them selves wth sthe off simple people, yett not commyng one with another, like as yron wil not be scattered with a poeherde.

¶ In the beate off these kynges, shall the God of heauen set up an enclastinge kyngdome which shall not perish, and his kyngdome shall not be geuen ouer to another people: For the same shall beate and destroye all these kyngdomes, but it shall endure for euer.

And where as thou sawest, that without any hande there was cut out of the mount a stone, which brake the yron, the copper & chalye, the silver and golde in peeces: by that hath y^e grace God shewed the kyng, what w^ould come after this. This is a true dreame, and the interpretation of it is sure.

¶ Then the kyng Nabuchodonosor, fell downe upon his face, and bowed him selfe vnto Daniel, and commaunded that they shuld offer meat off kynges and swete odoures vnto him.

The kyng answered Daniel, and sayde: Be off a feare, your God is a God aboue all godden, a LORD aboue all kynges, and an opener of secretes: for ye knowe that I discouer this mysterie. So the kyng made Daniel a graue man, and gaue him many and graue giftes.

¶ To make him ruler off all the countrees of Babilon, and lord of all the nobles, that were at Babilon. Now Daniel increased the kyng for Syriac, M^{ed}iac and Abdenago, so that he made them rulers ouer all the offises in the londe off Babilon: but Daniel himselfe remained still in the court by the kyng.

The iiii. Chapter.

W Nabuchodonosor the kyng caused a golde ymage to be made, which was ix. cubites hie, and sixe cubites thic-

ke. This he made to be set vp in the valley of Duran in the londe of Babilon: & sent out to gather together the dukes, lordes & nobles, the iudges and officers, the deuices and shrewes, with all the rulers of the londe: for they might come to the dedication of the ymage which Nabuchodonosor the kyng had set vp. So the dukes, lordes and nobles, the iudges and officers, deuices and shrewes with all the rulers of the londe gathered them together, and came vnto the dedicatinge of y^e ymage, that Nabuchodonosor the kyng had set vp.

¶ Now were there certayne men off the Caldees, that went euen then and accused of Jewes, and sayde vnto kyng Nabuchodonosor: O kyng, God saue thy lyfe for euer. Thou beynge kyng hast geuen a commaundment, that all men wher they heare the noyse off the trompettes, harpes, shawmes, psalteries, symphonies and all the other melodies: shall fall downe and bowe them selves toward the golde ymage: who so the fall nor downe and worshipped not, that he shall be cast in to an hote burninge oven. Now are there certayne Jewes, whom thou hast set ouer the offises of the londe off Babilon: namely, Syriac, M^{ed}iac and Abdenago. These men (o kyng) regarde not thy commaundment, yett they will not serue thy godden, nor bowe them selves to the golde ymage, that thou hast set vp.

¶ Then Nabuchodonosor is a cruel man and displeasure, commaunded, y^e Syriac, M^{ed}iac & Abdenago shulde be brought vnto him. So these men were brought before the kyng. Then Nabuchodonosor spake vnto them, and sayde: what o^uer Shue

Misac and Abdenago, will not ye serue my goddesses: nor haue youre filles to be golden ymage, that I haue set vp: wel, hereby hereafter, when ye heare the noyse of the crotchetes, blowme with the harpes, shammes, psalteries, symphonies and all yf other melodic: that ye fall downe, and worshippe the ymage whiche I haue made. But yff ye worshippe it not, ye shal be cast immediatly in to an hore burnyng ouen. Let se, what god is there, yf maye deliuer you out of my hondes?

Sydac, Misac and Abdenago answered the kynge, and sayde: O Tabuchodonosor, we oughte not to cōfesse vnto yf in this matter, for why: our God whom we serue, is able to kepe vs from the hore burnyng ouen (O kynge) and can righe wel deliuer vs out off thy hondes. And though he wil not, yett shalst thou thome (O kynge): that we will not serue by goddesses, ner do reuerēce to the ymage, whiche thou hast set vp. Then was Ta-buchodonosor full off indignacion, for that yf countenance off his face chaunged vnto Sydac, Misac and Abdenago. Therfore he charged and commaunded that the ouen shoulde be made seuen tymes hotter, then it was wonte to be: and spate vnto the strengest worshipers that were in his hooste, for so bynde Sydac, Misac and Abdenago, and to cast them in to the hore burnyng ouen.

So thei men were bounde in their coates, hoses, shues with their other garmentes, ad cast in to the hore burnyng ouen: for the kynges commaundement was so strate, and the ouen was ecead yngre hore. So for the men that par in Sydac, Misac and Abdenago, the flame off the fyre destroyed them. And thei thre men Sydac, Misac and Abdenago fell downe in yf hore burnyng ouen, being fast bounde.

Ez. 41a

Then Tabuchodonosor for the kynge marched, and sode vp mall hault: he spate vnto his counsell and sayde: yd not ye cast these thre men bounde in to the fyre? They answered, and sayde vnto the kynge: Yee O kynge, he answered and sayde: lo, for all that, yee do. Ife foure men goinge lowe in the myddest off the fyre, and nothyng corrupte, and the fourth is like an angel to lōke vpon. Vpon this wote Tabuchodonosor vnto the mouth off the hore burnyng ouen: he spake alld, and sayde: O Sydac, Misac and Abdenago, ye seruautes off the hre God: go forth, and come hither. And so Sydac, Misac, and Abdenago wente out off the fyre. Then the dukes, lordes and nobles, and the kynges counsell came together to se these men, vpon whom the fyre had no manner off power in thre: die: In so much that the very hays off thei heade was not burnt, and their clothes was chaunged: Yee there was no smell off fyre vpon them.

Then spake Tabuchodonosor, and sayde: Blessed be the God off Sidac, Misac and Abdenago: whiche hath set by and defended his seruautes, that putted them in him: yf haue altered the kynges countenance, and isperde their bodies: thei wote, ther then they wolde serue or worshippe any other god, excepte their owne God myght. Therfore I wil and commaunde, that the people, kynges and rangers, which speake in blasphemy agaynst the God off Sydac, Misac and Abdenago, shal be, and thei shalbe shalbe pyrd: Because, there is no God yf maye saue, as this. So the kynge possent Sydac, Misac and Abdenago, in the kyng of Babylone.

Tabuchodonosor for the kynge, vnto all people kynges and rangers that dwell vpon the roble earth: peace be multiplied amonge us. I thowt it good to shewe the rote and velous wordes, yf hre God had wrought vpon me. O how greates are his tokens, and his mightie are his wonder: O his byndoms an everlasting kyngdome, and his power lasteth for euer and euer.

The iiii. Chapter.

Tabuchodonosor byng at rest in myne house, ad stode byng in my place, sawe a dreame, which was in a strayed: ad thei long heere that I had vnto my bed, with the visions off myne heade, and haled me. Then sint I vnto a commission, whiche all they which were of wisdoms at Babil shoulde be brought before me, to call methis interpretation off the dreame. So thei came the soothsayers, charmers, Ladres and counters off deuces: to whom I tolde the dreame, but what it benedene, they coude not shewe me: till at the last, there came one Daniel (other wise called Balthasar, accordinge to the name off my God) whiche hath the spere off the holy goddess in him: to whom I tolde the dreame, sayenge: O Balthasar, thou prynce off soothsayers: For so much as I knowe, that thou hast the spere off the hre goddess, and no secretes is hyd off on the: tel me therefore, what yf visid off my dreame? I haue sine maye signified, I sawe a vision off my heade vpon my bed: and beholde, thei stode a tre vpon the ground, which was very hre, greates and mightie: yf beynge reachid vnto the heade, and the budde the embes of the earth: his leaues were fayre, he had very much fruce, so y every mā had ynough to eate therein.

The banches of the selbe had shadomes vnder it, and the foules off the ayre dwelt in the bome thereof. Shortly, all creatures fed of it. I sawe in my heabe a vision vpon my bed: the holbe, a maycher (cut an holy angel) came downe from heauen, and cryed mighte X his saynge: Hew downe the tre, bicause off his banches, shake of his leaues, and scare his fruce abrode: that all the bestes maye get them awaye from vnder him, and the foules from his banches. I cuerteyes I sawe the gronde of his rote still in the earth, and bynde him vpon the playne selbe, with demes of yron and stele. With the dew of heauen shall he be wet, and he shall haue his parte in the herbes of the gronde with euer myde bestes.

Charisme herce off his shall be taken from him, and a bestis herce shall be geuen him, all seven yeres to be come and gone vpon him.

This erande of the maycher, is a cōmoun tome gronde and fought out in the coun- trol off him, that is most holy: so lerne men sit to vnderstande, that the hyest hath power ouer the kyngdomes off men, and geuech them, to whom it liketh him, and bringeth the very outcastes off men ouer them. This is the dicame, y J ynge l Tabuchodonosor haue sint.

Therefore o Balthasar, tell thou me what it signifieth: for so much as all the wyse men off my kyngdome are not able to shewe me, what it meaneth. But thou canst do it, for y spruce of the holy Goddes is in the.

C Then Daniel (whose name was Balthasar) bade his peace by the space of an houre ad his thoughtes strangled him. So che yn- grise, and sayde: O Balthasar, let rather the dicame re the interpretation theroff sinte the. Balthasar answered, saynge: O my LORD E, this dicame ha ppen to thyne cō- mounce, and the interpretation to thyne ad- uisource. As for the tre that thou sawest which was so greate & mightie, wh off heych reached vnto the heauen, and his barch in to all the woldes: whose leaues were fayre, ad the fruce much: vnder the which the bestes off the selbe had their habitation, and vpon whose banches the foules of the ayre dyd sit:

When thou o kyng: art the tre, greate & sigge. Thy greatnesse increaseth, & reacheth vnto the heauen, so doeth thy power to the endes of the earth. But where as the kyng: is a watcher euen an holy angel: he came downe from heauen, and sayde: heau downe the tre, and destroye it: yet leane the gronde of the roce in the earth, and bynde him vpon the playne selbe with chynes off yron and stele: he shall be wet with the dew off hea- ven, and his parte shall be with the bestes of the silde, all seven yeres to be come and gone vpon him: This o kyng: is y interpretation, yet it is the very deu yce of him, y is heyst off all, & it coudech my LORD E the kyng.

Thou shalt be cast out fro men, and chy- dy.linge shall be with the bestes of the sil- de: with grasse shalt thou be fed like an oxe. Thou shalt be wet with the dew of the hea- ven: yet seven yeres shall come and go vpon the, till thou knowe, that the hyest hath power vpon the kyngdomes of men, & geuech them, to whom he lyst. In our, where as it was sayde, that the roce of the tre shall be belest: still in the gronde: it heretowere, y thy kyngdome shall remayne whole vnto y, after thou hast lerned to knowe, that the power cometh from heauen. Wherefore (o kyng:) he cometh with my counsel, that thou mayest lome thy synnes with rig heuou sinlesse, ad thyne offences with mercye to poore people: for soch thinges shall purlonge thy peace. All these thynges touch the kyng: l Tabuchodonosor.

So a fier xij. monethes, the kyng: walked vp and downe in the palaace off the kyngdome off Babilon, and sayde: This is the grea- te cite off Babilon, which I myself (with my power & strength) haue made a kynges cur- ce, for the honoure off my magesty. While these wordes were yet in the kynges mouth, there fel a voyce from heauen, saynge: O kyng: l Tabuchodonosor, to the best speke: Thy kyngdome shall departe from the, & thou shalt be cast out of mens company: thy dwelling shall be with the bestes off the silde, so that thou shalt eate grasse like an oxe, till seven yeres be come and gone ouer the: euen vntill thou knowest, that the hyest hath power vpon the kyngdomes off men, and that he maye geue them, vnto whom it pleaseth him.

The very same houre was this matter ful- filled vnto l Tabuchodonosor: so that he was cast out off mens company, & ate grasse like an oxe. His body was wet with the dew of hea- ven, till his hayes were as greate as Ale- gies fethers, and his nailes like bydes cla- ues.

At the same tyme was myne vnderstandinge reseed me agayne, and I was reseed to the honour of my Kingdome, to my degree, and to myne estate shappe agayne. My graces and princies sought vnto me, and I was sit in my Kingdome agayne, for that I had yet greater worshippe.

The byd J Tabuchodonosor, Isaac, magistric, and praye the Kyng of heauen: for all his workes are true, and his wayes right. As for those that go on proudly, he is able to bringe them downe.

The V. Chapter.

Belshazzar the Kyng made a greate bancket to his thousande lordes: wherhall these thousande he made greate cheare, and when he was drunken wth wyne, he commaunded to bringe him y^e golden and siluer vessel, which his father Tabuchodonosor had taken out of the temple at Jerusalem: that the Kyng and his lordes (with his quene and concubynes) might drinke thereof.

1. Pet. 2. 1

So they brought the golden vessel, that was take out of the temple of the LORDS house at Jerusalem. Then the Kyng and his lordes with his quene and concubines dronke out of them. They dronke wyne, and prayed their Idols of golde, siluer, copper, yron, woodde and stone.

In the very same houre there appeared syngers, as it had bene of a mans honde wth kyng, righte oute agaynst the candlestick: vpon the playne wall in the Kynges palace; and the Kyng sawe the palme off y^e honde y^e voice. Then chynge the Kyng his countenance, and his thoughtes troubled him: so that the ioyntes off his body shoke, and his knes smote one agaynst the other. Wherfore the Kyng cryed mightely, that they shulde bringe him the charmers, Caldres and coniuers of deuils. The Kyng spake also to the wisemen of Babilon, and sayde: Who so can redethis wyryng, and shewe me the playne meanyng thereof: shall be clothed wth purple, haue a cheyne off golde aboute his necke, and rule the thirde parte off my Kingdome.

Vpon this, came all the Kynges wyntes: but they coude neither rede the wyryng, nor shewe the Kyng what it signified. Then the Kyng sore a frayed, in so much, that his colour chaunged, and his lordes were in weid. So by reason off this matter, y^e that happened to the Kyng & his lordes, they went vp herself in to the bancket, and spake vnto the Kyng, sayyng: O byd God: saue chy life for our: Lett not y^e thoughtes trouble the, and lett not chy countenance be chaunged, for why: there is a man y^e Kingdome, that hath the spere off the goddes wthin him, as it was sene in thy thero dayes. He hath vnderstandinge of all dome like the goddes. These byngs had the benefite of thy father made this man of the sooth sayers, charmers, Calders and deuil coniuers: because that such an aduaint spere, knowlege & wisdom to open dreames, to open secretes, and to ban harde doctes was founde in him: y^e as in Daniel, whom the Kyng named Belshazzar. Let this same Daniel be sente for, wh^{ch} shall tell, what it meaneth.

Then was Daniel brought before the Kyng. So the Kyng spake vnto Daniel, sayyng: Art thou that Daniel, one off the prisoners of Iuda, whom my father the Kyng brought out of Iewer? I haue here sith of the, that thou hast the spere of the goddes, experience and vnderstandinge, that there hath bene greace wisdom founde in the. How haue there bene broughte in to me and connyng charmers, to redethis wyryng, and to shewe me the meanyng thereof? But they coude not tell me, what this matter signified. Then herde I say, y^e that canst expounde darke thinges, and ban harde doctes. Well than, yf thou canst this wytinge, and shewe me the meanyng thereof: thou shalt be clothed wth purple, haue a cheyne of golde aboute thy necke, and rule the thirde parte of my Kingdome.

Daniel answered, and sayde before y^e Kyng: As for thy rewardes, kepe them to thy self, or geue y^e thy giftes to another: yet as chelesse, I wil rede the wyryng vnto the, and shewe him the interpretation thereof. O Kyng, God the byest gaue vnto Tabuchodonosor thy father, y^e dignitee of a King, & worshippe & hono^r: so yf all people, kynnes & tunges stode in awe & feare of him, by me.

for off the by estate, that he had lent him, for why: he leuue, whom he wolde: he smote, whom he pleased him. A gayne: whom he wolde, he set up: and whom he list, he put downe. But because his herre was so proude, and his stomach set fast vnto wysdome: he was depoynted from his kynngly throne, and his magnifity was taken from him. He was thowt out from among men, his herre was like a bestes herre, and his dwelling: was with the wyld Asses: he was fayne to eat grasse like an oxe, and his body was not with the dew off the heauen: till he knewe, that the byest had power vpon the kynngdomes of men, and stretch ouer them, whom he list.

¶ And thow his sonne (o Belshasar) for all his haillnes submitted thine heere, though thou knewest all these thinges: but hast thou asyet thy selfe above the LORDE off heauen, so that the vessels off his house were brought by thee: that thow, and thy lordes, with thy queene and concubynes, mighte dwelle vnto thero: And hast played the Toles of silver and golde, copper and yron, off wode & Rome: As for the God, in whose hande consisteth thy breath, ad all thy waye: thow hast neglected him.

Therefore is the palme off this honde for higher from him, to token up this wyngge. And this is the scripture, that is writ ten up: Man, Chazel, Phares. Now the interpretation off the thynge is this: Man, God hath nombred thy kynngdome, and broughte it to an ende: Chazel, Thow art now yea in the baluance, and art founde to lichte: Phares, Thy kynngdome is delt in partes, and gauen to the Medes and Perses.

Then commaunded Belshasar, to clothe Daniel with purple, to hange a chemye off golde aboute his necke, and to make a proclamation concerninge him: that he shalde be the ruler off the thurde parte off his kynngdome. The very same night was Daniel thowt the kynge off the Caldees slayne, and Darius our of Media toke in the kynngdome, byngge lxx. yere off age.

The VI. Chapter.

¶ Nealed Darius to set ouer his kyngdome an C. and xx. lordes, which shulde be in all his kyngdome aboute. And he that he set the prynces (off whom Daniel was one) that the lordes mighte geue accomptes vnto them, and the kynge to be vnderstand.

But Daniel excused all these prynces, and lordes, for the spece off God was plentiful in him: so that the kynge was mysyned to set him ouer the whole realme. Wherefor the prynces and lordes soughte, to pryde out in Daniel some quarrel agaynst the kynngdome: yet coude they fynde none occasion nor faulte vpon him. For why: he was so faythful, yf there was no blame nor dishonesty founde in him.

Then sayde these men: we will get no quarrel agaynst this Daniel, excepte it be in the lawe off his God. Vpon this, wente the prynces and lordes together vnto the kynge, and sayde thus vnto him: Myngge Darius, God saure thy life for euer.

All the great estates off the realme: as yf prynces, dukes, senecours and iudges, are termed to put out a commaundement off yf kynge, and to make a sure statute: namely, that who so desyret any petition, ether of any god or man (with in this xxx. dayes) excepte it be only off the, O kynge: the same person maye be cast into the Lyons denne. Wherefor, o kynge, confirme thow this statute, and make a wyngge: that the thynge which the Medes and Perses haue ordered be not altered ner broken.

So Darius made the wyngge, and confirmed it. Now when Daniel embrothred that the wyngge was made, he wente in to his house: and the wyndowes of his hall commaund: Jerusalem stode open. There he lett he downe vpon his knees, that tymes a daye: there he made his petition, and prayd for his God, like as his maner was to do afore tyme.

Then these men made searche, and founde Daniel makinge his petition, and prayinge vnto his God. So they came to the kynge, and spake before him concerninge his commaundement, saynges: O kynge, hast thou not subscribed the statute, that within xxx. dayes who so requyret his petition off any god or man, but only of thyselfe, o kynge: he shalbe cast in to the denne of the Lyons? The kynge answered, ad sayde: yee, it is true. It must be as a lawe of yf Medes and Perses, that maye not be broken.

Then answered they, and sayde vnto the kynge: Daniel one of the prisoners of Iuda (O kynge) regardeth neither the ner thy statute, that thou hast made, but maketh his petition the tymes a daye. When the kynge herde these wordes, he was fore grieved, and wolde haue excused Daniel, to deliuer him, and put off the matter, vnto the Somerwete downe, to the intent that he mighte see him.

These men perceauynge the bynges myn-de, sayde vnto hit: none this (o bynge) that the lawe off the Moyses and Peres is, that the commaundement and statute which the bynge maketh, maye not be altered. Then the bynge had them bryngs Daniel, and they cast him in to the Lyons denne.

The bynge also spake vnto Daniel, ad sayde: Thy God, whom thou alwaye trustest, euen he shall defende the. And there was brought a stone, and layd vpon the hole of the denne: this the bynge sealed with his owne bynge, and with y signet of his prynces: that the bynges commaundement concey-nyng Daniel, shalde not be broken.

So the bynge wrote in to his palace, and kepte him sober all night, so that there was no table spread before him, neither coude he eate any slepe. But by tymes in the monyng at the break of the daye, the bynge arose, and wente in all haist vnto the denne off the Lyons.

It was as he came nye vnto y denne, he cried w' a piteous voyce vnto Daniel: see y bynge spake, and sayde vnto Daniel: O Daniel, thou seruaunt off the kyuyngs God, Is not thy God (whom thou alwaye trustest) able to deliuer the from the Lyons? Daniel sayde vnto the bynge: O bynge, God saue thy life for ever.

My God hath sent his angel, which hath shut the Lyons mouthes, so that they mighte not hurte me. For why: myne yngrateynesse is founde out before him. And as for the bynge) I neuer offended the.

Then was the bynge excheaunge glad, ad commaunded to take Daniel out off the denne. So Daniel was brought out off the denne, and no maner of hurte was founde vps him For he put his trust in his God. And as for those men which had accused Daniel, the bynge commaunded to bunge them, and to cast them in the Lyons denne: them, their children and their wyues. So the Lyons had the mastery of them, and brake all their bones a son-der, or euer they came at the grounde.

After this, wrote bynge Darus vnto all people, kynredes and tonges, that dwelt in all londes: peace be multiplied with you: My commaundement is, in all my Dominie and kyngdome, that men feare and stonde in awe off Daniels God:

For he is the kyuyngs God, which aby-deth euer: his kyngdome shall not faile, and his power is everlastinge. It is he that be-lyueth, and saureth: he both wonderis and maruelous wroites, in heauen and in earth:

he hath preserued Daniel from the power of the Lyons. This Daniel preserued is that raigne off Darus and Cyrus of Persia.

The VII. Chapter.

In the first yeare off Belshazzars kinge off Babilon, saue Daniel and me, and a vision was in his hea-ren vpon his bedde. Which dreame he saw, and the summe of the matter is this: Daniel spake, and sayde: I sawe in my vision myghte, and beholde: the foure wynges of heauen sate vpon the sea, and from grand bestes came vp from the sea, one vnder the other.

The first was as a Lyon, and yet had Agles wynges. I sawe, that his wynges were plucked from him, and he taken awy from the earth: that he stode vpon his feet as a man, and that there was graun-d as mans herbe.

Beholde, the seconde best was like a Lion, and stode vpon the one fyde. Among hit, and in his mouth he had y great signet and it was sayde vnto him: Arise, and eat my flesh.

Then I looked, and beholde, there was another like vnto a Leopard: this had wynges as a foule, euen foure vpon the backe. The best had foure heades, ad there was yongeren him. After this I sawe in a vision myghte, and beholde: the fourth best was grime and horrible, and maruelous strong: I had greate yron ceth, it denourid, and deuoyed, and stamped the wylde vnder feet. I was farr vnto the other bestes than was before it: for it had ten homes, wheroff I toke good hede.

And beholde, there came vp among another like home, be fore whom there was the of the first homes plucked awy. Beho-de, this home had eyes like a man, and spakynge presumpuous thinges. These like the sea was prepared, ad till the aged sat him downe. His clothing was a wybe as snewe, and the haire of his haire like the pure wolle.

This treme was like the fire flame, and wholes as the burninge fyre. There was forth a fire burninge, and wente out from his thousand tymes a thousande yered his fyre. My tymes ten thousande stode before him. The wyngit was fit, and the docter Then toke I hede there vnto, because of the voyce of the pious wordes, which he spake.

Beholde, till the best was slayne, and his body destroyed, & geuen ouer to be burnt in the fyre.

As for the power of the other bestes al-his was taken awaye, but their lynes were prolonged for a tyme and season. I sawe in a vision by night, and beholde: there came one in the cloudes of heauen like the sonne of a man, which worde vnto the olde ageb, before whom they brought him: Then gaue he him power ad dignitee re gall, that all people, trybes and kinges shoulde serue him. His power is an euerlastinge power, which shal neuer be put downe: & his Kingdome endureth inuicible. My heret was veyed, & I Daniel had a troubled sleepe within me, ad the visions off my heade made me a frayed: till I gaue me vnto one off them that stode by, to knowe the treuth, concerninge all the se thinges. So he tolde me, and made me vnderstande the interpretaciō of these thinges.

These foure greates bestes, are foure kinges which shal arise out of the earth. The first take in the Kingdome off the saynes of the most byest, and possesse it still more & more for a longe season. After this I requy-red diligently to knowe the treuth, concerninge the fourth best, which was so farre vnito the other bestes, and so horrible: whose teeth were of yron, and his nailes off brass: which beate and destroyed, and stamped the residue vnder his feet. I desired also to knowe the treuth, as touchinge the ten ho-rnes that he had vpon his heade, and this other which came vp a sterward, be fore whose face they fell downe: the which borne had eyes and a mouth that spake presumptuous thinges, and looked with a grimme vi-sage then his felowes.

Beholde, and the same borne made battle agaynst the saynes, yee ad gat the victory off them: vntill the tyme, that the olde agē came, that the indignitee was great to the deest saynes: and till the tyme, that y saynes had the Kingdome in possession.

So gaue me this answer: That fourth best shal be the fourth Kingdome vps earth: it shal be more then all other Kingdomes, it shall beaure, treade downe ad destroye all other Landes.

The ten hornes, are ten Kinges that shal arise out of that Kingdome, after whō they shall stonde vpon another, which shall be greater then the first.

So shall subdue the Kinges, and shall speake wordes agaynst the byest off all: he shall destroye the saynes of the most byest and thynke, that he maye chaunge tymes and lawes. They shall be geuen vnder his power, vntill a tyme, two tymes, and halff a tyme.

But the indignitee shal be depe, so that his power shal be taken from him, for he shal be despoiled, and perishe at the last. As for the Kingdome, power and all mighte that is vnder: he heauen: it shal be geuen to the holy people off the most byest, whose Kingdome is euerlastinge, yee all powers shall serue and obeye him. Thus saire scribe y wordes.

Then answered, I Daniel was so vey-ed in my thoughtes, that my countenannce chaunged, but the wordes I receiued still in my heart.

The VIII. Chapter.

At the thirde yeare off the raigne of Kinge Belshazar, there appeared a vision vnto me Daniel, after that I had lene the first. I sawe in a vision, (and when I sawe it, I was at Susa in the chere cite, which lyeth in the londe off Elam) and in y vision, me thoughte I was by the ryuer off Bati.

Then I looked vp, and sawe: and beholde there stode before the ryuer, a ramme, which had hornes: and these hornes were hye, but one was hyer then another, and the hyest came vp last. I sawe that this ramme possed with his hornes, agaynst the west, agaynst the north, and agaynst the south: so that no bestes mighte stonde before him, nee defend them from his power: that he byd as him list, and wayed greatly. I tote hede vnto this, and then came there an hegoate from the west, ouer the whole earth, and couched nee the grounde.

This goate had a marvelous goobly horne betwixt his eyes, and came vnto the ram-me, that he had the two hornes (whom I had sene a fore by the ryuer syde) and ranne fearcely vpon him with his mighte. I sawe him brayne vnto the ramme, be yinge very fe-ce vpon him: yee he gaue him such a stroke, that he brake his two hornes:

Then had the ramme so much strength as to stonde before him: but he test him downe, nee trode him vnder his feet: and no man was able to deliuer the ramme out of his power.

The goate watred vpon him, and when he was at the strongest, his greace horne was broken also. Then grewe there ocher four souch like in the stonde, to ward the sou-

The prophet Daniel.

^{11.7.4} ^{11.7.8} ^{11.8} he wyndes off the heauen. And out of one of the rest off these homes, there came vp yet another home, which was of marvellous great: to worde the south, so worde the east, and towards the saye pleasaunt londe. It grewe vp to the hooff off heauen, wherof it dyd cast some downe to the grounde, and off the starrs also, and trode them under fete.

Yes it grewe vp vnto the pryncce off the hooff, from whom the daylie offeringe was taken, and the place off his Sanctuary casten downe. And a certayne season was geuen vnto it, agaynst the daylie offeringe (the cause of which thinge is that it mighte cast downe the wicket to the grounde, and so to profpere in all thinges, that it went aboute. Upon this I herde one off the sayntes speake, which saynt sayde vnto one that asked this question:

How longe shall this vision off the daylie sacrifice and of the wastinge abhominacion endure, that the Sanctuary and the pryncce shall so be troden vnder fete? And he answered him: Vnto the euenyng & the morninge, euen two thousande and thre hundred dayes: then shall the Sanctuary be cleuid agayne.

E Then when I Daniel had seene this vision, and soughte for the vnderstandinge of it beholde, there stode before me a thinge like vnto a man. And I herde a mans voyce in the ryme off Vla, which cryed, and sayde: O Gabriel, make this man vnderstande the vision. So he came, and stode by me. But I was afrayed at his comyng, and fell downe vpon my face.

Then sayde he vnto me: O thou sonne of man, make thee well, for in the last tyme shall this vision be fulfilled. Then as he was speake vnto me, I wasd sayntes, so that I sunk: downe to the grounde. But he toke holde vpon me, and set me vp agayne, sayyng: Beholde, I will shewe the, what shall happen in the last tyme: for in the tyme appointed it shal be fulfilled.

The ramme which thou sawest with the two homes, is the kynge off the Medes and Perses: but the goate is the kynge off Greke londe: the greates home that stode betwix his eyes, that is the principall kynge. But where as it biate, and foure other rose vp in the steade: it signifyeth, that out of this people shall stonde vp foure kynngdomes, but none so mightie as it.

D After these kynngdomes (whyle vngodnesse is a growyng) there shall arys a kynge off an vnharnessefulle soce, which shall wyse in hard speakeynges.

He shall be mightie and stronge, he shall haue his owne strength. He shall bestyre the we measure, and all that be goyth about shall prospere: he shall slaye the stronge and holy people. And though his craftyn, his selde shall prosper in his bonds, his ym shall be proude, and many one shall be put to deach in his wechynesse. He shall stonde vp agaynst the pryncce off prynces, but he shall be destroyed withoute honde. And the vision that is shewed vnto the, is as fast as the euenyng and the morninge. Therefore wyte thou vpon this sight, for it wyll longe or it come to passe.

Upon this was I Daniel very fearefull, that I laye sicke certayne dayes: but when I rose vp, I wene aboute the kynge besynesse, and marueled at the vision, because no man knewe of it.

The X. Chapter.

In the first yere off Darius the first off Ahasuerus, which was of the side off the Medes, it was made kyng ouer the realme off the Caldees: he returned in the first yere off his raigne, I Daniel desired to knowe the yearly nombre of the booke, wherof the LORD E spake vnto Jeremy the prophete: that Ierusalem shalde wast 42. yeres: ad I turned me vnto the LORD E, for to praye and make my intercessio, with fastynges, sack cloth and askes: I prayed before the LORD E my God, and knowledged, sayyng:

O LORD E, thou greates & fearfulle God, thou that kepest cōmmands and mercy with them, which loue the, and do thy cōmmandments: We haue synned, we haue offēdyd, we haue bene disobedient and gone backe: yee we haue departed from all thy preceptes and iudgements.

We wolde neuer folowe thy seruantes the prophetes, that spake in thy name to our kynges and prynces to cure our synnes, and to all the people off the londe. O LORD E, righteuousnesse belongeth vnto the, and we penytentes noth ynged but open hart: as it is come to passe this daye vnto euery man off Iuda, and to them that dwell at Ierusalem.

Yes vnto all Irael, whether they be senn or nye: thoue out all lent es, wherein thou hast serued them, because off the offences that they had done agaynst the.

1. THE LORDE, unto vs, to oure Kinges & princes, to oure foy fathers: euen to vs all, that haue offended the, belongeth open shew. But unto the LORDE oure God, pertaineth mercy and forgiveness. As for vs, we are gone backe from him, and haue not obeyed the voyce of the LORDE oure God, to walke in his lawes, which he layed before vs by his seruantes the prophetes: yee all I shall haue transgressed, and gone backe from thy lawes, so that they haue not heard vs to thy voyce.

2. What for the curse and dooth, that is written in the lawe of Moyses the seruante of God (against whom we haue offended) is poured vpon vs. And he hath performed his wordes, which he spake agaynst vs, & agaynst our wightes that iudged we wold bringe vpon vs such a greates plage, as neuer was vnder heauen, late as it is now come to passe in Ierusalem, & all this plage, as it is written in the lawe of Moyses, is come vpon vs. Yet made we not oure prayer before the LORDE oure God, that we might turne agayne from oure wickednesse, and to be leered in thy verite. Therefore hath y LORDE made haist, to build this place vpon vs: for the LORDE oure God is righteous, in all his workes which he doth: for why, we wold not harden vnto his voyce.

3. And now, O LORDE oure God, thou that hast a mighty honde hast brought thy people out of the gypt, to get thy self a name, which remaineth this daye: we haue synned (O LORDE) & bene wickedly agaynst all thy righteousnes: yee let thy wrath full displeasure be turned a myne, I beseeche the: from thy cite Ierusalem thy holy hill. And why? for our synnes sake and for the wickednesse of oure fow fathers: in Ierusalem and thy people aboute, of all them that are aboute vs. Now therefore (O oure God) heare the praye of thy seruante, and his intercession: Let thy face shyne ouer thy sanctuary, that lieth wast.

O my God, encline thine care, and hearken (or the least for thine owne sake) open thine eyes: beholde how we be desolaced, yee and the cite also, which is called a free thy name: for we do not cast oure payres before the: in oure owne righteousnesse, no: but only in thy greates mercie. O LORDE, heare: O fowren LORDE and LORDE confounde, eary not our longing: but for thine owne sake do it. O my God, for thy cite and thy people is called a free thy name.

4. As I was yet speakinge at my prayere, knowinge in myne owne synnes and of synnes of my people, makinge so myne intercession before the LORDE my God, for the holy hils sake of my God: yee while I was yet speakinge in my prayer, beholde, the ma^g Daniel (whom I had sent a fore in the vision) came flyenge to me, and couched me aboate of offeringe tyme in the eveninge. He in fourme met me, and spake vnto me: O Daniel (as he) I am now come, to make the vnderstande it: for as soone as thou beganst to make thy prayer, it was so duryed, and therfore am I come to shewe the. And why? for thou art a man greatly beloved.

Wherfore, pouise the matter well, that thou mayest learne, to vnderstande the vision. For wekes are deturmed ouer thy people, & ouer thy holy cite: that the wickednesse maye be confounde, that the synne maye haue an ende, that the offence maye be reconciled, and to bringe in euerlastinge righteousnesse, to fulfill of visions and the prophetes, and to anoynt the most holy one. Vnderstande this then, and marcke it well: that from the tyme it shalbe concluded, to go and repaie Ierusalem agayne vnto Christ (or the anoynted) prince: there shalbe siuen wekes. Then shall the stretes & walles be buylded agayne Ixxij. wekes, but with hard trouble and tyme. After that these Ixxij. wekes, shal Christ be slayne, & they shal haue no pleasure in him. Then shal there come a people with the prince, and desire ye the cite and the sanctuary and his ende shal come as the water floure. But the desolation shal continue till the ende of the battell.

He shall make a stronge bonde with many, for the space of a weke: and when the weke is half gone, he shal put downe the slayne and in euerlastinge. And in the temple there shalbe an abhominable desolation, till it haue destroyed all. And it is concluded, of this waitinge shal continue vnto the ende.

The X. Chapter.

In the thirde yeare of Kinge Cyrus of Persia, there was shewed vnto Daniel (otherwise called Balthasar) a matter, yea a true matter, but it is yet a long tyme vnto it.

He vnderstode the matter well, and perceived what the vision was. After thine tyme, I Daniel mourned for the space of thre wekes, so that I had no luste to eate drinke: as for flesh and wyne, there came none within my mouth: For, I byd not onis anoynt myself: all the wholy thre wekes were out.

The prophet Daniel.

Upon the xxiii. daies of the first moneth, I was by the greates fionde, called Tigris: I lift up myne eyes, and looked: and beholde, a man clothed in synnyng, whose loynes were girded vp with fyne golde of Araby: his body was like the Chyulolite stone, his face (to looke vpon) was like lightheynng, his eyes as the flame of fyre, his armes and feet were like sayre glisteringe metall, but the voyce of his wordes was like y^e voyce of a multraide.

B Daniel alone sawe this vision, the men that were with me, sawe it not: but a greates fearfulness fell vpon them, so that they fled awaie, and hyd them selues. I was left there my self alone, and sawe this greates vision, so longe as there remayned nomore strenght within me: yet I lost my coloure cleare, I waished awaie, and my strenght was gone. yet berde I the voyce of his wordes: z as soone as I berde it, sayntnesse came vpon me, and I fell downe flat to the grounde vpon my face. And beholde, an hande touched me, which set me vp vpon my knees z vpon the palmes of my handes, sayenge vnto me:

dan. 9. b

O Daniel, thou well beloued man: make good heede of the wordes, that I shal saye vnto y^e. z stode right vp, for vnto y^e am I now sent. And when he had sayde these wordes, I stode vp trembling. Then saide he vnto me: feare not Daniel: for why, serue the first daie that thou seest him here to vnderstonde, and dost chaste thy self before thy God: thy wordes haue bene herde. And I had come vnto the whē thou be gannest to speake, had not the prynce ouer the kingdome of the Perses w^ostonde me xxi. daies. But lo, Michael one of the these prynces, came to helpe me, him haue I left by the kyng of Persia, z am come to steepe the, what shal happen vnto thy people in the latter daies: for it wil be as ge yet: or the vision be fulfilled.

C Now when he had spoken these wordes vnto me, I left do w^o my heade to y^e ground, and helde my ruyng. Beholde, there touched my lippes one, very like vnto a man. Then opened I my mouth, and sayde vnto him, that stode before me: O my lord, my loynes are lowed in the vision, and there is no moie strenght within me: how maye my lordes seruante then talke with my lord? sainge there is no strenght in me, so that I can not take my breath: vpon this there touched me aga yne, one moch like a man, z comforted me, sa ynge: O thou man so well beloued, feare noche content, take a good here vnto the, and be stronge. So when he had spoken vnto me, I recovered, z sayde: Spea ke on my lord, for thou hast se first shew me. The sayde he: knowest thou wher thou I am come vnto y^e? now wil I go agaynst the, to the prynces of the Perses. As thou art I go south to the prynces of Babel: and shal come. Leuer theles, I wil shew thee the thinge, y^e is fast noced in the scrupose of man. And as for all yonder matter, there is none that helpe me in them, but Michael y^e prynces.

The XI. Chapeer.

AND in the first yeare of Darius the dia, I stode by him, to comfort him, to strenght him, and now wil I shew thee the truth. Beholde, there shal be vp yeechie kynges in Persia, but y^e fourth shal be farre richer then they all. And whē he is in the chiefe power of his raigne, I shal prouoke euery man agaynst the raigne of Babel: and then shal there arise y^e mightie kyng, that shal rule with greates minion, and do what him list. And as soon as his kingdome commeth vp, it shal be destroyed, z decayed to worde y^e foure wynds of the heauen. They y^e come after him shal not haue soch power z dominion as he: his his kingdome shal be scattered, yet none maye ether the chose. And the kyng of y^e first shal be mightier, then his ocher prynces. I ga ynt him there shal one make himself ge, z shal rule his dominion y^e greates part.

But after certayne yeares they shal be ynd together, z the kynges daughter of the south shal come to the kyng of the north, for to make freds ship, but she shal not receiue the power of that arme, ne she shal be able to endure the row his might: but she z soch as brought her yet: z he y^e began her comforted her for his tyme: shal be decayed vnto y^e. Or of y^e bannethes of darrow: the first one stonde vp in his steade: which with the power of armes shal go thorow the kyngs in be of the north, z bamble him according to his strenght. As for their Jewels z pryces with their costly Jewels of golde: shal he shal cary them a waye captiues into Egipt, and he shal persecute agaynst the kyng of the north certayne yeares. And whē he is come in to y^e kynges realme of y^e fourth shal be sayne to turne agayn in to his owne londe. Wherfore his sennes shal be pleased, and shal gather together a myghtie greates hoost of people: and one of them shal come, and go thorow like a waterfoure: then shal he recurre, and go south with his fryenge and boostinge vnto his owne londe. The kyng of y^e fourth shal be mightie and shal come forth to fight agaynst the kin-ge of the north: hee he shall bringe a greate multitude of people together, and a greate hoorde shalbe gathered into his hande: these shal be carry away wth greate pryde, for so much as he hath cast downe so many thousandes, newerhelpe he shall not p^{er}meale. For y^e kin-ge of y^e north shal gather (of the new) a greate hoorde of people then a fore, & come south (after a certayne tyme and yeares) with a mighty hoost & exceedingly greate good.

C At the same tyme there shall many stande up agaynst the kinge of the south, so that y^e wilde children of thy people also shal exaltation them selves (to fulfill the vision) and then fall. So the kinge of the north shall come to lay siege, and to take the stronge fenced cities: And the power of the k^{ing} of y^e south shal not be able to abyde him, & the best men of the people shall not be so stronge, as to resist him.
Shortly, when he commeth, he shall handle him as he list: & no man shalbe so hardy as to stande agaynst him. He shal reside in the pleasant countrey, which thowow him shalbe destroyed. He shal see his face wth all his power to opene his kingdome, & to be like it. And that shal he do, & geue him into the bounde of his enemye women, & destroye him. And he shal saye, rather shal he opene his purpose. After this, shall he see his face vnto the Ies, & take many of the. A prince shal stop-pe him, to do him a shame, besyde the confusion that els shal come vnto him. Thus shal he tume agayne to his owne londe, stumbe, & fall, and be notable founde: so he that came vpon him & dyd him violence, shal stande in his place, & haue a pleasant kingdome: and after few dayes he shal be destroyed, & that

D neither in wylde net in battell. In his steade there shal arise a wyle person not holdy worcraftily, & opene the kingdome with fayre wordes: he shal fight agaynst the armie of the mightie (& destroye them), yet & agaynst the prince of the conuenant.

To after y^e he hath taken truce with him, he shal bidde disceitfully: that he maye see vnto, & overcome him with a small host: & so with craftynesse to get him to y^e fittest place of the londe, and to deale other wyl, then with his fathers, or grandfathers dyd. For he shal destroye the thinge, y^e they had robbed & spoyled, yet & all their substance: yea gatheringe together agaynst the stronge heldes, & that for a tyme. His power and herre shalbe stirred up wth a greate armie agaynst the kinge of the south: where thowow the kin-ge of the south shalbe moved then vnto battelle, with a greate & mighty hoost also. He uerbeleest, he shal not be able to stande, for they shal conspyre agaynst him. And they y^e case of his meate, shal burte hom so that his hoost shal fall, & many be slayne downe.

These two kinges shalbe mynided to do myselfe, & talke of disceite at one table: but they shal not prospere: for why, the ende shal not come yet, vnto the tyme appointed. The shall he go home agayne in to his owne lon-de wth y^e greate good, & set his hart agaynst the holy conuenant, he shalbe busy agaynst it, & then retorne home. At the tyme appoynted he shal come agayne, & go toward the south: So shall it happen otherwys then at the first, yet ones agayne. And wher the ship-peo of Tychim shal come vpon him, that he maye be shynen & tume agayne: y^e he maye take indignacion agaynst the conuenant of holynesse, to medle agaynst it. And he shal turne him, & diuine soch vnto him, as leaue the holy conuenant.

He shal see mighty men to vnhalowe the sanctuary of sergents, to put downe the day-ly offeringe, & to set vp the abominable of solation. And soch as break the conuenant, shal he stare with fayre wordes. And y^e people that wil knowe their God, shal haue the quarter and prospere. These also that haue vnderstandinge amonge the people, shal enforce the multitude: & for a longe season, they shalbe persecuted wth swordes, with swe, with captyuete & wth the takinge awaye of their goodes. How wth they fall, they shalbe set up with a litle helpe: but many shal deare vnto them sayndly.

Yet some of those which haue vnderstondyng shal be persecuted also: y^e they maye be cryed, punished & c^osted, till the tyme be curd for there is yet another tyme appointed.
The kinge shal do rather him life, he shal exal-te and magnifie himself agaynst all, that is God. And he shal speake maruclous thinges agaynst the God of all goddes, wherein he shal prospere, so longe till the warth be fulfilled, for the conclusion is beynded already. He shal not regard the God of his fathers, but his last shall be vpon wth: And he shal not care for any God, for he shal magnifie himselfe alone all. In his place shal he worshippe the mightie Idols: & the god whom his fathers knewe not, shal he honour wth god-de and slyler, with p^{er}icious soome and pleasant Jewels.

This shal he do, settinge helpe and confide at the mightie Idole and straunge god:

The prophet Daniel.

des. Soch as wil receaue him, and take him for God, he shal geue them greace, wo:shipe and power: yee and make them lordes of the multitude, and geue them the londe with rewardes. In the laster tyme, shal the kinge of the south stryue with him: and the kinge of the north in like maner shal come agaynst him with charutes, hoisemen & with a greate many of shippes. He shal come in to the londe, & destroye and go thoro:we: he shal enere also in to the sayne pleasaunt londe. Many cities & countrees shal becaue, excepte Eodom, Moab & the best of the children of Ammon, which shal escape from his honde. He shall stretch forth his hōdes vpon the countrees, & the londe of Egipte shal not escape him. For thoro:we his goinge in, he shal haue dominion ouer the treasures of silver & golde, & ouer all the precious Jewels of Egipte, & ybia and Ethiopia. Twere hellesse the rydinges out of the east and the north shall trouble him, for the which cause he shal go forth to destroye & curse a greate multitude. The tentes of his palace shall be pyrd betwixte the two seas, vpon the hill of the noble sanctuary, for he shal come to the ende of it, and then shal no man helpe him.

The XII. Chapter.

In the tyme wil come also, that the greace prynce Michael, which stondech on thy peoples syde, shal arise vp, for there shal come a tyme of trouble, soch as neuer was, sens there begane to be any people, into that same tyme. Then shal thy people be deluyered, yee all those that be folide witten in the booke. Many of them that slepe in the dust of the earth, shal awake: some to euerlastinge life, some to perpetuall shame & reprove. The wyse (soch as haue taughte othyr) shal glifst, as the hymnyng of beaues: and those that haue instructed the multitude into godlynesse, shal be as the starras, wold be without ende.

And thou o Daniel, shut up these wordes, & seale the booke, all the last tyme. Many shal go abente here and there, and che shal thewrege increase. So J Daniel toke, and beholde, there stode ether two: one vpon this shore of the water, the other vpon yender syde. And one of the sayde unto him, to which was clothed in hymnyng, and stode aboue vpon the waters of the founte: how longe shall it kee the ende of these wonderous wordes? Then herbe J the man with the hymnyng clothes, which stode aboue vpon the waters of the founte: when he helde up his ryghte and left honde unto heauen, & swa by him which lyueth for ever: that in shal earely be tyme, two tymes & half a tyme: & with the power of the holy people is clearely combrode, che shal all these thinges be fulfilled.

J herbe it well, but J vnderstonde it not. Then sayde J: O my lord, what shal I open a fyer that? He answered: O che mynnyng Daniel, for these wordes shal be chey wrytten, all the last tyme: & many shal be purified, clensed & tried. But the ungodly shal lyue wickedly, and chey wylde ch as many of the as they be shal haue no vnderstoning. As for soch as haue vnderstoning, they shal regarde it. And from y tyme forth, che the daulie offeringe shal be pcedome: & che abominable desolacion shal be vp, che shal haue a thour and two hundred & se. daies. And io hum, that waicth, & cometh to the same iij. C. & xxx. daies. So che to the same iij. C. & xxx. daies. So che to the same iij. C. & xxx. daies. So che to the same iij. C. & xxx. daies. So che to the same iij. C. & xxx. daies. So che to the same iij. C. & xxx. daies. So che to the same iij. C. & xxx. daies. So che to the same iij. C. & xxx. daies.

Chap. XI. XII. God calleth them agayne, with the arsinge his benedictione vpon them agayne.
Chap. XIII. He sheweth them their wickednes, and punishment for the same.
Chap. XIII. He crieth and exhorteth the people to conuerse, promysse of iustlye and lawfullye to receaue them.

This is the worde of the LORD

Which came vnto Oſeas the ſonne of Beeri in the dayes of Oſias, Iothan, Achaz & Ezechias Kinges of Iuda: and in the tyme of Jeroboam the ſonne of Ioas kynge of Iſrael.

The firſt Chapter.

Iuſt, when the LORD E ſpake vnto Oſeas, he ſaide vnto him: Go thy waye, take an harlot to thy wiſe, and get childre by her: for thy woed hath conceyued greates whor dome agaynſt the LORD E. So he wente, and toke ſomer y daughter of Deblaim: which conceaued, and bare the ſorthe ſonne. And the LORD E ſayde vnto him: call his name Iſrael, for I wil ſhortly auenge the bloude of Iſrael vpon the heuſe of Iehu, and will bringe the kingdomes of the houſe of Iſrael to an ende. Then will I breake the bowe of Iſrael, in the valley of Iſrael.

She conceaued yet agayne, and bare a daughter. And he ſayde vnto him: Call his name Loubama (that is, noc opeyninge mercy) for I wil haue no pyre vpon the houſe of Iſrael, but forger them, and put them downe out of remembrance. Neuertheleſſe I wil haue mercy vpon the houſe of Iuda, & will ſaue them, euen thoſe who the LORD E their God. But I wil not deliuer them thoſe who my bow ſwarbe, batel, hoſtes or hoſtinen.

Now when ſhe had weened Loubama, ſhe conceaued agayne, & bare ſomer. Then ſayde he: call his name Lo Am: (that is to ſay, noc my people.) For why ye are not my people, therefore will noc I be yours. And though the nombre of the children of Iſrael be as the ſande of the ſee, which can nether be meafured nor tolde: yet in the place where it is ſayde vnto them, ye be not my people: and therefore ſhall it be thus reported of them: they be y childre of the Ilynyng Bed. Then ſhal the childre of Iuda and the childre of Iſrael be gathered together agayne, & ſhoſe them ſelues one heade, and then departe out of the londe: for greace ſhal be the daye of Iſrael.

The ii. Chapter.

All youre brethien, that they are my people: and youre ſiſteren, that they haue opeyned mercy. So for youre moecher, ye ſhal dvyde with her, and reſpouſe her: for ſhe is not my wiſe, nether am I hir hiſſebode: wleſſe ſhe put awaye hir whor dome out of my ſighe, and hir aduourry from hir beſtes. If no, I ſhal ſtrype her naked, & ſet her, euen as ſhe came in to y woilde: yet I ſhal laye hir maſſe, and make her like a wilderneſſe, and ſlaye her ſorchevyte. I ſhal haue no pitye alſo vpon hir children, for they be the children of ſumacion.

Their moecher hath broken hir wedlocke, and ſhe char bare them, is come to conſuſion. For ſhe ſayde: I wil go after my louers, that geue me my water and my bread, my woll & my flap, my oyle and my bynne. But I will hege hir waye with thornes, and ſtoppe it, that ſhe ſhal not fynde hir ſoſte ppe: and though ſhe turne after hir louers, yet ſhall ſhe not get them: ſhe ſhal ſee them, but noc fynde them. Then ſhal ſhe ſay: w ell, I will go eurne agayne to my firſt hiſſebode, for at y tyme was I better at eaſe, then now. But thio wolde ſhe noc knowe, where as y yet gaue her come, wyne, oyle, ſyluer and golde, which ſhe hath hanged vpon Baal.

Wherefore now will I go take my come & wyne agayne in their ſeaſon, and ſe agayne my woll and my flap, which I gaue her, to couer hir ſhame. And now will I diſcouer hir fooliſhneſſe, euen in the ſight of hir louers, and no man ſhal deliuer her out of my bondes. Moreover, I wil take awaye all hir mynth, hir holy dayes, hir new moone, hir Sabbathes and all hir ſolempne feaſtes: I will deſtroye hir wynyardes and fyge trees, though ſhe ſaith: lo, here are my rewardes, that my louers haue geuen me. I wil make it a woilde, and the wyde beemes ſhall eate it up: I will punyſh her alſo for the dayes of Baal, wherein ſhe cenſed him, ded yngen him with hir earrynges and cheryes: when ſhe ſolowed hir louers, and forgaue me, ſaith the LORD E.

Wherefore beholde, I wil call her agayne, bringe her in to a wilderneſſe, and ſpeake frendly vnto her: there wil I geare her hir wynyardes agayne, yet and the valley of Achor alſo, to ſtewe hir hope & com ſorthe. Then ſhal ſhe ſynge there as in the tyme of hir youth, & like as in the daye when she came out of the londe of the egyp̄t. Then ſaith the LORDE ſhe ſhal ſaye vnto me: O my houſbande, ⁊ ſhal call me nomine Baal: for I wil take awaye her of her names of Baal from hir month, yeſe ſhe ſhal neuer remember their nameo any more. Then wil I make a conuenaunt with them, with the wyld beaſtes, with the foules of the ayre, ⁊ with euery thinge that creepeth vpon the earth.

the come, wyne and oyle, and they ſhal helpe Jeſrael. I wil ſowre them vpo earth, for a ſe-de to myne owne ſelf, ⁊ wil haue mercy vpon her, ⁊ ſo as with our mercy. And to the which

The V. Chapter.

Hear this, o ye prestes: take heede, o thes housholde of Israel: geue care, o thes kingly house: for this punysshment wil come vpon you, that are become a snare vnto Issachar, and a spied net vnto the name of Ephodis. They kill sacrifices by heapes, to begyle the people therewith: therfor wil I punysh them all. I knowe Ephraim well ynough, & Israel is not byd frome: for Ephraim is become an harlot, and Israel is defiled. They are not mynded to turne vnto their God, for they haue an vnhelysh heart, so y they can not knowe the LORDE.

But the pryde of Israel wil be rewarded him in his face, yet both Israel and Ephraim shall fall for their wickednesse, and Iuda shall fall also. They shall come with their shepe 7 bullockes to seeke of LORDE, but they shall not fynde him, for he is gone from them. Al for the LORDE, they haue refused him, and brought vp bastarde children: a moneth thesore shall deuoure them with their peccans.

Blowe with the shawme at Gaba, and with the trumpet in Kanis, crye out at Bethan upon the yorhside of Ben Iamin. In the tyme of y plague shal Ephraim be layed wast, therfor byd I faithfully warne the wythes of Israel. Yet are the pynces of Iuda become like them, that ransome the lombardes, therfor wil I poure out my wrath vpon them like water. Ephraim is oppresed, and can haue no right of the lawe: for why they selowe y doctrynes of men. Therfor wil I be vnto Ephraim as a moth, & to the house of Iuda as a caterpillar.

When Ephraim sawe his sicknesse, and Iuda his decaye: Ephraim wente vnto Assur, and sent vnto Kinge Iared: yet coude not he helpe you, nor ease you of youre payne. I am vnto Ephraim as a lyon, and as a lyons whelp to the house of Iuda. Euen I, I wil spoyle them, & go my waye. I wil take them with me, and no man shall rescue them. I wil go, and returne to my place, till they waape for me, and seke me.

The Vi. Chapter.

Hear their aduersite they shall seeke me, and saye: come, let vs turne agayne vnto the LORDE: for he hath syncreten vs, & he shal heale vs: he hath wounded vs, & he shal bynde vs up agayne: after two dayes shal he quyeten vs, in the thirde daye he shal raise vs up, so chat we shal lyue in his ryde. Then shal not haue vnto destructionge, & we shal see our felix to knowe the LORDE.

Thes hal go forth as the spryng of the daye, and come vnto vs as the eveninge and moonyng rayne vpon the earth.

Ephraim, wher shal I do vnto the: O Iuda, how shal I increace the: seynge your losse is like a moonyng dewe, & like a dew y goeth early awaye. Therfor haue I cast downe the prophetes, & letten them be slayne for my wordes sake, so that they penyshment shal come to lichte. For I haue pleasyre in loyngge y byndesse, and not in offeryng: keepe the knowledge of God, more then in burnt sacrifices. But euen like as Adam byd, so haue they broken my couenaunt, and set me at nought. Galaad is a cite of wicked doers of maliens people and bloushedders. The multitude of the prestes is like an heape of thewes, murderers & bloudthirstie: for they haue wrought abhominacion. Someride they gesse haue I sene in the house of Israel, there playeth Ephraim the harlot, and Israel is defiled: but Iuda shall haue an harvest for himself, when I returne the captiuyte of my people.

The VII. Chapter.

When I undertake to make Israel whole, then the vngaciousnesse of Ephraim and the wickednesse of Samaria cometh to lichte: then go they aboute with lyes. At home, they be thewes: and without, they fall to robbingye. They chide nor in their herdes, that I remitte all their wickednes. They go aboute w their owne ymencies, but I se them wel ynough. They make the kinge and the princes, to haue pleasure in their wickednes & lyes. All these burme in aduoutry, as it were an quen y the baker heareth, wher he hath leste kneadinge, till the doue be leuended. Euen so goth it thus waye with ourre kinges and pynces, for they begynne to be woode bronden thour wye: they vse familiarite with soch as disceaueth. They with the ymaginacion of their herde are like an out, their slepe is all y mighte like the slepe of a baker, in the moonyng to be as hotte as the flame of fyre: they are also gether as hote as an oven.

They haue deuoured their owne indges, all their kinges are fill: yet is there none of the y calleth vpon vs. Therfor must Ephraim be demite amonge y heithen. Ephraim is become like a cake, y no man turne thes strudgers haue deuoured his strength, yet he regardeth it not he was reth full of gray haire, yet wil he not knowe: yet y pryde of Israel is cast downe be fore their face, yet wil they not turne to the LORDE their God, nor seeke him, for all this.

Then will I make a couenaunt with them, with the wyld beasts, with the foules of the ayre, & with euery thinge that creepeth vpon the earth.

Thus wil I mary the wme to my owne self for euermore: yet euen to my self wil I marye the, in righteousnesse, in equyte, in louynge kyndnesse and mercy. In faith also will I marye the wme to my self, & thou shalt knowe the LORDE. At the same tyme wil I haue my self friendly and gracious wme of beausts, saith the LORDE: & the heauens shal helpe the earth, and the earth shal helpe the come, wyne and oyle, and they shal helpe Iesrael. The IIII. Chapter.

2. Eze. 16. d

Care yf woide of the LORDE, o ye childrien of Iisrael: for the LORDE must punyssh the, yf dwel in the londe. And why? There is no faithfulness, there is no mercy, there is no knowlege of God in the londe: but swearing, lyge, manslaughter, wherfit and aduourty have gotten the overhande, & one bloudgyltesse foloweth another. Therfore shal the londe be in a miserable case, and all they that dwell therein, shal moorne. The beastes in the felde, the foules in yf ayre, with the fishes in the see shall dye. There is no name, that wil chaste nor reprove another. The prestes which shuld be reforme other men, are become like the people.

Therfore I remember thou in yf dayes, & I the prophet with the wme righte. I wil hitte ge thy mother to fyntice, & why? my people perissh, because they haue no knowlege. So I ge then that thou hast refused wme from me, therfore wil I refuse yf also: so that thou shal be no more my prest. And for so much as thou hast forgotten the lawe of thy God, I wil also forget thy childe. The more thou increasest in mulcture, the more they synn agaynst me, therfore wil I change thine name in to shame. They eate up the fruyt of my people, & couage them in their wickednesse. Thus the prest is become like the people. Whytherfore I will punyssh them for their wicked eyes, & reward them according to their owne ymaginacion: They shal eate, & nor haue ynough: They haue used wme, therfore shall they not prosper: they they haue forsaken the LORDE, & norge ded him.

Whythercome, wyne an d brodder with the harz awaye. My people are come to their floeces, they suffere most tell them. In an unhoisly mynde hath discouered them, & they comerte for euacion agaynst their God. They make sacrifice vpon the hie mountaynes, & burne their in case vpon the hills, amonge the oaks, groves & bysshes, for they are good shad oves. Therfore yf thy daughter are become harlottes, and youtrespous have broke their wedlocke, I wil not kepe yf daughters for beinge defiled, & yf lodes that became whores: seinge the fathers them selues haue medled with harlots, & offered with vnterfite: but the people the wil not wnderstonde, must be punyssh.

Though thou Iisrael art dispoynd in pnye yf harlot, yet shaldest not then haue offred, o Iuda: thou shaldest not haue burnt at Balgala, nor haue gone vpo Bethel, nor haue sworne: the LORDE I syneth. For Iud is gone backe, like a wrom come. The LORDE therfore shal make his febe, as yf Iud be ch astray. And wher as the pharise haue me partaker of Idols, w.e. let him go. The brodderkesse hath put the backe, & loued them to whoredome. The harlots loued whoredome, bringe, saye they, to their owne hope. & whyne shall take holde of their synne, & they shal be confounded in their off

The V. Chapter.

Hearchiba, o ye priests: take heede, o thou householde of Israel: geue care, o thou kingly house: for this punishment will come vpon you, that are become a snare vnto Ihespa, and a spied net vnto the noose of Ephod. They kill sacrifices by heape, to begyle the people cheerevich: therefore will I punish them all. I knowe Ephraim well ynough, z Israel is not hyd fro me: for Ephraim is become an harlot, and Israel is defyled. They are not mynded to turne into their God, for they haue an vberashly heart, so they can not knowe the LORDE.

133 When the pryde of Israel will be rewarded him in his face, yett both Israel and Ephraim shall fall for their wickednesse, and Iuda with them also. They shall come with their shepe z bullockes to see the LORDE, but they shall not fynde him, for he is gone from them. As for the LORDE, they haue refused him, and brought vp bastarde children: a moueth therefore shall deuoure them with their poison.

In the me of y plague shall Ephraim be layed wast, therefore dyd I faithfully warne the trydes of Israel. Yett are the prynces of Iuda become like them, that remoued the londewardes, therefore will I poure out my wrath vpon them like water. Ephraim is opprest, and can haue no right of the lawe: for why they folowe y doctrynes of men. Therefore will I be into Ephraim as a moth, z to the house of Iuda as a caterpillar.

135 When Ephraim sawe his sicknesse, and Iuda his distaste: Ephraim wente vnto Asin, and sent vnto King Jareb: yett coude not be helpe you, nor ease you of youre payne. I will go, and returne to my place, till they waxe hyke, and siterme.

The VI. Chapter.

136 When they aduersite they shall see me, and saye: come, lee vs turne agayne to the LORDE: for he hath syncreted vs, and he shall heale vs: he hath wounded vs, z he shall vynde vs up agayne: after two dayes shall he quyeten vs, in the thide daye he shall traie vs up, so that we shall lye in his syde. Then shall we haue vnderstandinge, z we shall be quite selues to knowe the LORDE.

137 Heshal go forth as the springe of the daye, and come vnto vs as the eveninge and morninge rayne vpon the earth.

138 Ephraim, what shall I do vnto thee? O Iuda, how shall I increase thee: for yonge youre loote is like a morninge dewe, z life a dewe y goeth early awaye. Therefore haue I cutt downe the prophetes, z letten them be slayne for my wordes sake: so that they punishment shall come to lichte. For I haue pleasure in louynge thynnesse, and not in offerynge: Recorde in the knowlege of God, more than in burnt sacrifices. Butt euen like as Adam dyd, so haue they broken my couenaunt, and set me at naught. Galaad is a cite of wicked doers, of malitious people and bloodshedders. The multitude of the prestes is like an heape of theues, murderers z bloudbustlers: for they haue wrought abhominacion. Horrible thinge haue I sene in the house of Ihesaiah, there playeth Ephraim the harlot, and Israel is defyled: but Iuda shall haue an harvest for himself, when I returne the captiues of my people.

The VII. Chapter.

139 When I undertake to make Israel whole, then the ungraciousnesse of Ephraim and the wickednesse of Samaria commeth to lichte: then go they aboute with lies. At home, they be theues: and without, they fall to robbing. They coseth not in their herces, that I remembre all their wickednesse. They go aboute wth their owne ymaginacion, but I see them wel ynough. They make the kinge and the prynces, to haue pleasure in their wickednesse z lies. All these burne in adouentry, as it were an ouen y the barker heareth, wher he hath leste kneadinge, till the doore be leuended. Euen so goeth in this daye with oure kinges and prynces, for they begynne to be woode dioued: thei our wyne: they vse familiarite with such as discreueth. They with the ymaginacion of their herce are like an oue, their slepe is all y night like the slepe of a barker, in the morninge to be as hote as the flame of fyre: they are also gether as hore as an ouen.

140 When they haue deuoured their owne iudges, all their kinges are falle: yett is there none of the y callen vpon me. Therefore must Ephraim be mixte amonge y heiben. Ephraim is become like a cat, y no man turneth straungers haue deuoured his strenght, yett he retyardeth: it nott he waxeth full of gray haire, yett wil he nott knowe it: y pryde of Israel is cast downe before their face, yett wil they nott turne to the LORDE their God, nor see him, for all this.

Ephraim is like a dove, that is begyled, and hath no berce. How call they upon the Egyptians, now go they to the Assirians: but why they be gaunge here and there, I shall speake my next ouer them, & via we them downe as yf foules of the ayre: and accordinge as they haue bene warned, so will I punyssh them. We be vnto them, for they haue forsake me. They must be destroyed, for they haue set me at naught. I am he that haue redeemed them, and yet they dyssemble wth me. They call not upon me wth their hartes, but lye yonglinge vpon their beddes. Where as they come together, it is but for meate & drinke, and me will they not obeye. I haue taughte them, and defended their arme, yet do they ymagin myschefe agaynst me. They turne them selues, but not a right, & are become as a broken bowe. Their prynces shalbe slayne wth the swerde, for the malice of their tunges, such blasphemies haue they lerned in the londe of Egypte.

149. 11. d
Sette the boine to thymouth, and blowe: getteth the fowly (as an Aegle) vnto the house of the LORD: for they haue broken my covenante, and transgressed my lawe. Israel can saye vnto me: thou art my God, we knowe the: but he hath refused the thinge that is good, therfore shall the enemye folowe vpon him. They haue ordeined kinges, but not thow wth they haue made prynces, and I must not knowe of it. Of their synce and golde haue they made them ymages, to bringe them selues to destruction.

149. 12. d
Thy calfe (O Samaria) shalbe taken awaye, for my wroch shall indignacion is gotten agaynst the. How longe wil it be, or they can declineth: for the calfe came from Israel, the workman made it, therfore can it be no God, but euen to a spyder webbe shal yf calfe of Samaria be turned. They haue some wynde, therfore shal they receiue a storme.

149. 13. d
Their side shal beare no come, there shal no meel be made of their increase: though yf re be, yet shall strangers deuoure it vpon. Israel shal perish, the Gentiles shall entrece him as a foule vessel. Hence they went vpon to the Assirians, they are become like a wynde asse in the desert.

149. 14. d
Ephraim shall be rewarded to the lowes, therfore are they scattered amonge the heathen, ther: wil I gather them vpon. They shal soone be weery of the burthen of kinges & prynces. Ephraim hath made many altars to do wickednes, therfore shal the altars come to his synne. Though I shewe the my lawe neuer so much, they counte it but strange doctrine. Where as they do sacrificia, offeringe the flesh and eatinge it: the LORD will haue no pleasure therein: but wil remember their wickednes, and punyssh their synne. Israel turneth agayne into Egypte, they be forgotten him that made them, they be destroyed churches, and Iuda ma be many stronge cities: therfore wil I sende a synce in to the cities, and it shal consume their places.

150. 1. d
Whether thou triumphe (O Israel) in then, for thou hast cometh a victory agaynst yf God: straunge remembrance hast thou loned, moich the all come fowles. Therfore shall they nomore enioye the cornettes and wyne presses, and their fowles wil shal fayle the. They wil not dwell in the LORDES londe, but Ephraim turneth agayne into Egypte, & euen wil cleane thinges amonge the Assirians. They poure out no wyne for a vaine offeringe vnto the LORD, whether greue they him their floure offeringe, but they be vnto them as manure manure, wherein all they that eat them, are defiled. For the bred that they haue sode last wyne, shal not come in the house of the LORD. What wil ye do then in the solampetona, and in the feast of the LORD: so, they shall get their arrowe for the destruction of Egypte, shal receaue them, & Typh shal bury them.

The nettles shall ouergrowe their pleasure goodes, and barres shalbe in preparatione. We ye sure: (O Israel) the time of visitacion is come, the dayes of recompensation are at hande. As for the prophet, he holde him for a fool: and him that is rich in the spere, for a mad man: so greate is your wickednes and malice. Ephraim hath made himselfe a watchman of my God, a puffer yf is become a snare to do hurt in every strete, and abhominacion in the house of my God. They be gone to farte, & haue destroyed the selues, like as they dyd a fowle yme at Geba, and therfore their wickednes shal be recalled, and their synnes punysshed.

I fonde Israel like grapes in the wilderness, & sowe their fathers as the first figge of coppe of yf figge tree. But they are now in Daal Peo, & runne a roaie fro me to yf fowles full ydell, & are become as abhominable as their loners. Ephraim sticheth like a byrd, shal their glory also: In so much, yf they shal rather begette, & cease not beare children.

And though they bringe up eny, yet will I make them challeſſe among men. And who ſhall come to them, when I departe from them. Ephraim (as me thynke) is planted in the land, like as a Terebinth, but now muſt he be cut downe like other children ſonny to the man ſawyer.

THE LORDE thou ſhalt geue them: what ſhalt thou geue them? geue them an vnfruitfull ſeede, and drye beſtes. All their wickednesſe is done at Bethgal, there do I reboude them. For the vngodlyneſſe of their own imaginations, I will drye them out of my land. I will loue their name, for all their wickednesſe is vnſearchfull. Ephraim is become a ſtrumpet, their ſee is dryed up, ſo y they ſhall haue no more fruite: yea and though they haue fruite, yet will I ſaye euen the beſt which fruite of their body. My God ſhall call them awaye, for they haue not bene obedient vnto him, therfore ſhal they go aſtraye among the heathen.

The X. Chapter.

Iſrael was a goodly vyne, but he hath brought forth vnprofitable fruit: yea the more fruite he had, the more wickednes he made: y more good I dyd to their londe, the more friendſhippe ſhewed they to their ymages. Their herte is deuyded, therfore ſhal they be deſtroyed. The LORDE ſhall breake downe their ymages, he ſhal deſtroye their altars. Then ſhal they ſaye: we haue no kinge, for why? we haue not feared the LORDE. And what ſhal then the kinge do to us? They comen to gether, and ſwear daye by daye: they be confederate together, therfore groweth their punyſhment, as the wynde in the ſowmes of the londe.

They that dwell in Samaria haue worſhipped the calfe of Bethauel: therfore ſhall the people moune ouer them, yea and the paſſes alſo, that in their wretchedneſſe reioyſe with them: and why? it ſhal paſſe awaye from them. It ſhal be brought to the Aſſyrians, for a preſent vnto kinge Iarab. Ephraim ſhal receiue full punyſhment: Iſrael ſhal be confounded for his owne imaginations, Samaria wth his kinge ſhall vaniſh awaye, as the ſcumme vpon the water. The hye places of Aſen where Iſrael do ſinne, ſhal be cutt downe: the ſpilles and thornes ſhal growe vpon their altars. Then ſhal they ſaie yea of their ymaginations: couer vs, and to the hilles: fall vpon vs.

O Iſrael, thou haſt ſynned as Sabaab wth thou vyne, where they remained: ſhal be cutt downe: the harte then come vpon the wicked children, as wel as vpon the Sabaonites: I will chaſten them, euen after myne owne deſyre, the people ſhal be gathered together ouer them, wher I punyſh them for their grea- t wickedneſſe. Ephraim was vnto me, as a cow that is vſed to go to plowe, therfore I loved him, and ſell vpon his ſaye neck. I dyd the huſbande man: that they mighte ſome- wth righteouſnes, and reape the fruite of wel- doynge: y they mighte plowe vpon their field londe, and ſeeke the LORDE, till he come, and lerne them righteouſnes.

But now they haue plowed them with wickedneſſe, therfore ſhal they reape ſynne, and eate the fruite of ſyde. Seeing thou purteſt thy confidence in thine owne waye, and leaveſt off y multitude of thy wickednes: therfore ſhal growe a ſedition amonge thy people. All y ſirge cities ſhal be layed waſt, euen as Samaria was deſtroyed with his familiaris, therfore ſhal he be avenge of Baal, in the daye of darte, where y mother perſhed with hir childre. Euen ſo ſhal it go with you: (Be they) becauſe of your malicious wickednes, like as the mounyng geeth awaye, ſo ſhal the kinge of Iſrael paſſe.

The XI. Chapter.

When Iſrael was yonge, I loved him: and called myſonne out of egypte. But y more they were called, the more they were backe: offerynge vnto Idoles, and cauſynge ymages. I meried Ephraim to go, and bare them in myne armes, but they regarded not me, that wolde haue helped them. I led them with cordes of friendſhippe, & with bondes of ſtone. I was euen he, that layed the yocke vpon their necke. I gaue them their fodder myſelf, y they ſhulde not go agayne into egypte: And now is Aſſur their kinge: for they wolde not com- me vnto me. Therfore ſhal y ſwearde begynne in their cities, the ſtortes that they haue lickened vnto, ſhal be deſtroyed and eaten vp: and that becauſe of their owne imaginations. My people haſh not to turne vnto me, their prophetes laye the yocke vpon the, but they caſte them not of their burthen.

What greaſe thinges haue I geuen the, o Ephraim: how ſaichfully haue I defended the, o Iſrael: haue I dealt with the as with Adama: or haue I increaſed the liſe Seboim: No, my herte is otherwiſe in mynd. Yea my mercy is to ſeruen: therfore haue I not tarred me to deſtroye Ephraim in my wretched diſpleaſure. For I am God and no man, I am euen that holy one in the myddes of the, though I came not within the cite.

The LORDE roareth like a lyon, that they maye followe him: Yee as a lyon reareth he, that they maye be a frayed, like the dyldren of the see: that they maye be scarred awaye from Egipte, as men scarre by dyces: & frayed awaye (as bones use to be) from the Assiriā londe; and that because I wolde have them tary at home, saith the LORDE. But Ephraim goeth abogeth with lies, and the house of Israel dyssembled. Only Juda holdeth him with God, and with the true holy thynges.

The XII. Chapter.

Ephraim keepeth the ayre, and followeth a ster the east wynde: he is caer increasinge hys destruction. They be considerate with the Assirians, their eye is turned into Egipte. The LORDE hath a course to holde with Juda, and wil punyssh Jacob: After their owne waies and a covynge to their owne intencions, shal he recompence them. He take his brother by the heile, when he was yet in his methers womb: and in his strength he wrestled with God. He streue with the Angel, and gat the victory: that he playde and desyred him. He sawe him at Beziel, & there he talked wth us.

Reeth the LORDE God of hostes, euen yf LORDE him self remembered him: Then turne to thy God, kepe mercy and equyte, and hope still in thy God. But the marchaunt hath a false weighe in his honde, he hath a pleasure to occupie extortion. Ephraim thinke thus: Tush, I am rich, I have good ynnough: In all my workes shal not one faulce be founde, that I have offended. Yet am I the LORDE thy God, eue as when I brought the out of the londe of Egipte, and set the in thy tennes, and as in the bye fast wayes.

I have spokē choiow the prophetes, and shewed byuirt visions, and declared my self by the ministracion of yf prophetes. But at Galaad is the abhominacion, they are fallen to wayte. At Galgali they haue slayned open: and as many heapes of stones as they had in their lēde forswore, so many anstere haue they made. Jacob sied in the londe of Suria, and Israel serued for a wife, and for a wife he kepte shepe.

By a prophet the LORDE E brought them out of Egipte, and by a prophet he preferueth the. But Ephraim hath prouoked him to displeasure choiow his abhominacions: therfor shal his bloude be poured upon him self, and the LORDE his God shal reward him his displeasours.

The XIII. Chapter.

The abhominacion of Ephraim is as me also in to Israel. He is gone had to Daal, therfore must he dye. As now they synne more and more: of their sinner, they make them molten ymagis, like the Idols of the heithen, and yett all is nothinge but the worke of the craftsman. The withstandinge they piteach of the same: they so wil tyffe the calues, offereth to men. The fore they shalbe as the morninge clouds, and as the dew that early passeth awaye: as the dust that yf wynde taketh awaye from the floore, and as smoke that goeth out of chimney.

I am the LORDE thy God, which brought the out of the londe of Egipte: that thou shuldest thence no God but me only, & that thou shuldest haue no Samouir but only me. I took diligent hede of the in the wilderness that drye lende. But when they were wel fedde and had ynnough, they were proud, and forgat me. Therfore will I be to them as a lyon, and as a leopard in yf waye to the Assirians. I wil come upon them as a sheber, that is robbed of his wyddes, and I wil breake their stubburne harte of stons. Ther wil I deuente them as a lyon: theye wilde beastes shal reate them.

O Israel, thou dost but destroye thy self, In me only is thy helpe. Where are thy thynges now, that shulde helpe the in all thy thynges? Yee and thy iudges, of whom thou saydest: Yee are a kinge and prynces: Well, I gave the a kinge in my wrath, and in my pleasure will I take hon from the agayn. The wick ednesse of Ephraim is become rotten: & his synne lieth hyd. Therfore shal forswores come upon him, as upon a woman that erramaleth. An indiscreet sonne is he: he considereth not, that he shulde not have bene able to haue endured in the synne of his synne, had not I defended him from the synne, and desyred him from death.

O death, I wil be thy death: o hell, I wil be thy syngre. Yee can I seruo comfort: In when he is now the goodlieste amonge the heathen, the east wynde (euen the wynde of the LORDE) shal come downe from the wilderness, and drye up his conynges, and breke up his welles: he shal spoyle the conynges of all pleasaunt vessels.

As for Samaria, they shalbe made wast: & why? they are disobedient unto the God. They shal perissh with the sword, their dyen shalbe slayne, and their women shal wuch childe shalbe rype up.

The XIII. Chapter.

Vnto theiwo (Israel) vnto y LORD Deby God, for thou hast taken a greate fall thow w thy wickednesse.
Take thei wordes with you, when ye come to the LORD, & sa ye vnto him: O soigne vs all ouer synne, receaue vs graciously, & then will we offre y bullockes of oure lippes vnto the. Alas shall be no moie oure helper, neither will we rpe vpon horses eny more. As for the wordes of oure bondes, we wil nemo n call vpon them: for it is thou that art ou r God, thou shalt euer mercy vnto the sa thelasse.

Of they wolde be this) I shulde heale their synne: yee with all my herte wolde I lo ue them: so y my mouth shulde cleue be tur nd away from them. Yee I wolde be vnto Israel as the dewe, and he shulde growe as floure, & his roze shulde beate out: as Li banus. his banches shulde sprede out abou de, as his saie as the oyle tree, & miel as Li banus. They that dwel vnder his shadowe, shulde come agayne, & growe vpon as the coe n, & flourish as the vyne: he shulde haue an good name, as the vyne of Libanus.

O Pharam, what haue I to do with I hola my moie I wil graciously heare him, & like him forth. I will be vnto the as a grene I spruce, vpon me shall thei fynd thei fru it. Who so is wise, shal vnderstonde this: & he y is right instructe, will regarde it. For y wayes of the LORD are righteous, soch as be godly will walke in them: As for the wic ked, they will stumble therein.

What Joel conteineth.

Cap. i. He sheweth Israel, that all their glo ry and outward ceremonies, shal be pur loine and craffe.

Cap. ii. The plagues are greate, wherefore he wolothe them to moune: yett they will amende, they maye hope for grace.

Cap. iii. How the people are brought agayne, and their rancie punished.

The first Chapter.

This is the woide of the LORD, that came vnto Joel the sonne of Pharuel: heare o ye elders: pōdie this wel, all ye that dwell in the lō de: yf euer there happenede soch a thinge in yours dayes, or in y dayes of yong fathers.

Tell youre children of it, let them thence vnto their children, & so they ce craffe their posterite thereof. Alas what the caterpillar hath leste, y hath the greshopper eaten vp: what the greshopper leste, that hath the lo custe eaten vp: & what the locuste hath leste, that hath the blasinge consumed. Wake vp ye dionardes, & wepe: moune all ye wyne suppers, because of youre secrete wyne, for it shal be taken awaye from youre mouth. Yee a myghtie & an innumerable people shall co me vpon in to my londe: these haue each like the teeth of lyono, & chaibones like the lyonif sea. They shal make my wyrtarbe waiff, they shal pylle of the barckes of my fygetrees, they peckem bare, cast them awaye, and make the loundies whyre.

Make y mome as a virgin both, y gydech her self: with sacke, because of hir vyde gro me. For the meate & drynt offer ynge shal be taken awaye from the house of the LORD: the prestes y LORDES ministrer shal moune me. The felde shalbe waiffed, the londe shal be in a naterable case: for the come shalbe de stroyed, the swete wyne shal come to confu sion, & the oyle vnto y desolate. The husbō demens & the wyne gardeners shal lode pi teously & make lamentation, for the wheate wyne & barley, & because the baruest vpon the felde is so clene destroyed. The graspe thereof shal make greate mone, when the vy nyarde & fygetrees be so vnto waiffed. Yee all the pomgarnettes, palm trees, aple trees, & the other trees of the felde shal wyther a waye. Thus the mery cheare of the children of men shal come to confusion.

Gyde you, & make yo' mone, o ye prestes: moune ye ministrer of the altier: go youre moye in, & slepe in sackcloth, o ye officers of my God: for the meate & drynt offer ynge shal be taken awaye from the house of y God.
Proclame a fastynge, call the cōgregation, gather the elders & all the inhabiter of the londe together in to the house of the LORD yo' God, & crye vnto the LORD: alas, alas for this daye. And whye the daye of the LORD is at hande, and commeth as a destroyer from the Almightie. Shal not y meate be taken awaye before oure eyes, the myght also & ioye from the house of oure God? The seide shal perish in the grounde, the garners shall lye waiff, the floozes shalbe broken downe: for the come shalbe destroyed. O what a sigh inge make the cattell: the bullockes are very eul lyynge, because they haue no pastures and the shepe are famished awaye.

O LORD, so the wild Ieric: for the fyre hath consumed the goodly pastures of the wyldernesse, and the flame hath burnt vp all the trees of the felde. See the wyld beestes crie also vnto thee: for the water ryuers are dryed vp, and the fyre hath consumed the pastures of the wyldernesse.

The ii. Chapter.

A Lowe out of erempet in Sion, & crie vnto my holy hill, y all sods aduall in the londe, maye tremble at it: for y daie of the LORDE cometh, & is harde as honde: a darke daie, a gloomyng daie, a cloudy daie, yee & a stormy daie, like as the mounyng speeche out vnto the hilles: I amely, a great & mighty people: soch as haue not benefens y begynnyng, neyther shal be a frechtun for euermore. Before him shal be a consuming fyre, & beynde him a burninge flame. The londe shal be as a garden of pleasure before him, but behinde him shal it be a very waite wyldernesse, & there is no man, that shal escape him. They are to lobe upon like decayed hoyses, & tume like heise men. They steype vp vpon y hilles, as it were the sound of charrettes: as the flame of fyre that consumeth the strate, and as a mighty people rebey to the bazell.

B The selte shalbe a frayed of him, all faces shal be as blacke as a por. These shal riue like graumes, & leape ouer the walles like men of warre. Query main in his goinge shal kepe his arate, & nee go out of his Path. The re shal not one dryne another, but ech shal be pe his owne waye. They shal breake in at the wyndowes, & not be hurte: They shal come into the cite, & ruine vpon the walles: They shal climme vp vpon the houses, & steype in at the wyndowes like a cheft. The earth shal quake before him, yee the heaueus shal crouded: the Sonne & Moone shal be darkened, and the starres shal withdrauether shyne. The LORDE shal shewe his voyce before his hoof, for his hoof is greete, strengre & mighty to fulfill his commaundement. This is y greete and maruolous fearfull daie of the LORDE: And u he is able to abyde it.

C Therefore saierh the LORDE: Turne you vnto me with all youre hertes, with fasting, weeping, and mourning: reuete youre hertes, & not youre clothes. Turne you vnto the LORDE youre God, for he is gracious & mercifull, longe sufferynge & of greete compassion: rebey to pardon wickednes. Then (no doute) he also shal tume, & forgieue: & after his chastenynge, he shal let youre increase remayne, for meat & drynd offerynges vnto the LORDE youre God: Blowe out with the trumpet in Sion, proclame a fastynge, call the congregacion, & gather the people together: warne the congregacion, gather the elders, bringe the children & sochynges together. Let y bytremone go forth of his dylbe, & the byde out of her dylbe: & let the pestes strue the LORDE because the pech of auker, wepinge & sayenge: be favourable LORDE) be favourable vnto thy people: nee chine heretage be broughte to sodi confusion, lest the chertens be leades therof. What fore shoulde they saye amonge the chertens: where is now their God?

Then shal the LORDE be gelous ener his londe, & spare his people: yee y LORDE shal ansuere, & saye vnto his people: Whode, I wol sende you come, wyne & oyle, so that y shal haue plenty of eberme: I wil nomete ye you ouer to be a reprof amonge the chertens. A gayne, as for him of the north, I shal dryue him furre from you: shal he come into a drye and waist londe, his face toward the east se, and his hynder partes to ward the vtremost se. The synke of him shal be vp, and his fylthy corrupcion shal fall vpon himself, because he hath deate so pouerty: feare nee (o londe) but be glad and raynt, for the LORDE wil do greete chynges. De nee ye a frayed neeher (o ye castles of the felde): for the pastures shal be grene, and the crone shal beate their frute: the fyggretes & myrtes shal geue their increale.

Be glad then (o ye children of Sion) and reioyse in the LORDE youre God, for he hath geuen you the teacher of righte onnes: & he it is y shal sende you dewe showres of rayne, early and late in the first moneth: so that y garners shal be full of come, and the pines fles plenteous in wyne and oyle. And as in the yeares that y greif shepper, locuste, blasfingre & caterpillar (my greete hoof, which I sent amonge you) haue earen up, I shal restore them to you agayne: so that ye shal haue yrough to eate, and be satisfied: and putte the name of the LORDE youre God, that so maruolously hath deate with you.

And my people shall nee be comforted any more: ye shall well knowe, that I am in the myddest of Israel, and that I am youre God: yee and that there is no other, and my people shall nomete be broughte to confusion.

After this, wil I poure out my spere: I pon all flesh: yee sonnes & yee daughters shal prophecy: yee olde me shal die: and the name of the LORDE, shall be saved. For upon the mount Sion & at Jerusalem, there shall be a saluacion, like as the LORDE hath promised: yett amonge the other remnant, whom the LORDE shall call.

The iiii. Chapter.

1 O take heede: In those dayes & at y same tyme, when I turne againe the captiuitie of Iuda & Jerusalem: I shall gather all people together, & bringe the in to the valley of Josaphat: and there will I iudge wch the, because of my people & here sake of Israel: whch they haue scattered abou t in the nations, & parted my lōde: yett they haue cast looses for my people, the yonge mē have they set in the bowell house, & solde the damisels for wyne, y the myght haue to drin ke: Thou Tyrus, and Sidon, and all ye lōders of the Philistynes: what haue ye to do with me: Will ye be fre me: well: yf ye will neede e bnfirme, I shall recōpense you, euen vpon your heade, & y night shoudly: for ye haue ta ken away my siluer & golde, my sayre & good ly Jewels, & brought them in to youre tow nesa. The children also of Iuda and Jeru slem haue ye solde vnto the Ghekes, that ye mighte bringe the fatte fress of borders of the y vnto countrees.

2 Beholde therefore: I will raise them out of the place, where ye haue solde them, & will reuenge you vpon your heade. Your sinnes & your doughers will I sell abroad the borders of the childre of Iuda, & so they shall geue them forth to sell, vnto the of Sa ba: a people of a farrre countree: for the LORDE himselfe hath sayde it. Lett out these thinges amonge the Gentiles, proclame warre, make vp the garmtes, lett them drame wyne, lett the come up alle the lasty warryours of the. Ma ke your swordes of youre plowshares, and speares of youre speckles & sythes: Lett y woa k man laye: I am stronge. I Iustre you, and come, all ye heithē: & lōde aboute: gather you together: there shall the LORDE laye all thy garmtes to the grounde. Lett the people ary sand gett them to the valley of Josaphat: for there will I Iste, and indge all heithē: & lō de aboute.

Laye to youre sythes, for the harvest is ry pe: come, gett you downe: the wynepresse is full, yett the wynepresses runne ouer, for their vidēdresse is wagen greate. In the valley appoynted, there shall be many, many people: for the daye of the LORDE is nye in y valley appoynted. The Sonne and Moone shall be darkened, & the starres shall withdraue the ir light. The LORDE shall roare out of Sion, & crye out of Jerusalem, that the heauiens & the earth shall quake withall. But the LORDE shall be a defence vnto his owne people, & a refuge for the childre of Israel. Thus shall ye knowe, y the LORDE youre God dwell vpon my hely mount of Sion. Then shall Jerusa lem be holy, & there shall no straungers go thro row her eny more. Then shall the moities bioppe sweete wyne, & the bylles shall flowe with mylke. All the ryuers of Iuda shall ha ue water ynough, & out of the LORDES hou se, there shall flowe a sprynge, to water y bro ke of Sion: but Egipte shall be layed waste, & Libos shall be desolate: because they haue de alce so cruelly with the childre of Iuda, and shed inuicete bloud in their lōde. Againe, Iuda shall be inhabited for euermore, & Jeru slem shall from generation to generation: for I will not leaue their bloude vnauenged. And the LORDE shall dwell in Sion.

The prophet Amos.

The first Chapter.

2 These are the sayings, that were shewed unto Amos (which was one of the shepherdes at Theca) vpon Israel, in the tyme of Othias kynge of Iuda, 2 in the tyme of Jeroboam some of Iosias kynge of Israel, two yere before of sarrhaute. And he sayde: The LORDE shall reare ouer off Zion, 2 shewe his voyce fro Ierusalem: so that the pastures of the shepherdes shall be in a miserable case, 2 yf veppe of Thechauid dyed vp.

The LORDE saith: For the 2 feare wiche cometh off Damasus, I will not spare her: because they haue thorsched Galaad wiche flake: But I will sende a fyre in to yf honse of Hagael, the same shall consume the palaces of Benadab. Thus will I breake the barrow off Damasus, 2 rote out the inhabiters fro the side of Auen, and him yf holdeth the scepter, out of yf pleasaunce house: so yf the people shall be dryuen out of sayre Siria. sayeth the LORDE. Thus saith the LORDE: For the 2 feare wiche cometh off Gasa, I will not spare her: because they make the piousours yere more captyue, 2 haue dryuent her in to the lode of Edom. Therefore will I sende a fyre in to yf walles of Gasa, which shall deuoure hir houses, I will rote out the yf dwellers at Adood 2 him yf holdeth the scepter of Ahalon, and stretch out myne hande ouer Accaron, that the remnaunt of the Philistines shall perishe sayeth the LORDE.

The LORDE saith: For the 2 feare wiche cometh off Tyre, I will not spare her: because they haue increased yf captauyte of the Edomites, and haue not remembred the brotherly couenaunt. Therefore will I sende a fyre in to the walles off Tyre, the same shall consume hir palaces. Thus saith the LORDE: For the 2 feare wiche cometh off Edom, I will not spare him, because he persecuted his brother with the swerde, destroyed his mothers wombe, bare hatred very longe, and so kepte indignacion all waye by him. Therefore will I sende a fyre in to Thecha, which shall deuoure the palaces of Dofra.

The 11. Chapter.

Thus saith the LORDE: For the 2 feare wiche cometh off Moab, I will not spare him: because he burneth the bones off the kynge of Edom to ashyes. Therefore will I sende a fyre in to Moab, which shall consume yf palaces of Cariochus, which shall perishe with a noyse, and the sonnes of a shawme. I will rote out the wyggers amonge them, and slaye all his pryores with him, sayeth the LORDE. Thus saith the LORDE: For the 2 feare wiche cometh off Israhel, I will not spare him: because he hath not obeyed the lawe of the LORDE, and not kept his commaundmentes: for why, they wiche do not be discorde with the lere, that theye few fathers foloweth. Therefore will I sende a fyre in to Iuda, which shall consume the palaces of Ierusalem.

Thus saith the LORDE: For the 2 feare wiche cometh off Israhel, I will not spare him: because he hath sold the righteous for money, and the poore for shewe. They traue vpon peccatiens heedes in the dust of the earth, 2 croke the wayes off the right. The sonne and the father go to the harlot, to be honoure my hely name: they lye by the waye, as theye vnder taken othe, and in the house of their goddes they drynt the wyne of the oppressed. Her destroyed I the Amoute before them, the same was as his anghel, Cedre trees, and as stronge as the oke: my worshypinge I destroyed his fruce fro the use, and his rote from vnder.

Agayne: I brought you out of the land of Egippe, and led you 40 yeres thro the wyldernes, that ye might haue the land of Canaan in possession. I raysed up prophetes amonge youre children, and absteyned amonge youre yfge men. Is it not so, yf I was the father of Israhel, sayeth the LORDE: But ye use the absteyned wyne to drynt, ye ye commaunded the prophetes, sayenge: Propheet not. Beholde, I will crosse the you in somber, like as a wayne crossech, yf is full of shewes: so that yf swiffe shall not escape, neither the stronge be able to do any thyng: no, the giante shall not save his owne life. The archer shall not abyde, and the swiffe off the bow shall not escape. The bulma shall not save his life, 2 he that is as mally of stomach, and graunte, shall in that daye be fyne to man his waye nated, sayeth the LORDE.

The III. Chapter.

Hear, what the LORD speaketh vnto you: o ye children of Israel: namely, vnto all y^e tribes, wh^o I brought out of Egypt, and sayde: You only haue I adoped from all the generacions off the earth: for ye shall not say: I will vnto you in all your wickednesse. I laye vnto you: walke together: and see they be agreed amonge them selues: as a lyon roareth in the woodde, excepte he haue a pray: Or crieth a lyon whelpe out of his denne, excepte he haue gotten some thinge: Doth a byrde fall in a snare vpon y^e earth where no snare is? Taketh a man his snare vpon fremthe grounde, a foxe he catche some where? Crie they out: Alas! with the trompett in the cite, and the people not a frayd? Cometh there any plage in a cite, withoute he be the LORD es doinge? How both the LORD God no maner of thinge, but he telleth his strokes be foer into his seruantes y^e speeches. When a lyon roareth, who will not be a frayd? Seynge then that the LORD God himselfe speaketh, who will not prophesy?

Preach in the palaces at Asdod, and in the palaces off the lande off Egypte, and saye: gather you together vpon the mountaynes off Samaria, so shall ye see greate murthure and violent oppression amonge them: for why, they regard not the thinge that is right, sayeth the LORD: they gather together euill gotten goodes, and laye vpon robberie in their houses.

Therefore, thus sayeth the LORD God: This lande shall be troubled and besieged rounde about, by strength shall be plucked from the, and by palaces robbed. Thus saith the LORD: like as an hyrdman taketh two legges in a peece off an eare out off the Lyons mouth: thus will I take the children of Israel (that dwell in Samaria, buyng the chaldees in the corner, and their beddes at Damascus) shall I plucke awaye. Heare, and beare reuerence in the house of Jacob (sayeth the LORD God of hostes) when I begynne to vnto in the wickednesse of Israel, I will vnto y^e elders at Bethel also: so that the hoines of the altar shall be broken of, & fall to the ground.

As for the wynter house and summer house, I will smyte them downe; and the houses of many, yete and many other houses shall perishe, and be destroyed, sayeth the LORD.

The III. Chapter.

Hear this worde, o ye sathyrne, that be vpon the hill of Samaria: ye that do possesse wronge, and oppresse the needy: ye that saye to youre lordes buyng by the, let vs drynke. Therefore the LORD hath sworne by his helmesse: The dayes shall come vpon you, that ye shall be liued vpon speeres, and youre posterie caried awaye in syster painnes. Ye shall see you out at the gap, y^e one after another, and in Armon shall ye be cast awaye, sayeth the LORD.

Ye came to Bethel for to worde in gratias, and haue increased youre synne: as at Galgal. Ye broughte youre sacrifices in the morninge, and youre tythes into the thirde daye. Ye made a t^o offeringe off leuen, ye promised strewtolofferinges, and proclaimed them. Soch lust had ye, o ye children of Israel, sayeth the LORD God. Therefore haue I geuen you yole teeth in all youre cities, & I carenesse off beef in all youre places: yete will ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the LORD. Wh^o there were but thre monethes vnto y^e harvest, I wiche the rayne from you: yete I raynyd vpon one cite, and not vpon another: one peece off grounde was moistured with rayne, and the grounde that I raynyd not vpon, was drye. Wherefore two y^e chaldees came vnto one, to drynke water: but they were not satisfide, yete will ye not turne vnto me, sayeth y^e LORD.

I haue smyten you with drought and blastinge: and loke how many orchardes, vinyardes, figgetrees and olyuetrees ye had: y^e cattipiller hath eaten them vp. But yete will ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the LORD. Persistence haue I sent amonge you, as I byd in Egypte: youre yonge men haue I slayen w^o of sword, and caused youre hoises be taken captiue: I made the symdyng fauoure off youre tentes to come vpon to youre hostres: yete will ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the LORD. Some off you haue I ouerthrowen: as I ouerthrowe Sodome & Gomorah: so that ye were as a brante plucked out off the frye. Yete will ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the LORD. Therefore, thus will I handle the agayne (O Israel) ye euen thus will I handle the. Make the ready then to meete by God, o Israel. For lo, he maketh the mountaynes, he ordereth the wynde, he sheweth man what he is aboute to do: he maketh the morninge and the darcknesse, he treateth vpon the hye places off the earth: y^e LORD God of hostes is his name.

Heare this words (o ye house of Israel) and why? I must make this more for you: The wynges Israel shall fall, & neuer rise up agayne: she shall be cast downe vpon hit vnto some grounde, and no man shall helpe hir vp. For thus sayeth y^e LORDE God: Where as there dwelle a thyn in one cite, there shalbe left scarce an C. therein: and where y^e re dwelle an C. there shal scarce ten be left for the house off Israel. Nevertheless, thus sayeth the LORDE vnto y^e house of Israel: Sete a starre me, ad ye shall lye, but sette not a ster Bethel. Come not at Baigal, and go not to Bersaba: for Baigal shall be caried awaye captyue, and Bethel shal come to naughte. Sete the LORDE, y^e ye maye lye, lest the house of y^e LORDE be burnt with fyre, and consumed, and lest there be none to quench Bethel.

Returne the lawe to righte, and cast downe righte wronge vnto the grounde. The LORDE maketh the dry, starres and the Cryone, he turneth the nighte into daye, and off the daye he maketh darkness. He calleth y^e waters of the see, and poureth them out vpon the playne grounde: the LORDE is his name. He straiteneth destruction vpon the mightie people, & bynnerth downe the stronge hold: but they owe him euil will, y^e re proueth them openly: and who so telleth the the playne treuth, they abhorre him. For so much the as ye oppresse y^e poore, and robbe him of his best sustenance: therefore, where as ye haue builded houses off square stone, ye shall not dwell in them. If a ruicke pleasaunt vnto y^e gardes shall ye plante, but the wyne of the shall ye not drinke: and why? as for the multitude of your wickednesse, and your foule synnes, I knowe them right well. Cunnings are ye off the righte wyse, ye take rewardes, ye oppresse the poore in iudgment. Therefore the wyse must now be sayne to holde his tuge, so much a tyme is it.

Off no sayeth the LORDE God, the God of hoopes: there shal be mourninge in all stretes, yee they shal saye i every stret: alas, alas. They shall call the house downe man to lamenta, and soch as can mourne, to mourne. In all vnyardes there shal be heynesse, for I will come agayne you, sayeth the LORDE. I haue and adhoure your holy daye, where as ye curse me when ye come together: I will not accept it. And though ye offer me burnt offerings, and meate offerings, ye haue I no pleasure therein: As for your in thank offeringes, I will not lorde you then. And ye say that no y^e of thy songs, I will not heare thy playes of musick: for I see the equyre flowe as the water, and righte as the sea as a mightie streame. O ye house of Israel, gaue ye me offeringe and sacrifices thirtie yeres longe in the wyldernes: yet haue ye sit vnto tabernacles to your Idols, and ymagines of your Idols. And ad the stam of your god Bempis, figures which ye use to worshippe them. Therefore will I cause ye be caried a waye by yonder Damascus, sayeth the LORDE, whos name is the God off hyetes.

The VI. Chapter.

Wo be to the proude welch in Samaria: so soch as thynke the selfe sure vpon y^e mounte of Samaria: which bolde them selues for the best of the mounte, vnto the house of Israel, and as they haue. And to Calne, and se: and firm thence get you to Hamath the greates cite, and so go downe to Bethel of the Philistines: as they better as se then these kynge comes, as the border of the ir londe wyber then yours. Therefore now shall ye be the first of them, that shalbe led awaye captyue, and the lusty chere of the wyllfull shall come to an ende.

The IX. Chapter.

2 Sawe the LORDE stonbyng vpon the auiter, and he saye: smyte the doore thete, that the postes maye shate withall. For their occurousnesse shal fall vpon all their beades, and their portence shal be slayne with the swerde. They shall not scape awaye, there shall not one off them escape, ner be deliuered. Though they were bur yed in the hell, my honde shal fetch them from thence: though they clymme vp to heauen, yet shal I cast them downe: though they hyde them selues vpo the coppe of Carmel, yet shal I sike them out, and byngethem from thence: Though they crote downe from my sight in to the depe of the see, I shal commaunde the serpente, euen there to bite them. If they go awaye before their enemies: I to capture yee, then shall I commaunde the swerde, there to slaye them.

Thus wil I set myne eye vpon them, for their harme and not for their weale. For when the LORDE God of hostes reuendeth a londe, ic cōsumeth her araye, and all they that dwell therein, must needs mourne: And why? their destruction shal aryse as cūery sfireame

Truly, the plage is not so nye, to come sodely vpon vs: those shal perishe with thys londe. At that tyme wil I buyle agayne the tabernacle off David, that is fallen downe, and bryge up his gappe: and the tye is broken, I shall repaie ic: yet I shall buyle ic agayne, as ic was a fore tyme, y they maye possesse the remanent of Edom, yee all sod people as call vpon my name off the earth, saith the LORDE, which deeth the chyliden.

Beholde, the tyme commeth (saith the LORDE) that the plowman shal oventhe mowre, and y treader off grapes, in the sowerth seide. The moontaynes shall digge swete wyne, and the hilles shall be fruchtfull, and I wil turne the captiue yee of my people off Israell: they shal repaie the wallen, and haue the in possession: they shal plant mayrdes, and drynke the wyne ther off: they shal make gardens, and enioie the frutes off the. And I wil plante them vpo their own grounde, so that I will neuer roce them out agayne from their londe, which I haue giuen: saith the LORDE thy God.

with them vnto Tharsis from the presence of the LORDE. But the LORDE hurled a greete wynde in the see, and there was a mighty tempest in the see: so that the shippe was in toperdy of goinge in pecea. Then the maryners were a fraide, and cried every man vnto his god: and the goodes that were in the shippe they cast into the see, to lighten it off them. But Jonas gat him vnder y haecdes, where he layed him downe and slombred.

B So the master of the shippe came to him and sayde vnto him: why slomberest thou? Up, call vpon thy God: yf God happily wil chyke vpon vs, that we perishe not. And they sayde one to another: come, let vs cast loeces: that we maye knowe, for whose cause we are thus troubled. And so they cast loeces, and the lot fell vpon Jonas.

16. 1. 2

The sayde they vnto him: all vs, for whose cause are we thus troubled: what is thine occupation? whenes comest thou? what countrie man art thou, and of what nation? He answered them: I am an Ebbeue, and I feare the LORDE God of heauen, which made both the see and the londe. Then were y men exceedingly a fraide, and sayde vnto him: why dost thou so? (for they knewe, that he was fled from the presence of the LORDE, because he had tolde them) and sayde moreover vnto him: What shall we do vnto thee, that the see maye cease from troublinge vs? (for the see wroughte and was troublous) he answered them: Take me, and cast me into the see, so shall it be: for I will be as the LORDEs commaundment. For we was a greate cite vnto God, namely, of the dayes iourney.

16. 1. 3

Nevertheless, the men assayed with rowinge, to bringe the shippe to lorde: but it wolde not be, because the see wroughte so, and was so troublous agaynst them. Wherefore they cried vnto the LORDE, and sayde: O LORDE, let vs not perishe for this mans death, neither laye thou innocēt bloude vnto our charge: for thou (O LORDE) hast done, euen as thy pleasure was.

So they toke Jonas, and cast him in to the see, and the see lefte ragynge. And the men feared the LORDE exceedingly, doynge sacrifices and makinge vowes vnto the LORDE.

The ii. Chapter.

16. 1. 4

B Vnto the LORDE prepared a greate fysh, to swallowe up Jonas. So was Jonas in the belly of the fysh, thre dayes and thre nyghtes. And Jonas prayed vnto to the LORDE his God, out of the fysh belly, and sayde: In my trouble I called vnto the LORDE, and he herde me: out off the belly of hell I cried, and thou herdest my voyce. Thou haddest cast me downe depe in y mudd of the see, and the floude compaspede aboute: yett alle thy wanes and roeles of mercie were ouer me, I thoughte that I had bene cast awaye out of thy sighte: but I had bene agayne loke towarde thy holy temple.

The water compassed me, euen to the ryse: the depe laye aboute me, and the wyndes were wynde aboute myne heade, I was deliuered to the botome of the hilles, and was barred in with carth for euer. But thou O LORDE my God hast broughte vnto my lyfe agayne out of corruption. When my sinne saynted richen me, I thoughte vpon the LORDE: and my prayere came in vnto the, man to thy holy temple, Thou that holdest of wynde waynes, wil forsake his mercie? But I will do the sacrifice with the voyce of thankynge, and wil paye that I haue vowed: for thy saluation cometh of the LORDE. And y LORDE spake vnto y fysh, and cast out Jonas agayne vpon the drye londe.

The iiii. Chapter.

Then came the worde of the LORDE vnto Jonas agayne, sayynge: up, and get the to Ninine that greate cite, and preach vnto them the preachinge, which I bade the. So Jonas arose, and wente to Ninine as the LORDEs commaundment. For we was a greate cite vnto God, namely, of the dayes iourney.

And Jonas wente to, and entered in to the cite: euen a dayes iourney, and cried, sayynge: There are yett xi. dayes, and then shall Ninine be ouerthrowen. And the people of Ninine beleued Jonas, and proclaimed fasting, and arayed them (euen in sack cloch, as well the greace as the small of them) And theye dayes came vnto y iourney of Ninine, which arose out off his seat, and byd his apparel off, and put on sack cloch, and layed downe in ashes.

And it was cried and commaunded to Ninine, by the anncies of the kyng and his lordes, sayynge: se that neither man or best, oxe or shepe taist oughte at all hand: that neither fynde nor beinde water: but put on sack cloch both man and best, and crye mightily vnto God: yett se that every man maye fynde his smell in ynto, and from the west wynde, y be sharp in honde.

The prophet Jonas.

Who can call: God maye turne, and repent and cease from his fierce wrath, that we perish not. And when God sawe their worth how they turned from their wicked ways: he repented on the well, which he sayde he woude do unto them, and byd it not.

The IIII. Chapter.

Wherfore Jonas was sore discontente, and angrie. And he prayd vnto the LORDE, and sayde: O LORDE, was not this my seruage? (I praye the) when I was yet in my countrey: therfore I haisted rather to go vnto Chathis, for I knowe well ynough that thou art a mercifull God, full of compassion, longe sufferinge, and of great tender mercie, and repente: when then shuldest take punishment. And now O LORDE, take my life from me: (I beseeke the) for I had rather dye then lyue. Then sayde the LORDE: art thou so angrie? And Jonas gat him out of the cite, and sat downe ouer y^e east syde ther of: and there made him a bothe, and sat vnder it in the shadow, till he might se, what shoulde chaunce vnto the cite.

And the LORDE God prepared a wynde wyse, which spang vpon euer Jonas, that he might haue shadowe about his heade, to shelter him out of his payne. And Jonas was exceedinge glad of the wynde wyse.

But vpon the nexte mornynge agayne the sprynge of the daye, the LORDE ordered a wombe, which smocke the wynde wyse, so that it would waie awaye. And when the Sonne was vp God prepared a feruent east wynde: and the Sonne beate ouer the heade of Jonas, that he laymed agayne, and wysshed vnto his soule that he might dye, and sayde: It is better forme to dye, than to lyue. And God sayd vnto Jonas: Art thou so angrie for the wynde wyse? And he sayde: yee very angrie am I vnto my death. And the LORDE sayde: thou hast compassion vpon a wynde wyse, where thou bestowest no labour: ner may best it growe: which spang vpon in one night and perished in another: And shouldest not I shew compassion vpon Iⁿuine that groweth in a grete cite, wherein there are about an C. and xij. thousande per-sones, y^e knowe not their righte hōde fro the les-se, besydes moche cattell?

The first Chap. Fo. xcij.

The Prophet Michaeas.

What Michaeas conteyneth.

Chap. I. He reproveth the people of Israel and Iuda for their wickedness and Idolatry: he telleth them their punishment with mourninge.

Chap. II. He recheareth their abominacions.
Chap. III. He reproveth the rulers and the paphres, on cause of the peoples misery.

Chap. IIII. V. He prophesyeth of the saluacion off Gede prophec in Chast. of his kynge dome, and power of his gospel.

Chap. VI. Another reprove. Ourwarde offerin-ges are excluded, and here is declared what God requyeth off man.

Chap. VII. The summe off the thinges before sayde The litle floode of the faithfull.

The first Chapter.

This is the worde of the LOR-DE, that came vnto Michaeas the Moattise, in the dayes of Ioathan, Achas and Ezechias kings of Iuda: which was shewed him vpon Samaria and Jerusalem.

Heare all ye people, marke this well o earth, and all that therein is: yee see the LORDE God himselfe be witness amonge you, euen y^e LORDE from his holy temple. For why? be-holde, the LORDE shal go out of his place, z come downe, and treade vpon the hie thin-ges of the earth. The holles wyces shal consume wnder him, z the valleys shal cleue as in deriue: as waxe cōsumeth at the fyre, z as y^e waters runne downwarde. And all this shal be for the wickedness of Iacob, and the syn-nes of the house of Israel.

But what is the wickednesse of Iacob? B Is not Samaria: Which are the hie placis of Iuda: Is not Jerusalem? Therfore I shal make Samaria an heape of stones in the felde, to laye aboute the wyrtwyde: hir stonies shal I cast in to the valley, z discover hir so-baccis. All hir ymages shal be brote downe z all hir wynnynge shal be bent in the feet yee all hir Idols will I destroye: for why, they are gathered out of the hie of an mō-re, z in to an whoreds hie: shal they be turned agayne. Wherfore I wil mourne z make la-mentacion, bare z naked will I go: I will mourne like y^e daye, z take soild as y^e Etriches: for their wōde is pass remedy: And why? it is come in to Iuda, z hath covered y^e pore of my people at Jerusalem alreedy. We-pe not, lest they at Beth percame it.

C Thus at Bethphasia, wester thyself in the dust and in ashes. The one that dwelleth at Bethphat, getteth hence with shame. The pious shall boast no more for very sorrowe: & why? his neighbours shall take from her what she hath. The rebellious care hepech, that it shall not be so euill: but for all that, the plague shall come from the LORDE, euen into the port of Jerusalem. The greates noyse of the charrettes shall feare them, that dwell at Lachis, which is an occasion of synne of y doughter of Sion, for in the came vp the wickednesses of Israel. See the sent hir comfiter in to the lande of Geth.

The houses of lies will discreame the kynge of Israel. And as for the (e thou that dwellest at Moassa) I shall bringe a possessor vpon the, ad the plague of Israel shall reach vnto Moassa. Make the balde, and shewe the, because of thy tender children: Make the cleane balde as an Antel, for they shall be caried awaye captiue from the.

The ii. Chapter.

WOened them, that ymagyn to do harme, and deuyse vngaciousnesse vpon their beddes, to perfourme it in y cleare daye: for their power is agaynst God. When they couer to haue lande, they take it by violence, they robbe men off their house.

Thus they oppresse a mā for his house, & eury man for his heritage. Therfore thus sayeth the LORDE: Beholde, agaynst this house holde haue I deuysed a plague, vnto you: ye shall see plucke youre neckes: ye shall not moue go so proudly, for it will be a perleous tyme. In what daye shall this terme be vsed, and a mourninge shall be made ouer you on this maner: We be utterly desolate, the pious off my people is translated. When will he pare vnto vs the lande, that he hath taken from vs?

Truer is this: there shall be noman to deuyde the thy pricion, in the congregation off the LORDE. Trust, holde youre tange (saye they): I shall not fall vpon this people, we shall not come so to confusion. I sayeth the house off Jacob. In the spere off the LORDE so cleare awaye: or is he so mynded? Truech this, my wordes are freely vnto them that lye right: but my people doth the contrary, therfore must I take parte agaynst them: for they take awaye both eue and cloke from the synple.

Ye haue cutted youre shoues to fight, the women off my peple haue ye shodde off their good houses, and taken awaye my excellent giftes from their children. Vp, ye you hence, for here shall ye haue no more.

Because off their Idolatrie they are corrupte, and shall miserably perishe. Iff I were as fleshly folowe, and a preacher of synne and teche them that they might synne belange and bollunge, and be diuident: O the were a prophet for this people.

But I will gather the in bedde (o Jacob) and dryue the remnant off Israel all together. I shall cary them one with another, as a flocke in the solde, and as the camels in their stables, that they maye be diuident of othermen.

Who so bicateth the gappe, he shall go before. They shall bicate vp the poore, and go in and out as it. Their kynge shall geue them, and the LORDE shall be vpon the heade of them.

The iii. Chapter.

Care, o ye heades of the house off Jacob, and ye leders of the house off Israel: Shulde not ye be iust, what were lawfull and right? But ye hate the good, and loue the euill: ye plucke of mens synnes, and the flesch from their kome: ye see the flesch of my peple, ad slay of their bones: ye bicate their bones, ye choppe them in peeces as it were in to a cauldron, ad as flesh into a pot. Now the tyme shall come, when they call vnto the LORDE, he shall not heare them, but by de his face from them: because that they were their owne ymaginants, they haue deate so wickedly.

And as concerninge the prophetes, they disceame my people, thus the LORDE sayeth agaynst them: When they haue eny thing to byte vpon, then they preach that all shall be well: it ys a man putteth some thing in to their mouthes, they preach of warre agaynst him.

Therfore youre vision shall come in in night, & youre prophesyinge to be of the. The Sonne shall go downe ouer the prophetes, & the daye shall be bare vnto them. Then shall the vision seer be ashamed, if sayeth sayers confenned: yet they shall see not all the packe of the to stoppe their mouthes, for they haue not Gods voice. As for me, I am full of strenght, & of y strength of the LORDE, full of indignite & belongeth: I will mete the house off Jacob their wickednesse, & the house off Israel their synne.

O heare this ye rulers of the house of Ja cob, and ye iudges of the house of Israel: ye that abhorre the thinge that is lawfull, and maist of ye the thinge that is straight: Ye that buye the vp of Sion with bloude, and Jeru salim with buyng wronge. O ye iudges, ye geauntance for giftes: O ye pitifles, ye wad for lucre: O ye prophetes, ye prophecy for money. Yet wil they be take as those that holde vpon God, and saye: Jo not the LORD bringe vs. Tush, there can no misfou re happen vs. Therefore shal Sion (for you it sake) be plowed like a fild: Jerusalem shall become an heape of stones, and the hall of y temple shal be turned to an hye wodde.

The III. Chapter.

But in the latter dayes it wil come to passe, that the hill off the LORDES house shalbe set vp hyer the any mou taines or hills: See the people shall muse vnto it, and the multitude off the Gentiles shal haist them thither, saye ge: Come, let us go vnto the hill of the LORD, & to the hou se of the God of Jacob: that he maye teache vs his waye, and that we maye walke in his pathes.

For the lame shall come out off Sion, and the word of God from Jerusalem, and shall ge sentence amonge the multitude off the heathen, and reforme the people off farre countres: so that of their swerdes they shal make plowshares, and of their speares speares.

One people shall not lift vp a swerde a gainst another, yet they shall nomore learne to fight: but every man shal sit vnder his vine yarde and vnder his figge tre, and no man shal saye him awaye: for the mouth off y LORD of hostes hath spoken it. Therefore, whe re as all people haue walked euery man in y name of his owne god, we will walke in the name of oure God for ever and ever. At the last tyme (sayeth the LORD) will I gather vp the lame, and the ouercastes, and such as I haue chaunted: and will gea yssue vnto the lame, and make of y ouercastes a greates peo ple: and the LORD himself shal be their kyni ge vpon the mount Sion, fro this tyme forth for evermore. And vnto the O thou tower of Ier, thou stronge holde off the dought Sion: vnto the shal it come: and the first holdship and buyngdome of the daughter Je rusalem. Why the art thou now so heuy: is the reed buyng in the: are thy counsellors as weye thir: thou art so payned, as a woman in hir travayle.

And now (o thou daughter Sion) be so ry: let it greue the as a wise laboringe with childe: for now must thou ge the out off the cite, and dwell vpon the playne fildes. For vnto Babels shalt thou go, there shal thou be deluyered, and there the LORD shal low se the from the home off thine enemies.

From also are there many people gather ed together against the, saynges: what, Si on is cursed, we shall se oure lust vpon her.
 But they knowe not the thoughtes off the LORD, they vnderstonde not his counsell, that shal gather them together as the shee ues in the barn. Therefore are the vp (o thou daughter Sion) and thus off the out the comes for: I wil make thy heine yon, and thy cla ues brasse, that thou mayest grynde many people: their goodes shalbe thou appropriate vnto the LORD, and their substance vnto the ruler off the whole worlde.

The V. Chapter.

Wher that shalbe thou be robbed thy self, o thou robbers daughter: they shal laye sege against vs, and smyte the intige off Israel with a rodde vpon the chek. And thou Jerusalem of phuisa, art lit tle amonge the thousandes off Iuda. Out off the shal come one vnto me, which shal be y gouernour i Israel: whose ouer goinge haeth bene si on the begynnynge, and from enerlast tinge. In the meane whyle be plaeged them for a season, vntill the tyme that she shall beate: haue borne: then shall the reman nant of his brethren be conuerted vnto y children of Israel. He shal stonde fast, and ge ue fode in the strength of the LORD, and in the victory of the name of y LORD his God: and when they be conuerted, he shall be magnified vnto the farthest partes of the world.

Then shal there be peace, so that the Af sirian maye come in to oure londe, and tra de in oure houses. We shall bringe vp shee shepherdes and wiij. prynces vnto them: the se shal subdue the londe of Assur wth the swer de, and the londe of Assyriod with their na kethe weapens. Thus shal he deluyer vs from the Assiris, when he connecth within oure lande, and stretch his force within oure borders. And the remnant of Jacob shal be a monge the multitude of people, as the beas of the LORD, and as the droppes vpon the grasse, that carich for no man, and without of no body. And the residue of Jacob shalbe amonge the Gentiles and the multitude off people, as the lyon amonge the bestes of y wodde, and as the Lyons whelp amonge a flocke of sheepe: which (when he goeth thro-row) treadeth downe, tearerh in peeces, and there is no man that can helpe. Thyne hon-de shalbe lift up upon thine enemies, and all thyne adversaries shal perish.

C The ymage shal come all (sa yeth the LOR-DE) that I wil take thine horses from the, & desirov thy charrettes. I wil beate downe the cities off thy londe, and enerbethe all thy stronge holdes. All witchcraftes will I rote out of thine hande, there shall no mo-soyth sayenges be within the. Thine Idols and thine ymages will I destroye out of y so that thou shalt no more bowe thy self into the workes of thine owne handes. Thy groves will I plucke up by the roots, & beate downe thy cities. Thus will I be augeid also, upon all heathen that will not heare.

The VI Chapter.

G ERden now what the LORDE sa yeth: Up, repine the mountaynes, and let the hills beate thy voyce. O heare the punishment of the LORDE, ye mountaynes, and ye mightie foundacids of y earth: for the LORDE wil repine ur people, do reason with yrael: O my people, what have I done unto the: or wherthin have I hurte the: geneme answere. Because I brought the frst the londe of Egipte, and deliyered the out of the house of bondage: Because I made Moses, Aaron and Miriam to lede the: Remembre (o my people) what Balach the kynge of Moab had ymagined agaynst the, and what answere that Balaam the sonne of Be-or gave him, from Bethim unto Galgal: y ye maye knowe the lowynge kynndnesse of y LORDE.

B What acceptable thynges shal I offre vnto the LORDE: shall I bowe myne to the he: Ged: Shall I come before him w' brient offerings, and with calves of a yere olde: Sath the LORDE a pleasure in many shep-sund rammes, or innumerable streames of oyle: Or shal I geuemy firstborne for myne offences, and what the frute of my body for the syme of my soule: I wil hewe the O ma, what is good, and what the LORDE requyrieth off the: T amely, to do right, to haue pleasure in lowynge kynndnesse, to be lowly, and to walke with thy God: that thou mayest be called a cice of the LORDE, that thy name maye be rightwysfull. Heare (o yea yres): whe welde els geue you such warnynge: Shulde I not be displeasid, for the unrightnesse good in the house of the wicked, and because the measure is vniuersal: O: sy lde I iustifie the false balaamos and the bagge of deua full weightes, amonge those that be full of riches unrighteously gotten: where the syns deale with falsed, speake lyes, and beuieiddeat full cuniges in their mouthes:

Therfore I will sate in honre to puny the, and to make the desolare, because of thy synes. Thou shalt eat, & not haue any ye thou shalt bringe thy self downe. Thou shalt ste, but not scape: ad those of thynol best saue, wil I deliyer to the sword. Thou shalt seme, but not reape: thou shalt puke out olyues, but oyle shalt thou not haue, in anoynre thy self withall: thou shalt make our steece must, but shalt buynt no wyne.
Kepe the ordinaunces of Amri, & all the of crimes of the house of Achab: ye foloweth ir pleasures, therfore wil I make the wast: cause y inhabytors to be abhorred, O my peple: & thou shalt thou beate thine owne me.

The VII. Chapter.

W O to me: I am become as one that goeth a gleanynge in the harvest.
There are no more grapes to eat, yet wolde I sayne (with all my herte) here of the best frute. There is noe a godly man vpon earth, there is noe one righteous amonge They labourer all to styrd bloude, & cury humeth his brother to deathe: yet they say they do well, when they do euill. As they ce wil, so sa yeth the indge: y he maye be a pleasure agayne. The greates ma spaketh what his herte desireth, & y heareo deum him. He be best off the is but as a thistle, and the most rightnesse of echem is but as a thorn in the hedge. But when the daye of thy pas-chers cometh, y then shalt be vntid: th shal they be waistrd a waye. Let no man bid ue his frende, ner put his confidene in a pice. Repe the portz of thy mouth, from her y leech in thy bowme: for y soune shal perishe farther to dishonoure, the daughter shal vs agaynst her mother, y daughter in lawe agaynst her mother, y daughter in lawe shal be euen they of his owne house hold.

Therforthele I wil lode vp wote y LOR-DE, I wil patiently abyde Ged my sauour, my God shal beare me. O thou enemy of my-ne, reioyce not agayn my fall. For I shal get vp agayne: and though I sye in darcknesse, yet LORDE is my light. I wil beare the punishment of the LORDE (for why, I haue offended him): till he sty in indignatione vpon my se, and se that I haue righte. & wil bringe forth to the light, and I shal se his right nesse.

16-19-2
17-21-6 18-22-6
19-23-6

14 He that is myne enemy shall lōke upon it, & be confounded, which now saiech: Whe re is thy LORDE God? Myne eyes shall behold her, whom she shalbe troden downe, as 15 the claye in the stretes. The tyme wil come, that thy gappes shal be made vp, and the lame shal goe abrode: and each at tyme shal thee shall come vnto the, from Assur vnto the streges cities, and from the stronge cities vnto the open: from the one ste to the other, from the one mountayne to the other.

16 Nor standinge the londe must be waisted, because of them that dwell therein, and for the sinnes of their owne ymaginacions.
Therefore side thy people with thy rodde, the stocke of thine heretage which dwell besides in the wodde: that they maye be fedde upon the mounte of Charnel, Basan & Ga-lad as a fore tyme. Marvellous thinges will 17 I shew them, like as when they came out of Egipt. This shal the Synchense, and be 18 ashamed for all their power: so that they shall lay their honde vpon their mouth, and 19 shal kepe their eares. They shal like the busli in the serpent, as the womes of the earth, y in the in their holes. They shal be as fra yed of the LORDE our God, & they shal feare y.

20 Where is there such a God as thou? that pardoneth wickednes, and forguest the offences of the remnant of thine heretage: 21 he hath not his mouth for ever. And why 22 hath he is to haue compassion: he shal curme awaye, & be mercyfull to vs: he shal pur-me oure wickednesse, & cast all oure syn-nes into the becom of the see. Thou shalt be praisyd with Iacob, and thy mercy for Abraham, like as thou hast sworne vnto oure fathers longe agoo.

The ende of the prophet Michas.

The Prophet

Naum.

What Naum coneyneth.

Cap. i. He prayeth the power and goodnesse of God: he reproacheth the Egiptians, because they despised the counsell and punishment of God.

Cap. ii. He describeth vnto them the terrible asse of the plague.

Cap. iii. He reproacheth the abominacions of the Chaldeans cite, and: he curseth them of the
i. punishment.

This is the havy burthen of Timor, which Naum of Elchoo dyo wyte, as he sawe it.

The first Chapter.

1 The LORDE is a gelous God, and a taker of vengeance: yet a taker of vengeance is y LOR-DE, and wrothfull. The LORDE 2 tatech vengeance of his enemies, and reioiceth displeasure for his aduer-saries. The LORDE sufferech longe, he is of greate power, & so innocēt, that he leauech no man faultlesse before him. The LORDE goeth forth in tempest and stormy wecher, the cloudes are the dust of his feete. When he reioiceth the see, he dryeth it vp, & turneth all the floudes to drye londe. Basan is be-solate, Charnel and the pleasure of Libanus was terech awaye. The mountaynes tremble for him, the hilles consume. As the sight of him, the earth quakech: yet the whole world, and all that dwell therein. Who maye endure be fore his wrath? O: who is able to abide his grimme displeasure: his anger taketh on like fyre, and the harde rockes burst in lumber before him.

3 Ful gracious is the LORDE, and a stronge holde in tyme of trouble, he knoweth the that put their trust in him: when the floude reioiceth ouer, and destroyeth the place, and when the darknesse foloweth full vpon his enemies. What do ye ymagin then agaynst the LORDE on this maner: (Kush, when he hath once made an ende, then shal come no more trouble.) For like as the thornes that sticke together, and as the drye strawe, so shale the dionardes be consumed together, euen when they be full. There come out of y such as ymagin myschefe, and geue ymgra-cions counsell agaynst the LORDE.

4 Therefore thus saiech the LORDE Eil: erth be as wel prepared, yete as many as they can, yet shal they be hewen downe, and passe awaye. And as for the, I wil veyreche, but not utterly destroye the. And now wil I breke his rodde from thy backe, and burst thy bendes in sonder. But the LORDE hath geuen a commandement concerninge the, that there shall come no more feare of thy name.
The caned and casten ymages will I rote out of the house of thy god. Thy burde shal I prepare for the, and thou shalt be con-founde.

The ii. Chapter.

1 He holdeth vpon the mountaynes vnto the feare of him, that byngeth good thynges, & preadeth peace. O Juda, kepe thy holy dayes, performe thy pro-myse: for Babil shall come no more in the, he is utterly roced out.

The iii. Chapter.

1 He prayeth the power and goodnesse of God: he reproacheth the Egiptians, because
of God.

The scaterer shal come vp agaynst the, & laye siege to the castell. Loke thou wel to the strettes, make thy loynes strange, arme thy self with all thy myght for the LORDE shal restore agayne the glory of Jacob, like as y glory of Sffrad. The destroyers haue broken them downe, & married the wyne bawndyes. The shyld of his gyauntes glistereth, his men of warre are clothed in purple. His cha rretes are as fyre, when he maketh him forwarde, his archers are wel decked & crimmied. The charrettes rolls upon the strettes, & wel- lere in the hye wayes. They are eo loke upon like cressettes of fyre, and go swyfly, as the lychtenyng.

B When he doeth but watne his gyauntes, they fall in their arayes, & haistly they clym me vp the wallse: yee the engyns of the war re are prepared all ready. The water pouzes shal be opened, and the kinges palace shall fall. The quene hir self shal beled awaye cap tyue, and hir gentylwomen shal moune as the doves, & grone within their herces. Ty- ninie is like a pole full of water, wetheren shal they be sayne to ste. Stonde, slide, shal they crye: & there shal no one turne backe. A waye with the syluer, a waye with the golde: for here is no ende of treasure. There shal be a multitude of all maner costly ornaments. Thus must he be spoyled, emperid & cleme striped out: that their herces maye be melted awaye, their knees creble, all their loynes be weate, and their faces blacke as a pot.

Where is now the dwellinge of the lygo, and the pasture of the lyons whelpes: where the lyon and the yonessse weate with the whelpes, and no man sayed them awaye: But the lyon spoyled yough for his yong ones, and deuoured for his yonessse: he syl- led his dennes with his piay, & his dwellinge place with that he had rauysshid. Beholde, I wil vpon the (saith the LORDE of ho- osts) and wil sit frae vpon thy charrettes, that they shal smote withall, and the swerde shal deuoure thy yonge lyons. I wil make an ende of thy spoylinge from out of the earth, & the voyce of thy messaungers shall nomore be herde.

The III. Chapter.

W O to the bloudthursty cite, which is all full of lyes and robbery, & wil not leaue off from rauysshing. Chap. II. He reproveth the curuous and vnrighteous men.

Chap. III. A prayer of the prophet.

The first Chapter.

Ihis is the heuy burthe, which the prophet Abacuc byd se. O LORD, how longe shall I crye, & thou wilt not heare: how longe shall I compleine vnto the, Iustfyng wronge, and thou wilt not helpe: Why lettest thou me se wronge and labour: Why many and violent acts befor me, power ouer geeth ryghte: for the lawe is tome in peccer, and there can no ryght iudgment go forth. And why: the vngodly is more iust by then the righteous: this is the cause, yf wronge iudgment proceedeth. Behold amonge the sheethen, and loke well: wnto me, and be abasshyed: for I wil do a thinge in your tyme, which though it be tolde to you, ye shall not beleue.

Jorde, I wil raise vp yf Calbea, that byt and swiue people: which shall go as wyde as the londe is, to take possession of dwelling places, that be not their owne. A grynne t bytuous people is it, these shall see in indignite a punysshment. Their herdes are swiuen vpon the carcas of the mountayne, & by wher they yf wolues in yf eueninge. Their women come by greace heapes from farre, they se thestie yco denis as the Aegle. They come all to spoyle: out of them commeth an east wynde, which bloweth and gathereth their captiues, like as the soude. They shall not be tyntines, and laugh the prynces to scorne. They shall not sit by any stronge hold, for they shall laye obdurance agaynst it, and take it. Then shall they take a fishy coas, & wnto them, to go forth & to do more euill, & shall crye that power vnto their God.

But thou o LORD my God, my holy one, thou art from the begynnyng, therfore shall we not dye. O LORD, thou hast ordered them for a punysshment, and set them to reproue the righte. Thine eyes are cleine, thou mayest not se euill, thou canst not beholde yf thinge thacio wised. Wherefore then dost thou loke vpon the vngodly, and holdest thy tounge, when the wicked denoueth the man that is better than himselfe: Thou makest ment as the fish in the see, and like as the creeping beestes, that haue no gyde. They take vp all with their angle, they catch it in their net, & gather it in their yarne: whereof they reioyce and are glab. Therfore offer they vnto thie net, and do sacrifice vnto their yarne: because that thow wilt their porcion is become so far, and their meate so piteous. Wherefore they cast out their net agayne, & neuer cease to slay the people.

The II. Chapter.

But the LORD answered me, and sayde: Whyte the vision plandy vpon thy tables, that who so commeth by, maye rebeie: for yf visio is yet farr of for a tyme, but at yf last it shall come to passe, & not faile. And though he tary, yet wait thou for him, for in very dede he wil come, and not be slacke. Beholde, who so wil not beleue, his soule shall not profere: but the iust shall lye by his faith. Like as the wyne discaueth the dyon carder, euen so the proud shall faile & not endure. He openeth his desyie wyde vp as the hell, & is as unsciable as death. All sheithen gathereth he to him, & heapech vnto him all people.

But shall not all these take vp a prouerbe agaynst him, and mocke him with a bymoude, and saye: Wo vnto him that heapech vpon other mans goodes: how longe will he lade himselfe with thicke claye: How sodenly will they stonde vp, yf shall byt the, & awake, that she tereate yf in peccer: yet thou shalt be their pay. Seinge thou hast spoyled many sheithen, therfore shall the remnant of the people spoyle thee: because of mens bloude, & for the wronge done in the londe, in the cite & vnto all them that dwell therein.

What Sophony conteineth.

Cap. I. Prophecies of plagues for to come upon Iuda.

Cap. II. He exhorteth them to amide, that they may escape the wrath of God: and sheweth the terrible punishment.

Cap. III. Punishment because of the wickedness of the Iames: whom God therefore refused, and chose the Gentien.

The first Chapter.

In this is the worde of the LORDE, which came vnto Sophony the sonne of Chusi, the sonne of Gedonias, the sonne of Amarias y sonne of Iosaphias: in the tyme of Josias the sonne of Amoon kinge of Iuda. I wil gather up all thinges in the londe (saith the LORDE) I wil gather up man and beest: I wil gather up the foules in the ayre, and the fish in the see: so the greate decaye of the wicked: z wil really destroye the men out of the londe, saith the LORDE. I wil stretch out my shadowe vpon Iuda, and vpon all sods as wold in Ierusalem. Thus wil I receiue the mourninge of Baal from this place, and the weene of the Bernaryes, and prestes: yee z Iudas vpon their house toppes woulthipe z haue them silene vnto the hooff of heauen: which sweare by the LORDE, and by their which also: which sturre a backe from y LORDE, and nether seke a fater the LORDE, nor regard him.

In the daye of y presence of the LORDE God, in the daye of the LORDE is at honde: yee the LORDE hath prepared a waye offerre, and called his geytes therto. And thus shall it happen in the daye of the LORDES a daye of offeringe: I wil vylet the princes, the kings children, z all sods as weere strauit in gloryng. In the same daye also wil I vylet all thos, that erabe ouer the thresholde of iherusalem, which fill their loides house w thery and false de. At y same tyme (saith the LORDE) there shall be harde a grente crye frome sythpoite, and an howlinge from y other poite, and a grente murthir frome the thresholde: yee that dwell in the myll, for all the marchant people are gone, and all they that were: loben with syluer, are roced out.

In the same tyme wil I sette borow Ierusalem with lamentes, and vylet them that were in their drynges, and saie in their ymes: Cuffy, the LORDE wil do nether good ner euell. Their goodes shalbe spoyled, and their houses layed wast. They shall buyde houses, and not dwell in them: they shal plant vnyardes, but not drynte the wyne ther of. For the greate daye of the LORDE is at honde, it is harde by, z cometh on a pace. Horrible is y trynges of the LORDES daye, then shall the gyaumes are our: for that daye is a daye of wrath, a daye of trouble z tury-nesse, a daye of vter destruccio: z mery-tye barde z glomynge daye, a cloudy z stormy daye, a daye of the noyse of trespettes and shammes, agaynst the stronge citis, and his to come. I wil bunge y people in to sod vextion, that they shal go abewete blinde me, because they haue sinned agaynst the LORDE. Their bloude shalbe shed as the dust, z their bodie as the mye. Neither their syluer ner their golde shalbe able to deluyr the in that woonfull daye of the LORDE, but the whole londe shalbe consumed thowte the fyre of his glory: for he shall soone make ciente ryddance of all them that dwell in the londe.

The II. Chapter.

Come together and gather you, O ye strange people: or y thinge go forth that is concluded, z on the tyme be past awaye as the dust: on the fearfull mouth of the LORDE come vpon you, yee on the daye of the LORDES see displeasure come vpon you. Sette the LORDE all yee meke hatred vpon earth, ye that worde a fater his indgmet: ste righteousnesse, ste lowynesse: that ye maye be defendid in the wochfull daye of y LORDE. For Gasa shal be destroyed, z Asecalon shall be layed wast: They shal cast oue Aghod at the moone daye, and Acaaron shal be placit vpon by the roces.

Wo vnto you y dwell vpon the see coast, ye marthurous people: the worde of y LORDE shal come vpon you. O Canaan thou londe of the Philistynes, I wil destroye the, so that there shal no man dwell in the eny more: z as for the see coast, it shal be by idome ceages z shepe folde: yee it shalbe a poition for sods as tyme of the house of Iuda, so seke the vpon. In y houses of Asecalon shal they rest towarde night: for the LORDE their God shal vylet the, z turne awaye their cap-tyuite. I haue herde the despyte of Aload, z the blasphemies of the children of Amoon: how they haue shamefully increasid my people, and magnified them sinces within the borders of their londe. Aggeus.

What Aggeus conteineth.

Cap. I. He exhorteth the people to buyde vp their hands and repair with their legs their waye.

Cap. II. He comforteth them with a courage of the clemencie and glory of the seconde temple, whereby he understode the church of the saintes.

The first Chapter.

In the seconde yeare of kyng Darius, in the vi. moneth the firste daye of the moneth, came the worde of the LORD by the prophet Aggeus vnto Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel y prince of Iuda, and to Iesus the sonne of Josiebec the hye priest, sayenge: Thus speaketh the LORD of hoosten, and saith: This people doch saye: They meene not yett come to buyde vp the LORDS house. Then spake the LORD by the prophet Aggeus to saye: Ye yett sit ye can synge tymes to dwell in syche houses, and thus this house I ye maist: Considre now youre wayes in youre hertes (saith the LORD of hoosten) ye sawe much, but ye bain ye lide in: Ye eate, but ye haue not ymough to buyde, but ye are not fylled: Ye drinke yourt wine, but ye are not warme: Ye ye earnestly mynne, yett ye are in a broken purse.

B Thus saith the LORD of hoosten: If ye see your oppos wayes in youre hertes, gett ye up to the mountayne, scyth wood, & buyde it up the house: that it maye be acceptable vnto me, and that I maye shewe myne honour, saith the LORD. Ye loled for much, and so it is come to litle: & though ye bryng in home, yett do I blowe it awaye. And why shall my house I yech so wast, and ye remaine every man vnto his owne house. Whether the hengen is for bydd to geue you any beny, and the earth is for bydden to geue you any fruite: I haue called for a droneth, both vpo the londe & vpon the mountaynes, vpon compt. vpon wyne & vpon oyle, vpon every chyn that the grounde byngeth forth, vpon men and vpon cattell, yett and vpon all ban by labour.

Now when Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel, & Iesus the sonne of Josiebec the hye priest with the remaninge of the people, herde the voyce of the LORD their God, & the wordes of the prophet Aggeus (like as the LORD their God had sent him) the people byd feare the LORD. Then Aggeus the LORDS angel sayed in the LORDS messaige vnto the people: Jam ry now saith the LORD. So the LORD waken vp the spere of Zorobabel the prince of Iuda, and the spere of Iesus the sonne of Josiebec the hye priest, and the spere of the remaninge of all the people: they came to labour, in the house of the LORD of hoosten their God.

The ii. Chapter.

Spon the xiiij. daye of the seixe moneth, in the seixthe yeare of kyng Darius, the xxi. daye of the seixe moneth, came the worde of the LORD by the prophet Aggeus, sayenge: speake to Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel prince of Iuda, and to Iesus the sonne of Josiebec the hye priest, and to the residens of y people, & saye: Who is left amonge you, that saye this house is in his firste bury: But what thinke ye now by it: Is it not in youre eye, and as though it were nothinge: I everthelesse be of good chere, & Zorobabel (saith the LORD) be of good confaunce, & Iesus than some of Iosebec, hye priest: take good hartes vnto you also, all ye people of the lande, saith the LORD of hoosten, and do a conuynge to the reuerdes: Jam with you, saith the LORD of hoosten) like as I agreed with you, when ye came out of the lande of Egypte: & my spere shall be amonge you, saith ye now.

For thus saith the LORD of hoosten: If ye see once more will I shake beaui and dreath, the sic and the drye lodes: For I will moue all synthen, & the corn spere of all synthen shall come, & so wil I fill this house with honoure, saith the LORD of hoosten. The synther is myne, & the golde is myne, saith the LORD of hoosten. Thus y glory of the last house shall be greater che the first, saith the LORD of hoosten: & in this place wil I geue peace, saith the LORD of hoosten.

The xxiij. daye of the ii. moneth in the seixthe yeare of kyng Darius, came the worde of the LORD vnto the prophet Aggeus sayenge: Thus saith y LORD God of hoosten: If ye the prestes concerninge the lawe, & saye: If one beate holy flesh in his coere lappe, & with his lappe do touch the bred, potage, w. myne, oyle or any other meate: shall he be holy also? The prestes answered, & saide: No. Then sayde Aggeus: If w. one beynge defyled with a dead carcase, touch any of the se: shall it also be vncleane? The prestes gaue answere, & sayde: yee, it shall be vncleane. The Aggeus answered, and sayde: Euen so is this people & this nacien before me, saith y LORD

The prophet Aggeus.

DE and so are all the workes of their hōdes, yee and all that they offer, is vniuent.

C And now (I praye you) cōsīdēre from this daye forth, and how it hath gone with you a foie: or euer there was layed one stone vpon another in the temple of the LORDE: that when ye came to a come heape of yr. bushels, there were fewe carren: and that when ye came to the wyne presse for to poure out 2. pottes of wyne, there were scarce fr. For I smote you with heate, blastinge 7 hale stones in all the labours of youre bondes: yea was there none of you, that wolde turne vnto me, saith the LORDE. Considere then from this daye forth and afoze, namely, from the xiiii. daye of thei. moneth, vnto the daye that the foundation of the LORDES temple was layed: Mark it well, To see the sēde yee in the barn: haue not the vynes, ete figgetrees, the pomgranates and olyue trees bene yet in fruite full: but frō this daye forth, I shal make them to profpere.

ch. a b

Moreover the xiiii. daye of the moneth came the worde of the LORDE vnto Aggeus agayne, sayenge: Speake to Zorobabel the pynce of Iuda, and saye: I will shake both heauen and earth, and ouerthrowe the seate of the Kingdome, yee 7 destroye the mightie Kingdome of the Gentēs. I will ouerthrowe the charteres, and those that sit vpon them, so that both heise and man shal fall downe, yea man thowm his neighbours swerde. And as forthe, o Zorobabel, saith the LORDE of hoostes: thou sonne of Salathiel, my seruante: I will make the (saith the LORDE) at the same tyme, and make the as a stele for: I haue chosē the, saith the LORDE of hoostes.

The first Chapter.

IN the eight moneth of the firste yere of Kinge Darius, came the worde of the LORDE vnto Zachary the sonne of Berechias the papher, sayenge: The LORDE hath ben displeasid at youre foie fathers. And saye thou vnto them: thus saith the LORDE of hoostes. Turne you vnto me, saith the LORDE of hoostes. And I will turne me vnto you, saith the LORDE of hoostes. Wene ye while youre foie fathers, vnto whom the people cryed a foie tyme, sayenge: Thus saith the LORDE God of hoostes: Turne you from youre enell wayes, 7 from youre wicked imaginacions. But they wolde not heare, ne regarden, saith the LORDE. What is now become of youre foie fathers and the people: are they yet still alijue? But yd not my wordes 7 statutes (which I commaunded by my seruantes yf prephers) touch yf his fathers: vpon this, they gaue answer 7 sayd like as yf LORDE of hoostes had sayd vnto vs, accordinge to yf come wayes 7 imaginacions, euen so hath he dealt with vs.

Vpon the xiiii. daye of the first moneth (which is the moneth Sebat) in the second yere of Darius, came the worde of the LORDE vnto Zachary the sonne of Berechias, the sonne of Abdo the papher, sayenge: I sawe by night, and lo, there sat one vpon a reade hoise, and sēde still amonge the figgetrees, that were beneth vpon the ground: and behynde him were there seate, and whye ye hoise.

The prophet Zachary.

The iij. Chap. Fo. xxviii.

Then sayde J: O my LORDE, what are these? And the angel that talked with me, sayde vnto me: I will shewe the what these be. And the man that stode amonge the Myrtes, answered T sayde: These are they, whom the LORDE hath sent to go thoro the world. And they answered the angel of the LORDE, what stode amonge the Myrtes, and sayde: We have gone thoro the world: and beholde, all the world dwelle at ease, and are carelesse.

Then the LORDES angel gaue answer, and sayde: O LORDE of hostes, how long shall this be vnto mercie full to Ierusalem and to the citie of Iuda, with whom thou hast bene displeasid now these lxx. yeares? So the LORDE gaue a louyng and a conforable answer, vnto the angel that talked with him. And the angel that communed with me, sayde vnto me: Crie thou, and speake, thus saith the LORDE of hostes: I am exceeding pious glous ouer Ierusalem and Sion, and am displeasid at the carelesse heathen: for wher so Imas had a little angry, they vnd their best that I might destroye them. Therefore thus saith the LORDE: I wil turne me agayne in mercie towarde Ierusalem, so that my house shall be buylded in it, saith the LORDE of hostes: yee and the plommer shall be layd abode in Ierusalem, saith the LORDE of hostes.

Cre also, and speake: thus saith the LORDE of hostes: My citie shall be in good prosperite agayne, the LORDE shall yet conserue Sion, and chose Ierusalem. Then lift I vp myne eyes and sawe, and beholde, fourte homes. And J sayde vnto the angel, what talked with me: what be these? he answered me: These are y houses, which haue scaured Iuda, Iisrael and Ierusalem abode. And y LORDE shewed me iij. carpenters. Then sayde J: what wil these do? he answered, T sayde: These are the homes, which haue strove Iuda abode, that no man durst lift vp his heade: But these are come to fraye them awaye, and to cast out y homes of the Gentiles, which liue vpon their home ouer the londe of Iuda, to fcare it abode.

The ii. Chapter.

Lift vp myne eyes agayne, T looked: and beholde, a man with a measure in his honde. Then saide J: what dost thou? And he sayde vnto me: To measure Ierusalem, that I maye se how long and how broad it is. And beholde, the angel that talked with me, wence his waye forth. Then wex there out another angel to meete him, T sayde vnto him: Runne, speake to this yongeman, T saye: Ierusalem shall be inhabited without any wall, for y waye wauldnes of people T carell, y shall be therein. Jee I myself saith the LORDE: wil be vnto her a wall of fyre rounde aboute, T wil be honoured in her.

O gee you south, O stele from the londe of y north saith the LORDE yee, whom I haue scaured in to the foure wyndes vnder beank, saith the LORDE. Same thy self, o Sion: thou shalt dwell with y daughter of Babilon, for thus saith the LORDE of hostes: With a glonous power hath he sent me out to the heathen, which spoyled you: for who so toucheth you, shall touch the apple of his owne eye. Beholde, I will lift vp myne honde ouer them: so that they shall be spoiled of thofe, in which a foue serued them: y shall knowe, that the LORDE of hostes hath sent me.

Be glad, T reioyce, o daughter of Sion: for so, I am come to dwell in the myddel of the saith the LORDE. At the same tyme be re shall many heathen cleue to the LORDE, T shall be my people. Thus wil J dwell in the myddel of the, T thou shalt knowe, that the LORDE of hostes hath sent me vnto the. The LORDE shall haue Iuda in possession for his parte in the holy grounde, T shall chose Ierusalem yet agayne. At all flesch be still before the LORDE, for he is risen out of his holy place.

The iii. Chapter.

Wit he shewed me Iesua y hye prest, standinge before the angel of the LORDE, and Satan stode at his right honde to resise him. And the LORDE sayde vnto Satan: The LORDE reioyce the (holo Satan) yee the LORDE that hath chosen Ierusalem, reioyce be. Jo noe this a biande take out of the fire: How Iesua was cloed in vnclene rayment, and stode before the angel, whidi answered T sayde vnto these, y stode before him: take awaye y foule clothes from him. And vnto him he sayde: Beholde, J haue talde a waye chy synne from the, T wil be cleare the with change of rayment, he sayde moreover: set a saye myter vpon his heade. So they set a saye myter vpon his heade, T put on clothes vpon him, and the angel of y LORDE stode there. Then the angel of the LORDE testified vnto Iesua, T spake, thus saith the LORDE of hostes: If thou wilt walke in my wayes, T kepe my wayes, thou shalt be my house, T kepe my courtes, T wil gene the place amonge these that stonde here. Forre o Iesua thou hye prest, thou T chy friende that dwell before the, so they are wdderous me agayne, & waked me vp (as a man thar is raysed out of his slepe) & sayde vnto me: What seist thou? And I sayde: I haue lofed, and beholde: a candlestick all of golde, with a boll vpon it & his viij. lampes therin, & vpon euery lampe viij. stalkes: And ij. olyue trees therby, one vpon the right syde of the boll, & the other vpon the left syde.

So I answered, & spake to the angell y talked with me, sayyng: O my lofe what are these?
The angell that talked with me, answered & sayde vnto me: knowest thou not what these be? And I sayde: No, my lofe. He answered, & sayde vnto me: This is the worde of the LORDE vnto Zorobabel, sayyng: I regrett thou art an hooff of men, ner thou wert strighe, but thou wert my sperre, saith y LOR-DE of hoostes. What art thou: thou greate mountayne before Zorobabel: thou must be

¶ WHOUER, the worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayyng: The bondes of Zorobabel haue layed y foundation of this house, his bondes also shal fynishe it: that yc maye re-ioyce, howe that the LORDE of hoostes hath sene me vnto you. For he that hath bene des-pyed a litle season, shal reioyce, whil he seeth the ryme weighte in Zorobabels honde. The viij. eyes are the LORDES, which go thore vnto the hole woulde. Then answered I, & sayde vnto him: What are these two olyue trees vpon the righte and left syde of the candlestick?
I spake moreover, & sayde vnto him: what be these ij. olyue bounches whiche thou art of two golde pipes? answere them: I was in to the golde. He answered me, & sayde: knowest thou not, what these be? And I sayde: No, my lofe. Then sayde he: These are the two olyue bounches, that stonde before the raltch of the whole earth.

The V. Chapter.

¶ SO I turned me lifyng vpon myne eyes, & lofed, & beholde, a styngge bo-lle. And he sayde vnto me: what seist thou? I answered: I see a styngge bolle of fyre.

cabices longe & cabices brode. Then sayde he vnto me: This is the castle, y goeth ouer the whole earth: for all cabices shal iudged a fier this bolle, & all swaters shal iudged according to the same. I will bringe it forth (saith the LORDE of hoostes) y it shal come to the house of the thepe, & to the house of him, that falsly swarath by my me: & shal remayne in his house, & I will with the rymbe & stones ther of. The angel that talked with me, wozte forth, & I vnto me: lise vp thine eyes & se, what thou y goeth forth. And I sayde: what is it? He answered: this is a measure goinge out, he sayde me: wozte: I enen thus are they y vnto the whole earth: ye lorde vpon. And holde, there was lise vp a talent of leader lo, a woman sae in the myddest of the re. And he sayde: This is vngodlynes. So he cast her in to the myddest of the re: & thence y lempe of leader vpon an holke.

¶ THEN lise I vpon myne eyes, & lofed: I holde, there came out ij. women, & the wode was in their wynges (for they had wynges liethe wynges of a Swete) & they laid vpon the measure betwixt the earth & the heauen. Then spake I to the angell, y talked with me: whither wil these beare the measure? And he sayde vnto me: in to the londe of Sy near, so buyde them an house which is prepared, the measure shal be there.

The Vi. Chapter.

¶ WHOUER I turned me, lifyng vpon myne eyes, & lofed: & beholde, then came iij. charytes out frō beuyn two hills, which hills were of buffe. In the first chare were reade hoise, in the second chare were blacke hoise, in y third chare were whyte hoise. In y fourth chare were hoises of dyuers colours, & stronge. Then spake I, and sayde vnto the angell that talked with me: O lofe, what are these? The angel answered, & sayde vnto me: These are the iij. wyndes of the heauen, which be com forth to smitte before the ruler of all y earth. That with the blacke hoise wonne into the londe of the north, & the whyte foloweth, and the spickled hoise wonne south vnto the south. These hoise were very stronge, & wozte out: and soughte to go and take this journey ouer the whole earth.
And he said vnto me: get you hence, and go thore the wode.
So they wozte thore: & wozte the wode. Then cried he vpon me, and spake vnto me, sayyng: Beholde, these that go towarde y north shal shall my wozte in the north countre.

2 And the worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Take of the prisoners that are come from Babilon: namely, Seldai, Tobias and Jdaia: & come thou the same daye, and go in to the house of Josias the sonne of Sephury. Then take golde and syluer, and make crownes therof, and set them vpon the heads of Ihesu the sonne of Joseduc, the hie priest, and sheade vnto him: Thus saith the LORDE of hostes: Beholde, the man whose name is the leuadith: & he that shall spange vpon a face him, shall buyde vpon the temple of the LORDE: he shall beare the paye: he shall sit vpon the LORDES throne, and haue the dominacion.

3 I will haue be also vpon his throne, & a peaceable conuall shall be betwixte them both. And the crownes shall be in the temple of the LORDE, for a remembraunce vnto the leui: Tobias, Jdaia and Zen the sonne of Sephury. And such as be fatte of, shall come and buyde the temple of the LORDE: that ye maye knowe, howe that the LORDE of hostes hath sent me vnto you. And this shall come to passe, yf ye wil hearken diligenter vnto the voyce of the LORDE youre God.

The VII. Chapter.

1 It happened also in the fourth yere of kyng Darius, that the worde of the LORDE came vnto Zachary in the fourth daye of the iiij. month, which is called Casten: wher tyme as Sarasar and Rogomedech and the men that were with them, sent vnto Bechiel for to praye before y LORDE: and that they shalde saye vnto the prestes, which were in the house of the LORDE of hostes, and to the prophetes: Shalde we Iewe in the syxe moneth, and absteyne, as I haue done now certayne yeres? Then came the worde of the LORDE of hostes vnto me, sayenge: Speake vnto all the people of the londe, and to the prestes, and saye: when ye fasted and mourned in the vj. moneth (now this iij. yeres) byd ye fast vnto me. When ye ate also and dronke, byd ye not care and binde for youre owne selues: For not these the wordes, which the LORDE spake by his prophetes a fore tyme, when Jerusalem was yet inhabited and wealthy, she and the cities rounde aboute her: when they were wylde, both towarde the south and in the plaine countrees?

2 And the worde of the LORDE came vnto Zachary, sayenge: Thus saith y LORDE of hostes: I will geue true iudgment: shewe mercy and leuynge byndnesse, euery man to his brother: Do the wyddewe, the fatherlesse, the straunger, and poore no wronge: and let no man ymagen euill agaynst his brother in his heart. Feartheles they wolde not take heed, but turned their backs, and stopped their eares, that they shalde not heare. yet they made their heates as an Adamans stonie, lest they shalde heare the lawe: & robes, which the LORDE of hostes sent in his holy spiete by the prophetes a fore tyme.

Wherfore the LORDE of hostes was very wroth at them. And thus is it come to passe, that like as he spake and they wolde not heare: euen so they cribe, and I wolde not heare: (saith the LORDE of hostes) but scattered them amonge all Gernales, whom they knewe not. Thus the londe was made so desolate, yf there traualled no man in it neither to nor fro, for that pleasaunt londe was vncarely layed wast.

The VIII. Chapter.

1 So the worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thus saith the LORDE of hostes: I was in a greete gelousy ouer Sion, yet I haue bene very gelous ouer her in a greete displeasure. thus saith the LORDE of hostes: I wil turne me agayne vnto Sion, and wil dwell in the myddest of Jerusalem: so that Jerusalem shalbe called a faithfull and true cite, the hill of the LORDE of hostes, yet an holy hill.

Thus saith the LORDE of hostes: Theyre shall yet olde men and women dwell agayne in the stretes of Jerusalem: yet and schyld as go with shawes in their hondes for very agge. The stretes of the cite also shalbe full of yonge boyes and da. nilles, playnge vpon the stretes.

Thus saith the LORDE of hostes: yf the restus of this people thynke it to be impossible in these dayes, shalde it therefore be impossible in my sight, sayeth the LORDE of hostes: Thus saith the LORDE of hostes: Beholde, I wil bydner my people from the londe of the east and west, and wil bydner them agayne: that they maye dwell at Jerusalem. They shalbe my people, and I will be their God, in truth and righteousnesse. Thus saith the LORDE of hostes: let your hondes be stronge, yet that now beare the wordes by the mouth of the prophetes, which be in these dayes that the foundation is layed vpon the LORDE of hostes hoost, that the temple maye be buylded. For why? before these dayes neither women nor eard con-be wynde eny thinge, neither mighte eny man come in and out in rest, for trouble: but I let every man go agaynst his neighbour.

¶ Nevertheless I will now intreate the rest of this people nomore, as afore tyme; saith the LORDE of hostes; but they shal be a seide of peace. The wynde shal geue hit fructe, the grounde shal geue hit increase, and the heuens shal geue their dew; and I shal cause the remnant of this people, to haue all these in possession. And it shall come to passe, that like as ye were a curse amonge the heithen (O ye house of Iuda and ye house of Israel) I will I deliuer you, that ye shal be a blessinge: state noe, but let your h's be as stronge.

¶ For thus saith the LORDE of hostes: like as I desired to punish you, what tyme as your fathers prouoked me vnto wrath (saith the LORDE of hostes) and spared not: Euen so am I determed now in these dayes, for to do well vnto the house of Iuda and Ierusalem, therefore feare ye not. Howe the things that ye shal do, are these: Speake every man the truth vnto his neighbour, erecure iudgment truly and peaceably within your pores, none of you ymagyne euill in his berr agaynst his neighbour, and loue no fals oother: for all these are the things that I hate, saith the LORDE. And the word of the LORDE of hostes came vnto me, sayenge thus saith the LORDE of hostes: The fast of the fourth moneth, the fast of the sixth, the fast of the seventh, and the fast of the tenth, shal be ioye and gladnesse, & prosperous bye fastes vnto the house of Iuda: Only loue the truth and peace.

¶ Thus saith the LORDE of hostes: There shall yet come people, and the inhabitants of many cities: and they that dwell in one cite, shal go to another, sayinge: p. let vs go, and praye before the LORDE, & vs seeke the LORDE of hostes, I will go with you. Xecrich people and mightie heithen shal come and seeke the LORDE of hostes at Ierusalem, and to praye before the LORDE. Thus saith the LORDE of hostes: In that tyme shal ten men (out of all maner of languages of the Gentiles) take one Iewe by the hemme of his garment, and saye: we wil go with you, for we haue herbe, that God is amonge you.

The IX. Chapter.

¶ The word of the LORDE shal be revealed at Iudath, & Damasco shal be his offeringe: for the eyes of all me and of the crybes of Israel shall luke vp vnto the LORDE. The borders of Hamath shal be harde thereby, Tyros also & Sidon, for they are very wick. Tyros shal melt herself stronge, heape vp siluer as the sands, and golde as the claye of the streets. Zebulon, the LORDE shal eate her in, and Dan in possession: he shal smyte do more hit power to the see, and she shal be consumed with fire. This shal Acalon be, and a stronge. Gaza shal be very sory, so shal Accaron, because hit hope is come to confusion. In the kinge of Gaza shall perish, and at Acalon shal no man dwell.

¶ Strangers shall dwell at Acalon, & as in y pryde of y Philistynes, I shal roye in. Their bloude will I take away from their mouth, and their abhominacions from amonge their teeth. Who they shal be is I haue not told, yet they shal be as a pynce in Iuda, & Accaron like as Jebusi. And so will I compass my house rounde aboute with my wall of warre, geinge to and fro: but no synners soure come upon them eny more. For thus haue I sene now with myne eyes.

¶ Reioyce thou greatly, o daughter Sion be glad, o daughter Ierusalem. For lo, thy kinge cometh vnto thee, even the righteous and Sauoure: & only and simple is he, he rydeth vpon an asse, and vps the foote of an asse. I will roye out the charrettes fro Acalon, & the horse from Ierusalem, the battell weapons shal be destroyed. He shall geue the tyme of peace vnto the heithen, and his dominion shal be from the one see to the other, & from the floudes to the endes of the world.

¶ Thus also thouow the bloude of thy veniuaunt: shalt let thy prisoners out of the pyre, wherein is no water. Turne you now the stronge holde, yet that be in prison, let ge gone to be deliuered: And thus saith I the worde, that I wil rewarde the bible agayne. For Iuda haue I bere out as home for me, and I ephraim haue I siked.

¶ Thy sonnes (o Sion) wil I praye vp agayne the Gates, and make the as a giuement: saith the LORDE God shal be sene aboute hit, and his bartas shall go forth as the lightninge. The LORDE God shall blome the trompet, and shal come forth as a flame out of the south.

¶ The LORDE of hostes shall beset the city, they shall consume and desoure, and subuete them with synge stones. They shal be wicker rage, as it were thowow wyne. They shal be fylled like y basons, & as y vynes of y calue. The LORDE their God shal deliuer them, will, as the flock off his people: for the flock of his Sanctuary shall be set up in his late. O how prosperous and goodly a thing shall this be: The come shall make the young men stoutfull, and the new wyne the maydens.

The X. Chapter.

I will raise the LORDS then by thy messengers to thee, and thou shalt see the LORDS make clouds, and give you signs and wonders, for all the increase off the field, for I will give the answer of Iuda. The signs that I will give, and tell but I will believe the comfort that they give, is nothyn word. Therefore go they astray like a flock of shepe, and are troubled, because they know no shepherd. My wischfull displeasure is moved as the shepherdes, and I will visit the goozes. For the LORDS of hostes will mercifully vnter his flock, the house of Iudah, and he will be to them as a goodly father. One of Iuda shall come the helper, the ruler, the battellower, and all the princes together. They shall be as the grauntes, which in the field treade downe the maye of streets. They shall fight, for the LORDS shall be with them, so that the heuyn shall be confounded.

I will restore the house of Iuda, and present the house of Ioseph. I will turne them as for I praye them: and they shall be like as before, when I had not cast them of.
For the LORDS are their God, and will hea-ren them. Elphaim shall be as a graunte, and the house shall be therefull as thow old wyne: for their children shall see it, and be glad, and their hearts shall reioyce in the LORDS. I will bringe for them 2 gather them together, for I will reforme them. They shall increase, as they increase afore. I will so we the amonge the people, if they maye thinke vpon me in far re countre: they shall see me in their childre, and turne agayne. I will bringe them agayne also from the lande of Assur, and 2 gather them one of Assiria. I will carrye them into the lande of Galaad, and to Libanus, and they shall water nothynge. For they shall go upon the side of trouble, and sincke the see waues: so of all the hope shal be dried up. The poore boozings of Assur shall be cast downe, and the scepter off Elgipse shall be taken away. I will comforte them in the LORDS, for they maye walke in his name, saith the LORDS.

Wherby does (o Libanus) that the fire maye consume thy Cedre trees, howe they are trees, for the Cedre is saile, yet all y proud are waisted awaye howe they are oke trees of Basan for y mightie stronge wood is cut downe. Men maye beate the shepherdes downe, for their glory is destroyed. I will maye heare the Lyons whel-pen roare, for the pryce off Iordan is marred awaye.

I will saye to the LORDS my God: I see the shepe of y slaughter, which shall slay-ne of those that possesse them: yet they take it for no synne, but they y sell the saye: The LORDS be thanked, I am rich: for the coming shepherdes spare them not. Therefore wil I not spare those that dwell in the lon-de (saith the LORDS) but so, I will deliuer the people, every man in to his neighbours hande, and in to the hande of his synge: that they maye sincke the londe, and one off their bondes wil noe y deliuer them.

I myselfe seide y slaughter shepe (a poore flocke verely) and toke vnto me two staves: the one I called louynge me, the other I called wo, and so I kepte the shepe. The shepherdes destroyed I in one moneth, for I mighte not awaye wth them, neither had they any deliuer in me. Then sayde I: I will seide you no more, the thinge that byeth, let it bye, and that wil perishe, let it perishe, 2 let the name care, every one the flesh of his neigh-boure. I toke also my louynge me staff, and broke it, that I mighte disannul the conuen-ant, which I made with all people. And so it was broken in that daye.

Then the poore simple shepe that had a respecte vnto me, knewe thereby, that it was the wynde of the LORDS. And I sayde vnto them: yff ye thinke it good, bynge hither my pynter, no, then leave. So they wayed downe xxx. syluer pens, y value that I was payed at. And the LORDS sayde vnto me: cast it vnto the potter (a goodly pryce for me to be vnto at of them) and I toke the xxx. syluer pens, and cast them to the potter in the house of the LORDS.

Then bidde I my other staff also (namely wo) that I mighte loose the brotherhede betwixt Iuda and I Israel. And the LORDS sayde vnto me: Take to the also the staff off a foolish shepherde: so lo, I will raise up a shepherde in the londe, which shall not see after the thinges that be lost, nor care for fock as go astraye: he shall not heale the wounded, he shall not see the things that he is whole: but he shall eat the flesh off such as be fat, and taste their dainties in peace.

O Idoles shepherde, that leaseth the flocke, The sword shall come upon his arme and upon his right eye. His arme shall be clenched vp, and his right eye shall be sore blinded.

The XII. Chapter.

The heavy burthen which y^e LORD DE hath deuysed for I^{er} rael.

In that daye sayeth the LORD, which spied the heauens aboue, layde the foundation of the earth, and geteth man, y^e heaue of life: Beholde, I will make Ierusalem a cuppe of sorrowe, vnto all the people y^e are rounde aboute her: Yee Iuda him self also shall be in the siege agaynst Ierusalem. At the same tyme will I make Ierusalem an heuy stone for all people, so that all such as lift it vp, shall be wouned and reue, and all the people of the earth shall be gathered together agaynst it.

In that daye sayeth y^e LORD, I will make all houses abasshed, and those that ryde upon them, to be out of their wyeres. I will open myne eyes vpon the house of Iuda, and smyre all the houses of the people with blynnesse. And the pynnes of Iuda shall saye in their herdes: The inhabitants off Ierusalem shall geue me consolacion in the LORD off hoostes their God. In that tyme will I make the pynnes of Iuda like an hore burnynge oven with wood, and like a cresshet off fyre amonge the straws, so that they shall consume all the people rounde aboute hem, boeth vpon the right hande and the left. Ierusalem also shall be inhabited agayne: namely, in the same place where Ierusalem stondayeth.

The LORD shall preferre the teines off Iuda like as a fore tyme: so that the glory of the house of Dauid and the glory of the cytyens of Ierusalem, shall be but litle regarded, in comparison off the glory off Iuda. In that daye shall the LORD defende the cytyens of Ierusalem: so that the weakest then amonge them shall be as Dauid: and the house of Dauid shall be like as Gods house, and as the angell off the LORD before them.

At the same tyme will I goe aboute to destroye all such people as come agaynst Ierusalem. Moreover, vpon the house off Dauid and vpon the curesyne off Ierusalem, will I

pour out the spere of grace and mercy, that they shall lobe vpon me, without feare: and they shall beuere my name, as men mouere for their only begotten child: Yee and be foy for him, as thine are foy for their first childe.

Then shall there be a greates mountayn at Ierusalem, like as the lamembank in Iudennon in the felde off Maggaddon. In the londe shall be mayle, every tyme by the felces: The fyred off the house off Dauid them felces alone, and their wyces by them felces: The fyred off the house off Iehoiachim them felces alone, and their wyces by them felces: The fyred off the house off Iehoiachin them felces alone, and their wyces by them felces: The fyred off the house off Semichanites alone, and their wyces by them felces: In like manner, all the other gentes also, every chone by them felces alone, and their wyces by them felces.

The XIII. Chapter.

In that tyme shall the house off Dauid and the cytyens off Ierusalem, be as an open well, to wash off synne and uncleinesse. And then sayeth the LORD off hoostes, I will destroye the name of Idoles out off the londe: so that they shall no more be put in remembraunce.

As for the false prophetes also, and the wiclens spere, I shall take them out off the londe: So that yf any off them purseye any more, his owne father and mother that beget him, shall saye vnto him: The heuyls doye, for the heuyls speake lyes vnder the name off the LORD: Yee his owne father and mother that beget him, shall wounde him, vpon the prophesy. And then shall those prophetes be confounded, every one off his owne when he prophete: whether shall they were sad, or cheere any more, to disceuer me with all. But he shall be fayne to saye: I am a prophet: I am an hof bonde man, for soe I was taught by Adam fro my yowth vp. And yf it be sayde vnto him: How camest thou wonden then in thine herde? he shall answer: Thus am I wounded in the house off myne owne frendes.

And he (othou swearde) vpon my shepherde, and vpon the pynne of my people, sayeth the LORD, off be offes: Smyre this shepherde and the shepe shall be scatterd abroad, and I will Ierne myne herde to the litle one. And it shall come to passe, sayeth the LORD, that in all the londe two partes shall be comer portend from the tower of Hazael, vnto the bynges wyne preſſes. There ſhall men dwell, and there ſhall be no more crying, but Jeruſalem ſhall be ſafely inhabited.

 This ſhall be the plague, when wyl yf LOR-DE wil ſynre all people, that haue ſoughte a-gainſt Jeruſalem: I ſay they ſhal conſume a waye, though they ſtonde vpon their feet: their eyes ſhall corruppe in their holes, and their tonge ſhal conſume in their mouth.

In that daye ſhall the LORDE make a greete ſubicion amonge them, ſo that one ma ſhal take anoother by the honde, and laye his honde vpon the honde of his neyghboure.
 Iuda ſhal fighte alſo agaynſt Jeruſalem, and the goodes of all the heithen ſhal be gathered together rounde aboute: golde and ſyluer and a vey greete muſtard off clothes.
 And ſo ſhal this plague go amonge hoſtes miles camels, aſſes and all the beaſtes that ſhall be in the hoofte, like as yonder plague was.

Every one that remayneth then of all yf people, which came agaynſt Jeruſalem, ſhal go vpon yearly, to worſhippe the bynge (even yf LORDE off hoofte) and to keepe the feaſt off tabernaclis. And loke what generation vpon earth goeth not vpon to Jeruſalem, ſo to worſhippe the bynge, cometh the LORDE off hooftes) vpon the ſame ſhal come no rayne. All the bynges off Egypce go not vpon to come nor, it ſhall not rayne vpon them neber.

This ſhal be the plague wherewith yf LOR-DE wil ſynre all heithen, that come not vpon to keepe the feaſt of tabernaclis: Next this ſhal be the ſynneplage of Egypce and the ſynneplage of all people, that go not vpon to keepe the feaſt of tabernaclis.

As that tyme ſhal the rydynges gear of yf hoſtes be holy vnto the LORDE, and the kep-trels in the LORDES houſe ſhal be like the baſins before the altar: yet all the fetters in Jeruſalem and Iuda, ſhall be holy vnto the LORDE off hoofte: and all they that ſaye offeringes, ſhall come and take of them, and bryght them therein. And at that tyme there ſhal be no mo Canani-tes in the houſe of the LORDE.

Chap. I. The benefices of God, shewed special ly unto Iſrael before all other: Agayne, the purgynge of the unfaithfullnes, unfaithfullnes and conuocouſſe of the pſteres and the people.

Chap. II. Of the threatenynge punishment and conſolation vnto the pſteres, and commaundment men to loſe their wyces.

Chap. III. Of Chriſtes comynge, and of him that maketh vnto his waye before him. Of the abrogacion of the olde leuiticall pſterhood. Of the power of the iudge ſo to come and of that fearful daye.

The first Chapter.

The heuy burthen which the LORD ſpeweth agaynſt Iſrael by Malachy.

I haue loued you, ſayeth of LORD. And yet ye ſaye: wherein haſt thou loued vs? Was not Iſaac Jacobs brother, ſayeth the LORD? yet haue I loued Jacob, and hated Iſau: yet I haue made his hills maiſt, and his heritage a wyderneſſe for diagaſa. And though I dem ſayde: well, we are deſtroyed, we will go buyde vp agayne the places that be waſted: yet ſayeth of LORD of hooſtes: what they buyded, that brake I downe: ſo that it was called the LORD E hath euer bene angrie withall.

Your eyes haue ſene it, and ye your ſeloes muſt confeſſe, that of LORD hath brought the glende of Iſrael to greate honoure. Shal be not a ſonne honoure his father, and a ſeruaſt his maſter? If I be now a father, where is myne honoure? If I be the LORD, where am I feared? ſayeth the LORD of hooſtes.

The ii. Chap.

And now make youre praye before the, that he maye haue mercy vpon vs for the things haue ye done. Shal he require your performance, thynke ye ſayeth the LORD of hooſtes? Yet what is he amonge you, that wil do ſo much as to ſaye of dooſe, in teſtimble of free vnto myne altar: for ſayeth the LORD of hooſtes: and as for the meat offeringe, I will not accept it at your honde. For ſayeth the LORD of hooſtes: if ſome vnto of gouge vnto of the ſame, my name is greates amonge the Gentiles: yet in every place ſhal ſpew ſiſe be done, and a cleane meat offeringe of vnto vnto my name: ſayeth the LORD of hooſtes. But ye haue unhalowed it, in that ye ſaye, the ancker of of LORD is not to be regarded, and the thinge that is ſet there vnto, is worthy to be eaten.

Know ſaye ye: It is bre labour and trouble, and thus haue ye thought ſome art, ſayeth the LORD of hooſtes: offeringe robbery, yet the lame and the ſick. In ſum brought me in a meat offeringe, ſayeth the LORD: Cursed be the byſſimble, which buyth his ſtocke one that is male, and when he maketh a uow, offereth a ſpoored one vnto the LORD. For I am a greates thynge ſayeth the LORD of hooſtes: and my name is ſeſal amonge the Gentiles.

The III. Chapter.

It is not o ye pſteres, thys commaundment to which ye: if ye wil not heare it, net regard it, to graue the glory vnto my name ſayeth the LORD of hooſtes. I wil ſende a curſe vpon you, and wil curſe youre bleſſing: ye curſe the man, if ye do not take heed. Be tholde, I ſhal ruppe your ſide, and caſt downe in your face: enen the donge of your ſelou perſonne and it ſhal cleare faſt vpon you. And ye ſhal know, that I haue ſent this commaundment vnto you: that my commaundment ſhal be with all, myng be ſtēde, ſayeth of LORD of hooſtes.

I made a cōuocouſſe of liſt and part of him: this I gaue him, that he might ſiſt in awe of me: and ſo he dyd feare me, and put my name in reuerence. The lame of neyde was in his mouth, and there was no neyde neſt ſounde in his lippes. He walked vnto me in peace and equyte, and byd turne any one awaye from their ſynes. See the pepse lippen shulde be sure knowlege, that manie see the lame at his mouth, for he is an messenger of the LORDE of hoostes.

¶ And as for you, ye are gone cleane out off the lawe, and have cause the multitude to be of fined at the lame: ye have broken the covenant of Leui, sayeth the LORDE of hoostes.
¶ Therefore will I also make you to be despised, as to be of no reputation amonge all y^e people because ye haue not kepte my wayes, but have beene parciall in the lawe.

¶ And we not all one father: hath not one God made vs? why doth euery one off vs despise his owne brether, and so breake the covenant of oure fathers? ¶ Now hath Ira offered: yee the ab-hominacion is done in Iherusalem in Iherusalem, for Iuda hath despised the Sanctuary of the LORDE, which is builded, and hath tepte the dougher of a strange God: But the LORDE shal destruye the altar: he doth this (yeerth the master & the child) out off the altar of Iacob, with him that offereth vp meate offeringe vnto the LORDE off hoostes. ¶ Now haue ye iudged it to this poynte agayne, that the altar of the LORDE is couered with deca-yppinge: and mountynge: so that I will no more accepte the meate offeringe, neither wil I iudge it to accepte my thinge at youre houses.

¶ And yet ye saye: what fore? ¶ Even because the where as the LORDE made a covenant betweene y^e and the west off thy youth, thou hast despised her: ¶ See is the thynge owne obscure and named wise.

¶ So byd not: a one, & yet had he an excellence. What byd then the one? He soughte the promise of God. ¶ Therfore let well to youre spere, & let no man despise y^e wit of his youth. ¶ If thou hast her, put her away, sayeth the LORDE God of Iherusalem and graue her a clothinge for the soome, sayeth the LORDE of hoostes. ¶ Let well then to youre spere, and despise her not. ¶ Ye grue the LORDE with youre woordes, and yet ye sayden: withall haue we zrened him? ¶ In this that ye saye: All that do euill are good in the sight of God, and soch please him. ¶ O where is the God that punyssheth?

The iij. Chapter.

¶ And he will finde my messenger, which shal prepare the waye before me: and the LORDE whom ye wolde hate, shal come to his temple, yee enen the messenger of the covenant whom ye hate.

¶ And he, he commeth, sayeth the LORDE of hoostes. But who maye abyde the daye of his commynge? Who shalbe able to withstande when he appeareth? For he is like a goldesmith: he is like molten fyre, and like molten brasse: he shall fyre him downe to trye and to cleanse y^e silver, he shall purghe the children of Leui, and purifie them like as golde and silver: that they maye bringe meate offeringes vnto the LOR-DE in rightuousnes. ¶ Then shall the offeringe of Iuda: and Iherusalem be acceptable vnto the LORDE, like as from the beginninge & in the yeres a fore tyme. ¶ I will come & punyssh you, & I myself wil be a wise wyne agaynst the wiche, agaynst the aboucturers, agaynst falseswearers: yee ad agaynst those, that wylgously tepe backe the byrelynges beuys: which were the wyddoms & the fatherlesse, & oppresse the straunger, and feare not me, sayeth the LORDE of hoostes.

¶ For I am the LORDE y^e chaunge noc, & ye (o children of Iacob) wil not leane of: ye are gone awaye fro myne ordinauces, & feno y^e tyme of youre foure fathers haue ye not kepte them.

¶ Turne you now vnto me, and I will turne me vnto you, sayeth the LORDE of hoostes.
¶ Ye saye: Wherin shal we turne? Shalbe a man we falsede and decaite with God, as ye use falsede and decaite with me? ¶ Yet ye saye: wherin use we decaite with the? ¶ In Cryeth and heaue offeringes. ¶ Therfore are ye cursid with penury, because ye dyssemble with me, all the force of you.

¶ Bringe euery Crye in to my barn, y^e there maye be meate in myne house: and pro-ue me withall (sayeth the LORDE of hoostes) y^e I wil not open the wyndowes of heauen vnto you, and poure you out a blessinge with plenecofinesse. ¶ See I shal reprove the consumer for youre sake, so that he shall not eate up the frute of youre grounde, neither shal y^e

DE of hoostes: ¶ In so much that all people shal saye, that ye be blessed, for ye shall be a pleasant lode, sayeth the LORDE off hoostes.

¶ Ye spake hard wordes agaynst me, sayeth the LORDE. ¶ And yet ye saye: What haue we spoken agaynst the? ¶ Ye haue sayde: It is but lost labour, to serue God: ¶ What profit haue we for keepynge his com-mandmentes, and for walkinge humbly before the LORDE off hoostes? ¶ Therfore maye we saye, that the proud are hap-pie, and that they which deale with vngho-lynesse, are sicke: for they tempe God, and yet scape.

The prophet Malachy.

Whiche that feare God, saye thus one to another: The LORD is righteous and heareth. For it is before him a memoriall booke written for such as feare the LORD, and remember his name. And in the daye that I will make (saith y LORD) of hoostes they shall be myne owne possession and I will fauoure them, like as a man fauoureth his owne sone, that doth him serue. Turne you therfore, and conside what difference is betwixte the righteous and vngodly: betwixte him that serueth God, and him that serueth him not.

D For manye the daye cometh that shall burne as an oune: and all the proude, yee and all such as do wickednesse, shall be straw: and the daye that is foire come, shall burne the vp (saith the LORD) of hoostes) so that it shall leaue them neither rocs nor bounch. But vnto you that feare my name, shall the

Remember the lawe of Moyses my lawe, which I commaunded vnto him in reb for all Israel, with the ceremonies and statutes. Beholde, I will sende my prophet: he foire the daye of the cōsumyng of the great and fearfull LORD, he shall smite the herres of the fathers to their children, and the herres of the children to their fathers, that I come not, and saye the earth with curfynge.

The translation into the reader.

These booke (good reader) which be called Apocrypha, are not indged among the doctours to be of like reputation with the other scripture, as thou mayest perceiue by S. Jerome in epistola ad Paulinum. And the cheefe cause thereof is this: there be many places in them, that seme to be repugnant vnto the open and many first truthes in the other booke of the byble. Wherefore I haue not gathered them together to the intent that I wolde haue them despised, or like set by: but I shoulde thinke them false, for I am not able to proue in thee I doubt not verely, if they were equally conferred with the other open scripture (tyme, place, and circumstances in all things considered) they shoulde neither seme contrary, ner be vntuly & puerlyly alleged. Truth it is: A mans face can not be seme so wel in a water, as in a fayre glasse: ner can it be shewed so clearly in a water that is stered or moued, as in a still water. These & many other such places of scripture haue bene first stered and myrre with blynde and curiouse opinions of men, which haue cast such a myst afois the eyes of þ simple, that as long as they be not offered with the other places of scripture, they shall not seme other wyse to be vnderstonde, then as curiousefines & poundeth them. But who so euer thou be that readest scripture, in the holy goost be thy teacher, and let one text expounde another vnto the: As for such diuine, wise, and hard sentences as be byd from thy vnderstandinge, commente them vnto God, and make no articles of them: But let the playne text be thy gyde, and the spous of God (which is the author therof) shall lede the in all truth.

As for the prayer of Salomō (which thou findest not herin) þ prayer of Azarias, and the sweete songe that he and his two felowes songe in the fyre: the first (namely the prayer of Salomon) readest thou in the eight chapter of the thirde booke of the Frynges, so that it appereth not to be Apocryphum. The other prayer and songe (namely of the three children) haue I not founde amonge any of the inter preters, but onely in the olde latyn repte, which reporteth it to be of Theodoricos translation. Wherefore, both be cause of those þ be mistaken and saye son, and for their sakes also that loue such sweete songes of chaunteyninges: I haue not left them out: so the intent that the one shoulde haue no cause to complaine, and that the other also myght haue the more occasion to geue thanks vnto God in aduersite, as the thirde children byd in the fyre. Grace be with the. Amen.

And Josias helde the feast of Easter in Jerusalem vnto the LORD, and sene of Passouer the xiiij. daye of the first month. He set 3 priestes also in euery court (according to their dailye courses) beinge arrayed in longe garmetes in the temple of the LORD. And he spake vnto the Leuites the holy ministers of Israel, that they shulde haue some of them selues vnto the LORD, to see the holy arte of the LORD, in the house that Kinge Salomon the sonne of Dauid had buylded and sayde: Ye shal no more beare the Arke vpon y^e shoulders. Nowe saue y^e LORD, & take the charge of his people of Israel, after your villages and youre trybes: according as Kinge Dauid the Kinge of Israel hath ordeined, & according as Salomon his sonne hath honorably prepared: See loke 3 ye all be seruaice in the temple, according to the ordinges and distribution of the principall men which are appoynted ouer of the trybes, to do seruaice for the children of Israel. All 3 Passouer, & prepare offeringes for y^e brethren, and be according to the commaundement of y^e LORD, which he gaue vnto Moses. And vnto y^e people 3 was soude, Josias gaue xxx. thousand of shepe, lambes, ryddes and goats, & the choys and oxe. These the Kinge of his Kingly liberalite) gaue vnto the people, according as he had promysed: & to the priestes (for the Passouer) he gaue two thousand shepe & an hundred oxe. Moreover Jehonias & Semias and Natbanael brethren, & Chesaias, Jehiel and Josabab, gaue them to the Passouer, fve thousand shepe and fve hundred bullockes.

And when these thinges were broughte to passe, the priestes and the Leuites stode goodly in their ordie, and had the vncleandebred thowen out 3 trybes. And after the ording of the principall men in the trybes, they offered vnto the LORD in the sight of the people, according as it is wyrtten in the boke of Moses, & so they rested the Easter-lambe as according was. As for the thre offeringes & the oxe, they dighe the people wth good will, and afterwarde before them selues and the priestes. For the priestes offered the fave, vntill the tyme was epyied, but the Leuites prepared for them selues & for their brethren the childre of Aaron. The singers also 3 children of Asaph stode in their ordie, according as Dauid had deuysed. So vnto Asaph, Zachary & Jehichu, which were appoynted by the Kinge. Moreover the poyntes & doctores stode by the doores & diligently, so 3 none wente out of his stoninge & seruaice: for their brethren (the Leuites) prepared for them. Thus were all thinges performed, that belonged to the offeringe of the LORD. In that daye they helde the Passouer, & offered thantofferinges beyde 3 sacrifice of 3 LORD, according to 3 commaundement of Kinge Josias.

So the children of Israel which were the present helde an honorable Passouer, & the feast of fveere dyes wyda y^e 16ge. See such a Passouer was not kepte in Israel, from 3 tyme of the prophet Samuel. And all the Kinges of Israel helde not such an Easter, as this which Kinge Josias helde, & 3 priestes, 3 leuites, 3 Jewes & all Israel, of all the 3 were at Jerusalem. In 3 xviij. year of 3 rainge of Josias was this Passouer kepte. And wth a parte of here vnto Kinge Josias ordie all his roolles (before 3 LORD) & y^e thinges 3 were written of hi in tymes past, & cōmynge those 3 spined & were vngodly agaynst 3 LORD before all people, & 3 soughte not the worde of 3 LORD vpon Israel. After all these actes of Kinge Josias, Pharaos 3 Kinge of Egypte wēte vp, & came towarde Arcansio by Memphis, & Josias wēte to meete hi. Then sint the Kinge of Egypte vnto Josias, sayyng: what haue I to do wth 3, o Kinge of Iuba? I am not sent of 3 LORD to fight agaynst 3, for my warre is vnto Ethiopias, go thou 3 waye home agayne in all 3 haile. And Josias woulde not turne agayn upon his charer, but vnderstode to fight agaynst him, & herke ned not vnto 3 woules of 3 prophet, which he tolde him out of the mouth of God, but pitched a battaill agaynst him in 3 felde of Nabubodonosor. And the princes pleased to kynge Josias. Then sayde the kynge vnto his seruantes: Carry me a waye out of the battaill, for I am sore wounded. And immediatly his seruantes toke him a waye out of the front of the battaill. Then sat he vp upon the secodde charer, came to Ierusalem, dyed, & was buried in his fathers sepulchre. And in all Jewry they mourned for Josias, yet the rulers also wth their wyues made lamentacion for him vnto this daye: And this was done euer still in Itracl.

These thinges are writzen in the boke of the stones of 3 kynges of Iuda: namely, all the actes & woules of kynge Josias, his kyngly power & maiesty, his vnderstandinge in the lawe of God, & what he dyd, yee thinges which are not writzen in the boke of the kynges of Itracl & Iuda. And 3 people toke Iechonias the sonne of Josias, & made him kynge in 3 steade of Josias his father, whan he was xxxij. years olde. And he reigned ouer Itracl thre monethes. And the kynge of Egypte put him downe, 3 he shoulde not reigne in Ierusalem. 3 raysed vp a razinge of the people: namely, an C. talents of syluer & one talte of golde. The kynge of Egypte also made Iechim his brother kynge of Iuda & Ierusalem. As for the of the kinges counteill wth the kynge himself and Sara celes his brother, he toke the, & carried the awaye prisoners in to Egypte. Iyue & twentie yeare olde was Iochim, whan he was made kynge in the londe of Iuda and Ierusalem, and he dyd enell before the LORDE. After this, Nabuchodonosor 3 kynge of Babilon came vp, bounde him wth bandes of yron, & carried him vnto Babilon. Nabuchodonosor also toke all 3 vessill 3 were halowed in the temple of the LORDE, & all 3 Jewels, & carried the vnto Babilon, & brough the th^{er} in to his owne temple at Babilon. Of his cruelties & vngodlynes, it to write in 3 boke of the actes of 3 kynges. And Ioadumb his sonne reigned in his steade: he was made kynge beinge xviij. yeare olde, & reigned but thre monethes & x. dayes in Ierusalem: & dyd enell before the LORDE. So after a yeare, Nabuchodonosor sent & caused him to be brough the vnto Babilon wth 3 holy vessils of 3 LORDE, & made Sedechias his brother kynge of Iuda and Ierusalem, whan he was xxi. years olde, and he reigned xi. yeare,

And he dyd enell also in 3 sight of ILLUDE, & cared not for 3 woules 3 were spakke to hi by 3 prophet Jeremy at 3 mount of the LORDE. And wher as he had made an othe vnto kynge Nabuchodonosor, he manifested himself, & fill fro him haryng a stiff neck & hart, & traigressed all 3 statutes & commaunders of the LORDE God of Itracl. The reule also & heades of 3 people of the LORDE vngodly, became vngodly, more the, & thei then, beinge deuyled in all maner of abominacions: Rec & deuyled 3 holy temple of the LORDE at Ierusalem. And the God of thei th^{er} sent his messaungers vnto the, to tene them backe & to call the agayn fro the synnes: for he wolde sayne haue spard the for his holy taberna cle safte. Therfor, they had his messaungers in derision: & let what God spak vnto the by his prophet, they made but a spoone of it. This drewe so longe, tyl the LORDE was wroth wth his people for their vngodlynes, & tyll he caused the kinges of 3 Caldees to come vp, which slew their younge men wth the swerde, yee causid the compasse of thei holy temple, & spard nobody, nether yonge ner olde, nether mayntene yonge man: but they were all belayed in the power of the kynges of 3 Caldees, & all the holy vessils of the LORDE and thei treasures toke they, & carried them vnto Babilon. As for the house of the LORDE, they take it, & brake downe the walles of Ierusalem fyre vpon hir towres, destroyed all hir walls buildynges and brough the them to naught, and the people that were not slayn wth the swerde, they carried vnto Babilon.

Thus became they 3 prisoners & bondes of 3 kynge of Babilon, tyl they were deliuered & raygned for them selues, whan the wordes of the LORDE were fulfilled, which he promysed them by the mouth of the prophet Jeremy, and tyll the londe had hir restoracion, all the tyme 3 it laye wa yest, had in 3 quyetnes lxxviij. yeares.

The iiij. Chapter.

Whan the kynge Cyrus raygned ouer the Persians, & whan the LORDE wolde be performe the woide 3 he had promysed by the mouth of the prophet Jeremy, the LORDE raysed vp the spere of Cyrus the kynge of the Persians, so 3 he caused thei to be proclaimed th^{er}ow out his owne realme, sa yenge: Thus sa yee by the kynge of Persians: The LORDE of Itracl that the LORDE hath made me kynge of the londe, & commaunded me to buyde him an house at Ierusalem in Jewry. If there be any man were people, y^e LORD be with him, and go vp with him to Jerusalem. And all they that dwell rounde aboute y^e place, shal helpe the, whether it be with golde, with syluer, with giftes, with bestes and necessary cattell, and all other thinges that are broughe to a fire vnto the house of the LORD at Jerusalem.

Then the principall men out of the trybes and villages of Iuda and Ben Iamin stode vpo byd the prestes also 7 the leuites (whos the LORD had moued to go vp, and to buye the house of the LORD at Jerusalem. And they that were aboute them, helped them wth all manner of golde, and syluer, and cattell also and with many liberall giftes, and this byd many one, whose mynde was fixed vpon hereto. A yonge Cyrus also broughe forth the vessels and ornaments, that were halowed vnto the LORD (which Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon had caried awaye from Jerusalem, and consecrated them to his godd and ymage) and deliuered them to Mithridates hieaquasir, and by him they were deliuered to Salmansar y^e debyre in Jewry.

And this was the nombre of them: Two thousand and iiii. C. syluer boules, xxx. syluer basins, xxx. basins of golde, ij. iii. and iiii. C. vessels of syluer, and a thousande besyde. All the vessels of golde and syluer were v. iii. viii. C. and ij. These were nombed vnto Salmansar, and them that were come agayne with him to Jerusalem out of the captiuite of Babilon. Now in the tyme of kynge Artaxerxes the kynge of Persia, these men: Balemus and Nabudanus, Sabellius, Rachimus, Balthemus, Semelius y^e scribe, and other that dwelin in Samaria 7 in other places vnder y^e dominion therof. Wrote a letter vnto kynge Artaxerxes, wherein they complained vnto the kynge of them in Jewry and Jerusalem.

The letter was made a fere this maner:
 C. Syn thy seruantes Rachimus the story writer, Sabellius the scribe, 7 other iudges of thy courte in Celosyria and Phenicea. Be it knowen and manifested to lord the kynge that the Jewes which are come vp fro vnto us into the rebellious and wicked cite, begynne to buyde it agayne, and the walls aboute it, and to set vp the temple of the newe. Now yf this cite and the walls therof be set vp agayne, they shal not onlye safe to geve us tribute and taxinge, but also rebell vnto us agaynst the kynge. And so for much as they take this in hande now aboute the tyme, we thoughte it reason, to thinke no scome of it, but to shewe it vnto lord the kynge, 7 to certifie him therof: to the intent yf it please the kynge, he maye cause it to be soughte in the booke of olde: and thou shalt fynde such warrynges wyrtten, and shalt understande, that this cite hath all waye bene rebellious and disobedient, that it hath subued twelue and thirtie cities, and that the Jewes which dwell therin, haue ever bene a rebellious, obstinate, vnfaithfull and fightinge people, for the which cause this cite is now yllud. Wherefore now we certifie our lord the kynge, that yf this cite be buyded and occupied agayne, 7 the walls therof set vp a newe, thou canst haue no passage in to Celosyria and Phenicea.

Then wrote the kynge to Rachimus the story writer, to Balthemus, to Sabellius y^e scribe, and to the other officers and dwellers in Syria and Phenicea, a fere this maner: I haue red the epistle which thou sentest vnto me, and haue commaunded to make diligent search, and haue founde, that the cite hath neuer resisted kynges, that the same people are disobedient, and haue caused much warre, 7 that mightie kynges haue raigned in Jerusalem, which also haue rayed vp earinges of Syria and Phenicea. Wherefore, I haue commaunded those people, that they shal not buyde the cite, that they make no more in it, and that they procede no further with the buyding: for so much as it mighte be the cause of warre, and displeasure vnto kynge.

Now when Rachimus and Sabellius the scribe and the rulers in the londe had red the wyrtinge of kynge Artaxerxes, they gatt them together, and came in all the hast to Jerusalem with an hoost of housmen, and with much people of fere, and forbad them to buyde. And so they left off from buydinge of the temple, vnto the seconde yere of kynge Darius.

The iii. Chapter.

D. Kynge Darius made a greatesse vnto his seruantes, vnto all his courte, 7 to all the officers of Media and Persia, yete and to all the debytes 7 rulers that were vnder him, from India vnto Ethiopia, an hundred 7 xxviij. countrees. So when they had eaten, and dioken beinge satiffed, and were gone home agayne, Darius the kynge wente in to his chambre, layed him downe to slepe, and so a wakod.

Then the the yonge men, that kepte the kynge's personne, and watchid his body, com mended amonge them selues, and spake one to another: Let every one of vs saye some thinge, and lode whose sentence is wiser and more excellent then the other, vnto him that kynge Darius geue greatesse, and clothe him with purple. He shal geue him vessels of golde to drynke in, clothes of golde and coveringes: he shall make him a costly charette: a byrdie of golde, he shall geue him a bonnet of whyte sylke and a chayne of golde aboute his neck: yf he shal be the seconde & principall nexte unto kynge Darins, & that because of his wysdoms, and shalbe called of kynge Esdras.

B So every one wrote his meaning, sealed it and layed it under the kinges pillowe, and sayde: whan the kynge ariseth, we will geue him our wryttings: and loke whose worde the kynge and his chiefe lordes iudge to be the most wysely spoken, the same shall have the victory. One wrote: wyne is a stronge thinge. The secde wrote: The kynge is ströger. The thyrde wrote: women have yet more strength, but aboute all thinges yf truely beareth awaye the victory. Now whan the kynge was rysen up, they cooke their wryttings and deliuered them unto him, and so he red them. Then sente he forth to call all his chiefe lordes, all the debeyers & rulers of the countrees of Arabia and Persia. And whan they were set downe in the counsell, the wryttings were red before them. And he commaunded to call for yf yonge me, yf they might declare their meanynges thei selues by mouth. So when they were set for, and came in, yf kynge sayde unto them: there ys and make us to vnderstode, what the thinges are that ye haue wrytten.

C Then begame the first (which had spokt of the strengthe of wyne) & sayde: O ye men, wyne is maruelous stronge, and ouercometh them yf drynke it: it discometh the mynde, & buyngeth both the poore man & yf kynge to dotage and vanite. Thus doeth it also w the bondman and with the fre, with the poore & rich: it taketh awaye their vnderstandinge, and maketh them careless and merry, so that none of them remembereth eny heuynes, dect or deuice: It canseth a man to thinke also that yf thinge which he doeth, is honest and good: and remembereth not that he is a kynge, nor yf he is in an countree, & yf he oughte not to do such thinges. Moreover, whan men are drynkinge, they forgett all frendshipe, all brotherly faithfulnes & loue: but as soone as they are dronke, they drawe out the swerde & wil fight: & whā they are layed downe fro the wyne, & so rysen up agayne, they can not tell what theye do. Judge ye now, Is not wyne the strongest? For who wolde els take in hande, to do such thinges? And whan he had spoken this, he helde his sonne.

The III. Chapter.

Then the seconde (which had sayde, yf the kynge was stronger) begame to speake, & sayde: O ye men, are not they the strongest & most excellent, yf I maye lode & the see, & all yis in yf he & in the lande? Now is the kynge lorde of all these thinges, & hath dominion of all: altho lorde what he doeth, it is done. Yf he finde his mynde a warfare, they go and breake downe houses, walles & towres. They are slayne, & slayether men them selues, & ouer passe not yf kynge's word. Yf they get the victory, they buyge the kynge all the spoyle. Altho they be ether yf meele nor w warres & fightinges, but tyll the grounde: whan they reape, they buyge & rybuce unto yf kynge. And yf yf kynge do me do but commaunde to kill, they buyge of commaunde to foigene, they foigene: yf he commaunde to slayte, they slayte: yf he byd drynke wyne, they dryne a waye: yf he commaunde buyde, they buyde: yf he commaunde to builde downe, they breake downe: yf he commaunde to plante, they plante. The comen peoplye rulers are obedient unto him. And yf kynge in the meane season stretch his downe, such and drynker, & taketh his rest: the thre they watch & lode aboute yf kynge, & none of thei darre gett him out of yf wyne, to do his own busynes, but must be obedient unto yf kynge as a worde. Judge ye now o ye men, how shal not he go farre aboute, vnto whom men as thus obedient: And whan he had spokt this, he helde his sonne. The thyrde (which had spokt was Zorobabel, which had spokt of women) of yf truely he agāne to saye a fter this maner: O ye me, it is not yf greates kynge, it is not the multitude of me, neither is it wyne yf he helde: Who is it the, yf hath yf lordshipe over the? Howe net women beine the kynge, & all yf peple yf tale these thinges & haue not wnder me the, & brought the up, yf plante the vpon, wherous yf wyne cometh: They make garmentes for all me, they geue hono vnto all man: w our women can not men lyne. Yf they get the golde & syluer & all precious thinges: & a saye & wofauored womā, they leane all together, and turne their eyes on yf wofauored woman, & gaze vpon her, & haue more desire vnto her, then vnto the syluer & golde, in any maner of precious thinge. A mā I sawe his father yf brought him up, he leane his face vnto the naturall coloure, and cleerly vnto the woman: yet he is operberth his life with the woman, and remembereth neether father, nor mother, nor countree. Wh yf this then yf man vnto Enome, yf women haue yf dominion over yf.

Doth it greue you: A mā catcheth his swerde & goeth his waye to feale, to Eyll, to murder, to laye upon the se, & seyth a Lyon, and goeth in the darcknes: and when he hath holen, disceared & robbed, he bringeth it vn to his loue. A game, a man toucheth his wyfe hater then father and mocher: yee many one thare be, that reyne out of their wyttes & become bondmen for their wyues sake: many one also haue perished, & haue bene slayne, & haue sinned because of women.

C And now beleue me, I knowe a kynge whych is greate in his power, & all lōdes sūd in his name of him, & no man darre laye hande vpon him: yee byd I sē, & Apamey's daughter of the greate kynge Darius the kynge of cōsūme, satte beynde the kynge vps the right hāde, and toke of his crowne from his heade, and set it vpon his owne heade, and in othe the kynge with his left hande. After that the kynge looke vps her & open mouth: if she laughed vpon him, he laughed also:
but if she toke any displeasure with him, the kynge was hāny to flater her, & to geue her good wordes, till he had gooden his fauoure agayne.

O yemen, are not women then stronger: Greate is the earth, and he is the heauen: thare doth sē thinge. Then the kynge & the princes looked one vpon another. So he beganne to speake of the trouth: O yemen, are not women stronger: Heare is the earth, hys is the heauen, swyft is the course of the Sonne, he compasseth the heauen rounde arounde, and fetcheth his course againe to his owne place in one daye. Jo he noe excellent that doth this: yee greace is the trouth, and stronger then all thinges. All the earth cal-lieth vpon the trouth, the heauen playseth it, all wordes shake and tremble at it, and with it is no vnrighteous thinge. Wine is vnrighteous, the kynge is vnrighteous, women are vnrighteous: all the children of men are vn-righteous, yee all their moites are vnrighteous, and there is no trouth in them, in their vnrighteousnes. Also shall they be destroyed and perishe. As for y trouth, it endureth, and is alwaye stronge: it lyueth, and cōquerteth for euermore without ende.

D The trouth accepteth no performes, it put-teth no difference betwixte ryght or pōore, be-twixte y mightie or symple, but doth ryght unto every mā, whether they be euil or good, all men are lowglyngly deale withall in the trouth of it. In the admyment of it there is no vnrighteous thinge, but strenght, kyngdome, & power and maistey for euermore. Blesssed be the God of trouth.

And with that he helde his edge, and all y people crieth & sayde: Greace is the trouth, and aboute all. Then sayde the kynge vnto him: Are what thou wilt, more then is appointed in the wytyng, and I shal geue it the, for thou art founde wyser then by com-paryson: thou shalt sē me, and be my kynsman. Then sayde he vnto the kynge: Remember thy promyse and vowe, which thou hast vowed and promysed (in the daye whan thou camest to the kyngdome) to buye de vps Jerusalem, and to sēde againe all the vessels and Jewels, that were taken awaye out of Jerusalem: which Cyrus separated, whan he offred in Babilon, and to lōde sin-dethem agayne. And thy mynde was to buye de vps the temple, which the Edomites defile, whan Jerusalem was destroyed by the Caldees. This onely O kynge is the thinge that I requyre, this is y maistey, which I desire to see: that thou performe me the vowe, which thou hast thine owne mouth: nouth hast ma de vnto the kynge of heauen.

Then Darius the kynge stode vp, and bys-sed him, and wrote a letter vnto all the bys-shoppes and shewes, to all y lordes and nobles, y thet shulde conuey him forth, & all thinges y wolde go vps with him. He wrote a letter also vnto all y shewes y were in Cleofias & Phenicis, & vnto Libanus, y they shulde hārie cedre trees from Libanus vnto Jerusalem, to buyde y cite withall. Honour he wrote vnto all y Jewes that were gone out of his realme in to Jerys because of the sic-kenesse, y no officer, no ruler nor shewe shulde come to their deces: and that all their lōde which they had conquered, shulde be fre and not tributary: And that the Edomites shulde be geue ouer the cities and vylages of the Jewes, which they had eaten in: yoe & that they shulde yearly geue xx. caltees to y buy-linge of the temple, vntill the tyme that it were fynished: and to the basile halowinge of the viuentofferings (so it is commaunded) ten talentes yearly also: And y all they which come from Babilon, to buyde the cite, shulde haue fre libertie, they & their children, and all the prestes.

He wrote the greatnesse also, & commaunded that the holy garment shulde be geuen the, wher in they ministred: and wote that commaundmentes shulde be geuen to the Leuites, vntill the daye, that the house were fynished and Jerusalem buyded vps: and commaunded that all they that watched the cite, shulde haue their poisons and waights.

He gaue ouer also all the vessell þe Cyrus had separated from Babilon: 7 all þe Cyrus had geue in commaundement, yf same charged he also, yf he shalde be done, 7 sent into Jerusalem. It was when this yonge mā was gone forth, he turned his face toward Jerusalem, 7 was yf of kinge of beautes, 7 sayde: O yf somech victorie, of the somech wyssdome 7 clearenesse, 7 I am thy seruante. Blessed art thou, which hast geuen me wysdome: the wyll I praye. THE LORD E, thou God of our fathers.

xii. a

And so he toke the letters, 7 wente into Babilon: And when he came there, he tolde this unto all his brethren þe were at Babilon, 7 they prayed yf God of their fathers, þe had geue them restresyng 7 lyberte to go vp, 7 to buylde Jerusalem 7 the temple, which is there called after the name of the LORDE) and they reioyced with instrumentes 7 gladnesse, men daye longe.

The V. Chapter.

After this, were the princiall men of all þe vyllages chosen in the trybes 7 kinredes, that they shalde go vp with their wyues and children, with their seruantes and mayens, with all their cattell 7 substance. And Darius the kynge sent with them a thousande horsmen, to conuey them safely unto Jerusalem: and their brethren were glad, playenge upon instrumentes, and synge.

And these are the names of the men, which wente vp out of the vyllages according to the trybes. Of the prestes, the sonne of Phineas, the sonne of Aaron: Jesus the sonne of Josedecc, Joachim the sonne of Zoiobabel the sonne of Salathiel (of the kynred of David, out of the kynred of Phares, of the trybe of Juda, which spake wonderfull thinges vnder Darius the kynge of Persia, in yf seconde year of his raigne in the first moneth of Wisan.

xii. b

xii. a, b

These also are they of Jewry, which came vp and turned agayne unto Jerusalem, out of the captiuitie that Nabuchodonosor yf kynge of Babilon had broughte vnto Babilon. And euery man sought his portcion agayne in Jewry, his cite, they that came w Zoiobabel, and with Jesus, Teberniaas, Saraias, Aelasiaas, Elmene, Emmanio, Marbocheas, Beleserus, Medchys, Rochoi, Oloras, Emmanias, one of their princies.

B And the noble of the, according to their kynredes 7 ruleres, was the childre of Phares, two thousande, an hundred 7 lxxij. The children of Ares, iij. iii. an C. and lxxij. The children of Semo, an C. and xliij. In this iane of Jesus and Joabes, a iii. iij. C. and two. The sonnes of Benia, ij. iii. iij. C. and lxx. The sonnes of Cheroba, ij. C. and x. The sonnes of Adonia, iij. C. and lxx. The sonnes of Abarecia an C. and viij. The sonnes of Casio and Zelas, an C. and viij. The sonnes of Jozorec, iij. C. and xxxij. The sonnes of Hananias, an C. and xxx. The sonnes of Alron, xc. The sonnes of Marfar, iij. C. and xxx. The sonnes of Zebur, ccv. The sonnes of Sepholomon, an C. and xxxij. The sonnes of Terepapas, lx. The sonnes of Yechanatus, an C. and lxxij. The sonnes of Zebethanus, an C. and xxxij. The sonnes of Crearpatros, (which is called also Enohadus and Modias iij. C. and xxx. Of them of Siarnas and Gabaa, an C. and xxx. Of them of Bessilon and Cagge, lx. Of them of Baltharus, an C. and xxx. Of them of Dechenobea, lv. Of the sonnes of Leptris, there were an C. and lv. Of the sonnes of Labomus, iij. C. and lxxij. Of the sonnes of Sichern, iij. C. and lxx. Of the sonnes of Suadon and Elimon, iij. C. and lxxij. Of the sonnes of Ericus, ij. iii. an C. and xlv. The sonnes of Anaas, the hundred and lxx.

The prestes: The sonnes of Jobbas: The sonnes of Euter: The sonnes of El Jeth, iij. C. and lxxij. The sonnes of Emaras, iij. C. and lxxij. The sonnes of Gasutus, iij. C. and lxx. The sonnes of Carea, ij. C. and xxx. The Levites: The sonnes of Jesus in Cabubel and Barua, and Serchia, and Ebeas, sonnes and four.

The whole nombre of these from xij. xlv. res, was iij. iii. iij. C. and lxxij. Of the sonnes, daughters and wyues, the whole summe was iij. iii. iij. C. and xliij. The sonnes of the prestes that prayed God in the temple: The sonnes of Asaph, of whom there was an C. and xxxij. But the bore tepes was the children of Esiminas: The children of Aler: The children of Amon: The children of Acaba, Topa: The children of Tebas an C. and xxxij. in all.

The prestes that served in the temple: The sonnes of Sel, the sonnes of Gusha, the sonnes of Tobloch, the sonnes of Casu, the sonnes of Sub, the sonnes of Jochi, the sonnes of Labana, yf sonnes of Amos.

And the prestes stode and had their garments & trompettes, & the Lemites, the sonnes of Asaph had Cymbals, geyngre thankes, and prayde vnto the LORDE, accordinge as Dauid the kynge of Iſrael had ordeyned. And the songe that they dyd synge vnto the LORDE, was a ſuter this maner: O ſynge vnto the LORDE, for he is gracious, and his goodnes vpon Iſrael endureth for euer. And all the people blew out with trompettes, and ſunge with loude voyce, prayſynge the LORDE together in the rearinge vp of the houſe of the LORDE. There came alſo from amonge the preſtes and Lemites the rulers and elders, accordinge to the trybes and kynnes (ſuch as had ſene the houſe aſoue) to the buyldinge of this temple with greate crye and greate mournynge, many alſo with trompettes and greate ioye: In ſo much, that the trompettes myghte not wel be herde for the wepyng and mournynge, for the comon people blew goodly vpo the trompettes.

E Then came the enemies of the trybes of Iuda and Ben Iamin, to knowe what that they ſayde, and noyſe of ſhaumes myghte be. And they perceaued yf it was they which were come agayne out of captiuitie, & wolde buylde the temple a new vnto the LORDE God of Iſrael. So they wente to Zorobabel and Jeſua and to the rulers of the wyllages, & ſayde vnto them: Shal we buylde with you alſo: for we like wyſe haue herbe youre LORDE, & we walke a ſuter the ſame maner, from the dayes of Nabazareth the kynge of Aſſiria, which brought vs hither. Then Zorobabel and Jeſua and the rulers of the wyllages of Iſrael ſayde vnto them: It is not meete, that ye ſhulde buylde the temple of oure God wher we are: we our ſelues alone wil buylde vnto the LORDE, like as Cyrus the kynge of the Perſians hath commaunded vs.

I But the heizen in the londe layed them ſelues againſt thoſe that were in Jewry, helde vp the buyldinge from them, layed wayte vpo them preſently, ſtopped ſuch as brought any thinge to them, forbad them to buylde, & ſundered thoſe that made the paſſage, that the buyldinge ſhulde not be finiſhed: & this continued ſo longe as kynge Cyrus liued: & ſo they put of the buyldinge for the ſpace of two yeres, vntill the raigne of kynge Darius.

The vi. Chapter.

I It was ſtandinge, in the ſeconde yere of the raigne of Darius, Aggeus & Zachary the ſonne of Abdo propheticied vpon them in Jewry and Jeruſalem, in the name of the God of Iſrael. Then Iſaiabel the ſonne of Salathiel and Jeſua the ſonne of Joſebec ſtoke vp, and began to buylde the houſe of the LORDE at Jeruſalem, when the prophetes of the LORDE had ſped them.

At the ſame tyme came Syſines the vnder ſherie in Syria and Phenice, with the land lordes and his comparyons, and ſent vnto them: Who hath bydden & commaunded you to buylde the houſe: to make the temple and all other thinges agayne: And who are the worke men, that buylde them: Natharches the elders of the Jewes had ſuch grace of the LORDE, that they wolde not ſerue though they were prouoked thereto: but buylde on ſtill, vntill the tyme that kynge Darius was certified therof, and an ſkurre receaued from him. The letter that the men ſent vnto kynge Darius, was a ſuter this maner:

Syſines the vnder ſherie in Syria and Phenice, and the land lordes with their compariſe, which are head rulers in Syria and Phenice, ſende their ſalutation vnto Dauid the kynge. We certifie oure lordes the kynge, that we came in to the londe of Jewry to ſeue to Jeruſalem: where we founde men buyldinge the greate houſe of God with the temple, with greate coſtly fire ſtone and with goodly ſymbles for the wallis: yet they made greate haſt with the worke, & hude one another, and it goeth ſo ſuch proſperouſly in their handes, and with greata diligence & worthe that it is made. Then aſped we the elders, who had commaunded them to make up the houſe and the buyldinge: and this we dyd, in ſuchet that we mighte certifie the perſon wher we wrote vnto the, the names of thoſe y ſonny rulers of the worke. So they gaue us theſe anſweres: we are the ſeruauntes of the LORDE, which made heauen and earth: & as for this houſe, it hath bene buylde and ſet up a ſouer tyme by the greate and mightie kynge of Iſrael. But when oure fathers prouoked God vnto wrath, & ſynned agaynſt the God of Iſrael, he gaue the ouer in to the hand of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babel: the kynge of the Caldees, which built downe the houſe and brete it, and caried awaye the people prifonere vnto Babilon.

Neuertheles, in the ſirſte yere that kynge Cyrus reigned at Babilon, Cyrus the kynge wrote and commaunded to buylde up the houſe agayne: and all the ornaments that Nabuchodonosor caried awaye from Jeruſalem vnto Babilon, and appoynted his com temple: those brought Cyrus south of the yere, and deliuered them to Zorobabel & to Salimanas for the vnderstonding, commaundyng them, þ they shulde bringe those sacret ornaments agayne to Jerusalem in to y^e ce-ptic, to be gyven from þe yme south, to buye the temple agayne in his owne place. The Salimanas for he yeb the foundation of þe temple at Jerusalem, and ever since have they buylded, & yet is it not ended. And therfore þe kynge of þe yme south, let it be sought in the Lybica & rolles of þe kynge Cyrus: if it be founde that it is done w^{ch} the counsell and cōsint of þe kynge Cyrus, and of some lorde of þe yme be so mynyed, let him wete vnto do therof.

Then commaunded kynge Darius, to see in the Lybica: and so at Egubachano in a litle cite in Media there was founde sodi a mynyng. In the first yere of the raigme of Cyrus, the same kynge Cyrus commaunded, þ the house of the LORDE at Jerusalem shul-de be buylded agayne: & ordres to be made thercon continually vnto the LORDE: whose work shalbe ten cubites, yf he wylth it. Cubites xij. square w^{ch} betwen stones, w^{ch} a losse of ymber of the same countre, yee w^{ch} a new losse, & the expensis therof to be gyven of þ house of þe kynge Cyrus. And the ornaments of gold & silver, þe Tabuchodonosor: toke out of the house of the LORDE at Jerusalem, shalbe agayne in the temple at Jerusalem, wher they were afore. Syennes also the mynynges in Syria and Phenicia, yf pry-ces and their companions, and the other þ be had rulers in Syria and Phenicia, shall not wyle ner have any thinge to do with the place.

¶ The kynge haue commaunded also, that they shal buyde the house of the LORDE whole vnto þe house of the LORDE, to helpe those þ be come out of captiuyte, tyll the house of the LORDE be fynished: & out of the trybut and taxinge that yearly raysed vp in Syria and Phenicia, diligently to geue them a certayne summe, to the offer yng of the LOR-DE: vnto the same to be deliuered vnto Zoro-babel the officer: that he therwith shal maye ordeyn oxen, rammes, lambes, & coine, salt, wye, and oyle, and that continually every yere: after the expences which the prestes that be at Jerusalem, shew to be made day-ly. And he shalbe gyven vnto them without delay, that they maye offer sacrifices daylie to the hest God, for the kynge and for his seruantes, and to praye for their lyues. & at the prayng also on every syde, that who o euer breatheth or despyseth this commaundemēt of þe kynge, shalbe hangid vpon a gallow (made of his owne good): & all his goodes shalbe reasonid vnto þe kynge. The LOR-DE therfore (whose name is there called v^{nto} pomaxos: out and destroye all þe kynge and people, that vndertake by violence to hymure the same, or to deale vncharitably w^{ch} the house of the LORDE at Jerusalem.) Darius the kynge haue ordeyned, that these thinges shalbe done with all diligence.

The viij. Chapter.

¶ Then Syennes of vnderstonding in Celosynia and Phenicia, and the other landlordes with their companions, obeyed the thinges that kynge Darius had ordeyned. were diligent in the holy worke, & were felow helpers with the oyle rulers of the Jewes. And so the worke of the Sanctuary waser south and prospered, whan Ag-geus and Zachary prophesied. And they performed all thinges that was the commaundemēt of the LORDE God of Israel, and after the deuyce of Cyrus, Darius, and Artaxerxes kynge of Persia.

And thus was oure house fynished, vnto the xxij. daye of the moneth Adar in y^e vij. yere of þe kynge Darius. And the children of Israel the prestes & the Levites, & the other that were come out of captiuyte, & such as were ioyned vnto them, byd according as it is wyrtten in the boke of Nitos. And in the dedication of the temple they offered an hundred oxen, C. rammes, iij. C. lambes, & xij. goats for the synnes of all the people of Israel, after y^e nombre of the trybes of Israel.
 The prestes also & the Levites rode a nyght in the picyllly garnettes, a fter þe trybes, ouer all þe wyntes of the LORDE God of Israel, accordinge to þe boke of Nitos, and the posters by all the wyntes.

¶ And the children of Israel (w^{ch} those þe were come out of captiuyte) helde the Passi-uer the xij. daye of the first moneth, whan the prestes and the Levites were sanctified,

They that came out of captiuite, were not all sanctified together: but the Levites were all sanctified together. And so all they that came out of captiuite, killed the easter lambe, for their dietie, for the prestes & for them selues. And the childre of Israel y came out of captiuite, & escaped fro all y abhominacions of the heathen, fought the LORDE, and depece the feast of uncleaned died viij daies longe, eatinge & drynkyng & were merry before the LORDE: y the LORDE had turned the deuoyce of the kynge of Assiria, & comforted their handes to the woordes of y LORDE God of Israel.

The VIII. Chapter.

After him, when Artaxerxes the kynge of y Persias raigned, there wete vnto him Esdras the sonne of Sarias, the sonne of Aarias, the sonne of Helchia, y sonne of Sallu, the sonne of Sadoe, y sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Amarias, y sonne of Aarias, the sonne of Boccas, y sonne of Abisa, y sonne of Phineas, the sonne of Eleazar, y sonne of Aaron y first prest. This Esdras wete vp from Babilon for he had good vnderstoninge in y lawe of Moyses, y was geue of the LORDE God of Israel, to be taughte & dome in bede. And y King fauoured him, & dyd him greate worshippe and honoure, after all his desires. There wete vp with him also certayne of y children of Israel of the prestes, of y Levites, of the syngers, poynters, and mynisters of y temple at Jerusalem.

In the viij. yere of the raigne of kynge Artaxerxes, in the v. moneth, y is in the viij. yere of the raigne, they wete from Babilon in the newmoone of the v. moneth, & came the hie waye to Jerusalem after his commaundement, like as the LORDE had prospered that iourney, for in these Esdras gat greate instruction, y he shalde leaue none of y thinges behynde, which were in y lawe & commaundementes of God. And he taughte wholye Israel all righteuousnes & iudgment.

Then came the Secretaries of kynge Artaxerxes, & deluyted y wyrtynge, y were come fro Artaxerxes the kynge to Esdras the prest & reber of the lawe of the LORDE. And this is y copie of y letter: Kynge Artaxerxes sendeth his greatinge vnto Esdras the prest & reber of the lawe of y LORDE: Of frendshipe & good will I haue obeynted and charged, yf there be any of the Jewes, of y prestes & Levites in my realme, which desireth to come to go to the vnto Jerusalem, y he maye do it. Therefore yf any be mynded to beare the company, let the come to pnter go to the cite as I am cometh to wyrtynge des my counsaile: so is what they wete at Jerusalem & in Jewery, & depece y thinges as geas thou hast in y lawe of the LORDE to bunge the giftes vnto God the LORDE of Israel, y I & my frendes haue purposed to Jerusalem, & all the silver & golde y is y countre of Babilon, vnto y LORDE y Jerusalem, w the thinge y is geat for the temple in the LORDE temple at Jerusalem: so that the same silver & golde maye be payred, and oxen, rammes, shepe & goates or ocher that belege to these thinges, whiche they maye offer sacrificis vnto the LORDE upon the auter of their LORDE, whiche at Jerusalem.

And what so ener thou & thy brether do w the silver & golde, y do after y wyrtynge after the commaundement of the LORDE: y God: & like wyse to all the holy vessils, haue geue the for the sturvyce of the house of the LORDE: thy God: or ocher thinges whiche ner is necessary for the co the woordes of the temple, y shalbe geue the of the byrgans sure: loke what thou wntch thy brether maye geue with the golde and silver, that do after the wil of the LORDE. And y kynge Artaxerxes haue commaunded the Lepers of Iudaea in Syria and Phenicia: that whiche ner Esdras the prest and reber of the lawe of the LORDE doth wyrtynge, it shall be him: yll an C. talentes of silver, and of y be in hys manner: Of come also an C. talentes, and yll an hundred vessils of wyrtynge or ocher pnteous thinges withoute nombre. Let all thinges be done after the lawe of y hysse God, that the warch of God arysse in the realme of the kynge and of his realme, I commaunde you also, that y maye haue no tarynges nor tribute of the prestes, & wyrtynge, and mynisters of the countre of the wyrtynge: and that no man haue auctorite to medle any thinge againste. As for the (O Esdras) sic thou shalt be arbitrers in the whole lante of Syria and Phenicia, after the wysdome of God: whiche lerne all such as are ignorant in the lawe of God thy LORDE, and let all them that fendre agaynst the lawe, be paynted: so that it be with death, with paynt, or with benne in money, or to be banished.

Then sayde Esdras y wyrtynge: Blessid y God of oure fathers, that hath geue y good & mynde and will in to the heart of the kynge, to magnifie his house y is at Jerusalem, and hath made me to be a captiue in light of y^e kynge, of his counceill, of his fre nds and of his nobles. And so J was steafast in my mynde, accordinge as the LORDE my God helped me, and J chose out men of I¹¹ Israel, to go vp with me. And these are the names after their kynreds z houses of their fathers) that wente vp with me from Babilonon, out of the kyngdome of Artaxerxes: Of the sonnes of Phares, Bersomios. Of y^e son-nes of Sinarich, Aremios. Of the sonnes of David, Acons, the sonne of Cecilia.

Of the sonnes of Phares, Zachary; and with him there turned agayne an hundreth and thirtie men. Of the sonnes of the captey-ne of Moabdon, Zorai, and with him ij. C. and Lmen. Of the sonnes of Zachmes, Jechon-ias Zacholi, and with him ij. C. and Lmen.
 Of the sonnes of Salamaasias, Gocholic, and Lx. with him. Of the sonnes of Zapha-cia, Zaria z Mabeli, and with him lxxv. Of y^e sonnes of Job, Abdias z Jeheli, and with him ij. C. and xij. men. Of the sonnes of Ba-nis, Salmech the sonne of Josphab, and with him an C. and lx. men. Of the sonnes of Dav, Zachary Bebel, and with him ij. C. and vij. men. Of the sonnes of Eusead, Johannes Ezechan, and with him Cr. men. Of the sonnes of Adoniac those that were the last, and whose are their names: Eliphalam y^e sonne of Gebel and Semeias, z with him lxx.
 men. All these called J together by the water Chia, where we pitched our tentes this houre, and there J numbered them.

As for the sonnes of the prestes and Lewi-tes, J founde none there. Then sent J unto Sagar, z Eecolom, and Masman, z Maloben, and Eneathan, and Sames, and Josi-thianhan, Eneagan, Zachary, Mofollamii (these were the leaders and men of experice) z J sent them worde, that they shoulde come unto Eodden, which was by the place of the treasury, z commaunded them that they shoulde speake unto Eodden and to his brethren z to those that were in the treasury, to send vs sixe ml. as mighte eye cate the prestes and Levites in the house of the LORDE oure God. And w^e the mighte haide of oure LOR-DE God, they broughte unto vs ml. of good experience, from amonge the sonnes of Moolon, the sonne of Levi, y^e sonne of Israel, Sabehiam z the sonnes z his brethren Abbin z Arim, of whom there were xvij. From and by the children of the sonnes of Cananeas, z their sonnes were xx. men. And of them y^e first in the temple, whom David had ordained, and the principall men that ministered for the worke unto the Lewites in the temple, ij. C. and xx. men: whose names are all cokened vp in wrytinge.

Then commaunded J a fastynge unto y^e yenge men before the LORDE, J J mighte desyre of him a prosperous iourney z a good waye for vs, yet for vs, for oure children and for the cattell, because of the laynges away-ter: J durst not requite of the kynge men of boist z of force, to conveye vs safely agaynst oure enemies, for we had sayde unto the kynge, that y^e power of the LORDE oure God shalbe be with them, that selle him w^e this whole here. And therefore we desought God oure LORDE earnestly because of these thin-ges, and he was mercifull unto vs, and her-be oure prayer. And J separated from amonge y^e rulers of the people, z from y^e prestes of y^e temple xij. men, z Sabia z Hania, z ten men of their brethren with them. And J weid the the golde z the syluer z all y^e prestly ornaments of the house of God, which the kynge z his cosell, z his prestes z whole J Israel had graue. And when J had weyed it, J gaue the an C. talents of syluer, an C. ta-lentes of syluer vessell, an C. talents of golde, z of golde vessell seate tyemes twentie, and vessels of othe metall (yet of good metall) xij. gyltstinge as the golde, saide unto the:
 ye also are holy unto the LORDE, z the vessels are holy, z the golde z the syluer is promised unto the LORDE the God of y^e fathers.
 Be diligent now z kepe it, until the tyme y^e ye deliuer it to the rulers of the people, to y^e prestes, to the Lewites z to y^e principall m^e of the citie of Israel in Jerusalem, z in the chamber of the house of oure God.

So y^e prestes z the Lewites which recieved of me the golde, the syluer z the vessell, broughte it to Jerusalem into the temple of the LORDE. And from Chia we brake vp the xij. daye of the first month, xij. we came to Jerusalem. And when the thirde daye was past, the weyed golde z syluer was deliuered in y^e house of the LORDE the fourth daye, unto Marimoth the sonne of Joi the prest, z w^e him was Eleazar y^e sonne of Phineas, and with the were Josabodas y^e sonne of Jeser, Mithias z the sonne of Danas, z certayn of the Lewites to the nombre z to the weighte: z the weighte of them was writte vp the same tyme. As for those that were come out of captiuitie, they offered sacrifice unto the LORDE the God of Israel: the xij. open for all Israel, lxxv. rammes, lxxij. shepe, xij. goates for synne, xij. bryne for a thankofferinge, all to the sacrifice of the LORDE. And y^e kinges commision deliuered they unto y^e stret des and beyeres of the kyng, and to chey en descriues in Celosyia and Phenices.

112.2 Now when these thinges were done, the rulers came vnto me, and sayde: The genera cion of Israel, the princes, yf priestes and Le uites, the straunge people and indwellers of the londe, haue now put away their vncle nesse, from the Cananites, Gethites, Pheri tans, from the Moabites, Egipcians & Edo mites. For both they and their sonnes haue mingled them selues with the daughters of them, & the holy side is mixt with the un lawfuly & hethen, & sens the begynnyng of their raigne haue the rulers and heades be neficiers of their wickednesse.

As soone as I had herde these thinges, immediatly I rent my holy garmetes, and pulled out yf haire of my heade & my teard, & sat me downe sorrowfull & heuy. So all they that were moued therewith the weide of the God of Israel, came vnto me: and I sat still full of heuines vntill the euenyng sacrifice.

Then stode I vp fro fasting, hauyng re nted clothes: & the holy garmet, kneled downe vpon my knees, helde out my handes vnto yf S LORD E: & sayde: O LORDE, I am con founded & ashamed before thy face, for our syn nes are become many vpon our heades, & of wickednesse are exalted vnto the heauē: for sinus yf synne of fathers we are in greate sin ne vnto this daye. And for the synnes of vs & of fathers, we w^e our brethren & w^e our priestes haue bene deliuered vnto the Kinges of the earth, in to the swerde, & in to capti uete, & became a spoyle with confusion & sha me vnto this daye. And now O LORDE God, how greate is the mercy yf we haue gotte of thee: in yf thou hast left vs a rote & a name in the place of thy Sanctuary, to discouer our light in the house of yf LORDE of God, & geue vs neare as all tymes of ministracion.
And when we were in captiuite, we were not forsaken of the LORDE our God: knt be made the kynges of Persia gracious & fauourable vnto vs, so yf they gaue us wraytes & meate, yet & lent to buyde vp the cple of oure LORDE God agayne, to repayte the waisted place of Zion, and to dwell in Jewry & Jerusalem. And now O LORDE, what shall we saye, hauyng all these thinges in possession: For we haue broken thy co mandementes, which thou ganest vnto vs by the handes of thy strauantes the prophetes, sayenge: The londe yf ye go vnto, & his geuen you for an heritage to haue in posses sion, is defiled with the vncleannes & syn nes of the heathen, & with theyr abhominacion haue they polluted it altogether: Therefore shal ye not inuoye your daughters vnto their sonnes, ne marrye yf sonnes vnto their daughters: I beseege, ye shall neuer schew maite peace wth them, yf ye maye increasē to the left in the londe, & yf ye maye desyre yf inheritaunce of the londe vnto yf dwellers in cunctis. As for the thinges yf new hap peneth vnto vs, it cometh all fro yf with woorde & greate synne, yett haue thou wrote soch a rece, yf we are come agayne in of our londe: and we are so wretched, yf we haue broken thy statutes & commandementes agay ne, & mingled of selues wth the vncleannes of the outlandish heithen. O LORDE, art thou grieued with vs? wilt thou rote vs cleane out? yf our rote & name remaine noue: O LORDE God of Israel, thou art true, for thou art endurach yett vnto this present daye. And helde, now art we before yf in yf synnes, and can we net stonde before the in them.

And when Esdras with this prayer had knowledged the synne, weeping, & in gress vpon the grounde before the temple, there go thered vnto him from Jerusalem a great multitude of men & women, of yongmen & maydens, for there was a very greate weep inge and mourninge in the congregacion. So when Jechonias the sonne Jechiel one of the children of Israel cried, he sayde vnto Es dras: we haue synned agaynst the LORDE, because we haue married outlandish women of the heithen. Now art thou ouer all Israel.
We wil swere an ooth therfore vnto yf LOR DE, yf we shal put awaye all of wyues which we haue take of the heithen, wth their children like as it is appoynted the by & foreword.
Stonde vp then, open thou wth and declare playnly vnto vs a coridge to the lame of yf LORDE: for the matter belongeth vnto yf.
We w^{ll} helpe the, quye thy self manly. So Esdras arose, and toke an ooth of them of of yf priestes & of yf Levites & of all Israel, to do after these thinges, and they swore.

The IX. Chapter.

When Esdras stode up from the ser uice of the temple without, & went in to the chamber of Jonathan the sonne of Nabubas, & remained there, & there was neither dynte, for the multitude of the wickednes of the people. And there was ma de a proclamacion in all Jewry & at Jeru salem, for all such as were gathered at Jeru salem out of captiuite, yf who so euer came unto Jerusalem within two or three dayes (ac cordinge to the iudgment of the elde men of counsell) his goodes shal be taken from him, & he excluded from the congregation of the captiue. And in this daye were all they of the tribe of Iuda & Ben Jamin gathered together at Jerusalem, the xx. daye of the month. And of whole multitude sat there blisse in the court of the temple, for it was winter. So Esdras arose vp, & sayde vnto them: ye haue done vnrightheously, in that ye haue taken ouerlandish wyues to mariage, & so increase the synnes of Israel. And now knowlege the same, & geue praye vnto the LORD God of oure fathers, & perseueme þe self, departinge from the habithen of the lande, & from the ouerlandish wyues. Then said the whole multitude with loude voyce, & sayde: like as thou hast spokt, so wil we be done for so much as the people are many, & we were here, we maie not stode without þe house of agayne, this worke is not a thinge, þe can be finished in a daye or two, for we be many þe haue sinned in these thinges: Oude therefore, & the rulers of the multitude and all they that dwell with vs, and as many as haue ouerlandish wyues, the prestes also and aduers of every place, maye stonde in the try we appoynted, eyll they loose vp the wrath of the LORD Ein this busynesse.

Then Jonathan the sonne of Ezechi, & Myas and Thecam receaued þe charge of this matter, & Bogaeramus, & Leimo and Sabathas helpe the thereto. After this, all they stode vp þe were come out of captiue. And Esdras the prest chose vnto him the pryncipall men from amonge the fathers a couduin ge to their names, & in the new moone of the xij. moneth they sat together, to examen this matter. And so the matter was a deterninge (concernynge the men þe had ouerlandish wyues) vntill the new moone of the first moneth. And of the prestes þe had miter the synne of ouerlandish wyues, there were found: Of the sonnes of Iesu the sonne of Joseph: 7 his brethren, Myasas, Eleazar, Joribus & Joabas, which offered them selues to put awaye their wyues, & to offre a ramme for their ignorance. And of the sonnes of Semer: Massias, & Asses & Jeelech Azarias. Of the sonnes of Josera, Limosias, Zibbun, Mathanea, Jusio, Jodius, & Talsas. And of the Leuites, Josabidus, Semis and Cuis, Calcas, Saaxas, Colnas and Elias. Of the singers of the Sanctuary, Elian, Sadarnus. Of the porters, Sallumus & Colbama. And of Israel, of the children of Iou, Of I Amias, & Geddias, & Melchias, Michelo, & Casarus, & Semias & Danas. And of the childre of Jolaman, Chan-as, Zachary, Jereclis, Jobbias, Erimoch & Elias, And of the sonnes of Jathoun, Eliasdas, Lisamas, & Zochias, Larumoch, Sadvias & Tebebias. And of the sonnes of Zebe, Jobines Amamas, Zabbias, & Lemea. And of the sonnes of Barnus, Olammus, Malachus, Jebbus, Jasub, Misbus & Jerumoch. And of the sonnes of Abbin, Taarus & Moosias: Calcas & Aanas Masasias, Mathathias, Besel, Danus, and Manasse.

And of the sonnes of Laue, Tlones, Afsas, Melchias, Sameas, Suno, Ben Jamin, Malchus & Maras. And of the sonnes of Ason, Carianus, Mathathias, Danus, Eliphalach, Manasse, Semis. Of the sonne of Danus, Jeremy, Moobias, Amamas, Jobel, Baneas, Pelias, Jona, Marimoch, Eliasib, Mathanea, Elisio, Orisao, Dielus, Semedias, Zambis & Joseph. Of the sonnes of Tlobens, Jodas, Mathathias, Sababus, Zepheda, Semis, Jestsu, & Baneas. All these had takt ouerlandish wyues to mariage, & they put the awaye w their childre.

The prestes & Leuites, & all they þe were of Israel, dwelt at Jerusalem & thowout all þe lande, in the new moone of the seventh moneth, & the childre of Israel were in their dwellinges. And the whole multitude came together vpon the stode at þe east syde of the holy poire of the temple, & they spake vnto Esdras the prest & reber, þe wolde bringe the lawe of Moyses, which was geue of the LORD God of Israel. So Esdras the prest brought the lawe vnto the whole multitude, so man and woman, & so all prestes, þe they might heare the lawe, in the new moone of the seventh moneth. And hered in the stode þe is before the holy poire of the temple, from the mornynge early vntill the euenynge, before men & women. And they applyed their mynde all vnto the lawe.

And Esdras the prest & reber of the lawe stode vp vpon a scaffolde of wood, which was made therfor: & vpon his right hande there stode by him Mathathias, Samas, Amasias, Aharas, Onias, Ozechias, & Dalsamus: Vpon his lefte hande stode Sadernus, Misael, Malachias, Abusias, Sabus, Labadias, & Zachary. Then toke Esdras the booke before the whole multitude, for he was the pryncipall and had in most honore of the all. And wha he had red out the lawe, they stode all straighte vp vpon their feete. So Esdras prayed the LORD the most hye God, the Almightie God of hostes. And all the people answered, Amen: helde vp their handes, fell downe flat vpon the earth, & prayed the LORDE: Iesus, Demas, Sarcibus, Iabdimus, Acubus, Sabbaribus, Calthes, Azarias, Iosabus, Ananias, & Phalias the Levites which taught the lawe of the LORDE, & red the lawe of the LORDE in the congregation, & every man sette thofe before y understebe the lawe. Then spake Zeharabees unto Esdras the hie priest & reder, & to the Levites sayinge the multitude, sayinge: This daye is holy unto the LORDE: & all they y had herde the lawe, wepte. So Esdras sayde: Departe yo' waye then, & eate the best, & drynke the sweetest, & sende giftes unto them y have nothinge: for this daye is holy unto the LORDE, and be not ye sore. Then wente they their waye every chone, & ate and dronke and were merry, & sent rewardes unto the y had nothinge, y they also might eate with gladnesse: for they were excedingly reioysed, & chous to the wordes that were red unto them in the lawe: And so they were all gathered together at Jerusalem to holde the fast, accordinge to the covenant of y LORDE God of Israel.

The first Chapter.

The seconde boke of y people in Esdras: (y some of Esdras, the sonne of Azarias, y some of Zecharia, y some of Sadoe, the sonne of Achub, the sonne of Amarias, the sonne of Azarias, the sonne of Maranoch, the sonne of Sarabias, the sonne of Dui, the sonne of Voccus, the sonne of Abili, the sonne of Phineas, the sonne of Eleazar, the sonne of Aaron, of the trybe of Leui) which was prisoner in the lande of the Medes, in the tyme of Artaxerxes Kinge of Persia.

And the wordes of the LORDE came unto me, sayinge: So thy waye shew my people their synfull dedes, & their children their wickednesse, which they have done against me, that they maye cell their children what the same: for the synnes of their fathers are increased in them. And why? they have forgotten me, & have offered unto strange gods. Amnot I even he, that broughte them out of the lande of Egypte, from the house of bondage? But they have provoked me to wrath, & despysed my counsaile, pulled out then the haire of thy heade, and cast euill ouer them, for they have not bene obedient unto my lawe.

It is a people without lenyng & pitie: how longe shal I forsake them, & to whom I have done so much good? My rynges have I bestowed for their sake: Pharaos his seruantes and all his people have I mytten downe and slayne: All y Egyptians have I destroyed and reued out before them, and in y east have I broughte my lawes and people to nauight, even y yetydon, and have slayne all their enemies: What be thou therfore unto them, sayinge: Thus sayeth the LORDE: I led you throughe the se, and have given you sure fytrees for the bygginginge. I gave you Mtosiro to be your capayne, and Barone to be the priest: I gave you light in a piler of fyre, & greete waters I have I borne a myge you: yet have ye forsaken me, sayeth the LORDE.

137 Thus sayeth the almighty LORDE: I gave you quales to eate, and times for your sicke: I careles ye murmured, and ascribed not of victory of your enemies vnto my name: yet this same haire do ye yet murmur. Where are the benefices, that I haue done for you? When ye were hongric in the wilderness, dyd ye not cry vnto me: Why hast thou brought vs in to this wilderness, to kill vs? It had bene better for vs, to haue heard of Egipcians, then to dye in this wilderness. It had I pitie vpon your mourninges, and gave you Manna to eate. Ye see angells foode. When ye were thyrst, dyd not I haue yf hardness, I caused water ynough to flowe therout? For the heat, I covered you with yf leaues of the trees. A good pleasure sawe I haue gave you: I cast out the Canaanites, the Phereccites and Philistynes before you. What shall I do more for you, sayeth the LORDE.

142 Thus sayeth the Almighty LORDE: When ye were in the wilderness, in the water of the Amoinites, beyng a thyrst & blaspheming my name, I gave you not fyre for your blasphemies, but cast a ere in to yf water, and made ther your sauetie. What shall I do vnto the, O Iacob: Thou Iuda woldest not obeye me. I will turne me to another people, vnto those will I geue my name, that they may keepe my statutes. Seeing ye haue forsake me, I will forsake you also. When ye desire me to be gracious vnto you, I shall haue no mercy vpon you. When ye call vnto me, I will not heare you. For ye haue defyled your habes with bloude, and youre feete are swift to committe manslaughter. Ye haue not forsaken me (in a manner) but youre owne sinnes, sayeth the LORDE.

147 Thus sayeth the Almighty LORDE: He that I not prayed you, as a father his sinnes, as a mother hir daughters, and as a noisse his yonge babes, that ye wolde be my people, and I shulde be youre God: that ye wolde be my children, and I shulde be youre owne father? I gathered you together, as an hen her chickens vnder hir wynges. Now what shall I do vnto you? I shall cast you out from my face. When ye offre vnto me, I shall turne my face from you: for youre solemnne feast dayes, youre newmoones and youre circumcisions haue I forsaken. I sent vnto you my seruantes the prophetes, whom ye haue taken and slayne, and tauer their bodies in peeces, whose bloude I will requyre of youre handes, sayeth the LORDE.

Thus sayeth the Almighty LORDE: I your hoost must be desolate. I will cast you out as the wynde doeth yf straw: your children shall not be fructifull, for they haue despised my commandement, and done yf thinge yf is well before me. Your hoostes and yf charge vnto a people yf shall come, and they yf neuer haue bene, shall beleue in me: they vnto whos I neuer shewed token, shall do the thinge yf I commaunde the. They haue sene no prophetes, yet shall they call their sinnes to remembrance, and knowlege the. I repute me vnto the grace, that I wil do for the people which is to come, whose children reioyse in gladnes: & though they haue not sene me with bodily eyes, yet in spere they beleue the thinge that I saye. And now docther, beholde what greates worshippe, and yf people that cometh from the east, vnto whom I will geue the burdome of Abiathom, Isaac and Jacob, of Oseas, Amos, and Hadrac, of Joel, Abdy, Jonas, I Iam and Abacuc, of Sophony, Aggeus, Zachary and Malachy, which is called also an angel (or messenger) of the LORDE.

The ij. Chapeer.

Thus sayeth the LORDE: I broughte this people out of bondage, I geue the my commandementes with my seruantes yf prophetes, whom they wolde not heare, but despised my counsels. The mother that bare them, sayeth vnto them: Go youre waye ye children, for I am a wyddow & forsaken: I broughte you vpon wech gladnesse, but with sorrow and heyrnes haue I lost you: for ye haue synned before the LORDE yo God, and done yf thinge that is well before him. But what shall I now do vnto you? I am a wyddow and forsaken: go youre waye, o my children: and aske mercy of the LORDE. As for me O father, I call vpon the for a wysnesse ouer the mother of these childen, which wolde not kepe my covenant: yf thou brynge them to confusion, and the mother to a spoyll, that she heare no more. Let their names be scattered abroad amonge the heathen, let them be put out of the earth, for they haue thoughte soyme of my covenant.

152 Who be vnto the Assur, thou that hydest the vnrightheous by the. Thou wilted people, remember what I dyd vnto Sodom and Gomorre, whose land is turned to pitch and asshes. Thou also wilt I do vnto all them, that heare me not, sayeth the Almighty LORDE. Thus sayeth the LORDE vnto Esdras: Tell my people, yf I will graue them the kyngdome of Ierusalem, which I wolbe haue giuen vnto Israel. Their glory also wyl I take vnto me, and geue them the euerlasting tabernacles, which I had prepared for thofe.

The care of life shalbe vnto them a sweet smellingys oymment: they shal neither labour nor be weery. So ye your waye, & ye shall receaue it. Praye for yo' selues a few dayes, that they maye dwell therein. Now is the kingdom prepared for you, therfore march. Take heaue and earth to witness, for I haue broken the euell in peeces, and created the good, for I lyne sayeth y LORD. Murther embrace thy children, and bringe them vp with gladnes: make their fire as fast as a pillar, for I haue chosen the, sayeth the LORD.

C And thofe that be dead wyl I raise vp againe from their places, and bringe them out of y graues, for I haue knowne my name in Israel. Feare not theu meether of the children, for I haue chosen the, sayeth the LORD. And for thy helpe I shal sende the my seruantes Esay and Jeremy, a few who fe counsell I haue sanctified & prepared for the, & create with ym selfe signes, and as in my welles flowinge with mylke and hony, & ianen mountaynes, wher vpo there grewe roses and lilies, wherin I wyl fyll my children with ioye. Execute iustice for the ryddow, be iudge for the fatherlesse: geue to y poore: defende the cōfoulesse: clothe the naked: heale the woundes and sicke laugh not a lame man to come: defende the crepell, and lacche the blinde come in to y sight of my clearenes. Bepe the olde & yonge within thy walles: wher so euer thou fyndist the deed, seek them, and burye them, and I shal geue the the first place in my resurrection. Holde styll D (O my people) and take y rest, for thy quietnes is come. Feede thy children O thou good mouffe, stablish their fixe: As for the seruantes whom I haue giuen the, there shal not one of them perish, for I wyl see the from thy nombre, were not thy self.

For when the daye of trouble and heuyn cometh, echer shal wepe and be souerfull, but thou shalt be mary and plemeona. The wythen shalbe galous, but they shalbe able to do nothings agaynst the, sayeth the LORD. My handes shal cover the, so that thy children shal not se the sye euerlastinge. Be ioyfull O thou mother with thy childre, for I wyl deliuer the, sayeth the LORD. Remember thy beed childre, for I shal bringe them out of the earth, and shew mercy vnto them, for I am merci full, sayeth the LORD. Allmighy.

Embrace thy children, wyl I come and shew mercy vnto them, for my welles receaue a charge of the LORD. Esay receaued a charge of the LORD vpon the moune Oreb, that I shalbe go vnto Iud. Dur rohan I came vnto the, they sawe a naught, and despyed the commandmentes of y LORD. And therfore I saye vnto you O ye wythen, that heare and vnderstande. Like for youre shepheard, he shal geue y euerlastinge rest: for he is nyte at hand, that shal come in the ende of the woude. Dur by to the rewarde of the kyngdome, such euerlastinge lighte shal lyne vpon you for euermore. Se the shadowe of this woude, receaue the ioyfullnes of youre glory, I restic my sauicoure openly: O receaue the gift is giuen you, and be glad, gaynges thow vnto him, that hath called you to the haucly kyngdome. Arise up, and stonde still beholde the nombre of thofe that be seld in the feast of the LORD, which are brydged from the shadowe of the woude, and he receaued glorious garnettes of the LORD. Take thy nombre O Sion, and shew thy pursh, which haue fulfilled the lawe of the LORD. The nombre of thy children whom thou longedest for, is fulfilled: be the power of the LORD, that thy people which haue bene called from the begynnyng, maye be halowed.

Esdras saue vpon the moune Sion y greate people, whom I coude not nombre, & they all prayed the LORD with songs of thankesgyunge. And in the myddes of the there was a yonge man of an hy stature, wch excellent than all they, and vpon euer one of their heades he seue a crown, and was euer hygher and hygher, which I moued at greatly. So I axed y angell, I se be: Sy, what are these? he answered and saye vnto me: These be they, that haue put of the mortall clothings and put on the immortal, and haue visitid y knowlege the name of God. Now are they crownd, and receaue the rewarde.

Then sayde I vnto the angell: what yge performe is it, that crowneth them, & geueth them the palmes in their handes? he answered and sayde vnto me: It is y ioyne of God, whom they haue knowen in the woude. Then beganne I greatly to remember them, that stode so slyffly for the name of the LORD. And so the angell sayde vnto me: So thy waye, and tell my people, the manner of thinges and how greate woude of the LORD thy God, thou hast seen.

The III. Chapeer.

At the thirte year of the fall of the citie, I was at Babylon & laye troubled wth my bed, & my thoughtes came vpon me my heart: for I sawe y^e desolacion of Babilon, & the plentifull wealth of them y^e dwelt at Babylon: my spere was sore moued, so that I beganne to speake fearfull wordes to the most hysell, and sayde: O LORD, thou speakest at the begynnyng, when thou plamedst y^e earth (and tharby fill alone) and gauest commaundement vnto y^e people, and a body vnto Adam, which was a creature of thy handes, and hast bryd in him the birth of life: and so he lyued before the, and thou leddest him in to paradyse, which garden of pleasure thy right hand had plased, or euer the earth was made. And vnto him thou gauest commaundement to loue y^e waye, which he transgressed, & immediately thou appoyndest death in him, and in his generacions. O of him came nations, trybes, people & kynnedes out of number. And euery people walked after their owne way, and vnto myce thinges before the: and as thou commaundementes, they despyed thou.

When in proceesse of tyme thou broughtest the water flood, vpon those that dwelt in the world, and destroydest them. And like as the death was in Adam, so was the water flood also in these. There were one of them thou lauest: namely, Noe with his boosheles, of whom come all righteous men. And it happened that, when they y^e dwelt vpon the earth, beganne to multiplie, and had gotten many children, and were a greates people, they beganne to be more vngodly then the first.

Now when they all lyued so wickedly before the, thou dyest chose the a man from amonge them, whose name was Abram. And thou loudest, and vnto him only thou sendest thy wysl, and maydest an curiafongre covenante with him, promysinge him, that thou wouldest neuer forsake his side. And vnto him thou gauest Isaac, vnto Isaac also thou gauest Jacob, and Esau. So for Jacob thou dyest chose him, and put backe Esau. And so Jacob became a greates multitude.

And it happened that when thou leddest his side out of Egypte, thou broughtest the vnto the mounte Sion, bowinge downe the mounte, seeinge fast the earth, moouyng the grounde, makyng the depthes to shake, and troubluyng the world: And thy glory wente thowm foure portes of fyre, and earth quakes, and wyndes and colde: that thou mightest gene the laue vnto the side of Jacob, and diligence vnto the generacion of Ihuad.

And yet todest thou not aroaue from the that wicked here, that thy laue mighte bringe forth fyre in them. For the first Adam had a wicked heart, transgressed, and was ouer come, and so he all they yare borne of him. Thus remained weaknes with the laue in the hirt of the people, with the wickednesse of the rote: so that the good departed awaye, and the euill abode still. So they myce possessed awaye, and the yare were brynged to an ende. Then dyest thou raise the vnto a seruant, called Dauid, whom thou commaundest to buyde a cite vnto thy name, and to offre opincense and sacrifice vnto the therein. This was done now many yare.

Then the inhabitants of the cite forsoke the, and in all thinges dyd end as Adam and all his generacions had done: for they also had a wicked heart. And so thou gauest thy cite euer in to the handes of thine enemies. Are they of Babylon then better and more righteous then thy people, y^e they had therefore haue the domynion of Sion? For when I came there, and sawe their vngodlynes, and so greates wickednesse, that it coude not be n^oured: yee when my soule sawe so many euill doers (in y^e xxx. yare my hart sayled me, for I sawe, how thou suffrest them in souls vngodlynes, and sparest y^e wicked doers: but thine owne people hast thou roced out, and preserued thine enemies, & this hast thou not shewd me.

I cannot per ceare how this happened. Do they of Babylon then better, then they of Sion? Or is there any other people, y^e knoweth the, sayuyng the people of Israel? Or what generacion hath so belied y^e counsailes, as Jacob: And yet their remarde appeareth not, and their labd hath no frute. For I haue gone here and there thowm the heithes, & I se, y^e they be ryche & wealthy, & thynne noe vpon y^e commaundementes. Weye thou that foue othe wickednesse now in y^e balauce, and thine also that dwell in the world, and shal thy name be nowhere founde here in Israel. Or where is there a people vpon earth, y^e hath not synned before the? Or what people hath so kepte thy commaundementes? Thou shal fynde, that Israel by name hath kepte thy preceptes, but not the other people and theyen.

The III. Chapeer.

2 QUO the angell that was sent vnto me (whose name was Daniel) gaue me answer, and sayde: Thy hart hath eate to much vpon it in this woorde, and thou thinkest to comprehend the waye of the spiryts. Then sayde I: yet my lord. And he answered me, and sayde: I am sent to heare the thine wayes, and to see: for the similitudes before the members of yf thou canst declare me one, I wil heare the also the waye, that thou deuyest to see, and I shal heare the from whiche the wicked hart commeth. And I sayde: tell on my LORD. Then sayde he vnto me: Go thy waye, weyeme the weighte of the fyre, or measure me the blasse of the wynde, or call me agayne the daye that is past. Then answered I and sayde: What man boune is able to do that? Why requyrest thou sodey of me? And he sayde vnto me: If I shalbe afe the, how depe dwellinges are in the see? Or how greates water springes are vpon y firmament? Or how greates water springes are in the beginninge of the depe? Or which are the ounginges of Paradise: Peradventure thou woldest saye vnto me: I neuer wente downe yet in to y depe ner hell, neither byd I cuer clyme me vp in to heauen. I neuer theles now haue I aye the but onely of fyre and wynde and of the daye, where thou comest thou hast trauayled, and from the which thou canst not be separated: and yet canst thou geueme no answer of them.

3 He sayde moreover vnto me: Thine owne chynge, and sodey as are growne vpon y, canst thou not knowe: how shulde thy vessel then be able to comprehend the waye of the spiryts, and now outwardly in the concupce woilde, to vnderstande the corruption y is caryd in my sight: The sayde I vnto him: Ie were better that we were not at all, the that we shulde lye in wickednesse, and to suffre, and not to knowe wherfore. He answered me, and sayde: I wete in a wod, and the trees toke sodey a deuyce and sayde: Come let vs go, and fight agaynst the see, that it maye departe awaye before vs, and that we maye make vs yet more woddes.

The floudes of the see also in lyke maner toke this deuyce, and sayde: Come, let vs go vp, and fight agaynst the trees of the wodde, that we maye make oure soude the wyder. The thought and deuyce of the wodde was but vayne and nothinge worth, for the fyre came, and consumed the wod: The thought of the floudes of the see came likewise to naughte also, for the soude stode vp and stopped them.

If thou werte indge now betwixen the two, whom woldest thou indiffe, in whyn woldest thou eadme: I answered and sayde: Vercy it is a foolish thoughte that depe haue deuyed. For the grounde is growne vnto the wod, and the see also hath the place to beare his floudes. Then answered he and sayde: Thou hast geuen a right answer, why indgest thou not thy self also? Such as the grounde is growne vnto the wod, and the see to his floudes: euen so thy thynge vnto earth, maye vnderstande nothinge, but that which is vpon earth: and he that dwelleth above the heuens, maye only vnderstande the thinges, that are above the heuens. Then answered I and sayde: I beseeche thy LORD: let me haue vnderstandinge: for it was not my mynde to be carious of thy thinges, but of sodey as we daye me with all manerly, wherfore that I should be blessed of the heuhen, and for what cause thy people (whom thou euer hast loved) is growne, to be punished of vngodly men: and why the lawe of oure fathers is brought in naughte, and the wytyen commandmentes come to none effecte, and we passe awaye out of the woilde as the greesepeders, and come into a very feare, and we are not worthy to praye for mercy. What wyl he do then vnto us, which is called vpon ouers: Of this thinge haue I asked question.

Then answered he me and sayde: Thou rethou feardest, the more thou shalt stand for the woilde hastest fast to passe awaye, and can not comprehend the thinges, that are promysed for the righe become in my name, for this woilde is full of vngodly men, and weake.

But as concerninge the thinges wherof thou askest me, I wyl tell the. The euell is for me, but the destruction thereof is not yet come. If the euell now that is soune, be not ned vpon yde downe, and yf the place wherof euell is soune, passe not a waye, then canst the thinge come y is soune with y good. So the come of euell yde hath bene soune in the heart of man from the beginninge, and how much vngodlynes hath he brought vpon this tyme: and how much shal he yet bringe forth, vntill he come in to the barne.

Pouere now by thyself, wha y come of the euell yde is come downe, how greates harme shal it fall: I answered and sayde: How and wha shal these thinges come to passe: Wherfore are y yeares set to euell: And he answered me, sayyng: I canst not thou to much vnto the spiryts, for thy halftymes to be abasish in as in waime, thou makest to much a booe. Dyd not þe soules also of the righteous are question of these thinges in their holynes, saynge: how longe shal I hope of this saluacion: Whan cometh the fruce of my barne, and my reward: And vpon this Jeremiel the archangel gaue them answer, and sayde: But whan the nombre of the iebes is fylled in you: for he hath weyed the world in the balancer: in measure and nombre hath he measured the tyme, and moueth it not, vntill the same measure be fulfilled. Then answered I and sayde: O LORDE LORDE, now are we all full of synne, and for oure sake paradisaunce it is not, that the barne of the righteous shall not be fylled, because of the synnes of the that dwell vpon earth.

So he answered me, & sayde: Go þy waye to a woman with childe, and axe her, when she hath fulfilled hir ix. monethes, yf hir childe be born maye depe of breath eny longer tyme than. The sayde I: To LORDE, that can the see. And he sayde vnto me: In hell be secret places of soules are like þe prey chamber of a woman. For like as a woman that travaileth, maketh haist, whan the tyme & necessity of the byrth is at hande: And so dooth she haist to deliuer it that is commytted vnto her. Like what thou desirest to se, it shall be shewed the from the begynnyng. Then answered I and sayde: If I haue founde fauour in thy sight, and yf it be possible, and yf I be mete therfore, shewe me then, whether there be more to come the is past, or more past than is for to come. What is past, I knowe: but what is for to come, I knowe not.

And he saide vnto me: Stande vp vpon þy right syde, and I shal expounde the symbolen be vnto the. So I stode, & beholde, an whors lunnyng: one wente ouer before me: it happoned þe whan the flamme was gone by, the smoke had the upper hande. After this the smoke ouer before me a watery cloude, and fell downe much rayne vnto a storme: & whan the stormy rayne was past, the droppes remained still. Then sayde he vnto me: Like as the rayne is more then the droppes, and as the fire exceedeth the smoke, euery so þe measure of the thinges that are past, hath the upper hande. Then wente the droppes and the smoke a bove: and I prayed and sayde: Woe I synne (thynkest thou) vntill that tyme: O what shall happen in those dayes: Then answered me, and sayde: As for the colde where of thou axest me, I maye tell the of the same in a pere: but as touching þe life, I maye not shewe the, for I am not sent therfore.

The v. Chapter.

Wherthese, as concerninge the colde, mark this: Beholde, the dayes shal come, that they which dwell vpon earth, shal be takē in a greate nombre, & the waye of the trueeth shall be hyd, and the world shal be barren from faith: but iniquyte shall haue the upper hande, like as thou hast sene now, and as thou hast herde longe ago. And the lorde that thou seest now to haue rule, shall: thou shortly se maist. But yf God graunte the to lue, thou shalt se after þe this detromper, that the Sonne shal suddenly shyne agayne in the night, and the Moone the tyme in the daye, & bloude shal droppe out of roode, and the stone shal geue his voyce, and the people shal be vnyquyte: and euen he shal rule, whom they hope not that dwell vpon earth, and the soules shal flye, and the Sodomitish see shal cast out his fish, and make a noyse in the night, which many shal not knowe, but they shal all heare the voyce thereof.

There shall be a confusion also in many places, and the fyre shal be of sent agayne, and the wyde bestes shal go their waye, & men sitte in women shal beare monster, and sale waters shal be founde in the fozze: one friende shal fighte agaynst another: then shal all waye and vnderstandinge be hyd, and putt asyde in vnto their secreete places, & shal be soughte of many, and yet not be founde: then shal vnto righte consciens and volunteeines haue the upper hande vpon earth. One lande also shal axe another, and saye: To righte consciens gone thou art: And it shal saye: To. At the same tyme shal men hope, but nothinge opene: they shal labour, but their wayes shall not prosper.

To shewe the such tokens I haue sene, and yf thou wilt praye agayne, & wepe as now, and faste seuen dayes, thou shalt beare yet greater thinges. Then I awaked, and a fear fulnes wente thow all my body, & my myn be was feble and care full, so that I almost swooned withall. So the angel that was come to talke with me, helme me, comforted me, and set me vpon my feete.

And in the seconde night it happened, þe Salathiel the captayn of the people came vnto me, sayenge: Where hast thou bene: and why is thy countenance so heuy: And wherof thou not, þe Israel is commytted vnto the, in the lande of their captiuyte: & vpon then, and care, and sorowe do not, as the shepherds that leanech his flock in the handes of twi-led wolues. Then sayde J vnto him: So thy waye fro me, and come not nyeme: ⁊ he ber-de it, and as J sayde, so wrote he his waye fro me. And so J fasted seuen dayes, mourninge and weeping, like as Oriell the angell commaunded me. And a fter seuen dayes it happened, that ⁊ thoughtes of myn hert were very greuous vnto me agayne, ⁊ my soule recea-ued ⁊ space of vnderstandynge, ⁊ J began to walke w the most hyest agayne, and sayde: O LORDE LORDE, of euery wood of ⁊ earth ⁊ of all the trees therof, thou hast chosen ⁊ one enely vnyarde; and of all londes of the worlde wouldest thou hast chosen the one vnto: and of all floures of the greoude thou hast chosen the one lyke; and of all the depches of the see thou hast filled the one rycer: and of all bul-ded ciuies thou hast balowed Sion vnto thy silsion; and of all ⁊ soules that are created, thou hast named the one done: and of all the cattell ⁊ are made, thou hast prouyded ⁊ one shepe: ⁊ amonge all ⁊ maner of folkes thou hast gouerned the one people, and vnto this people whom thou loudest, thou gauest a lawe, ⁊ is proued of all.

D And now O LORDE, why hast thou gent this one people ouer vnto many: ⁊ vpon the one rocc thou hast prepared other, and why hast thou created ⁊ one enely people amonge many: whych create the doume, yee whych haue euer wichfonde ⁊ promysed, ⁊ neuer beleued ⁊ couenaunted: And though thou werest enmye vnto ⁊ people, yet shuldest thou pu-nysh the w thine owne handes. How whā J had spokē these wordes, the angell ⁊ came to me ⁊ sighe a sofe, was sit vnto me, ⁊ sayde vnto me: heare me, ⁊ hertē to ⁊ thinge ⁊ J saye, ⁊ J shal tell ⁊ more. And J sayde: Speake on my LORDE. The sayde he vnto me: Thou art sofe wered ⁊ troubled for Israels sake. I wess thou ⁊ people better, than him ⁊ made them: And J sayde: To LORDE, but of overy greue ⁊ compassion haue J spokē. For myn reynes pay-me me euery houre, because J woulde haue experience of the waye of the most hyest, and to seke one parte of his iudgment. And he sayde vnto me: that thou mayest see. And J sayde: wherfore LORDE: Wher vnto was J borne then: O: why was not my mothers child-bed then my graue: So had J not sene the misy and trouble of Jacob, and the tra-uayle of my people of Israel.

E And he sayde vnto me: Lettē me ⁊ thinge s, ⁊ are not yet come: gather me together ⁊ diopnes, that are scattered abrode: make me ⁊ floures grene agayne. ⁊ are wythered: op-me the thinge that is closed: and bringe me forth the wyndes, that are shutt up: Then me the ymage of a voyce, and thou shal deciare the the thinge, that thou shalt to knowe. And J sayde: O LORDE LORDE, who maye knowe the thinge, but he that hath not his dwellinge w me: As for me, J am an wyse: how maye J the speak of the thinge, wherof thou askest me: The sayde he vnto me: like as thou canst do none of the se thinges ⁊ J haue spoken of, then so canst thou not fynde out my iudgment, or what be the loue that J haue promysed vnto my people. And J sayde: Beholde O LORDE, ye are thou mye vnto them that haue no ome and what shal they do that haue bene tē-me, or me that be now, or they that shal come after vs: And he sayde vnto me: J wyll my iudgment vnto a ryng. I see as thou no lacknesse of the last, euen so is there shewnesse of the first. So J answered sayde: Coudest thou not make those that haue bene made, and that be now, and that are to come in one, that thou mightest shewe thy iudgment the sooner.

Then answered he me and sayde: Thou durst maye not haist aboute the matter, who maye the woulde holde the at once, that shal be created.

And J sayde: How hast thou sayde the vnto thy sex name, that thou lyngest with hast made the creature lynchinge at once, the creature bare te: and so mighte it now aske ⁊ them that be present, at once. And he sayde vnto me: There the childre of a womā, and saye vnto her: If thou bringest forth childre, why doest thou it not together, but one after another: Praye her therfore, to bringe forth ten childre at once. And J sayde: It can not, but must do it one after another.

Then sayde he vnto me: Then so hast J gaten a childre of the earth, for the that be sowne vpon it by pōcess of tyme.
For like as a yonge childe maye not bringe forth the thinge that belouge to the ager-men so haue J ordred the woulde that J made.

And J said and sayde: Seynge thou hast now gent me a waye, J wyll speake before: for one mother of wōd thou hast taken, and yet yonge, ⁊ now she draweth mye vnto ⁊. He answered me ⁊ sayde: There a woman that beareth childre, ⁊ she shal call the. Saye to her: wherfore are not they: whom thou hast now broughte forth yllk the: that are before the, but lesse of nature: And he shal answere the: They ⁊ be borne in the tyme of strength, are of one fashion: and they that are borne in the tyme of age (whan the childreded saye) are other wyse. Considre now thy self, how that yere lesse of stature, then thy age came were before you, and so are they that come a fter you, lesse then ye, as the creature which now begynne to be olde, and haue passed ouer the strength of youth. Then saith I. LORDE I beseeche the, if I haue founde sauoure in thy sighte, shewe thy seruante, by whom doest thou wyser thy creature.

The VI. Chapeer.

And he sayde vnto me: In the begynnyng whan the grounde was made, before the world was made, or euer y was desiers, he fore it thynked and lighetened, or euer the foundations of Paradise were layd, before the sayre floures were sene, or euer the mountaine pouvera were stablished, before the innumerable multitudes of angelo were gathered together, or euer y highnesses of ayre were lifted vp, a foue y meassures of the firmamente were named, or euer y dynnyng in Sion were hore, and or the pitefynne yeres were soughe out, and euer the inventions of them y now synne, were put asyde, before they were sealed that newe gathred foud a treasure: then dyd I considre and ponder the thes thinges, and they all were vnder the same, and they now none eether by me also they be ended, and by none eether.

Then answered I and sayde: which shal be the partynge afunder of the tymes: Or whan shal be the ende of the first, and the begynnyng of it that foloweth: And he sayde vnto me: from Abrahams tyme I sae, whan Jacob z Isaac were borne of him, Iacob hadde the firste hyle of Esau: for Esau is the ende of this world, and Iacob is the begynnyng of it that foloweth. The hande of synn betwixt the hyle and the hande. Other question: Esdras saye thou noe.

I answered then and sayde: O LORDE I haue founde sauoure in thy sighte, I beseeche the, shewe thy seruante the wyse of thy wordes, wherof thou shewdest me parte the last nyght. So he answered and sayde vnto me: Seide up vpon thy feete, and heare the perfecte voyce and sounde. There shal come a greate motion, but y place wher thou stondest shal noe te moued. And euer sin whan thou hearest the wordes, be not afayrd: for of the ende shal the wordes and foundation of y earth be vnderstonde. And wher the wordes eper of tremblith and quaker, for it knoweth, that it must be chaunged at the ende. And it happened, that whan I had herde it, I stode up vpon my feete and herkened: and beholde, there was a voyce y spake, and the sounde of it was like the sounde of many waters, and it sayde. Beholde, y dayes come, y I wyl begynne to drawe nye, and to wyser them that dwell vpon earth, and wyl begynne to make inquisition of them, what they be y haue hurie caughte vnto righteuousnes, and whan the lower estate of Sion shal be fulfilled: and whan they woulde, that shal vanishe awaye, shal be ouersealed, then wyl I do these coloms.

The boke shal be opened before the firmament, and the y shal se all together, and the children of a yere olde shal speake y their voyces: the noyme with childre shal bringe forth vntymely children of ebre or foure monethes olde, and they shal lyue, and be rayfed up: z sodenly shal the soume places appeare as the vnseruice, the fill stode houses shal sodenly be founde emptye, and the trompett shal geue a sounde, which whan euery man heareth, the y shal be hastily afayrd. At that tyme shal frendes fighte one agaynst another like enemies, and the earth shal stonde in feare wixt them.

Mich. 2. a

The springes of the welles shal stonde dryll, and in thre houres they shal noe raine. Who so enter tynnyeth from all these thinges that I haue tolde the, shal escape, and se my saluacion, and the ende of youre trouble. And the men that are receaued, shal se it, they that haue not raised dearely fro theire byrth: and the hert of the indwellers shal be chaunged, and turned in to another meanyng: for euell shal be put out, and discente shal be quenched. As for faith, it shal flourish, corrupcion shal be euermore: and t earth, which hath bene so longe without frute, shal be declared.

And it happened whan he tolde us me, that I loked demurely vpo him, before wher I stode, and these wordes sayde he vnto mee: I am come to shewe y, the tyme of y night for to come.

If thou wilt praye yet more, and fast seuen dayes agayne, I shal tel the more thinges, z greater then before: for thy voyce is herde before the wyse: for wher he thynketh hath sent thy righteous dealinge, he hath sente al so thy chastite, which thou hast had a fter ferece thy youth: and therfore hath he sente me to shewe the all these thinges, and to saye vnto the: Be of good comforte, and feare noe, and haist noc wixt y tymes that are passed thynde wayne chynge, and made no haill of the latter tyme.

And it happened after this, that I weeped a gayne, and I fasted seven dayes in like maner, that I might fulfill the thynges which he tolde me. In the eighth night was my heart wored within me agayne, and I beganne to speake before the kyng: for my spere was greatly set on fyre, and my soule was in distress, and I sayde: O LORD, thou spakest vnto thy creature from the begynnyng (even the first daye) and saydest: Let heauen and earth be made, and thy worde was a perfecte worke. And then was there the spere, and the darknesse were yet on euery syde, and silence: there was no mans voyce as yet from the. Then commaundedst thou a sayre lighte to come forth one of thy creatures, that thy worke might appeare and be fine.

¶ Upon the seconde daye thou maydest the spere of the firmament, and commaundedst it to parte asunder and to make a deuision betwixt the waters, that the one parte might remaine above, and the other beneath. Upon the thirde daye thou broughtest to passe, that the waters were gathered in the seventh parte of the earth: Sixe partes hast thou dayed up, and kepte them, to the use of men might soeke and occupie husbandrie therein. As soone as thy worde wente forth, the worke was made. For immediately there was greates innumerable frute, many byrdes pleasures and desires of temptation, floures of chaungeable colour and smell, and this was done the thirde daye.

Deu. 4. c

¶ Upon the fourth daye thou commaundedst that the Sonne shulde geue his shynne, and that Moone his lighte the starres didest thou see in order, and gauest them a charge, to do seruyce euen vnto man, that was for to be made. Vpon the fifth daye thou saydest vnto the seventh parte (where the waters were gathered) that they shulde bringe forth euery beastes, foules and fishes. And so it came to passe, that the donne water and without foule, brought forth luyng beastes at the commaundement of God, that all people might prayse thy wonderous workes. Then didest thou create two foules, if one thou callest Enoch and the other Lemiatan, and didest separate the one from the other: for the seventh parte (namely, where the water was gathered together) might not holde them both. Vnto Enoch thou gauest one parte, which was dayed up the thirde daye, that he shulde dwell in the same parte, wherein are a thousande hilles. But vnto Lemiatan thou gauest the seventh parte, namely the high, and hast kepte him to denoure upon the wyll, and vpon.

¶ Upon the sixte daye thou gauest them dwelling vnto the earth: that before that thou haddest brought forth beastes, cattell and all frute, and besides this Adam also, whom thou haddest made the best lorde of all thy creatures: Of him thou use all, and the people also, whom thou haddest chosen specially vnto thy self. All this thou saydest now and spoken before the kyng, that I might shewe, how that the worde is true for our saltes. As for the other people which also come of Adams childe, hast saydest they are nothyng, but be like a spere, and haue bene the abundance of them vnto a wyll (that sallet) from the rofte of the heau.

¶ And now O LORD, the heuyl might haue bene reputed as nothyng, haddest thou me to be lordes ouer vs, and to becomen as we thy people (whom thou hast called) a selborne, thy only begotten, and thy firmament) are given in to thy handes and power. If the worde nom be made for our salte, why haue we not the inheritance nor possession with the worde: how longe shal this endure?

¶ It did happened after that I had spoken out these wordes, that was for vnto me an angell (which had bene me also the nightes afore) and he sayde vnto me: Vpon Esdras, and beate the wordes that I am come to tell the. And I sayde: O LORD, my God, the sayde be vnto me: the see is set in a wyde place, that it might be kepte and greates: but the intrance is narrow and small like a ryuer. For who wolde go in thre, to lye vpon it, and to rale it? If he were not the waye narrow, how might he come in to the bedde?

¶ Icam, another. A cite is layd out vnto vpon a brode felde, and is full of all good: but the intrance is narrow and sodaine, like if there were a fyre at the right hande, and the water at the left, and as it were only a strait path betwixt the both, so small, that there coude but one man go there.

¶ If this cite now were geynted to an heuyl, he neuer wente thowm this perilous waye: how wolde he receaue his inheritance? And I sayde: I wis so, LORD. Then sayde he vnto me: so is Israel also a porcion. And why, thou ther saltes haue I made the worde: and Adam trasgressed my statutes, thou now I thinke indged that was done. Thou now I intrance of the worde made narrow, and of sinne and transgrefse: They are but few & small, full of parcels and laboure. For the innumerable of the fore woulde were wyde and fast, and broughte many small synne.

B If they now which are entered in to this world, maye not comprehend these straunge and many thynges, moche lesse maye they comprehend and vnderstande the secreete thynges. Why discernerest thou thy selfe thus, in yngodour but a corruptible man? And what wouldest thou knowe, where as thou art but mortall? And why hast thou not receaved in to thine hart the thynges that is for to come, but that is present?

Ch I saye thus: O LORDE LORDE, thou hast ordaind in thy lawe, that the righteous shalde inherite these thynges, but that the vnjustfull and yngodly shalde perishe. Therefore the righteous shall suffre straunge thynges, and hope for wyde: for they that haue lyne yngodly & suffred straunge thynges, shal not see the wyde.

And he saide vnto me: There is no iudge above God, and none that hath vnderstonde above the heuyns. For there be many synners, because they despyse yf lawe of God that is set before them. For God hath geuen straunge commaundement to such as come, that they knowe what they do, and how they shalde lyne: and yf they expect this, they shalde not be punished.

Therefore thes they were not obedient vnto him, but spake agaynst him: ymagined wyse thynges, & purposed to synne, and sayde me mouer, that there was no God, & that God regarded it not. His wayes haue they not knowen, his lawe haue they despyed, & denyed his promyses: in his statutes & ordynances haue they not bene faithfull & stedfast, and haue not perfourmed his woordes.

C And therefore Esdras, vnto the full plenty: and to the empye, mypnyesse. Beholde, the tyme that come, yf these colens which I haue tolde the, shal come to passe, & the daye shall appere: & the earth yf now passeth awaye, shalbe stremed: & who so ever is belyued from yf some euell, shal see my wofulnes. For my sonne Iesus shal be openly declared, wchose he is to him: & they yf remaine, shal be merry in foure hundred years.

After these same yeaeres shall my sonne Chosroes, and all men that haue lifse: and yf woulde shalbe turned in to the olde sylence from daye, like as in the fore indygmentes, in the same man shall remaine. And after seuen dayes, the woulde that yet awoke, shalbe raised up, & shal dye corrupte. And the earth shal restore those that haue slepe in her, and so shall the dust those that dwell in the heuyns, and the secrete places shal be opene: & those that be committed vnto them. And yf those byest shal be openly declared vpon the seate of iudgment, & all misery shal vanysh awaye, and luge suffringes shalbe gathered together. But the indygmente shall consume, yf teach shal remaine, and faith shal waite for ge, the woerde shal followe, and the remaite shall be stremed, the righteousnesse shall waite, and the vngodlynesse shall beare no rule.

Then saye thus: Abraham payed iust for the Sodomitae, & Moses for the fathers yf synned in the wyldernes, & he yf came a free him for Israel, in yf tyme of Adas and Samuel: and David for yf destruccions, and Salomon for them that came in to the Sanctuary, & Helias for those that receaved rayne, and for the deed, that he might lyne: and Esdras for yf people in the tyme of Sennacherib: & yf other in like maner, which haue payed for many.

But so now, synne yf corrupte is growne up, and wickednes is increasid, and the righteous haue payed for the yngodly, wherefore shal it not be so now also?

He answered me, and sayde: This present woulde is not yf ende, there remaineth moche honoure in it, therefore haue they payed for the weak. But the daye of dome shalbe the ende of this tyme, and yf begynnyng of the immortalite for to come, wherein all corrupcion vanysheth, all volupcesousnes is lost, all mysbelieve taken awaye, righteousness growne, and the verite sponge up. Then shall no man be able to saue himselfe in destruccions, ner to oppresse him yf hath good yf victory. I answered the, & sayde: This is my first & last sayenge: yf it had bene better, ner to haue geuen the earth vnto Adam: or to haue whan it was geat him, to kepe him that he shalbe not synne. For what profite is it for men now in this present tyme to lyne in heuynes, & after death to loke for punishment? O thou Adā, what hast thou done? Thou though it was thou yf synned, thou art not fallid also, but we all yf come of the. O what profite is it vnto vs, yf there be promysid vs an immortal tyme, where as we medle to be deadly woulde: & that there is promysid vs an eternall hope, where as we of floure are well & wayne: & yf there are layed up for vs dwellynges of healeth & freedom, where as we haue lured euill? And that the wofulnes of yf synne is hope to be sende them, whiche haue led a pacient life, where as we haue walked in þe most wicked wayes of all: and that there shalbe shewed a paradys, whose frute endureth for ever, wherein is freedom and medecyne, where as we shal not go in: for we haue walked in vncleinsaine places: And that the faces of them which haue absteyned, shal shyne above the starres, where as our faces shalbe black and dorede: For why we lyued and dyd vnrighteously, we considered not, that we shoulde suffre ther after death:

S The answered he me, and sayde: This is the consideration & thoughte of the battayl, which man hath vpon earth: that yf he overcome, he shall suffre as thou hast sayde. But yf he gett the victory, he shall receaue the thinge that I saye. For this is the life, whereof Moses spake vnto the people, why he he lyued sayenge: Those the life, that thou mayest lyue. Nevertheless they beleued him not, neither the prophetes after him, whoe me which haue spoken vnto them, that they neuer shoulde not reach vnto them to their destruction, like as ioye is for to come ouer those, that haue suffered the silence to be enforced in saluation.

I answered then I sayde: I knowe LORD that the thyself is mercifull, in þe hath mercy vpon them, which are not yet in the wolde, and vpon those also that walke in his lawe: and that he is pacient and longe sufferinge towards those that haue sinned in their wolde: and that he is liberal to geue where as he requyret: and that he is of great mercy, for he multiplieth his leaunge of kindness towards those that are patient, and that are past, and to them which are for to come. For yf he multiplie not his mercies, the wolde shal not be made luyngge, with those that dwell therein: he geueth also, for yf he gaue not of his goodnesse, that they which haue done euill, might be eased, the enim thos/and parte of men shoulde not be made luyngge. And yf the iudge forgane not those yf be healed with his worde, and yf he wolde destroye þe multitude that stryctly, there shoulde be very few left in an innumerable multitude.

The VIII. Chapter.

ITD be instructed me, sayenge: The most hyest made this wolde for many, but the world to come for few. I wyl cell the a similitude, of Sidas: As when thou asist the earth, it shal saye vnto the, that it geueth much moude, where of then vessels are made, but hiele of it yf geioe cmetch of.

Then so is it with the worke of this world. There be many created, but few shall be preferred. Then answered I I saye: Thou shal loue vp the wite, (thou soule) and vnderstande, for thou art gynn to hearken and to geue care, and vnderstande prophetic: for thou hast no longer speake the, but only to lyue. ¶ LORD, wilt thou not geue by seruante leue, þe we may praye before the, and that thou mayest geue sence vnto oure here, and by the oure vnderstandinge, that there maye come saluation and that every one which is corrupte, and breach the state and place of a man, may lyue:

For then art alone, and we all are we it manshope of chy bodye, like as thou hast sayde, and like as the body is fashioned now in the chuldreshed, and the groweth in the mombes, and chy creature is preserved in hie and water: & it. monethes vnto chy welle suffre chy creature, which is fashioned in her: but the thinge that is preserved, and it is preserved, shal both be kepte together vnto an tyme is, the chuldreshed vnto the thinge, that is kepte and growen in her.

For thou hast commanded the vnto to geuenyld vnto the frute, that the thinge which is created and is fashioned, maye nourished for a tyme: and then thou dispossest and orderest it with thy mercy, by a gift of thy righteoussnes, and orderest it in thy lawe, and reformest it with thy vnderstandinge, and orderest it as thy creature, and orderest it luyngge as chy worke. Oinge that that thou destroyest him, which is fashioned in his labours is created and fashioned vnto thy commandement, thou coudest lightly orderest also, that the thinge which is made, might be preferred.

And this I speake now of all men in generall, as thou the most: but of thy people for whose sake I am sayd: and of thy intaunce, for whose cause I moue: and of I Israel, for whom I am wofull: and for Iacob, for whose sake I am grieved: for I geue I to paye before the, for my self and for them, for I see the fall of us, euen of us that dwell vpon earth. But I haue heard the swiftnes of the iudge, which is to come: therefore beare my voyce, and vnderstande my worde, and I shal speake before the.

This is the begynnyng of the wote of Esdras, before he was receaued: LORD, thou that dweldest in ceteris: whose eyes are lift vp in the ayre, who shal be in exceddinge hye, whose glory and maye not be comprehended, before whom the bootes of heauen stonde with trembling for whose keepinge is turned in winde and fyre, whose worde is true, whose callinge is fast fast, whose commaundement is siron, whose ordynance is star full, whose lo-kinge is vpon the deepes, whose watch maket the mountaynes to mele awaye, who sauech beareth myntes: O heare y piayer of thy seruante, and mercif with thine ear the penon of thy creature.

For whyle I lyue, I wil speake: and so is gras I haue vnderstandinge, I wil answe-re. O loke not vpon the synnes of chy people, which sture yf in the truth. haue no respecte vnto the wretched stadies of the heathen, but to the desyre of those that sepe thy testimonies with forowes. Thinke not vpon those that haue walked fawnedly before the, but vpon them, which with wyll haue knowen thy sate.

Let it not be chy wyll to destroye them, which haue had beastly maners, but to loke vpon them that haue clearly taughte chy lawe. Take thou no indignacion at them, which are wiser then bestes: but loue them, that alwaye put their trust in y righteounnes and glory: for we and oure fathers haue all the same sickness and disease, but because of oure synnes thou shalt be called merci-full.

D For yf thou hast mercy vpon vs, thou shalt be called mercifull, where as we haue no wytes of righteousnes: for y righteous which haue layed vp many good wytes to gather, shall out of their deces receaue re-merit. For what is man, that thou shouldest take vnplesure at him? Or what is the con-table mortall generacion, that thou shuldest be so rough towards him?

For of a truch there is no man amonge thou that be borne, but he hath dealt wic-edly: and amonge the faithfull there is no one, which hath not done anyssle. For in this (O L O R D E) chy righteousness y chy goodnes shall be playned and declared, yf thou be mercifull vnto them, which are not ryght in good wytes.

Then answered he me and sayde: Some things hast thou spoken a ryght, and accordinge vnto chy wytes it shal be. For I wil not merely cōside the wytes of them, which haue synned before deatch, before the iudgment, before destruccio, but I wil reioyse ouer the moite and char. the of y righteous.
I wil remembre also the pilgramege, the honouring and the reward. Like as I haue spoken now, so shall it come to passe. For as the husband man sowerch moche seed vpon the grounde, and plantech many trees, and yet alwaye the thinge that is sowne or plated is not all kepe safe, neither doth it all take roote: Euen so is it of them that are sowne in the woulde, they shal not all be preserued.

I answered then s y sayde: If I haue sum be grace, then let me speake. Like as the husbande mans seede perissheth, yf it receaue not rayne in one season, or yf there come no moche rayne vpon it: Euen so perissheth man also, which is created with chy hande, and is likened vnto thine owne ymage and to thy self, for whose sake thou hast made all thinge, and likened him vnto the husbande mans seed. Be not wroth at vs (O L O R D E) but spare thy people, and haue mercy vpon thine owne inheritance: O be mercifull vnto thy creature.

Then answered he me and sayde: Thin-ges present are for the present, and thinges to come for such as be to come. For thou wast test yet moche, seynge thou mayest loue my creature about me: I haue oft tymes diuine nye vnto the, but neuer to the vnrighteous.
In this also thou art maruelous before the hyest, in that thou hast humbled thy self as it becommeth the, and hast not regarded thy me owne self, yf thou art had in such honoure amonge the righteous. Therefore shal greate wretchednes and misery come vpon them, that in the latter tyme shal dwell in y woulde, for they haue walked in greates pryde.

But vnderstonde thou for thy self, and se ke our glory for such as be like the: for vnto you is paradys opened, the tre of life is plated, the tyme to come is prepared, plemournes made ready: a cite is builded for you, and a rest is prepared, yet perfecte goodnes and wyth dome. The rote of euill is marded from you, the weaknes and moeth is hye from you, and into hell flyeth corrupcion in fougetfulness.
Sorowes are vanisshed awaye, and in the ende is shewed the treasure of immortallite.
And therfore are thou no more questions, co-cernyng the multitude of them that perishe, for they haue taken libertie, despysete the hyest, though he come of his lawe, and souer-ten his wytes.

Moreover, they haue troden downe his righteous, and sayde in their hert, that there is no God, yet and that wittingly, for they dye. For like as the thinge that I haue spoken vs is made ready for you: Euen so is chy self and payne prepared for them. For it was not his will that man shoulde come to maner: but they which be created, haue desired the name of him that made them, and are without full vnto him, which prepared life for them. And therfore is my iudgment now at hande. These thinges haue I not shewed vnto all men, but vnto few named, vnto thee, and to such as be like thee.

Then answered I and sayde: Beholde O LORD, now hast thou shewed me the multitude of the tokens, which thou wilt beginne to do at the last: but at what tyme and when, thou hast not shewed me.

The ix. Chapter.

God answered me then and saide: I assure thou the tyme diligently in it self, when thou seest that one parte of the colene come to passe, which I haue tolde of before: so shalt thou vnderstande, that it is the very same tyme, wherein the dyest wil be gynne to wysse the wolde, which he made. And whā there shall be sene earthquake and vppoure of the people in the wolde, then shalt thou well vnderstande, that the most dyest shall e of those thinges, from the dayes that were before thee, euen from the beginninge.

For like as all that is made in the wolde, hath a beginninge and ende, and the ende is manyfalt: Euen so the tymes also of the dyest haue thre beginninges in wordes and signes, and the ende in workinge and in tokens. And euery one that shalt see, and I shall be able to escape by his wicket, and by faith wherein ye haue belened, shall be perserued from the saide perils, and shall see my sauoure in my londe and within my borders, for I haue halowed me from the wolde. Then shall they be in carefullnesse, which now haue abused my waies: and they that haue cast them out despytfully, shall dwell in paynes.

So such as in their life haue receaved benedictions, and haue not knowne me, and they that haue abounded my lawe, whyle they had yett freedom, and when they had yett open remorse of amendment and conuersion, vnderstande not, but despyse it: if same must knowe it a fter death in payne. And therfore be thou nomore carefull, howe the vngodly shall be punished, & howe the righteous shall be saued, and whoset the wolde is, and for whom the wolde, and when it is. Then answered I and sayde: I haue talked before & now I speake, and wil speake also herafter, that there be many moos of them which perish, then that be saued, like as the floude is greater then the droppes.

And he answered me, saynges like as the filde is, so is also the fise: as the floude is, so are the colours also: soch as the wolde is, soch is also the woote: and as the husbandman is himselfe, so is his husbandrye also: it was the tyme of the wolde. And whā I prepared for them that are now, ouer the wolde was made, when in they shuld stande, ther was there no man that woulde see. How man euery one was, and the man also in the wolde which is now paynes, and the moneth that ceaseth not, and the lawe which is vnsearcheable, they maner were corrupte. So I considered the woote, and beholde, there was no parell, because of the thoughtes that were come in to it. And I sawe, and spared the greatly, and haunte me a wynebery of the grapes, and a place from amonge many generacions. Lette multitudes perishe the, which are growen up in payne, and let my grape & wynebery keepe: euen my plants: for with great labour haue I made it up.

Nevertheless if thou wilt take vpon the yett seuen dayes mo: but thou shalt not see in them) go thy waye then in eo of sides of sinne, where no house is builded, and care mo ly of the flouces of the filde, cast no fish, drinke no wine, but care flouces only, paynt vnto the dyest continually, so wilt thou see, and talke with the.

So I wente my waye and came to the filde which is called Ardath: like as he com maunded me: and there I sawe abundance of sinne, and ace of the heart of the filde, and of meate of the same satisfied me. A fewe dayes I sat vpon the grasse, & my hart was vexed within me like as a fore: and I opened my mouth, and beganne to talke to the dyest, and saide: O LORD, thou shalt see thy selfe vnto vs, thou hast declared and opened thy selfe vnto oure fathers in the wyne berie, in a place where no man dwelleth, in a barren place, when they came out of Egypte, and thou spakest, saynges: heare ye O Israel, and make my wordes thou seest of Iacob. Beholde, I sowe my lawe in you, and I shall bringe frute in you, & yett shall be honoured in it for ever. For oure fathers which receaved the lawe, keppe it not, and obteyned not thy ordinaunces and statutes, & the fite of the lawe was not declared: for it might not, for whyrte was thine, for they that receaved it, perished, because they kepte not thinge that was sowe in them.

It is a custome when the ground is of the fise, or the fise a ship, or a vessel man and by myse, that when it perissheth or is bro number in a thinge is so none, or wherin any thinge is put: the thinges also perissheth & are broken, which are some or parte therein. But wee vs it hath not happened so: for we y haue receaued the lawe, perissh in synne, and our hart all which receaued the lawe: not without bringe the lawe we perissheth not, but remaine in his labour.

And when I considered these thinges in my hert aftar this maner, I looke aboute me with myne eyes, and upon the right syde I sawe a woman, which mourned sore, made greue lamentacion, and wept with loude voyce: hir clothes were rent in peces, & she had ashes upon hir heade.

I the le I my thonghes go, & I was in,
 I turned me vnto her, & sayde: what sore we-peth thou: why art thou so sory & discomfor-ted? And she sayde vnto me: Sye, let me bewail myself & take yet more sorrowe: for I am sore weped in my mynde, & brooghte very loue. And I sayde vnto her: what ayleth y?
 Or who hath done any thinge to y? & she sayde: I haue bene vn fructfull and baren, and haue had an husband thirtie yea-res. And these xxx. yeares I do nothinge els daye and nighte and all houres, but make my prayer to y. Myself. Aftar thirtie yeares God berde me thy hand mayden, loked vpon my misery, confidid my trouble, and gaue me a sonne, and I was glad of him, so was my husband also and all my neighbours, and we gaue greute honoure vnto y. Myself. And I waisht him with greute trausyle. So when he grew vp, & came to the tyme, that he shulde haue a wife, I made a staff.

The X. Chapter.

¶ And it happened that when my sonne wente in to his chamber, he fell downe, and byed: the ouerthrowe we all the sightes, and all my neighbours rose vp to co fess me. The toke I my self vnto the secōde daye at night: when they had all rested, & they might comforte me, I rested also, and rose vp by night, and sled, and am come hither in to this selde, as thou seist: and am purposed not to come in the cite, but to remaine here, and neether to eate ner drynke, but continually to mourne and to fast, vntill I dye.

Then le I my meditations and thonghes to fall, that I was in, and spake to her in wisprone: Thou foolish woman, siffethou not oure heuynes and mournyng, and what happened vnto vs: howe Sion of moether is all to full and sory, and howe she is cleane broughte downe and in misery: singe we de all now in heuynes, & make oure none (for we be all sorrowfull. Also for the heuynes that thou takest, it is but for oure some. Demande the earth, and she shal tell the, that it is she which oughe (by reason) to mourne, for the fall of so many that growe vpon her.

 For from the begynnyng all men are borne of her, & ether shal come: and behold, they walke almost all into destruccian, and man-ny of them shalbe roade out.

Who shulde then (by reason) make more mournyng, then she, that hath lost so greate a multitude? and not thou, which art sory but for one. But yf thou woldst saye vnto me: My mournyng is not like the mournyng ge of the earth, for I haue lost the frute of my body, which I bare with heuynes: as for the earth, a cōdunge to the ordynance of y earth onely, so that many are gone awaye in her, as it is come to passe: Then saye I vnto the: like as thou hast borne with trausyle & sorrowe, enen so the earth also from the begyn-nyng geereth hir frute vnto man, for him y made her. And therfore withold the heuynes and heuynes by thy self, and loke what happeneth vnto y, beate it strongly. For yf thou iudgest the marck & ende of God to be righteous and good, and receauest his counsell in tyme, thou shalt be commended therein.
 Go thy weye then in to the cite to thy husbande.

And she sayde vnto me: that will I not do, I will not go in to the cite, but heare will I bye. So I commoned more with her, and sayde: Do not so, but be couceled, and solowe me: for how many salles hath Sion? Be of good comforte because of the sorrowe of Jerusalem. For thou seist that oure Sanctuary is layed wast, oure aulter broken, oure temple destroyed, oure playenge of instrumē-tes and synginge layed downe, the thankes-geuynge put to silenec, & mych is vanisshed awaye. the light of oure candlestick is quenched, y. Arke of the couernante is take from vs, all oure holy thinges are despyled, and the name that is called vpon our vs, is dishonoured, oure chyldeen are put to shame, oure prestes are brent, oure Leuites are caried awaye in to captiuiety, oure virgins are despyled, and oure wyues ransyshed, oure righteous men spoyled, and oure chylde destroyed, oure yongemen are broughte in in bondage, and oure stryde worthies are become weakes, and Sion which scale is y greatesse of all ys low-sed vp from hir woshytpe: for she is belyered in to the handes of them that hate vs.

And therfore shalke of y greate heuynes, C and put awaye the multitude of sorrowes: that the lightnes maye be mercifull vnto the, and that the hysell maye geue the rest from y labour and trauayle. And it happened, that when I was talkyng with her, hir face dyd shyne & glyster, so that I was afraid of her, and mused what it might be. And immediatly she cast out a greates voyce, very fearfull, so that y earth shoke at the noyse of the woman: and I loked, and beholde, the woman appeared vnto me nowhere, but there was a cite buylded, and a place was shewed from the grounde and foundation.

Then was I afrayed, and cried with loue 14. a voice, and sayde: where is Diid the angell, which came to me at the first? For he hath caused me to come in many considerations and by thoughts, and myne ende is turned to corruption, and my prayer to rebuke. And as I was speakyng these wordes, he came vnto me, and loked upon me, and I laye as one that had bene deed, and myne understandinge was altered, and he toke me by the right hande, and comforted me, and set me vp vpon my feet, and sayde vnto me: what aytid the? and why is thine understandinge vnto: and the understandinge of thy herr, and wherfore art thou sory? And I sayde: Because thou hast forsaken me: and
 14. a I haue done a cedyng vnto thy wordes, I wente into the selde, and there haue I sene thynges, that I am not able to expresse. He sayde vnto me: Sette vp and be manly, and I shal geue the exortacion.

Then sayde I: Speake onto me my LORD DE, forsake me not, lest I dye in wayne: for I haue sene that I knewe not, & herbe that I do not knowe. O: shall my understandinge be diseased, and my mynde: But now I be sike the, chee thou wilt shewe thy seruauit of this woode. He answered me the and sayde: heare me, and I shall enforme the, and tell the wherfore thou art afrayed, for the hysell hath opened many secrette thynges vnto the.

So hath sene that thy waye is righte, and that thou takest sounde continually for thy people, and makest greates lamentacion for Sion: and therfore vnderstonde the vision which thou sawest a litle whyle agoo after this maner: Thou sawest a woman mourninge, and thou hast comforted her: Leue theles now feist thou the lightnes of the woman nowhere, but thou thoughtest there was a cite buylded: and like as she tolde the of the fall of her soure, so is this the answer:

The woman whom thou sawest, is Sion: and where as she tolde the, that she had bene thirtie yeares vnfruitefull and barren, these are the xxx. yeares, wherin there was offeringe made in her.

But a fter xxx. yeares Salomon buylded her, and offered, and then bare the barren childe. And where as she tolde the, that she wrought him with laboure, that was the royal kynge of Ierusalem. But where as she tolde the, that she dyed in hir chamber, that is the fall of Ierusalem. And thou sawest hir lightnesse, when she mourned for hir sonne: and what she opened vnto her, I haue shewed y. And now God saye, that thou art sory in thy mynde, and suffrest from y here for her: and so hath he shewed the hir clearnesse, and the saynes of hir bewtey.

And therfore I had the remaunce in this de, where no house is buylded. For I knowe the hysell wold shewe this vnto the, therfore I commaunded the to go into the selde, where no foundation ner buildinge is. In the place where the hysell wilt shewe his cite, there shall be no mans buyldinge. And therfore feare not, and les noe thine herbe a frayde, but go thy waye in, and see the glorious and sayre buyldinge, and be gladde it is, and howe greates thou thinkest is, the measure of thine eyes, & then shok the heate as much as thine eares maye consume. For thou art blessed above many other, and art called with the hysell, as y few. And tomorrow at night thou shalt remaunce here, and so shal y hysell shewe the visions of thy thynges, which he will do vnto them that dwell vpon earth in y last dayes. So I steppe the same night like as he commaunded me.

The XI. Chapter.

Then sawe I a dreame: and beholde, there came vp from y sea an Angell, which had xii. wynges and thre heades: And I sawe, and beholde, he spred his wynges ouer all the earth, and all the wynde of the ayre blew in them, and so they were put together againe. And I beholde, and out of his fecher's ebers grew other litle contrary fecher's: the heades rested, the head in the myddest was greater then the other, & rested it with the residue.

Moreover I sawe, that the Angell flew w his wynges, and raigned vpon earth, & ouer all them that dwell vpon the earth: and I sawe y all thynges vnder heauen were subiect vnto him, and no man spake against him, no nor one creature vpon earth. I sawe also that the Angell stode vp vpon his daunt:

gave a sounte wth his fetters, & a voyce saide after this maner: matche not all together, like enarymā in his owne place, & watch for a tyme: but let the heades be preferred at the left. Then thesaies I sawe, & the voyce wente out of his heades, but from the myddest of his body. And I nombred his cōterary fethers, & beholde, there were eight of them.
And I looked, & beholde, upon the right syde there arose one fether, & raigned over all the earth. And it happened, & when it raigned, the ende of it came, & the place therof appeared nomore. So the nexte followinge yode my raigned, & had a greate tyme: & it happened, & when it raigned, the ende of it came also like as the first, so that it appeared nomore.

Then came there a voyce vnto it, & sayde: Search thou & haste depe in the earth so longe, that I saye vnto the, before thou begynnest to appeare nomore: there shal none after & arise vnto thy tyme. Then are the thirde, & raigned as the other a feie, & appeared nomore also. So wete it with all the residue one after another, so & every one raigned, & the appeared nomore. The I looked, & beholde in pierecse of tyme the fetthers & foloweth marie up vps the right syde, & they mighte rule all: and some of the ruled, but within a while they appeared nomore: for some of the were set up, but ruled not. After this I loked, & beholde, & xij. fetthers appeared nomore, and the two wynges: & there was nomore upon the Agles body, but two heades that ruled, & six fetthers. Then sawe I also, & the six fetthers were parted in two, & remained vnder the heade, & was upon the right syde, for the foure cōtynned in their place. So I looked, and beholde, they that were vnder the wynges, thoughte to set up them selues, and to have the rule. Then was there one set up, but shortly & appeared nomore, and the seconde more stoner awaye then the first. And I beholde, and lo, the two thoughte also by the selues to raigne: & wā they so thoughte, beholde, there wāked one of the heades that was at rest, namely, it that was in the myd-dest: for that was the greater of the two hea-des. And then I sawe, that the two heades were fylled with him, and the heade was removd with them & were by him, & are up of two vnder wynges, & wolde have raigned.

But this heade put & wolde earth in fran, and here rule in it, over all those & dwelle vpon earth with much labour, and he had the gouernance of the wolde, over all the fynke, that haue bene. After this I looked, and beholde, the heade that was in the middest, suddenly appeared nomore, like as if wyng ges: then came the two heades, which ruled vpon earth, & over thes that dwelt therein.

And I beholde, & lo, the heade vpon the right syde, dwelled it that was vpon the left syde.
And I herde a voyce, which sayde vnto me: like before the, and considre the things that thou hast. Then I sawe, and beholde, as it were a lyon that roared, & remynge hisse lye out of & wood, and he sent out a mans voyce vnto the Agle, and sayde: heare thou, I wyl talke with the, and the hysse shal saye vnto the: Is it not thou that hast the victory of the foure bestes, whom I made to rai-gne vpon earth and in my wolde, and that & ende of their tynes might come thow to the?

And the fourth came, and ouerwāne all the bestes that were past, and had power ouer the wolde with greate fearefulnes, and ouer the whole compasse of the earth by the most ruled labour, and so longe tyme twelue he vpon the earth with discrece, & the earth hast thou iudged not with tructe. For thou hast troubled the mete, thou hast hurt the peaceable and quyet, thou hast loured lyers, and destroyed the dwellynge of them that broughte forth frute, and hast cast downe the walles of synke as byd the no harme. Therfore is thy wrongous dealinge and blasphemy come up vnto the hysse, and thy pryde vnto the lightes. The hysse also hath loured vps the proude tymes, and beholde, they are ended, and their abhominacions are fulfilled.
And therefore appeare nomore thou Agle, and thy horrible wynges, and thy waked fethers, and thy vngacious heaves, and thy synfull clawes, and all thy vayne body: that the earth maye be refreshed, and come agayne to herself, when she is deliuered from thy violence, and that she maye hope for & iudgment and mercy of him that made her.

The xij. Chap. mate.

¶ And it happened when I sawe spake the se wolde vnto the Agle, & heade & a sore had & upperhāde, appeared memo-re: nether byd & foure wynges appeare ny more, & came to hie, & were set up to raigne, & their tynge dome was small & full of proude.
And I sawe, & beholde, they appeared no more, & & whole body of & Agle was bese, & the earth was in greace feare. Then wāked & out of the trauance of my mynde, and from greace feare, and sayde vnto my spere: Lo, this hast thou geuen me, in & thou seardest out the wayes of the hysse: lo, yet am I wā-ry in my mynde, and very weak in my spere.

and little strengch is there in me, for the greates feare that I receaved this nyght. Therfore wil I now besite the hyeff, & he wil comforte me vnto the ende, & I sayde. LORDE LORDE

B yf I haue founde grace before thy sighte, and yf I am iustified with y before many other, & yf my praye be come vp before thy face, comforte me then, and shewe me thy inuait the interpretation & playne differēce of this horrible sighte, that thou mayest perfectly comforte my soule: for thou hast iudged me worthy, so shewe me y last of tyme.

And he sayde vnto me: this is the interpretation of this sighte, The Aegle whom thou sawest: come vp from the sea, is the kyngdome which was sene in the vision of thy brother Daniel, but it was not expounded vnto him, for now I declare it vnto the.

Beholde, the dayes come, that there shal rise vp a kyngdome vpo earth, and it shal be feared aboute alle the kyngdomes y were before it. In the same kyngdome shal xij. kynges raigne, one after another. For the firste shal begyne to raigne, and shal haue moire tyme the the other, & this do y xij. wynges signifie, which thou sawest. As for the voyce that spake, and that thou sawest go out from the heade but not from y body, it betokeneth, that a fier the tyme of that kyngdome there shall arise greates strynges, and it shal stonde in parrell of fall yng: neare heles it shal not yet fall, but shal be set in to his begynnyng. And y eight vnderwynges which thou sawest haue vnto y wynges of hi, betokē, y in hi there shal arise eight kynges, whose tyme shal be but small, & their yeares swifte, & two of them shal beare. But when the myddel tyme cometh, there shal be foure kepe in the tyme, when his tyme begynneth to come that it maye be ended, but two shal be kepe vnto y ende.

And where as thou sawest this heade of tynge, this is the interpretation: In his last shal the hyeffe raise vp that kyngdome, and call many agayne in to the, & they shal haue the dominion of the earth, and of those that dwell therein, with moch labo aboute alle those y were before the. Therfore are they called y heades of the Aegle: for it is they y shal bringe forth his wyldeynes agayne, & y shal perourne & synish his last. And where as thou sawest, that y greates heade appeared nomore, it signifieth, that one of them shal dye vpo his bed, & yett with payne, for the two that remayne, shal be slayne with the swerde. For the swerde of the one shal deuoure the other, but at the last shal be full thowen the swerde himself.

And where as thou sawest two wynges vnto the heade that is on the nyght, it signifieth, that it is they, which the hyeffe hath kepe vnto their ende: this is that kyngdome, & full of trouble. The kynges whom thou sawest rysinge vp out of the north roaring, and speakinge vnto the Aegle, and rebuynge him for his wyldeynes, are the wynde, which the hyeffe hath kepe them and for their wyldeynes vnto the ende: he shal reioyce them, and nomore sinder before them. For he shal see them wyng before the iudgement, and shal iustifye them: for the residue of my people shal iouer with trouble, those y be persued with myne endes: and he shal make them wyl vnto the commyng of the daye of iudgement, wherof I haue spoken vnto the sou the begynnyng. This is the dumm that thou sawest, and this is the interpretation. Thou only hast bene meete to knowe the creature of the hyeffe.

Therfore wyte alle these things y thou hast sene in a booke, and hyde them, and make the the wyse in the people, whose heartes I promise maye comprehend and kepe the creatures. But maye thou here y siffen some dayes moore, that it maye be shewed the what so euer it pleaseth the hyeffe to declare the, and with that he wille his waye.

And when alle the people perauent, that seven dayes were past, & I not come agayne in to y cite, they gathered them all togather from the least vnto the most, & came vnto me, and sayde: what haue we offened the: and what euill haue we done agaynst the, that thou forsakest vs, & strest here in this place: for of all people thou only art left vs, as a part of the wyne, and as a canbell in a vessell of ce, and as an hannon & shippe perished from y cepest. Haue we not els aduersite yough but thou must forsake vs: Woe it not becom for vs, that we had bene bene with the. For we are no better, then they y dyed there, and they wepe w lombe voyce. Then answered I the & sayde: He of good consence I raed, & be not heny thou honest of Jacob: the hyeffe hath you in remembrance, & y shal haue not forgotte you in eternite. As for me, I haue not forsake you, neither am I departed from you: but am come in to this place to praye, because of y mystery of Jacob: the I might see mercy for y lowe estate of y citizenary. And now go ye waye home with you, and a fier these dayes wil I come vnto you. So the people wote their waye in to the citi-

his an I commaunderd them : but I coma ynd fall in the silde seuen dayes, as y angell had me, and I ax one of the floures of the silde, and had my meate of the herbe in the silde dayes.

The XIII. Chapecr.

When it happened after the seue dayes, I I dreamed a dreame by myght. And beholde, there arose a wynde from the seuer: it moued all the floures therof. And I loke, and beholde, the man was stronge and inuaded with the cloudes of heauen: and when he turned his countenance to cōsider, all the thinges trembled that were sene vnder him: and when the voyce wente out of his mouth, all they bent that herde him, like as the earth when it feleth the sye.

After this I same, and beholde, there was gathered together a multitude of mē out of number from the foure wyndes of the heaue, to fight agaynst y man, that came out from yse. And I loke, and beholde, he graued him self a greace moue, and flew vp vpon it. The I wolde haue sene the border or place, wher the hill was grauen, and I coude not.

I sawe after this, y all they which came to fight agaynst him, were fore a frayd, and y durst they fight. Neuertheles when he sawe the fearfulness and violence of the people, he nether lift vp his hande nor helde swerde, nor any weapen: but onely (as I sawe) he sent out of his mouth as it had bene a blast of fyre, and out of his lippes y wynde of the floure: and out of his tōge he cast out sparke and floures, and they were all myce congrege the blast of fyre, the wynde of the floure, and y greace floure, and fell with a rushe vpon y people, which was prepared to fight: but the ydde euery chone: so that of the innumerable multitude there was no thinge sene, but onely dust y smoke. When I sawe this, I was a frayd.

Afterward sawe I the same man come downe from the mountayne, and callinge vnto him another peaceable people: and there came much people vnto him: some were glad some were sorry, some of them were bounde, so that they were caried and laughte forth.

Then was I sicke the joy greate feare, and I asked, and so yd: thou hast shewed y seruise all y worderes sic y begynnynge, and hast rewarded me with y, y thou mightest receaue my prayse: shewe me now yet the interpretation of this dreame. For thus I cōsider in my wofull and iuging: Wo vnto them that shal be sic in those dayes, and much more vpon those that are not left behynde: for they that were not sic, were in heuynes.

Let vs vnderstande I y thinges that are layd vp in the latter dayes, which shal happen vnto them, and to those that are not left behynde. Therfore are they come in to greate perils, and many necessites, like as these dreames declare. Yet is it easier, y he which suffreth hunte, come in these, then to passe awaye as a cloude out of the world, and now to se y thinges y shal happen in y last.

Then answered he me, and sayde: The interpretation of the sighe shall I shewe the, and I will open vnto the, the thinges y thou hast requyred. For thou hast spoken of them that are left behynde, and this is the interpretation, he that taketh awaye the parrell in these tyme, hath kepte himself. They that be fallen in to harme, are sode as haue woeles and z such vnto the most myghtie. And thus this therfore, that they which be left behynde, are more blessed, then they that be dead. This is the meanynge of the vision. Where as the s sawest a man comynge vp from the depe of the see, y same is he whom God the Ghyest kepte a greace season, which by his owne self shal deliuer his creature, and he shal orde the that are left behynde. And where as thou sawest, y out of his mouth there came a blast of wynde, fyre and floure, and how y he lift vp nether swerde nor weapen, but y the russhinge in of him destroyed the whole multitude, y came to fight agaynst him: it signifieth, that the dayes come, when God will deliuer the y are vpon earth, in a traunce of mynde shal be come vpon the, y dwell in the earth. And one shal vnterteke to fight agaynst another, one cite agaynst another, one place agaynst another, one people agaynst another, and one realme agaynst another.

When this cometh to passe, then shal the tokens come, that I sheweth the be fore and the shal my sonne be declared, whiche thou sawest clymme vp as a mā. And when all y people heare his voyce, every man shal in their owne soue leave the batayll, y they haue one agaynst another, and an innumerable multitude shal be gathered together, as they that be willinge to come and to encrease me him by fightinges. But he shal sēde vpon the toppe of the mounte Sion. Neuertheles Sion shal come, and shal be she need, be myng prepared and veyded for all men, like as thou sawest the hill grauen forth with one any halde. But my sonne shal rebute the people y are come for their wickednes, with the tempest, and for their euell ymaginacions: and their paymes wherwith they shal be punished, are lictened vnto the flammes: and with our eny laboure shal be destroye them, enes by the lawe, which is cōpared vnto the fyre.

E And where as thou sawest, that he gatherd another peacable people vnto hi: those are the ten tribes, which were caried awaye prisoners oue of their owne londe, in the tyme of Ofoas the kynge, whom Salmansar the kynge of Assiria tooke prisoner, and caried them ouer y water, and so came they in to another londe.

But they gaue them this counsell, y they shoulde leaue the multitude of the heithe, and ege go forth in to a farther countre, where neuer many tynes dwelt: that they might there kepe their statutes, which they neuer kepe in their owne londe. And so they entred in at the narrow passinges of the water of Euphrates, and God shewed tokens for the, and helde still the floude tyll they were passid ouer: for thorow that countre there was a greates waye, namely of a yere and an half iourney, for the same region is called Marath. Then dwelt they there vnto the latter tyme: and when they come forth agayne, y they shal holde still the springes of the streame agayne, that they maye go thow, therefore sawest thou the multitude with peace. And they that be left behynde of thy people, are those that be founde within my border. Now whan he destroyeth the multitude that is gathered together, he shal beside his people that remaine, and then shal he shew them greates wonders.

S Then sayde y: O LORDE LORDE, shew me this: wherfore haue y sene the man comynge vp from the depe of the see?

And he sayde vnto me: Like as thou cast nerther seke out: ner knowe these thinges that are in the depe of the see, enen so mayest thou not se my some, or those that be with him, but in the tyme of the daye. This is the interpretation of the dream which thou sawest, therefore thou onely art here lightened: for thou hast forsaken thine owne lawe, and applied thy diligēce vnto myne, and sought it. Thy life hast thou ordered in wysdome, and hast called vnderstandinge thy mother, and therefore haue y shewed the y treasure of the heyl. After these dayes y wil shew the more, and talke with thee at more large, yet heu and wonderous thinges wyl y declare vnto the.

Reg. 3. 100. 2. Then wente y forth in to y felde, genynging praye and thanke greatly vnto God, because of his wonders which he byd intyme, and because he governeth the same, and shew is in tyme, and there y sawe this daye.

The XIII. Chapter.

S Pon the thirde daye y sawe vnto the tere, then came there a wayman me out of the bush, y sayde: Esdras, Esdras. And y sayde: here y am. And he stode vp vpon my fete. He spak vnto me: In the bush byd y appere vnto the, y talked w him, whā my people were in Egipce, and y sent him, and led my people out of Egipce, y brought him vnto Babylon, where y helde him by me a long tyme, and tolde him my wonders as thou, and shewed him y secretes of the tymes at the ende, and commaunded him, sayinge: These wordes shal thou be clare, y nocht. And now y saye vnto the, that thou art vp in thine here: the dreames that thou hast sene, and the interpretations which y haue shewed the: for thou shalt be receaved of al, thou shalt be turned and remayne w my council, and with such as be with the, wyl thy mes be ended. For the world hath left thy youth, and the tymes begynne to woxe old. For the tyme is ben yded in to euoling paine, and ten partes of it are gone all ready, and half of the tenth parte: yet remaineth that, which is after y half of y tenth parte.

Therefore prepare and order thy heart: reforme thy people: ceaforse such of that as be in trouble: and tell new of the wisdom: let go from the most all the burthenes of awaye the burthenes of man: pur of the meete nature: laye vp in some place y the things that are most heuy vnto the, and banish the fyr from these tymes: for such euill y wyl be as thou hast now sene happ, y shal do yet much worse. For now the world wyl moule and the tymes: the more the world wyl thesse increase, in them that dwell vnto earth. For the wylch is fled farre awaye, y syng is hard at hande. For now banish the wylch come, that thou hast sene.

Then answered y and sayde: Repoited. DE. y wyl go as thou hast commaunded, and reforme the people which are paine. But they y shal be borne afterwarde, y wyl erthone or rebate the: Then the world is sic in darkness, and they y dwell there, as without light: for thy lawe is byndeth, but se no man ere wylch the thinges that are done of the, or that shal be done. Repoited. DE. be grace before the, sende the hol y praye to me, and y shall wyte all the that is done in the world: sime the daye.

which was written in thy lawe, that men may fynde the path, and that they which will lye in the latter dayes, maye lyeue.

And he answered me, sayinge: Go y waye, gather thy people together, & saye vnto the, that they fynde the waye for xi. dayes, but lette them gather the many bore trees, and take with they the Sarcas, Dabnia, Selema, Lchanus and Thal, thes fyue, which are ready to roye & swifly, and come hither, and I shal lighte a candle of vnderstandinge in thine hart, which shal not be put out, vntill the thinges be performed which thou shalt begynne to wyte. And then shalt thou declare some thinges openly vnto the people, and some thinges shalt thou shew secretly vnto thy wyse. Come now this houre shalt thou begynne to wyte.

Then wote I forth (as he commaunded me) and gathered all y people together, and sayde vnto thes wyse wordes o' Israel: Oure fathers from the begynnyng were straunges in Egipte, from whiche they were deliuered, and receaued the lawe of life, which they keepe not, which ye also haue trasgreded a feare the. This was this londe and the londe of Sion perished amonge you by the lorde to possess. But ye fathers and ye yschelus also haue done ungodlinesse, & haue not keepe the wayes which the wyse commaunded you. And so for much as he is a righteous iudge, he receiue from you in tyme the thinge that had geuen you. And now are ye here and ye bretheren amonge you. Therefore yf so be that ye wil sit downe ydome vnderstandinge, and reforme youre hart, ye shal be keepe aluay, & after deathe shal ye receiue mercy. For after deathe shal the iudgement come, when the shal lyeue againe: and then shal the names of the righteous be written, and y names of the ungodly with their wordes, shal be declared. And no man ther shal come now vnto me, nor aske any question at whiche xi. dayes.

So I toke the fyue men (as he commaunded me) and we treme in to the fild, and remoued there. The next daye a voyce called me sayinge: Esdras. O then chy mouth, & dynt in thar' gape. The he opened I my mouth, & tubode, he reached me a full cuppe, which was full of meere, but the cold of it was like fyre. And I receiue it and drank. And when I had drunken it, my hart had vnderstandynge, and wyssdome grew in my brest: for my hart was receiue in remembrance, and my mouth was opened and shew nomore. The next daye vnderstandinge vnto the fyue men, y they moue y bye thies of the night, which they vnderstande not. But in the night they are heere: as for me, I spake in the daye, and helde not my tonge by night. In xi. dayes, they wote two hundred & foure booke.

And it happened wha the xi. dayes were fulfilled, that the wyse spake saynyng: The first that thou hast wyte, speake openly, y the worthy and unworthy maye reede it. Wote Repe y lxx. last, y then mayest shew it conly to such as be wyse amonge they people. For in them is the sprynge of vnderstandinge, the fountayne of wyssdome, and the stream of knoulege. And I dyd so.

The XV. Chapter.

Beholde, speake thou in the eares of my people the wordes of prophesie, which I will put in y month, saith the LORDE: and cause them to be wrytten in a leaer, for it is the truth. Feare not the ymaginacion against y, lette not y vnfaithfulnes of them trouble the, that speake agaynst the. For all the vnfaithful shal bye in their vnfaithfulnes. Beholde saith the LORDE, I wil bringe plagis vpon the world: y swerde, hunger, deathe and destruction, for which men haue the upper hande in all y earch, and their shame shall wote be fulfilled.

Therefore saith the LORDE: I wil holde my tonge nomore vnto their wickednesse, which they do so ungodly: neither wil I suffre them in the thinges, that they deale with all so wickedly. Beholde, the imocent blouds of the troubled critech wnto me, and the scales of the righteous complayne continually, and therfor saith the LORDE: I wil surely avenge, and receaue vnto me all the imocent blouds from amonge them.

Beholde, my people, is led as a flock of shepe to be slayne, I wil not suffre them now to dwell in Egipte, but wil bringe them out with a mighty hande and a stretched out arme, and sonye it with plagis as a sore, and wil destroye all the londe off it. Egipte shal mourne, and the foundations of it shal be smytten with the plage and punishment, y God shal bringe vpon it.

They that eyll y growde, shal mourne, for their sides shal be destroyed thowm the blasfemye and hale, and an horrible starve. Wo worth y woulde and them that dwell therein, for y swerde & their destructione diuerech nyet one people shal sitte vp to fighte agaynst another, & swerde in their handes. For me shal be vnrest fast, and I me shal do violence vnto ether: they shal not regard the kynge and pryces, the wayes of their doings, and habyngees in their power. A man shal desire to go in to the cite, & shal not be able. For be cause of their pryde y cities shalbe brought in feare. y houses shal shake, and men shalbe astrayed. A man shal haue no pite upon his neyghboure, but one shal prouoke another vnto battayll, to spoyle their goodes because of the hunger of bread, and because of the greates trouble.

D Beholde, I gather 7 call together all the kynges of y earth which are from the nyngyng, from the south, from the east and Libanus to come vnto them, and restore the chynges that they haue graud them. Like as they do yet this daye vnto my choyse, so wil I do also, and recompense the in their bosome. Thus sayeth y LORDE God: My right hande shal not spare y synners, and my swerde shal not cease ouer them, that shal shed the innocet blood vpon earth. The feare is gone out frō his mouth, and hath cōsumed the foundations of the earth, and the synners like the frame that is kimbled, wō wōth them that synne, and fepe not my commandementes, saith the LORDE. I wil not spare them. So youre wyse ye children from violence, de fyre not my Sanctuary: for the LORDE knoweth all the thate synne agaynst him, and therfore deluyerech he them vnto death and destruccion: for now are the plages come vpon the woulde, 7 ye shal remaue in the. For God shal not deluyere you, because ye haue synned agaynst him.

E Beholde, an horrible vision cometh frō the east, where generacions of Dragons shal come out, and the people of the Arabes with many charrettes, and the multitude of them shalbe as the wynde vps earth, that all they which heare them ragynge in their mouth, maye feare and be a frayed: and as the wynde bores out of y wood, so shal they go out, and with greates power shal they come, and stonde sigheinge with the, and shal waiste the portion of the londe of the Assirians.

And then shal the Dragons haue the vpper hande, not remembreinge their byrth, and shal cōmme aboute streunge to gether in greates power, to persecute them. But thes shalbe a frayed, and fepe y silence at their power, and shal ste: and one out of the londe of the Assirians shal beseege the, and consume one of the, and in thei boosht shal be feare and daede, and strife amonge their kynges.

S Beholde cloudes from the east, and from the north vnto the south, and they are very horrible to loke vpon, full of wrath and storme. They shal synne one vpon another, and they shal synne at y greates sturre vpon earth and their sturre, and the blood shalbe from the swerde vnto the bey, and the southward vnto y Cameloytter: And there shal be greates fearefulness and trembling vps earth, and they that se the wrath, shal be a frayed, and trembling shal come vpon them.

And then shal there come greates stormes from y south and from the north, and from the west, and from the storme wynde from the east, and shal synne them vngyne, 7 the cloudes which be a ryde vpon earth, and the sturre to cause fyre to come y us, and west wynde, shalbe destroyed, and the greates cloudes shalbe lyste up, and y mighy cloudes full of wrath, and the sturre, that they maye make all the earth a frayd and dwel therein, and that they maye poure ouer all places an horrible sturre, frō the le and syenge fierdes, and many water: all feldees maye be full, and all ryuers, the shal beate downe the cities 7 woulde, many raynes 7 hylles, all trees, wood, and the gyfse of the meadowes, and all thei frute, as they shal go stedfast vnto Babilon, and ther a frayed, they shal come to be a fraysege her: the sturre and all wrath shal they poure out vpon her.

Then shal the dust and smoke go vpon the heauen, and all they that be abowen shal be wailye her, and they that remaue vnder her, shal be seruyce vnto them that haue put her in feare. And thou Asia y offest thyself also vps the hope of Babilon, as thou a worshippe of hir performe: wō be wōth theu wretched, because thou hast wōth thyself like vnto her, 7 hast decey 7 danghered the dome, that the y myghte triumphe and plish thy londe, which haue allwaye defouled y nyghte wōrdome w the: thou hast sinned the abhominable cite in all hir wōth and vncions.

Therfore sayeth God: I wil sende plages vpon the, wyddomphode, powerte, hylgneros, and pestilence, to waiste thy herse and destruccion, and death, and the glory of thy power shal be dryed vp as a flower, whan beate a rysech y is sent ouer the. Thou shalt be sicke as a poore wif that is playged with out of women: so y the myghtie and lowe shal not be able to receaue the. Wōbe y shal be the saith the LORDE: If thou haddest an allwaye slayne my choyse, equalinge the feare of thy hande, and sayde ouer the death whan thou wast dyest: for the heart of thy conuenaunce.

The rewarde of thy wōrdome shalbe compensated the in thy bosome, therfore shal thou reccoue 7 rewarde.

4. Like as thou hast done vnto my chosen (ye)th the LORDE I woe so shal God do vnto to the. And the LORD deliuer the in to the plague.
 Thy dylow shal bye of hunger, & thou shalt full thowm of suerde. Thy cities shal be destroyed, & all thine shal perish w the swerto in of fyre. They y be in of mortuaynes shal bye of hunger, & eate their owne flesh, & drin-ke their owne bloude for very hōger of hietyn of water. Thou vnhappie shalt com-showm the sic, & cease plague agayne.

In the passages they shall cast downe the theye case, & shal rote out one parte of y for to assume the poicion of thy glory. They shal eate the downe like stubble, & they shal be thy fyre and shal consume the: thy cities and thy londe, thy wood & thy fruce full trees shal they burne up with the fyre. Thy dyltow shal they carry awaye captiue, and loke what thou hast, they shal spoyle it, and marke the breuic of thy face.

The XLV. Chapter.

1. When thou shalt see the Babylon & Asia, wch to y Egypte & Syria gyde yd selnes w clothes of sack & haye, and mourne for your childre, be sory, for yd destruction is at hande. A swerde is sent vpon yo, & who wil turne it backe? A fyre is kynd w amōge yo, & who wil quench it? Plagues are sent vnto yo, & what is he that wil dry-ve them awaye? Na ye eny man dryue awaye in hōger hye in the wood. Or maye eny mā quench the fyre in the stubble, whan it hath begonne to burne? Na ye one turne agayne the arrowe, y is shot of a stronge archer.
 The myghtie LORDE sendeth the plagues, & what is he that wil dryue them awaye? The fyre is kyndled & gone forth in his wra-che, & what is he that wil quench it? He shall cast lightninges, & who shall not feare? He shal thonder, and who shall not be afrayd? The LORDE shal thunders, & who shall not utter hie beaten to powder at his presence? The earth quake, & the foundations thereof: y for arych up w waters from the depe, and the fountes of it are w anyeere, & the fishes that of alld before the LORDE, & before the glory of his power. For stronge is his ryght hande that holdeth the borne, his arrowes that be sharpe, are sharpe, & shall not mysse, whan they begynne to be shot in to y endes of the worlde.

2. Beholde, y plagues are sent, & shal not turne agayne, till they come vpon earth. The fyre is kyndled, & shall not be put out, till it consume the foundations of the earth. Like as an arrowe which is shot of a myghtie archer, returneth not backwarde, enen so y plages y shal be sent vpon earth, shal not turne agayne. Woe is me, woe is me, wch wy deli-uer me in these dayes? The begynnyng of sore woe & greates mourninge: the begynnyng of deeth & greates deathe: the begynnyng of wraete, & the powere shal flout a w furathe of the begynnyng of euill, & they shal tremble euery one. What shal y do in these thinges, whan the plagues come? Beholde, hōger and plague, & trouble & angurysch are sent, as scourges for an enenemen. Dur for all these thinges they shal not turne frō their wickednesses, ne be allwaye mynde full of y scōmges.

Beholde, vitayles shal be so good cheape vpon earth, & they shal chynke the m foles to be in good case, and enen then shal myche growe vpon earth, wraete, deeth & greates di-quicities. For many of them that dwell vpon earth shall perish of hōger, & the other shal escape the hunger, shal the swerde destroye & the deeth shal be cast out as donge, & there shal be no man to cōsōrte them. For y earth shal be wastid, & the cities shal be cast downe: there shal be no man left to ryll y earth to sowe it. The trees shal growe frute, & who shal plucke the of & gather them? The grapes shal be ripe, & who shal treade the? For all places shal be desolate of me, so that one man shal desyre to se another, or to heare his voyce. For of one whole cite there shal be ten left, & two in the silde, which shal hyde the silde in the chide of bushes, & in the dyffee of stones: like as whan there remaine the of foure olues vpon the olyue tre, or as whan a vynyarde is gathered, there are left some grapes, of them that diligently soughe the: so the vynyarde.

2. Uen so in these dayes there shal be the of foure left, for the y searche the houses w the swerde. And the earth shal be left wastid, & the silde thereof shall wase albe: and his wayes and all his pathes shal growe full of thornes, because no man shal trowe y there thowm. The daughters shal mourne, hainge no hydegrome: the wemen shal make la-mentacion, hauyng no husbandes, their daughters shal mourne, hainge no helpe of their hydegrome. In the wraete shal they be destroyed, & their husbandes shal perish of hunger. O ye seruantes of the LORDE, heare these thinges, & marc the. Beholde, the wraete of the LORDE, & receaue it be-holde, the plagues drawe nye, & are not slack in taryng. Like as a traunying woman, which a few y r. moneth brygth forth a sonne, whan the houre of the byrth is come, an heare two or thre a foire that the paynes come vpo hir body, & whan the childe cometh to the byrth, they tary not the cawkinge of an eye: but so shall not y plaiges be slack to come vpon earth, & the wolde shal moue me, & forowen shal come vpo it on euery syde.

E O my people, heare my worde, make you reb to the baxayll: & in all euell be euen as pygmes vpon earth. he y sellerh, let him be as he that flych his waye: & he y byrth, as one that wil lefe. Who so occupieth marchandises, as he that wynerh not: & he that buydeth, as he that shall not dwell therein: he that soweth, as one y shal not reape: he that wynteth the vnyarde, as he that shal not gather the grapes: they that mary, as they that shall geue no children: they y may ry not, as the wyddowes: & they for they y labour, labo' in vayne. For straungers shall reape their frutes, & spoyle their goodes, euer thow their houses, & eate their childe' captyue, for in captiuyte & honger shal they geue chylde. And they that occupie their marchandises of robbery, how longe dede they thir cities, their houses, their possessions & persones: the more wil I panysh them for their synnes, sayeth the LORDE. Like as an wbeic enuytch an honest woman, so shall righteounesse hate iniquyte, whan she decteth hir self, and shall accus her to hir face, whan he cometh that defendeth, which shal make iniquytie for all synne vpo earth. And therfore be not ye like there vnto, ner to the woordes therof: for or euer it be longe, iniquite shalbe taken awaye out of the earth, and righteounesse shal raigne amonge you.

S Let not the synner saye, that he hath not synned: for coles of fyre shal burne vpon his heade, which saierh before the LORDE God & his glory: I haue not synned. Beholde, the LORDE knoweth all y workes of men, their ymaginacions, their thougthes & their herites. For he spaketh but the worde: let the earth be made, & it was made: let the heauens be made, & it was made. In his worde were y starres made, & he knoweth the nombre of them. He searcheth the grounde of the depe, & the treasures therof he hath measured the see, & what it containeth. He hath shut the see in the myddest of the waters, and w' his worde hath he hanged the earth vpon the waters. He spredeth out the heauen like a vowe, vpon the waters hath he founded it. In the deserte and drye wyldernes hath he made spynges of water, and peles vpo the toppe of the mountaynes, & the foudes might poure downe from y stony rockes to water the earth. He made man, and put his birt in the myddest of y body, and gaue him bush life and vnderstandinge, & he the synner of y Almighty God, which made all thinges, and hath searched the greddes of all the secrettes of the earth.

He knoweth youre ymaginacions & inclinations, and what ye thynke: whan ye synne, & wolde hyde youre synnes. Therefore hath y LORDE searched and soughte out all y workes, and he shal betraie ye out all. And whan yf synnes are broughte forth, ye shalbe punished before men, and youre owne synnes shal be youre accusers in that daye. Whan wy do: O how will ye hyde youre synnes before God and his angell. Beholde, God himself is the iudge, feare him, leaue off from you synnes, and forger youre vnyghteousnesse, and meke reuocare with them: so shal God be youe foith, and be your yeuer from all trouble. For beholde, the heare of a great multitude is kyndled ouer you, and they shal take awaye certayne of you, and they shal take ydoles and they that comen vnto them, shal be had in derision, laughed to scorne, & wroden vnder foote.

For vnto the places there shalbe a place, and in the meze cities a greates insurrection vpon those that feare y LORDE. They shal be like mad men, they shal spare no man: they shal spoyle and wast feche as hunteth LORDE, their goodes shall they take from them, and shute them out of their houses. Then shal it be knowne who are my chylde, & they shalbe tryed as the golde in the fyre. Heare O ye my beloued, saierh the LORDE: beholde, the dayes of trouble are at hand, but I wil be your yeuer from the same. Be not ye a fraied, dispaire not, for God is your euer yeuer.

Who so kepech my commandmentes and preceptes (saierh the LORDE God) let not youre synnes weye you downe, & let not youre vnyghteousnesse be lift up. Wo be vnto they that are subdued vnto their synnes, and tangled in their wickednesse: like as a felde is hedged in with busshes, and the pach therof covered with thornes, & no man maye traunyle thowward so is he taken, and cast in the fyre, and burne.

The booke of Tobias.

Wher this booke conteyneth.

Cap. I. Of the kynne, life and godly conuersation of Tobias.

Cap. II. The lowlyng composition that Tobias found in buryng the dead, for the which cause he is hated and persecuted. God mercifully his wife Mirram. His wyfe casteth him in prison.

Cap. III. Tobias prayeth betwixt vnto God, for the miserable and captiuitie of himself and the people of Sassa the daughter of Raguel.

Cap. IIII. Tobias reacheth his soules in the fear of God.

Cap. V. The soules obeyeth the father, and goeth his seruice. God promyseth mercifully for his soules, and sendeth his angell to be his gyde.

Cap. VI. In their iourney they take a fild, wherof the angell commaundeth him so to kepe the best, the gull and the leuce, and calleth him wherof it is good.

Cap. VII. They come to Raguel, which receaue them lowlyng, and marrieth his daughter Sassa vnto Tobias.

Cap. VIII. Tobias goyng to bed with his wyfe, sendeth himself as the angell had him, and so both he and his wyfe are preserued from euill.

Cap. IX. Tobias smothereth the angell vnto Sassa for the moony.

Cap. X. Tobias father and mother luge for his conyng. And Raguel syngeth that he can sepe him no longer, sendeth him awaie with his wyfe.

Cap. XI. They retorne home, and are welcomed ioyfully. Oude Tobias hath his sight agayne. They reioyce altogether, and geaseth he vnto God.

Cap. XII. The father and the sone wolde saye, and reuoceth the angell. Searcheth nothinge but how they maye be se.

Cap. XIII. Tobias the elder prayeth God, & excometh other men, so be thankefull vnto him.

Cap. XIII. Tobias beyng now olde, prophesieth the destruccid of Ninus, and the prosperous health of Israell. The same forsaketh the sin full cite, as his father had him, & goeth to his father in leue.

The first Chapter.

Tobias was of the trybe and cite of Nephtali, which lyeth in the hye countrees of Galilee aboue Tiason the waye to ward the west, hannyng the cite of Tipher upon the left syde.

Though he was taken prisoner in the daye of Salmanasar kynge of the Assirians, nevertheless beyng in captiuitie, he forsooke yf waye of traeth: In so much that what so euer he might geet, he parted it dai lye with his slouppesons & brethren, that were of his kynne. And though he were yonger the all in the trybe of Nephtali, yet dyd not he behaue himselfe dubiously in his moste. And when all the other wente to y gold calnes, which Jeroboam the kynge of Israel had made, he himselfe alone fled all their companies, and gat him to Ierusalem vnto the temple of the LORDE, and there worshipped yf LORDE God of Israel, faith fully offeringe all his first frutes and tribes, so that in the thirde year he ministred all the tribes vnto the strangers and conuertes. These and such like thinges dyd he accordinge to the laue of God, when he was yet but yong.

But when he was a man, he toke out of his owne trybe a wyfe called Anna, and of her he begat a sone, whom he called after his owne name, and taught him from his yowth vp, to feare God, and to refraine from all synne.

Now when he with his wyfe, his sone and with all his kynne was come in captiuitie vnto Ninus, what tyme as they all ate of the meates of the swethe, he kepte his soule, and was neuer desyred in their meares. And for so much as he was mynde full of the LORDE in all his herte, God gaue him fauour in the persence of Salmanasar the kynge, which gaue him power to go wher he wolde, and so had he liberte to do what him list.

So wente Tobias vnto all them that were in prison, and comforted them, and gaue them wholesome exortacions. And when he came to Raguel a cite of the Medea, hannyng generalites of syluer: of yf thinges wher with the kynge had honoured him, and some amonge a greate company of people of his kynne, one Sabelus (which was of his owne trybe) beyng in necessite, he gaue him the sayde weighe of syluer vnder an hand writinge.

After a longe season when Salmanasar the kynge was dead, and Sennacharib his sone reigned in his steade, which hated the children of Israel, Tobias wence dayly the row out: all his kynne, and comforted them, and gaue of his goodes to euery one of the, as much as he mighte: he set the hongre, clothed the naked, and buried the dead and slaine, and that diligently.

And when Sennacharib the kynge came agayne and fled out of Jewry: what tyme as God purysed him for his blasphemie: in his wrath slew many of the children of I rnel, Tobias buried their bodie. But when it was tolde the kynge, he commaunded to slaye him, and take awaye all his goodes. Therforthe Tobias with his sonne & with his wife fled his waye, and was hyd naked, so there were many that leued him. But after sth. dayes the kynge was slayne of his owne sonne. Then came Tobias agayne to his house, and all his goodes were restored into him.

The ii. Chapter.

154. a. b
Mac. 1. b
D See these thinges vpon a selempe daye of the LORDE Tobias made a good feast in his house, & sayde vnto his sonne: Go y waye & buyng hit her some of ourte trybe, such as feare God, that they maye make mery with vs. And wha he was gone, he came agayne, and tolde his father, that one of the children of Israhel slayne slayne vpon the streer. And immediatly he leape from his table, leste the feast, came fastinge to the deede coarfe, toke him & bare him pauerly in to his house, & when the Sonne was downe, he mighte safely burye him. And wha he had hyd the coarfe, he ate his meate with mourninge and feare, remembryng of y^e oade, that the LORDE sayeth by the prophet Amos: your be shaffes shalbe turned to so rowe and heuyes.

154. b
D But when y Sonne was downe, he wente his waye & buried h m. Then all his neghbare reuoued him, sayenge: It is not legge, sens it was commaunded to slaye the because of this matter, and hast scarce escaped the daunger of death, and buriedest thou the deede agayne. Therforthe Tobias fearyng God more then the kynge, toke the bedies of the slayne, hyd them in his hoose, & buried them at mydnyght.

154. b
nd. 1. a
D It happened vps a daye, that he had buried y deyd, & was mery, came home, & layed him downe by the wall & slepe. And whyte he was a slepe, there fell downe vps his eyes warme donge our of the swalowes nest, so y he was blynde. This temacion byd God suffre to happen vnto him, that they which came after, mighte haue an example of his pacience, like as of holy Job. For in so much as he euer feared God from his youth up, & kepte his commandementes, he was not he by agaynst God, that the plague of blyndnes chaused vnto him, but remayned steadfast in the feare of God, and thanked God all the dayes of his life.

D For like as blessed Job was had in derision of kynge, euen so was he laughed to scoome of his eldres & kynnesmen, which say-be vnto him: where is thy hope, for y which thou hast done allmes and buriedest her? But Tobias rebuked the, & sayde: Saye me so, for we are the children of holy men, & laboure for the life, which God shal geue unto them, whaer euer turne their bedes from him. Inna his wife werne daylye to the prayng worke, & toke what saynges she coulde gete in the laboure of hir handes, she broughte it. And it happened y she toke a Eyd and broughte it henn.

And when hir husband had it crike, he sayde: Iste y it be not stollen, restus it agaync to the owners: for it is not lawfull for us to eate oi to touch any thinge of thes. This was his wife angrie, and sayde: Let y thy hope be come vayne openly, & thy almes by des byd she cast him in the tymb.

D Then Tobias toke a herd, & mares became to make his prayer sayenge: O LORDE, thou art righteous, all thy iudgements are true, yett all y we praye are mercy, faithfulness & iudgment. And now O LORDE be mynde full of me, & take no mygeance of my synnes, necher remembur my synnes her y my synnes of my eldres, for we haue nor bene obediēt vnto y commandementes, therfore are we payed, broughte in to captiuitie, in to derision & shame vnto all nacions, amonge whos thou hast iudged vs. And now O LORDE, y iudgements are greate, for we haue not done acordinge y commandementes, necher haue we walkt in nocetylyte fore y. And now O LORDE, but le with me acordinge to thy wil, & commaunde me my spere to be receaued in peace, for me recepitte it ere it lo me to bye, the colpe.

At the same tyme it happened, that Sara the daughter of Raguel at Ages rece of y Nibes was slambred of one of her fathers hant maybes, namely, that she shalbe haue had sizen husbandes, which as so ne as they were called in vnto hir, were slayne of the deuell galle Amodeus. Therfor when she repoued the mayben for hir wete, she answerde her, sayenge: God let vauer se sonne ner daughters of the moore vnto earth, thou kyller of thy husbandes. And thou slay me also, as thou hast slayne sizen men: At this voyce were Sara into an hy chamber of hir house, and there dayes and thre nightes she necher ate ner drate, but tynued in prayer, and besoughe God with teares, that he wolde deliuer her from the rebuke.

Upon the thirde daye it chaunced, that when she had made an ende of hir prayer, she purged the LORD, sayinge: Blessed be thy name O God of Israhel, which when thou art wroth, shewest mercy, and in the tyme of trouble thou forgiveness the synnes of them that call upon the. Vnto the LORD I name I my face, vnto the life I vp my prayer. I beseech of O LORD, loose me out of the bondes of this rebuke, or els take me awaye fro of y^e earth. Thou knowest LORD, that I neuer had desyre vnto man, and that I haue kepte my soule cleane from all vncleyn lust. I haue not kepte company with those that passe their tyme in spoite, neither haue I made my self partaker with them that walke in lighte behaouour. Therefore an husbande haue I consented to take, not for my pleasure, but in thy feare.

Now peradventure either I haue bene worthy of them, or els were they vniuerse sinne, for thou happy hast kepte me to and ther husbande. For w^h y^e thy counsell is not in y^e power of man. But w^h so euer loueth the and striveth the a righte, is sure, that yf his life be tempered and p^rened, it standeth in the tryngge; and yf he endure in patience, he shall haue a reward, and be h^lie crowned: and yf he be in trouble, that God (no doute) shall deliuer him: and yf his life be in chastite, that he shall haue leue to come vnto thy mercy.

For thou hast no pleasure in oure dampnation: why? a fiere a storme thou makest y^e wether saine and still: after wepinge and weynes thou gaeest greace to ye. Thy name O God of Israhel, be praised for euer. At the same tyme were both their prayers herde in the sighte of the magesty of the h^liest God. And Raphael the holy angel of the LORD was sent to helpe the both, whose prayers came together before God.

The iii. Chapter.

So whā Tobias thoughte his prayer to be herde, that he mighte dye, he called vnto him his sonne Tobias, & saide vnto him: My sonne, heare the wordes of my mouth, and laye the in thine hert as a fundacion. When God taketh awaye my stak, vnto thou my body, & helde thy mouth in honoure all the dayes of his life. For thou oughtest to remember, what and howe many perils she suffred for y^e in hir wode, and whā she al^l her hard fulfilled the tyme of her life. bury her besyde me. Haue God in thy thoughte all the dayes of thy life, & beware, lest at any tyme thou chert vnto synne, and lest thou let slippe the commaundmentes of the LORD Loue God.

Woe allmes of thy goodes, and turne ne vnto thy face from the poore: and so shalt it come to passe, that the face of the LORD shall not be turned awaye from the. Be mercifull afeer y^e power. If thou hast much, geue plentifully: yf thou hast litle, do thy diligence, gladlye geue of that litle. For so gatherest thou thy self a good reward in the daye of needfull. For allmes deliuereth frō death, & suffreth not the soule to come in darcknes. A greace comforte is allmes before the h^le God, vnto all them that do it.

My sonne, kepe the well from all who do me, and besyde thy wife se that no faure be knowen of the. See neuer syde haue rule in thy nynde ner in thy worde, for in pyttee be game all destruction.

Who so euer worketh any thinge for the, immudially geue him his h^le, and loke that thy h^le seruauntis w^h geue remaine not by the ouer righte. Loke that thou neuer do w^h to another the a righte, the thinge that thou wouldest not anotheer mā shalde do vnto the. Let thy h^le beed with the hongrie and poore, and cover the naked with thy clothes. See thy h^le and wyne vpon the buryall of the righteous, and do not thou ease and synne the of w^h the synners. Be euer counsellat y^e wyse.

Be allwaye than full vnto God, & than se the him, that he will orde thy wayes, & than what so euer thou desirest or callest in hande, it maye remaine in him. I certise the also my sonne, that (whā thou wast yet but a baby) I deliuered ten talentes of syluer vnto Gabriel, at Rages a cite of the Medes, & his handwrytinge haue I byme. And therfor se the some mannes, howe thou mayest come by him, & receaue of him y^e sayde weightes of syluer, and geue him his handwrytinge agayne.

My sonne, be not a fraye: truste it is, we lebe here a poore life: but greace good shall we haue, yf we feare God, and departe from all synne, and do well.

The V. Chapter.

Then answered Tobias his father, & saide: father, all that thou hast comaundd me, and I do, and that diligently. But how I shal requyre this money, I can not tell. I rather doth he knowe me, ne I him. What token shal I geue him? And as for the waye thither, I neuer knewe it. Then his father answered him, and sayde: I have his hand writing by me, which when thou shalt see, immediately he shall paye thee. But go thy waye now, & get the some sayde full mthy go with y for an hie, that thou mayest receive yf money, whyle I am yet livinge.

B Then wente Tobias out, & upon the streete he founde a saye yonge man standinge, gyved up, and so it were one ready to take his iourney. And he knewe not that it was an angell of God, but saluted him, and sayde: From whence art thou, thou good yonge man? he answered: Of the children of Israel.

And Tobias sayde unto him: knowest thou the waye, that lecheth unto the countrey of Media? he answered: I knowe it well, and all those streres haue I gone of tyme, and haue lodged with oure brother Gabelus, that dwelleth in Ragas a cite of Media, which lyeth upon the mount Agabthania. Tobias sayde unto him: I praye thee, carrye some, tyl I haue tolde my father these thinges. Then wente Tobias in, and tolde his father all. He yf which his father marueled, & prayed, that he wolde come in unto him.

C Wro when the angell came in, he saluted him, and sayde: Ioye be with the for evermore. And olde Tobias saide: what ioye can I haue, that syt here in darcknes, & se not the light of heauen? The yonge man sayde unto him: Be of good cheare, God shal helpe the shoudy. And Tobias sayde unto him: Canst thou bringe any some to Gabelus, wnto the cite of Ragas in Media? And when thou comest agayne, I shal paye the thy hye. And the angell sayde unto him: I shal lede thy some, and bringe him to the agayne. Then Tobias answered him: Tell me I praye thee, of what house, or of what trybe art thou?

The angell Raphael sayde unto him: Rest thou a fter the kyned of an hyielinge, or sekest thou a gyde for thy sonne to go with him? But that I make the noe carefull, I am Azarias the some of greate Hanania. And Tobias answered: Thou art come of a greate kyned, but I praye y, be not displeasid, that I desired to knowe thy kyned. The angell sayde unto him: Thy sonne shal I lede to the safely, and bringe him whole to the agayne.

Then answered Tobias, and sayde: well, go on your waye, and God be in your iourney, and his angell beare you company. So when they had prepared all thinges, & they wolde take with them in their iourney, Tobias had his father & his mother fare well, and they wente on their waye togeder. Wro when they were gone, his mother beganne to wepe, and sayde: The best of our cage hast thou taken awaye, and leaue him from vs.

Wolde God that money had neuer bene, for the which thou hast sent him awaye. If we had bene content wth of power, thou haddest greate riches unto vs, that we stoude some here. Then sayde Tobias unto her wepe not, our some shall come to us agayne safe and sounde, & thine eyes shall see. For I craue that y good angell of God shal beare him company, and orde well all the thinges that he doth: so that he shal come to us agayne with ioye. At these wordes his mother leste off fro wepyng, & held her tongue.

D The vi. Chapter.
Tobias wente on his waye, and dogg solo wed him, and yf forsight they abode by the water of Egipt. Then wente he out to wash his feet, and in halde, there came forth an horrible fish to moure him. Of which Tobias was affrayd, and cried with a loud voyce, sayinge: O DE, he cometh upon me. And the angell sayde unto him: Take him by the dextre side, and diame hime the. And he dyde so, and drewe him vps the londe, and the fish beganne to leape at his feete.

The sayde the angell unto him: Take the bowels of this fish, and as for the herte, the gall and the leuer, kepe them by the. In these thinges are necessary and good for manye. Tobias dyd so, and rested the fish, and they toke him with them in their iourney: the residue they salced, as much as was sufficient for them, all they came to Ragas. Then Tobias asped the angell, and sayde unto him: I praye y brother Azarias, tell me, what are these thinges good of the fish, that thou hast bydden me kepe?

The angell answered him and sayde: If thou layest a pece of the herte vpon the eales, the smoke therof dryueth awaye all manner of euill spirits, whether it be from man, or from woman, so that from thence forth some shal come no more unto them. The gall is good to anoynte or to strake yf eyes with all, where as there is any blemish in them, shal they be whole.

And Tobias sayde unto him: when shall I then see mye maier? The angell answered and sayde: Here is a nye kynsman of thine, named Raguel by name, which hath a daughter called Sara, & hath nether sonne nor daughter neither. All his good belongeth vnto the, and thou must marry his daughter: and ther for desire her at her father, and he shall ge ue her to the wife. Then answered Tobias & saide: As I vnderstande, she hath bene mar ried vnto Isean husband, and they all are dead: and I haue herde saye, that the deuell slaw them. I am afrayd therfore, lest such things happen vnto me also: which yf it ca me to passe (singe I am the onely sonne of my father and my mother) I shulde bringe thein in their age, w^{ch} soeuer to their graues.

D Then sayde the angell Raphael vnto him: feare me, and I will tell the, what they be of whom the deuell hath power. Namely, they that receiue marriage of such a falsed, that they shew God our from the and from Le their her, and geue them selues to their ow ne lust, euen as it were an hoise and Moole, which haue no vnderstandinge: vpon such hath I deuill power. But when thou takest her, and art come in to the chamber, withhol de thy self from her thre daye, and geue thy 143 diligence vnto nothinge but vnto prayer with her.

And in the first nighte roste the leuer of the fish, and the deuell shalbe dreyed awaye. The second nighte shalt thou be receiued in to the company of the holy patriarches. The thirde nighte shalt thou opeyne the blessinge of God, so that thow whole children shalbe borne of you. After the thirde nighte take the mayden in the shure of God, and more for the desyre of children, then for any fleshy lust: that in the shure of Abraham thow mayest opeayne the blessinge in children.

The VII. Chapter.

3 Then wente they in to Raguel, which receiued them ioyfully. And when Raguel looked vpon Tobias, he say de vnto Anna his wife: how like is this yon ge man vnto my sisters sonne. And when he had spoken this, he saide: when ce be ye good bruders? They saide: Of the citye of Teph sali, out of the captiuyte of Ninine. Then saide Raguel vnto them: knowe ye my bro ther Tobias? They saide: yee, we knowe him well. And when he had spoken moche good of him, the angell sayde vnto Raguel: To bais of whom thou spekest, is this yonge ma saba. Then Raguel bowed him self downe, and wept, & ke him aboute the necke, and kysed him, and sayde: Gods blessinge haue 144 thou my sonne, for thou art the sonne of a go od vertuous man. And Anna his wyfe and Sara his daughter wepte also.

141 T To whom they had called together, Ra guel had Tyl a wetter, and to make a staff.
And whā he prayed the to syt downe to dy ner, Tobias sayde: I wil nether eate nor drin ke here this daye, excepte thou first graunte me my peticion, & permitt me to geue me thy daughter Sara. When Raguel herde this, he was astonnyed, for he knewe, what had happened vnto the other siben men, that w ce in vnto her: and he beganne to feare that it shulde chaunce vnto him also in like maner.

142 And whyle he stode so in doute, and gaue the yonge man no answer, the angell sayde vnto him: feare not to geue him thy daugh ter, for vnto this man that feareth God, be 166 gret thy daughter to wife, therfore might none other haue her.

The sayde Raguel: I doute not, but God 143 hath accepted my prayers, and reare in his sight: and I trust he caught you to come vnto me for the same intent, that this daughter of myne might be married in his owne byre and a coridinge to the lawe of Moyses. And nowe doute thou not, but I will geue her vnto the: So he toke the right hande of his daughter, and gaue her in to the right hande of Tobias, and sayde: The God of Abraham, the God of Isaac and the God of Jacob be with you, soyne you together, and fulfill his blessinge in you. And they toke a letter and made a writinge of the marriage. And then made they mery, and prayed God. And Ra guel called Anna his wife vnto him, and had her prepare another chamber, and thither he broughte Sara his daughter, and the recei ce. Then sayde he vnto her: We of good chea re my daughter, the LORD E of heauen ge ueth ioye, for the beynesse that thou hast suffred.

The VIII. Chapter.

145 Now after they had supped, they broughte the yonge man in to her. The angell thoughte Tobias vpon the wordes of the angell, and toke out of his bagg a pe ce of the leuer of the fish, and layde it vpon the hote coales. So the angell Raphael co ke holde of the deuell, and sent him awaye, and bounde him in the wyldemes of the byre the gippe. The spake Tobias vnto the virgin, and sayde: Op Sara, let vs make our pr yer vnto God to daye, to morrowe, and o uermorrow: for these thre nightes wil we recei ue cure stinnes with God: and when the thirde holy nighte is past, we shall soyne to gether in I deure of marriage, for we are the 146 children of holy men, and we maye not come together as the heathen, & knowe not God.

B Then spake they vp both together, and be a d soughte God earnestly, & he wolde perseue them. And Tobias sayde: O LORDE God of 6 fathers, praye for the soules of heauē & earth of the se, welle, & floues, & of all the creatures that be therein. Then maydest Adam of a b the mould of the earth, & gauest him Ena for an helper. And now LORDE thou knowest that it is not because of voluptuousnes, that I take this sister of myne to wyfe, but onely for the loue of children, in whom thy name be blessed for euer. And Sara sayde: haue mercy vpon vs. O LORDE, haue mercy vpon vs, and let vs both come whole and sounde to a good age.

C And aboute the cocke crowe, it happed, that Raguel called his seruantes, and they wete with him, to make a graue. For he sayde: it is chaunced vnto him peradventure, as it dyd vnto the other seuen men, that wete in vnto her. Now whā they had made the graue, Raguel came agayne to his wyfe, and sayde vnto her: sende one of thy maydes, to loke yf he be dead, that I maye burye him afore it be light daye.

So she sent a mayden to se, which whā she came in to the chamber, she founde them whole and sounde, slepyng together. And so she came agayne, & brought good tydinges.

D Then Raguel and Anna his wife prayed of LORDE, and sayde: prayed be thou o LORDE God of Israel, for it is not happened vnto vs, as we thought. For thou hast heale me a fully with vs, and put awaye from vs the enemye that persecuted vs, and hast shew mercy vnto yonder two beloued. O LORDE, cause the to magnifie the more perfectly, and to offere the the sacrifice of thy prayse, and of their healeth: that all people maye knowe, & thou only art God in all the earth.

E And immediatly Raguel commaunded his seruantes, to fill the graue, that they had made, with earth, afore it was light: and hade his wife prepare a feast, & to make ready all thynges that were necessary for meate, to such as wote byf waye. He caused two sate byne also and foure weathers to be slay-ne, & meates to be prepared for all his neighbours and frends.

And Raguel charged Tobias, to remayne with him two weekes. As for all the good he had, he gaue Tobias of one half of it, and made chyf wytynges, that the half which remained, shulde fall vnto Tobias a fter their death.

The IX. Chapter.

F Then Tobias called vnto him the angell, whom he thoughte to haue bene a man, and sayde vnto him. Good Zuaras, I praye the herell vnto my weate:
If I shulde geue myself to be yferruē, I shal not deserue y psonyence. I truste I beseeke the, that thou wilt take the bestis and the seruantes, and go vnto Gabelus in Raguel the cite of the Medes, and deli-uer him his hand wytynges, and receaue the money of him, and praye him to come to my riage. For thou knowest thyself what my sister calleth y daye: and yf I tarye one weeke longe, he wyl be sory in his mynde. Now seist thou how earnestly Raguel hath reuered me, so that I can not saye him nay.

Then wote Raphael some of Raguels seruantes, and two Camels, & wente vnto Raguel the cite of the Medes: and whā he founde Gabelus, he gaue him his hand wytynges, & receaued all y money. He toke also of Tobias y some of Toby, how all thes had happened, & caused him to commend him to y marriage. Now whā he came in to the house of Raguel, he founde Tobias sate at y table: & he leape vp, & they kysed one another, and Gabelus wept, and praised God, and sayde: the blessinge of the God of Israel haue thou, for thou art the sonne of a ryghte verueous & iust man, & of some y surely God, & geueth greates allmes. And blessinge haue y wif, and y elders, that y maye se y children, and yours childrens children, vnto the thirde and fourth generacion, and that yoursidemay be blessed of y God of Israel, whiche reigneth woulde without ende. And whā they all had sayde Amen, they wente to the feast, but with the feare of the LORDE, for they feare the feast of the marriage.

The X. Chapter.

QUOW whyle yge Tobias made carrye by reason of y marriage, his father was full of feare and heuyn, and thought: what shulde be the cause, that my sonne tarieth so longe? Or why shulde he be tepe so longe there? Peradventure he is dead, and no man wyl geue him the money. Thus begane he to be very foonfull, & Anna his wife with him, & begame to we-pe both together, because their sonne was not come agayne vnto them at the daye appointed. As for his mother, she wept and discomfutable reare, and sayde: Wo is me, my sonne: Oh what ayled we to sende the awaye into a strange countrey, then lighte of oure eyes, thou wast of foure age, thea comfite of oure life, thou hope of oure generacion.

saies all yf thinges that we haue are done in the, we shal not haue sent the awaye: from vs.

Then Tobias comforted her, and sayde:
hold thy tongue, and be not discomfited, ou er thou in whole and sounde: the man yf we see him withall, is faithfull yough. Let her thee she mighte in no wyse be comforted: but begyn weete our, loke aboute, and weete a boute alle the streets, wherby she thought he shude come agayne that yf it were possible) she mighte see him comynge a farre of.

But Raguel saide vnto his sonne I laue: Guary here, and I shall sende a messainger with my father Tobias, to tell him yf thou art in good health. Tobias saide vnto him: I am sure that my father and my mother commenry daye, and that their hertes are for.

When Raguel prayed Tobias wth ma rymothe, & he wolde in no wyse heare him, he deuyced Sara vnto him, & the half part of all his good: in seruantes and hand maide, in shepe, in camels, and in fyne and much money, and so sent him awaye from him with peace and ioye, and sayde: The ho ly angell of the LORDE be with you in you r iourney, and brynge you forth safe & soune in that yere, in shepe, and all thinges in good with yere childe, and that myne eyes myghte see your childe, a foie I yve.

So the elders embraced their daughter, hiss her and let her go, cryinge her to ho me her father and moether in lawe, to looe her husband, to rule well his hussholde, to haye her house in good order, and to shew hir his iusticte.

The XI. Chapter.

Now as they were goinge homewar de againe, vpon yf xi. daye they came to Charra, which lyeth in the half waye towarde Tinnac. And the angell say de vnto Tobias, thou knowest how thou hast thy father: therefore yf it please the, we will go before, and let the hussholde with thy wife and yf casell come softe & say le to us. And when Tobias was content that they shalde go before, Raphael sayde vnto him: Take of the gall of the fish with the, for it shal be necessary. So Tobias toke of the gall, and they wente their waye. But when the mother of Tobias sawe daylie by the waye she wept vpon yf toppe of an hill, from whence she mighte see farre aboute her.

And whyle she was waytinge there for him to come, she lete a farre of, and anon she perceaued his sonne comynge, and ran ne and tolde hir husband, sayynge: be holde, thy sonne cometh. And Raphael sayde vnto Tobias: As soone as thou comest in to the house, immediatly worshippe the LORDE thy God, and geue thantes vnto him: then go to thy father, and kysse him, & strake his eyes ouer the gall of yf fish, that thou hast broughte with thee. For be sure, that his eyes shal straightlye be opened, and thy father shal see the lighe of heauen, and shal reioyse at the sighe of thee. Then the dogg that had bene with them in their iourney, rane before, and came as a messainger, and wagged with his taile for gladnesse.

So yf blinde father arose, and beganne to come, and stembled with his feet, and gaue a seruant his hande, ranne to meete his sonne, receaued him, and kysed him, he and his wife, and beganne to wepe for ioye.

Now when they had worshipped & than ked God, they satte downe. Then toke Tobias of the fishes gall, and anointed his fathers eyes: and dearely half an houre, and then beganne the blessing to go out of his eyes, like as it had bene the whyle flyme of an egge whiche Tobias toke and drewe from his eyes, and immediatly he receaued his sighte.

Then they prayed God, he and his wife, and all they that knew him. And Tobias say de: O LORDE God of Israell, I geue the pray se and thantes, for thou hast chastened me, and made me whole. And so, now do I see my sonne Tobias. After seuen dayes came Sara his sonnes wife also whole and sounde with all yf household and cattell, with camels and much in money of his wyues, and with the mo ney that he had receaued of Gabelus: and he tolde his father and his mother all the be nefices, which God had done for him, by the man that led him. Achior also and Tabath Tobias sister sonnes came and were glad, & reioysed with him, by reason of all the good that God had shewed vnto him.

And so for yf space of seuen dayes they ma de mery, and were right ioyfull euery one.

The XII. Chapter.

Then Tobias called his sonne vnto him & sayde: What maye we geue this ho ly man, that weete with thee? Tobias answered his father and sayde: Father, what rewardes shal we geue him? Or what thinge can deserue his benefices? He hath bene my gyde, and brought me safe agay ne: he receaued the money from Gabelus, he caused me to get my wife, he drove the enell space from her, he hath bene occasiō of glad nesse to hir father and mother: he deliuered me, that I was not deuoured of the fish, he hath made the rose the lighte of heauen, yet we all haue receaued greates good of him.

How shalde we worship deserte these thin-ges unto him: And I praye the my father, that thou wilt desyre him, yf haplye he will vouchsafe, to take with him the half of all that we haue broughte.

B So the father and the sonne called him, to ke him asyde, and beganne to praye him, that he wolde be content to take in good mouth, the half parte of all that they had broughte.
Then sayde he secretly vnto them: Prayse God of heauen, and geue thankes vnto him for alle men's ymunge, for he hath shewed his mercy vnto vs. It is good to hyde the Kynges secretes, but to shew and to prayse the workes of God, it is an honorable thinge.
Prayer is good with fasting, and to geue almes is better, then to hooude vpreasures of golde. For almes deliuereth from deatch, defendeth synne, and causeth to synde euertast-inge life. But they that do synne and vni-tyous couises, are enemies of their owne soules.

Somere
be vnto
you.

est with teares, and buryest the deed, and ledest thy byner, and hydest the deed in thy house vpon the burye cyme, that thou might-est burye them in the night, I offered thy prayer before the LORDE. And because thou wast accept and beloned of God, it was necessary, that temptation shulde trye the. And now hath the LORDE sent me to heale the,
and to deliuer Sara yf somes wife from the euell spere. For I am Raphael an angell, one of the seven that stonde before God.

D Whā they herde this, they were sore as-tonyde, and trembled, and fell downe vpon their faces vnto the grounde. Then sayde the angell: Peace be with you, feare not. Where as I haue bene wth you, it is the will of God, geue prayse and thankes vnto him.

Gen. 28. a

For though he had I byd eate and drinke with you, but I wst meate that is iruisible, and drinke that can not be sene of men.

How therfore is y^e tyme that I must turne agayne, vnto him that sent me: but be ye thankfull vnto God, and tell out all his won-derous workes.

And whā he had spoken these wordes, he was taken a waye out of their sight, so y^e they sawe him nomore. Then fell they down flat vpon their faces by the space of thre houres, and prayed God: and when they rose vp, they tolde all his wonderous workes.

Then XIII. Chapter.

Then olde Tobias opened his mouth, and prayed the LORDE thus saying: Create art thou O LORDE succourer, and thy kyngdome woulde worship the for thou scourgest and healest the blindnesse to hell, and buyest out a gayne, and thou none y^e maye scape thy hande. O how thinkes vnto y^e LORDE ye children of Iuda, and prayse him in the sight of the heathen. I wst monge the heathen which knowe him not, hath he scattered you, to the ende that y^e shal be shew forth his maruelous workes: I wst them for to knowe, that there is none other God all mighte but he. Ye had chastyshed vs for our mynnes, and for his owne cyste shal be saue vs.

Consider then, how he hath dealt wth you, prayse him with feare and dute, and magnifie the euertastinge kyngdome in y^e wozde.

I wil prayse him euen in the leude of my captiuitie, for he hath shewed his mercy in to a synfull people. Turne you therfore y^e synners, and do rightuousnes as before the LORDE, and be ye iust, that he wyl shew his mercye vpon you. As for me, my soule, me and my in God. O prayse the LORDE all ye his ser-uants, holde the dayes of gladnesse, and be thankfull vnto him. O Ierusalem thou cite of God, the LORDE hath purged the synne workes of thine owne handes. O prayse the LORDE in thy good thinges, and geue thanks to the euertastinge God, that he maye build up his tabernacle agayne in y^e, that prayse call agayne vnto the, all such as be in captiuetye, and that thou mayest haue ioye for uermore. With a sayre lighte shal thou shyne, and all y^e endes of y^e world shal bowe the. The people shal come vnto the from iust, they shal bringe giftes, and worship y^e LOR-DE in the, and thy loude shal they haue for Sanctuary, for they shal call vpon the
for euer.

Curseth shal they be that despise the, and they that blasphemethe, shal be condempned: but blessed shal they be, y^e bowde the vp. Be for the, thou shalt reioyse in y^e childre, for they all shal be blessed, and gathered to geuerne to the LORDE. Blessed art they all y^e lowly, and be glad of thy peace. Prayse thou the LORDE O my sonne, for the LORDE our God hath deliuered his cite Ierusalem from all hir troubles. I wil counte my self happy, if my sode remyne to se y^e clearenes of Ierusalem.

The gates of Ierusalem shall be buyded with Sapphyre and Smaragde, and all the space of his walles with precious stones. And the streets shall be paved with wythe Marbles, and in all his streets shall Alldays be kepte. Daryed be y LORD E, which hath created her, & his Kingdome maye be upon her for evermore, Amen. And so Tobias made an ende of his talkinge.

The XIII. Chapter.

1 After that Tobias had gotten his sight againe, he lyved two and xl. years, & sawe his childers children. Now when he was an hundred and two yeare of his age, & was buried honorably in Tinnis. For when he was sixe and fiftie yeare of age, he lost the sight of his eyes, and when he was thre score yeare olde, he gat his sight againe. The residue of his lifel he in ioye, and increased well in the feare of God, & departed in peace.

2 But in y. heare of his death he called vnto him his sonne Tobias, & seven yonge spryngs his sones children, and sayde vnto them: The destruction of Tinnis is at hand, for the worde of the LORD E can not saye, I. and care his children that are scattered out of the shewes of Iudah, shal come thither againe. And the whole land of it that hath beene wast, shall be filled: and the house of God that was bene in it, shall be buyded againe, & all such as feare God shall retorne thither: the heithen also shal forsake their Idols, & come to Ierusalem, and dwell there, and all the kynges of the earth shall be glad of her, and worshippe the LORD E God of Iudah.

3 And therfore my children heare youre fathers: Bewe the LORD E in faithfulness, & do after his will, and do the thinge that pleaseth him. Commande youre children & they shall obeye, & allmes, be mynnefull of God, and care to be thankfull vnto him in truth, and with all their power. Heare me therfore my childer, and abyde not here: but in what daye I shall haue buried your mother be sith me, seee you from hence. For I see that the wickednes of it shal bringe it to destruction and ende.

4 After y. death of his mother, Tobias departed awaye from Tinnis, with his wife and children, and with his childers children, & came againe to his father and mother in lawe, and staid there whole and in a good age, and toke the care of the. And he closed thither eyes, and was beye vnto all Raguel's goodes, and sawe the fifth generation and thirtieth childer. And when he was sixty. year.

re of age, he dyed in the feare of the LORD E, and his wyff folowes buried him. And all his posterite continued in a good life, and holy conversation: so that they were loved & accepted both of God and men, and of all the people of the land.

 Rpharac the kynge of the Medes subdued many people vnto his domynion, & buylded a noble stygge cite, which he called Egbachanis. The wallis of it made he of fre stone, foure squared, square cubites hie, and threite cubites brode. He made towres thereupon of an hundred cubites hie. But vpon the foure corners emery syde was threite foote brode. He made the portes in the hery, like as the towres. This kynge trusted in his mighty hoost, & in his glorious charactes.

So in y threite yere of his reigne it hapened, that Nabuchodonosor kynge of the Assirians (which reigned in the greete cite of Ninus) foughte agaynst Rpharac, and querecame hi in y greete felde called Bagas, besyde Euphrates and Tigris and Iabason in the felde of Enoch the kyng of the Lidie.

 Then was the kynngdome of Nabuchodonosor exalted, and his bert was lift up: and he sent vnto all them that dwelt in Celiacia, in Damascus, in Libanus, and vnto the Chereth that dwelt in Carmel and Cedar, and to such as dwelt in Galile in the greete felde of Esdrael, to all them that were in Samaria, and beyonde the water of Iordane vnto Jerusalem and the whole londe of Jesse vnto the mountaynes of Ethiopia. Vnto all the feyde Nabuchodonosor the kynge of y Assirians sente messengers. But they all wone consent wolde not agree vnto him, and sente the messengers agayne impite, and pac the awaye wothout honoure. Then Nabuchodonosor the kynge rote indignaciō at all those londes, and sware by his trowe & by his kynngdome, that he wolde be auynged of all these countrees.

The ii. Chapter.

 In the xiiij. yere of kynge Nabuchodonosor, vpon the xxij. daye of y first moneth, it was beuiled in the court of Nabuchodonosor y kynge of the Assiria, that he wolde besyde himself. So he called vnto him all y elders, all his capteynes and men of warre, and shewed them his secret counsell, and tolde them, that his purpōse was, to buyng the whole earth vnto his domynion. Now when they were all comen wth this sayenge, Nabuchodonosor the kynge called Golofernes the chefe capteyne of his warres and saide vnto him: So thynke yow agaynst all the kynngdomes of the east and specially agaynst those that haue despyed my commaundement. Thou shalt haue no realme, all strange cities shall they buyng in subieccion vnto me.

Then Golofernes called together all the capteynes & rulers of all the power in Assiria, and mustred the souldyers vnto the hoost (like as the kynge commaunded him) namely, an hundred and threite thousand fightinge men upon foote, and twolue thousand archers vpon horsebacke. All his ordinaunce sent he be fore with an innumerable multitude of camels, so that the hoost was well payed for with oren, and small camell, and without nombre. So caused comen be payed out of all Syria for his hoost. Moch gad and shuler, a rok he one of the kynngs horse. So he toke his iourney, he and all his hoost, with charactes, busines, and ordens of whom there were so many, that they covered the grounde of the lande, like the grasshoppers.

And when he was gone paste the boden of the Assirians, he came comarde the greete mountaynes of Ange, which he vpon the lest syde of Celiacia: and so he wente up in all their castles, and wanne emery strong herte. As for y wylde cite of Melechom, he brake it downe, & spoyled all the chylde of the sye and the Ismaelites, which laye towards the wyldernes and vpon the south syde of y londe of Chalou. He wente ouer Euphrates also, and came in to Mesopotamia, and brake downe all the hie citie that were thre from the booke of Hambrayll a man com to the see: and he toke the bodens in from Celiacia vnto the coastes of Japhet towards the south. He carried awaye all the Nabathians, and spoyled all their goodes: & who so was wyldestode him, he slew them with the sword. After this he wente downe in to the felde of Damascus in the kynge of hartus, and heaued up all the corne and all the trees, and causeth the vynes to be cutt downe. And the fourth yere fell vpon all them that dwelt in y east

Soche kynge z pynces of all cities z londes sent their Embassours namely, they of Syria and Mesopotamia Syria Sobal z A ybia z Celicia, which came to Holofernes, z sayde: Let thy wylde wylde comarde vs: It is better for vs to serue the greake kynge Nabuchodonosor with our lyues, and to be subiecte vnto the, then that we shalde dye and be slayne, and receaue greake hurt. All oure cities and possessi- ons, all meanez and hilles, all felde, greake and small carell, shepe, goates, hors- es, and camels, all oure goodes and hous- holdes, be in thy power, vnder thy subiecti- on be it altogether. We oure selues also and our children wyll be thynne owne, come vnto vs a peacable londe, and vse oure seruaice at thy pleasur.

B Then came Holofernes downe from the mountaynes with hostes of greake power, and conquered all stronge fenced cities, and all that wylde in the londe. And out of all ci- ties he toke stronge men, z such as were me- fit for warre, to helpe him. There came sode- nly also vpon those countrees, that the in- habitants of all the cities, the pynces and ru- lers z the people together, were fowte to- gether as he came, z receaued him honora- bly with garlandes z torches, with daunces, tabourz and pipes.

C Auerdelo though they dyd this, yet mighte they not swage his rigorous stomack: he destroyed their cities, z berued downe their woddes. For Nabuchodonosor the kynge had commaunded him, that he shulde receaue all the goddes of the londe: to wylde that he onely mighte be called and ca- len for God, of the nacions which Holofernes with his power broughte vnder him. So went he thorow Syria Sobal, and thorow all Appamia, and all Mesopotamia, came to the Iudians in the lode of Sabaa and Susopol, and toke their cities, and rema- yned there thre dayes, wherein he causyd all the whole multitude of his hoost to be gar- banded together.

The liii. Chapter.

When the children of Israel sheweld in Jeruy herde this, they were sore afraied of him. There came sode- nly vnto them, and feare vpon them, that they feared to be shulde do vnto the cite of Jerusalem and the temple of the LORDE, as he had done to other cities z their temples. So they fene in to all Samaria for to be a- bou into Jericho, toke in and occupied all the toppe of the mountaynes, made fast the townes with walles, and prepared come for them agaynst the barnayll.

Eliachim also of prest wote vnto all the that dwelt toward Eliazalon (which lych- ouer agaynst y greake felde by Dotha Im) z vnto all those by whom men mighte haue passage vnto them, that they shulde take in the wayes of the mountaynes, wherby the- re mighte be eny waye and passage to Jeru- salem, z y they shulde holde diligent watch, wher eny strate waye was betwixte y most townes. And the children of Israel dyd, as Eliachim the prest of the LORDE had com- maunded them. And all the people, cryed ear- nestly, and humbled their soules with fastyn- ges and prayes, they and their wyues. The prestes put on hayie clothes, and layed the yonge babes before the temple of the LOR- DE, and covered the aulter of the LORDE with an hayie clothe. And with one acor- de cryed they vnto the LORDE God of Is- rael, that their children shulde not be gyven in to a pray, and their wyues in to a spoyle, y they cities shulde not be layd waste, z y their Sanctuary shulde not be vnhalowed, and so they to be a shame and rebuke vnto the heithen.

Then Eliachim the hie prest of the LOR- DE wente rounde aboute all Israel, and spake vnto them, sayenge: Be ye sure, the LOR- DE wil heare youre petitions, yf ye cōtinue stedfast in fastynge and prayre in yf sūche of the LORDE. Remembere Mofa the ser- uant of the LORDE, which overthrew y Amalechites (that trusted in their myght z power, in their hoost, in their shildes, in their charrettes z horsmen) not with weapens, but with holy prayes. Comen so shal all the ene- mies of Israel be, yf ye contynue in this wot- be, that ye haue begonne. So vpon this exor- tacion they contynued in prayr before the LORDE. In so moche that they which offered them sacrifices vnto the LORDE, stred the offerings vnto y LORDE, theynge arrayed in hayie clothes, and had asfites vpon their heates. And they all besought God from their whole hart, y he wolde vyset his peo- ple of Israel.

The V. Chapter.

Ald wote came to Holofernes the pynce of the warres of the Assyria, y the childre of Israel prepared them selues to make resstaunce. z how they had strepped the wayes betwixte the mountay- nes. Then was he receaued by them, z called all the pynces of Moab, z the capitaynes of Ammon, z sayde vnto them: Tell me, what people is this, & keepeth in the mountains: What manner of cities are they? What is their power? What manner of host hath they? Who is their captayne? And why do they despise vs (more then all those that dwell in the east) and come not forth to meete vs, & they might receaue vs with peace?

Then Achior the captayne of all the Ammonites answered, and saide: Sir, yf it please the ro beare me, I will tell the truth before the concerninge this people that dwell in the mountains, and there shall no lye go out of my mouth.

This people is of the generation of the Caldees, they dwelt first in Melipotamia, for they wolde not followe y goddesses of their fathers that were in the londe of the Caldees, so forsake they the customes of their fore fathers (which had many goddesses) and worshipped one God, that made heauē and earth: which also commaunded them that they shulde go from thence, and dwell at the ran. Now when they came a deth in to y whole londe, they came to come to Egipte, & there they dwelt foure hundred yeates, in y which they multiplied so greatly, that their host might not be nombred. And when the kynge of Egipte oppressed them, and subued the in buyldinge of his cities with many kynges of claye & bud, they cried vnto God their LORDE, which punished the whole londe of Egipte with dyuers plagues.

Now when the kynge of Egipte let the go their waye, & the plague ceased, & then followed after the, to take the, & to bringe the agayne in to his seruaice, whyle they were flyinge awaye, the God of heauē opened y sea, so y the waters stode fast vpon both the sydes as a wall, & these wente thorow the bottom of the sea drye shod. In the which place was an innumerable people of the Egiptians followed vpon them, they were so entred belmed with the waters, that there remained noe one, to tell the that came after, how it happened.

So when this people was passed thorow the reed sea, they came in to the wilderness of the mount Synai, where neuer man might dwell afore. There the sonne of mā had neuer rested. There were y bytter waters made sweete for the, that they mighte drynke, & yf yeares had they meate from heaue. Where so euer they wente (without doue & arewe, without bulker or swerde) their God foughte for the, & caused the to haue the victory. Yet no man was able to horre this people, except it were so, y they departed vnfaithfully from y worshippinge of the LORDE their God. But as oft as they worshipped any other besyde their God, he gaue them cause to be spoiled, to be slayne, & to be put to confusion. Fleuert holes as oft as they went for departinge from the worshippinge of their God, the same God of heauen gaue them power & strength to wiche the their enemies.

Moreover they slew the kynge of the Canaanites, Iobusites, Pherezians, Sychans, Reites & Amonites, & all y mightie in the londe, & took their lodes & cities in possession, so longe as they synned not in y sight of their God, & wrote well with them, for their they had such vnrighteousnesse. For in synne was when they wente out of y waye, which they had geuen them, & they shulde walke in, they were destroyed in dyuers battles of many nacions, & many of them were taken awaye prisoners into a strange countrey. But now lately they haue returned the silens agayne vnto the LORDE their God, & are come together agayne out of the countrey wher they were scattered abrode: and thus haue they conquered these mountains & builded therein as for Jerusalem wher their Synagogue is, they haue it againe in possession.

And therefore my lorde, make diligent iudicacion, yf this people haue done wickth in the sight of their God, then let vs go agaynst them, for doubtles their God shall requere them in to thy handes, & subdue them vnto y power. But yf this people haue not displeasid their God, we shall not be able to withstande them, for their God shall defende the, & so shall we be a shame to all y world.

Now when Achior had spoken out these wordes, all the princes of Helosimes were wroth, & thought to slaye him, & saide one to another: what is he this, which darre saye yf childe of Israel are able to wiche the? He hath done for the kynge & his host: what as they are an vnwarped people, without strength or understandinge of y force of warre? That Achior therefore maye knowe, y he hath displeasid vs, we will go up in to y mountains: & when the mightie men of the are to come, he also shall see the with the sword, & all people maye knowe, that Iudas the noble is the God of the earth, and that there is none other without him.

The VI. Chapter.

So when they had leif of speakinge, Helosimes roke fore in indignacion, & saide vnto Achior, for so much as thou hast prophesied vnto vs, say yng the people of Israel shall be destroyed of the God, I will shew thee, that there is no God but Tabuchodonosor. See whan we slaye any man all as one man, thou also shalt perish with them: thou also shalt be destroyed with the, & all Israel shall be destroyed with thee, & thou shalt perish like, that Tabuchodonosor hath. THE LORD OF the whole earth. The shall be the sword of my King: he shall goe thow of his, & thou shalt fall downe sickne among the wounded of Israel, & shall not come any self agayne, but be vnto destroyed.

Why dost thou chynest thy prophesie? Why dost thou chynest thy colour? Why art thou afraid? Thyng that my wordes are not able to be performed: But that thou mayest knowe, that thou shalt see these thinges with the, beholde, from this honre forth myll I sende thee yonder people, that whan the punishment of my sword (which they haue already deserued) falleth vpon them, thou mayest be punished with them.

So holofernes commaunded his seruantes to take Achior, & to carry him vnto Bethulia, and to deliuer him in to the handes of the children of Israel. Then holofernes sent to take him, & wote thow to the playe side. But whan they drem nyte vnto the mountayne, the syngers casters came out agaynst them: Tennercheles they gaue them away by the syde of the mountayne. & he was in Achior hand & foot to a tre, & so left him bounde with wythes, & carryed agayne vnto their loue.

For withstandinge the children of Israel came downe fro Bethulia, came vnto him, bound him, brought him to Bethulia, set him in the myddell of the people, and asked him what the matter was, that the Assirians had done him bounde.

Of the forme of Michas of the trybe of Simeon, & Charmin (which is also called Bethon) were the principall rulers at the same tyme. Now whan Achior stode in the myddell of the Senators, & before the all, he tolde them, what answer he gaue holofernes, to the thinge that he asked him, and how holofernes people wolde haue slayne him his sayenge. & how holofernes himselfe was woth, & commaunded him for the same cause to be deliuered vnto of Israelites: that whan he ouercame the child of Israel he might commaunde Achior also to be put to death with dyuerse countreys, because he sayde: the God of heauen is their defender.

And whan Achior had playnely tolde out these thinges, all the people fell downe upon their faces, praysinge the LORD, and poured out their prayes together vnto the LORD, with a generall complaine & weeping, & sayde: O LORD God of heauen & earth, beholde their payne, & loke vpon our lowynes, & cōside how it standeth with thy saynges, & make it to be knowne, if thou forsakest not thyselfe, which holde them fast by the, & how if thou bringest the lowe, if presumme of the seueres, & make their doost in their own strength. So whan the wepinge and praye of the people (which they had made the whole daye longe) was ended, they comforted Achior, sayenge: the God of our fathers, whose power & strength thou hast prayes, shall so reward the, if thou shalt rather see their destruction. Whan if LORD OF God then shall geue his seruantes this liberte, God be with the also amonge vs: so if it please if, thou wylthyme mayest dwell w. us.

Now whan Ostias had ended the counsell, he toke him into his house, and made a greace supper, called all the elders to it, & so they refreshed them silue a fixer the fasting. And afterwarde was all the people called together, which made their prayes all the night longe in the congregation, and be fought the God of Israel for helpe.

The VII. Chapter.

The next daye holofernes commaunded his host, to go up agaynst Bethulia. There were an C. & xx. thousande fightinge men on foot, & two & twentie thousande hoisnt, besyde the preparyng of them: if were wome, & came to them on euery syde out of the countreys & cities which he had wast. All these prepared them silue w. to the battayll agaynst the Israelites, and came on by the hylly syde, vnto the topp that looketh ouer agaynst Bethulia, from the place which is called Belma, vnto Bethulon: & laych towards Bethulon.

Now whan the child of Israel sawe so greate a multitude of the Assirians, they fell downe flat vpon y ground, & strowed ashen vpon their heades, & praye w. one a corde, if the God of Israel wolde shew him mercy vpon his people. And so they toke their weapons, & set betwixte the mountaynes in y narrow place, & kepte the waye daye & night. But while holofernes was goinge a home, he founde the water springe, which from the south syde was conueyed in to the cite by a conuey: this commaunded he to be directe another waye, & to cut their conuie in slender. There were welles also not farre from the walles, which they used secretly, more for pleasure then for necessity.

C Then wente the Ammonites & the Moabites unto Holofernes, and sayde: The children of Israel trust neither in speare nor arrowe, but haue taken in, and kepe the mountaynes and hilles. That thou mayest overcome them therfore without any strytinge of any battayll, let me to kepe the welles, that they drinke no water out of them: so shalt thou destroye the without swerde, as at the least they shall be so feble, that they must be fayne to geue ouer the cite, which they thinke not able to be wōne, for so much as is lieth in the moūtaynes. These wordes pleased Holofernes well and all his men of warre, and he set an hundred men at euery well rounde aboute.

Iud. 11. 2

D And when this watch had endured twenty dayes, the Chaldees and all that had warre, sayed them that dwelt in the cite of Bethulia, so that in any whole cite they had not dwymt ynough for one daye, for the people had water geuen them daylie in a measure. Then came the men and women, yonge persones and children all vnto Osiat, and sayde all with one voyce: God be iudge betwixt vs and the, for thou hast dealt euill with vs: thou woldest not speake peaceably with the kynge of the Assirians, therfore hath God sold vs in their handes, and there is no man to helpe vs, where as we are brought downe before their eyes in thirst and greuous destruction. Therfore gather now together all the people that be in the cite, that we maye all yete ouercome willingly vnto y people of Holofernes: for better it is y we be captiue and playe the LORD with our relyues, then to be slaine and perishe, and to be laughed to scoime & shamed of euery man when we se oure wyues and children dye be fore oure eyes. We cally heauen & earth this daye to recorde, and the God of oure fathers (which punyssheth vs accordinge to the deservyng of oure synnes) and geue you warnyng, y ye geue vp the cite now in to y power of Holofernes boost, that oure ende maye be shewe with the swerde, which dothal endure longe for wante of water and for thirst.

Iud. 11. 7

E When they had spokt out these wordes, there was a greate weeping and howlyng in the whole congregation, and that of euery man, and they cryed an whole houre longe vnto God with one voyce, sayenge: we haue synned with oure fathers, we haue done amysse, we haue dealt wickedly. Thou y art gracious, haue mercy vpon vs, punyssh oure unrighteousnes with thine owne scour ge, and geue not those our that bewege the, vnto a people which throughe the, lest they saye amonge the heathen when is their God?

Iud. 11. 12

And when they were so weery with this crying and wepyng, that they had thir tanges, Osiat stode vp with water in eye, and sayde: O take good iudgement vnto you (deare brethren) and be of good cheare, so let vs maye yet these fyue dayes for mercy of the LORD: peradventure he shal cōwraue his indignacion, and geue glory in his name. But yf he helpe vs not within these fyue dayes are past, we shall do as ye please.

The VIII. Chapter.

F It so happened when they were come to the care of Iudith a widow, which was the daughter of Itari, the sonne of Doer, the sonne of Joseph, the sonne of Osiat, the sonne of Elai, the sonne of Jamoi, the sonne of Jeseon, the sonne of Kaphours, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Mochia, the sonne of Eam, the sonne of Lathania, the sonne of Salathiel, the sonne of Symeon, the sonne of Kaban, the sonne of Iudith was called Manassis, which dyed in the dayes of the barlye harvest. In whyle he was byndyng yf spere to repaire in the felde, the beere came vpon his backe, and he dyed at Bethulia his cite, and then was he buried beside his fathers. It was six monethes. And in the hyer partes of the house she made herself a ptey chambr, where she dwelt, beinge closed in with ihermes. She wore a smock of haye, and sith all the dayes of hir life, excepte the Sabbathes, and new moones & the solempne dayes that the people of Israel kepe. She was a very saye and deuyfull personne. In her hande also had left her greate riches, a pleceous housholde, greate unnumerable possitions and many cattell. This Iudith was a woman of a very good repute with euery one, for she feared the LORD greatly, and there was no body that speake an euill word of her.

When this Iudith herde, how Osiat had permitted the people, that after the fyue daye he wolde geue vp y cite vnto the Assirians, she sent for the elders Chamai and Chasmin: and when they came to her, she sayde: what chynge is this, wherein Osiat hath consented, y yf God helpe not within fyue dayes, he wil geue ouer the cite to the Assirians: What are ye, that ye can speake

LORDE: This denyce openyeth no mercy of God, but pmooueth him vnto wrath and iudgement. Wyl ye see the mercy of y^e LORDE a crime, & appoynte him a daye after you will?

C Heartyles for so much as the LORDE is patient, let vs rather amende oure selues, pointinge out teares, and beslyngge him of grace. For God threateneth not as a man, neither will he be pmooued vnto wrath as the children of men. And therfore let vs herely fall downe before him, and serue him with a iust space, and with wepyng eyes sa ye vnto the LORDE, that he deale with vs according to his owne will and mercy: that like as oure hart is now vexed, & brought lowe therein the pryde of them, it maye so be comforted thow he graunte in so much as we so loue not the symes of oure fathers, whiche sithen their God, & worshipped other gods: for the which syme they perished with the sworde, were spoyled & brought to shame of all their enemies. As for vs, we knowe not ether God but onely him, for a hoste cōfesseth let vs tary with necessite. He shall reuenge and make inquisition for oure bloude, from the vengacions of oure enemies: he shall bringe downe all the heathen, that rise vp agaynst vs, and put them to dishonoure, vnto the LORDE oure God.

D Therfore deare brethren, seinge ye are the honorable and elders in the people of God, vnto whom all y^e people haue respect, and vpon whom the life of the people stondereth, lift vp their hartes with youre exortacion, y^e they maye call to remembrance, how oure fathers also in tyme past were tempted, y^e they might be pmoed, yf they worshipped their God a righte. They ought to remeber, how oure father Abraham beinge tempted, and tryed thow many tribulations, was founde a louer and frende of God. So was Isaac, so was Jacob, so was Moses, and all they that pleased God, beinge tryed thow many troubles, were so lide stedfast in faith. Agayne, they that receaue and noe their tentacion with the feare of God, but put the felicitye in such myght in paucieny and murmuringe agaynst God, perished of the destrouer, and were slayne of serpentes. And therfore shalbe not we undertake to be auenged, for the thinge that is done vnto vs: but to confesse, that all these punysshmentes are sarre like then oure synnes & mysdoedes. Belieueynge also, that this correccion commeth vnto vs, as to the seruantes of God: for amende ment, and not for oure destruccion.

Then sayde Osias & the others vnto Judith: All that thou speakest, is true, and no man can reuenge y^e wordes. Prase thou for vs now: therfore vnto God, for thou art an holy womā, and fearest God. And Judith sayde vnto them: Seinge ye knowe, that my wordes are of God, then prase my counsell and denice, yf it be of God: and besite God, that he will bringe my counsell to a good ende.

Then haue Judith said: Ye shal sithen this night before the porte, and J will go forth with Abia my mayde: Prase ye therfore vnto God, that he wyl graciously remembre his people of Israell within fyve daies, as ye haue sayde. As for the thinge that J go in han- dle with, are ye no questions of it, tyll J open it vnto you myself: do ye nochinge els, but prase vnto the LORDE youre God for me. Then Osias the prynce of the people of Abia sayde vnto her: So thy waye in peace, the LORDE be with the, that we maye be auenged of oure enemies, and so they wente from her agayne.

The X. Chapter.

W How whā they were gone their way, Judith wente in to hir oratory, put on an hayne smock, strowed ashen vpon hir heade, fell downe before the LORDE, and cryed vnto him, sayenge: O LORDE God of my father Symeon, which gauest him a swerde for a defence agaynst the enemye, that used violence and wilfulnes, and that rauyshed y^e virgin and put her to dishonry. Thou that gauest their wines in to a playe, and their daughters in to captiuyte, and all their playe for a spoyle vnto thy seruantes, which bare a zeile vnto the, helpe me wyddow, O LORDE my God, J besite y^e. For thou hast done all thinges from the begynnyng, and loke what thou hast taken in hande and deuysed, it came euer to pass. For all thy wayes are prepared, & thy iudgementes are done in thy euerlastinge fore knowlege. O loke now vpon the armyes of the Assirians, like as it was thy pleasure some tyme to loke vpon the hoste of the Egipcians, whan they beynge weapened, perced they thy seruantes, & put their trust in their charrettes, hoisment, and in the multitude of their men of warre. But thou lokest vpon their hoste, castinge a thicke darcknes before them: and whan they came in to the depe, the waters ouerwhelmed them.

As so LORDE let it go with these, that trust in y^e power and multitude of their men

Exo. 14. 1

Pal. 45. b of warre, in their charrettes, arrows & spears, and knowe not, that thou onely art our God, which destroyest warres from the beginning, and that thou art the LORDE. O life vpon thine armes now like as cuer from þe beginning, and in thy power bringe their power to naught, cause that mighte so fall in thy wath. They make their doot, þe they wyl enhalowe and defyle thy Sanctuary, and to wastefull the tabernacle of þe name, and to cast downe the borne of thine altar with their swerde. Bringe to passe (O LORDE) þe payde of the enemye maye be cut downe with his owne swerde: that he maie be taken with the snare of his eyes in me, and þe thou mayest smyte him with the lippes of my loue. O geue me a stedfast mynde, that I maye despyse him and his strength, and thate I maye destroye him.

C This shal bringe thy name an cuerlasting remembrance, yf the hande of a woman ouerthrew him. For thy power (O LORDE) stondeth not in þe power of men, neither hast thou any pleasure in the strength of hoyses. There was neuer proude personne that pleased the, but in the payce of the humble and meke hath thy pleasure bene cuer more.

O thou God of the heauens, thou maker of the waters, and LORDE of all creatures, heare me poore woman, callinge vpon thee, and puttinge my trust in thy mercy. Remember thy couenaunt O LORDE, and my nister wordes in my mouth, & stablysh this deuyc in my hert, that thy house maye coneyne still in holynes, and that all the heathen maye knowe and vnderstode, that thou art God, and that there is none other but thou.

The X. Chapter.

WHAN she had left of cryenge vnto the LORDE, she rose vp from the place, where she had lye flat before the LORDE, and called hir mayde, weine downe in to hir house, layed þe hayne cloth from her, put of the garmettes of hir ryddomhode, washed hir body, anoynted hir self with precions thinges of swete fauoure, besyde and placed hir hayre, set an hooe vpon hir heade, and put on such apparell as belongeth vnto gladnesse, slipper vpon hir feete, armeleeces, spanges, earrynges, fygger rynges, and bedecore herself with all hir best aray.

The LORDE gaue her also a speciall beneyte and faynesse: for all this decking of hir self was not done for any volapetuousnesse and pleasure of the flesh, but of a right creation and vertue, therefore by the LORDE increased hir beautye: so þe she was a verynging amyable and self fauoured in all mens eyes. She gaue hir mayde also a boord of wyne, a poe with oyle, poeage, calles, and chiefe, and wente hir waye.

Now when she came to the ponne of the cite, she founde vsias and the others of the cite waitinge there. Which when they saw her, they were astonnyed, & marvelled greatly at her beautye, neuertheless they had no question at her, but let her go, sayinge the God of cure fathers geue þe his grace, and rich his power performe all the dayes of thy here: that Jerusalem maye reioyce in thee, and that thy name maye be in eternitie of the holy & righteous. And all they þe were there, sayde w' one voyce: so be it, so be it. Iudich made hir prayer vnto þe LORDE, and wente out at þe poire, the x. hir mayde.

And as she was goinge downe the manerayn, it happened that aboute the synging of the daye, the spyes of þe Assirians met her, and toke her, sayinge: wher comest thou? Or whither goest thou? She answered: I am a daughter of þe hebraus, and am fled from them, for I knowe, that they shal be gete vnto you to take spoyle: because they thoughte some to yelde the selfes vnto you, that they mighte fynde mercy in your sight. Therefore haue I deuyced by my self this manner: I wyl go before the prince of losernes, and tell him all their secretes, and wyl shew him, how he maye come by them, and wyne them, so that not one man of þe hoost shall perish.

And when these men had herde hir wordes, & considered hir fayre face, they were astonnyed: for they wondered at his speall beautye: & sayde vnto her: Thou hast saved life by fyndinge out this deuyc, & thou wilt come downe to vs: tode: & bechousin, that wha thou comest vnto him, he shal treat the well, & thou shalt please him w' here. So they brought her in to losernes paynyon, and tolde him of her. Now when she came in before him, immediately he was overcome & taken with hir beautye. Then he his seruautes: who wolde despyse þe people of þe Jewes, þe haue so fayre women: shal be reuoced by reason sighte agaynst the synners: So wha Iudich sawe losernes, she wente in a canopye, þe was wrougth of purpyle, shylde, golde, smaragde and precions stonnes. She lokyd fast vnto him, & fell downe vpon the earth. And losernes seruautes rote her again, as their lordes commaundement.

The XI. Chapter.

Then sayde Holofernes vnto her: De of good chere, and feare not in thine heart, for I neuer hurt man, that wol be hit. Iudaschodonosor is the kynge. As for thy people, if they had not despised me, I hadde not hane liff vs; I speare agaynst the. But tell me now, what is the cause, why thou art departed from them, and what fore art thou come vnto vs?

And Iudith sayde vnto him: Syr, vnder stande the wordes of chy handmayden: for if thou wilt do after yf wordes of chy handmayden, the LORDE shall bringe thy matter to a prosperous effecte. As truly as Iudaschodonosor is a lorde of the londe syneth, & as truly as his powere syneth, which is in the to punishment of all men that go wientge, all men shall not onely be subdued vnto his hande, but all the bestes also of yf londe. For all people speake of thy punysshment, and it hath ever bene reported, how thou only art good and mightie in all his kyngdome, and thy discrecion is commended in all londes.

The thinge is manifest also, that Achier held, as it is well knowen, what thou commaundest to do vnto him, for this is plaine mof a surety, that oure God is so mighty wch do (by the reason of oure synnes) that he hath shewed by his prophesies vnto the people, how that for their synnes he wol detur them ouer vnto the enemye. And for so much as the children of Israel knowe that they haue so displeasid their God, they are for a wayed of the. They suffre greate hongre also, & for wante of water, they are dead now in a manner. Moreover, they are appointed to slaye all their cattell, that they maye drye the bloude of them: and are purposed to spende all the holy ornamentes of their God, (which he hath forbydde the to touch) for cense, wyne, and oyle. Seenge now that they do these thinges, it is a playne case, why they must nedes be destroyed. Which when Jhib handmayden perceaued, J fled from them, and the LORDE hath sent me vnto yf, to shewe the these thinges. For J chy handmayden to worshippe God euen here now besyde the, and thy honde mayden shall go forth, and J wil make my prayer vnto God, and he shall tell me, when he wil reward the: the thy synnes shall come and shewe the, & byng ge the thowen the myddest of Jerusalem, so that the shal haue all yf people of Israel, and the shal be wchoue a shepherde: there shal not somoch as one dogg bark agaynst the, for these thinges are shewed me by the prouidence of God: and so for so much as God is displeasid with them, he hath sent me to tell the the same.

These wordes pleasid Holofernes and all his seruantes, which maruelled at the wysdome of her, and sayde one to another: there is not such a woman vpon earth, in bewyge and discrecion of wordes. And Holofernes sayde vnto her: God hath done well, that he hath sent the hither before thy people, that thou mayest geue them in oure handes. And for so much as yf promyse is good, yf thy God performe it vnto me, he shall be my God also, and thou shalt be excellent and greate in the court of Iudaschodonosor, and chy name shalbe spoken of in all the londe.

The XII. Chapter.

Then commaunded he her to go in, where his treasure laye, and charged her, that she shulde haue bys dwellinge there, and a popyned, what shalde be geuen her fro his table. Iudith answered him, and sayde: As for the meate that thou hast commaunded to geue me, I maye not cate of it: as now (lest J displease my God) bene wol cate of such as J haue broughte with me. Then sayde Holofernes vnto her: If the se thinges that thou hast broughte with the sayle, what shal we do vnto the? And Iudith sayde: As truly as thou kuest my lorde, chy hande mayden shall not speake all this, tyll God haue broughte to passe in my hande, the thinges that J haue brused.

So his seruantes broughte her in to the tent, where as he had appointed. And as she was goinge in, she desired that she mighte haue leue to go forth by night, & before daye, to hir prayer, and to make intercession vnto the LORDE. Then commaunded Holofernes his chamberlaynes, that she shulde go out and maie hir pleasure, to praye vnto hir God those thre dayes.

And so in the night season she wete forth into the valley of Bethulia, and wasshed hir self in the wellwater. Then wente she vp, and besought the LORDE God of Israel, that he wolde prepare hir waye, for the deluytance of his people. And so she wente in, and remayned cleane in hir tent, till she toke hir meate in the euenyng.

Upon yf fourth daye it happened, yf Holofernes made a costly supper vnto his seruantes, and sayde vnto Dagao his chamberlay-ne: So to waye, and counsell this hebrewe, that she maye be wyllinge to consent to kepe companye with me. For it were a shame vnto all the Assirians, that a woman shulde so laugh a man to scoine, that she were come from him in medled withall.

Then reuene Vagao vnto Iudith, and sayde: Lee not the good daughter be a strayde, to come in to my lorde, that she maye be honoured before him, that she maye eate and drynke wyne, and be merry with him. Vnto whom Iudith answered: Who am I, that I shalbe saye ny lorde naye? what so euer is good before his eyes, I shal do it: and loke what is his pleasure, that shal I thinke will done, as long as I lyue.

- D So she stode vp, and deckt herself with hir apparell, and reuene in, and stode before him. And holofernes hert was whole moued, so that he dyene in desyre towards her. And holofernes sayde vnto her: drynke now and synge downe, and be merry, for thou hast founde fauoure before me. Then sayde Iudith: Syr, I wil drynke, for my mynde is merer to daye, then euer it was in all my life. And she rote and ate and drankt before him, the thinge that hir mayden had prepared for her. And holofernes was merry w her, and drankt more wyne, then euer he dyd afore in his life.

The XIII. Chapter.

- A Now when it was late in the night, his seruantes made haist, euery mā to his lodginge. And Vagao shutt the chamber doore, and wente his waye, for they were all eurrlaben with wyne. So was Iudith alone in the chamber. As for holofernes, he laye vpon the bed all droncken, and of very dronkenes fell a slep.

Then commaunded Iudith hir mayden, to stode without before the doore, and to waye. And Iudith stode before the bed, makinge hir prayer with teares, and moued hir lip pes secretly, and sayde: Strengthen me O LORD E God of Israel, and haue respecte vnto the wordes of my handes in this houre, that thou mayest sit vp thy cite of Ierusalem, like as thou hast promysed: O graunte that by the I maye performe the thinge, which I haue desired: that thou wilt beleue that I haue tresp.

- B And when she had spoken this, she wente to the bedstade, and lowsed the swete that hanged vpon it, and drew it out. Then toke she holde of the haires lockes of his haire, and sayde: Strengthen me O LORD E God in this houre, and with that, she gaue him two strokes vpon the neck, and smote off his heade. Then toke she the canopy awaye, and rolled the dead body asyde. Immediately she gat her forth, and vntyered the head of holofernes vnto hir mayden, and bad hir put in hir walet.

And so these two wente forth together after their custome. as though they wolde playe, and so passed by the doore, and came thowen the valley vnto the porte of the cite. And Iudith cried asafare of vnto I men vpon the walles: Open the gates (sayde she) for God is with vs, which hath gyued his power in Israel. And when they herd hir voyce, they called the elders of the cite together. And they came all to meete her, little & greate, yonge & olde, for they thought not that she shulde haue come so soon. As they lighted candles, and gathered about hir euerichone: but she wente vp in to any place, and caused silence to be proclaimed.

When eueryman now hadde his toyes, Iudith sayde: O praye for the LORD E and God, for he hath not despyed, nor forsate them, that put their trust in him: and inre his honde mayden he hath performed his mercy, which he promysed vnto the booke of Israel: yee in my hande this same night hath he slayne the enemy of his people.

And with that she toke forth the head of holofernes out of the walet, and shewd it them, sayenge: Beholde the heade of holofernes the capteyne of the Assirians, and this is the canopy, wherin he laye in his bower: where the LORD E oure God hath slayne him by the hande of a woman.

One as truly as the LORD E sayth, his angel hath kepte me, goinge thither, & was with me here, and commynge thither agayne from thence. And the LORD E hath not forsate his handmaiden to be despyed, but without any fylchynce of synne hath he brought me agayne vnto you: & with greute weyrynes that I am escaped, and ye be ydred. O graunte vnto him emerichone, for he is gracious, and his mercy endureth for euer.

So they prayed the LORD E al together, and gaue thales vnto him. And so her they sayde: The LORD E hath blessed the in his power, for thowen the he hath brought our enemies to naught.

And O zias y che ft ruler of the people of Israel, sayde vnto her: Blessed are thou of the LORD E the hye God, about all weemen vpon earth.

Misde be the LORDE the maker of heaven and earth, which hath gyved γ a right to woman and to synye of the heade of the captayne of our enemies. For this daye he hath made thy name γ of honorable, that thy name shall neuer come out of the mouth of mt. which shall all waye remembre γ power of the LORDE: singe thou hast not spared those owne self, but put the in iopardy, consideringe the anguyshe and trouble of thy people, and so hast helped their fall before God LORDE. And all the people sayde: Ame, Amen.

E Achio also was called. τ he came. Then saide Iudith unto him: The God of Israel unto whi thou gauest wyenes, that he wolde be avenged of his enemies, even he hath this night thoro' my hande synyere of the head of all the vnfaithfull. And that thou mayst see that it so is, beholde, this is γ hea-de of Holofernes, whi in his presumption pryde despyed the God of the people of Israel, and threatened γ with destruction, synge: when the people of Israel is take, I shall cause the also to be stricke with the sword. When Achio sawe Holofernes hea-de he fell downe upon his face to the grounde for very anguyshe τ feare, so γ he swo'ward withall. But a fer that he was come agaynto himself, he fell downe before her τ pray-so her, sayinge: Blessed art thou of thy God in all the tabernacles of Jacob: for all the people that heare of thy name, shall prayse the God of Israel because of the.

The XIII. Chapter.

Judith saide unto all the people: He that heare me, staye up this hea-de upon our walles, and when the sense anysch, take ever yman his weapon, and fall out violently: not as though ye wol-de be syde them, but to remme upon them with violence. When the spyes in the tere se this, they shall of necessity be espelled to the backward, and to rase up their captaynes to the barrayll. So wha their captaynes come in to Holofernes payllion, and synce the deed body was pped in the bloude, fear-fulnes shall fall upon them: and whan ye perceave that they ste, folowe them without all care, for God shall delyver them unto you to be destroyed.

Then Achio seynge the power of God whi he had shewed unto the people of Israel, fell of from his heidenish beleue, and put his trust in God, and let him self be circumcided: and so was he nombred amonge the people of Israel, he and all his posterite unto this daye.

Now as soone as it was daye, they stid. te up Holofernes heade upon the walles, and every man toke his weapon, and so they wente out with an horrible crye. When the spyes sawe that, they ranne unto Holofernes tent. And they that were within the came before his chamber, and made a greate ruffing to wake him up, because they thought with the myse to have raised him.
 For there burst not one of the Assirians knee to go in, nor to open.

But when the captaynes and prynces and all the chefe in the kynge of the Assi-rians hoost came together, they saide unto the chamberlaynes: Go youre waye in, and wake him up, for the myse are crept out of their holes, and barre prouoke us unto barrayll.

Then wente Vagao in to his chamber, stode before the bed, and clapped with his handes, for he thought he had bene slepyng with Iudith.

But wha he had hardened perfectly with his carres, and coude perceave no sterynge, he wente nyer to the bed, and lift it up, and then sawe he the deid body of Holofernes lyenge there without a heade, welced in his bloude upon the earth. Then crieth he with loude voyce, and with wepyng rent his clothes, and wente in to Iudiths tent, and found he: nor. And so he leapt out unto the people, and sayde: one woma of γ Jewes, hath browe he all Tabuchodonosors peopler to the me. For lo, Holofernes lyeth vps the grounde, and hath no heade.

When the chefe of the assirians hoost her de that, they rent their clothes, and there fell an insufferable feare and trembling vps them, so γ they in yndee were sore affrayed.
 And there was an excredyng greate crye in the whole hoost.

U The XV. Chapter.
 Now when all the hoost herde that

Holofernes was headed, their mynde and countenance fell from them: and such a feare came upon them, that they undertooke to defende themselves by strength awaye: one spake not to another, but hanged downe their heades, lest all behynde them, and made haiste of escape from the Hebrewes: for they herde, that they were haishing to come a farr with their weapons, and so they fled by the wayes of the selues, and chorow all the fore partes of the vale.

And when þe children of Israel sawe that they fled, they folowed upon them, and were downe with crozettes, blessinge and makinge a greates crye a farr the. As for the Assirians, they had no ordre, and kepte not the selues together, but fled their waye. The weakerlesse the children of Israel fell upon them with one company and ordre, and discomfited as many as they might get. And Osias sent messengers unto all the cities and countrees of Israel.

B So all the regions and every cite sent out their best men after them in harness, and smote them with the swerde, till they came to þe remotest parte of their borders. And the cether that were in Bethulia came into the ceter of the Assirians, and roke all that they which were fled, had left behynde them, and so they founde greates good. And they that came agayne to Bethulia from the battayll, toke with them such thinges as had bene theirs: there was no noyse of the cattell, and of all costly Jewels, so that from the lowest unto the highest, they were all made riche of the spoiles of them. And Joachim the hyepriest at Ierusalem, came to Bethulia with all the elders, that they might see Iudich.

C Now what she came out unto them, they became all to praise her with one voyce, sayinge: thou wosthippe of the cite of Ierusalem, thou ioye of Israel, thou honer of oure people, thou hast dome manly, and thy heart is comforted, because thou hast loved cleynlyes and chastyete, and hast knowne no man but thine owne husbande: therefore hath the hande of the LORDE comforted the, and blessed shall thou be for ever. And all people sayde: so be it, so be it.

In thre dayes coude the people of Israel scarce gather vp the spoiles of the Assirians. And all that belonged unto Holofernes, and had bene his specially, (whether it were of golde, of silver, precious stones, clothinge and all ornaments) they gaue it unto Iudich. And all the people reioyced, both the men, the yonges, and yonge people, with pipes and harpes.

The XVI. Chapeer,

Then sange Iudich this songe unto the LORDE: Begynne unto the LORDE upon the tabernacles, singe unto the LORDE upon the cymbales. O sange unto him a new songe of thankesgivinge, buyfull and call upon his name. It is the LORDE that destroyed the warres, and the LORDE is his name. Which hath punished his enemies in the myddest of his people, that he might deliuer us from the hande of all our enemies. A sarr came out of the mountaynes in the multitude of his strength, his people stepped the water brokes, and their hooves covered the valleye. He purposed to haue built up my towne, and to slayemy yongemen with the swerde.

He wolde haue carryed awayemy children and virgins in to captiuyte, but the almighty LORDE hurte him, and deliuered him to the handes of a woman, which brought him to confusion. For their might was destroyed of the yonge men. It was such sonnes of Luan that slew him, neither had the greates giarantes set their selues agaynst him: but Iudich the daughter of Meris hit saye to euerie hart discomfited him, and thought him to naughte. For she layed on him a widowes garment, and put on the apparell of gladnesse in the reioynging of the children of Israel. She annoynd her face, and bounde vp her hayer in an boore, to besyde him. Her slippers rauyshed his eyes, her bewtye captiuated his mynde, with the sweetnesse she of his necke. The Persians were comforted at his stedfastnesse, and the Medes at his boldnesse. Then he wrode the arrowes of Assiriana, when my simple a peared byr of chryst. The sonnes of the daughters bewtye pearced them thorous, and slayne them as they gaue childe: they perished in the battayll, for the very feare of the LORDE my God. Let vs sange a songe of thankesgivinge unto the LORDE, a new songe of praise: wyl we singe unto oure God, LORDE LORDE, thou art a greates God, mightie in power, whom no man maye ouercome. All thy creatures shall be stre the, for thou spakest bute the moode, they were made: thou sente chryppes, and they were created, and no man maye withstande thy voyce. The mountaynes shall moue from the foundations with the warres, the play rocks shall mele before the life waye. But they that feare the, shall be greates wyl in all thinges. Wo unto the people that rise up agaynst my generation, for the almighty LORDE will avenge him self of them, & in the daye of iudgment will he avenge them. For he shall geue fire & wormes in to their flesh, that they maye burne and sele it for currency.

After this it happened, that after the victory all the people came to Jerusalem, to geue prayse and thanks vnto the LORDE. And whi they were purified, they offered all their best sacrifices and their promised offerynge. And Iudith offered all her holofornes weapons, and all the Jewels, that y people had gathered, and the canopy that she toke from his bed, and hanged them vp vnto the LORDE. The people was ioyfull, as the vs is: & this ioye by reason of the victory, with Iudith honoured the monethes.

So after these dayes every man wente home agayne, and Iudith was in greate reputation at Bethulia, and right honorably taken in all the londe of Israel. Vnto hir veremallo was chastite toynd, so y a fyer hir husbande Manasses dyed, she neuer knewe all the dayes of hir life. Vpon the hie simple dayes she wente out with greate worship. She dwelt in hir husbandes house an hundred and fyue yeare, & left hir hundredes fre, and dyed, and was buried beside hir husbande in Bethulia. And all che people mourned for her seven dayes. So long as she liued, there was none that trobled Israel, and many yeares also after hir death.

The daye wherein this victory was gotten, was solemnly holden, and rekened of the Jewes in the nombre of the holy dayes, and is yet greatly holden of the Jewes euer since vnto this daye.

The ende of the booke of Iudith.

The chapters in the booke of Hester, which are not found in the text of the Hebrew, but in the Greke and Latyn.

The XI. Chapter after the Latyn.

In this chapter is described the dreame of Mardocheus.

Mardocheus the sonne of Jair, the sonne of Semei, y sonne of Cisi of y tribe of Ben Jamin a Jew: which had his dwell lyng: in Susia, a man of greate reputation, & excellent amonge all them that were in the kynges court: (Leuerit also he was one of the prisoners, whom Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon had carried awaye from Jerusalem vnto Babilon with Jechonias the kyng of Iuda.) In the seconde yeare of the reigne of greate Artaxerxes in the first daye of y moneth Tislan, had this Mardocheus such a dreame: he thought he herde a greate rest, horrible thunder clappe, earth quake, & greate voyce in y londe: & he sawe two greate dragons ready to fight one agaynst another. Their crye was greate. The which roaring and crye all heithen were vp, to fight agaynst y righteous people. And y same daye was full of darkness & very onclere, full of trouble & anguish, yet a greate fearfulness was there in all the londe. The righteous were amazed, for they feared y plague & euill y was beynted ouer the, & were at a poynt w them selues to dye. So they cried vnto God, and while they were crying, the lide well grew in to a greate ryuer in to many waters. And with y it was daye, & the sonne rose vp agayne. And y lowly were exalted, and denoured the glorious and proude.

Now when Mardocheus had sene this dreame, he awoke, and must first sayly in his heart, what God wolde doo: and so he desired to knowe all the matter, and his wynde was there vpon vntill the night.

The XII. Chapter.

In this chapter is declared, how Mardocheus was vntill the reason of the two sentences agaynst the kyng, and the cause both the kyngs reward to him.

In the same tyme dwelt Mardocheus with Bagathas and Thares the kynges chamberlaynes and porters of the palace. But when he herde their beyue, and had diligently considered their ymaginations, he perceaued that they wente aboute, to laye their cruell handes vpon the kyng Artaxerxes: and so he certified the king thereof. Then caused the kyng to examine y two gelded with tormentes. And when they had graunted it, they were put to death.

This the kyng caused to be put in y Cronicles for an everlasting remembrance, and Mardocheus wore up the same matter. So the kyng commaunded, that Mardocheus shoulde do seruyce in the court, and for this faithfulness of his, he gave him a reward. But Aman the sonne of Amadathus the Agagite, which was holden in greate honour and reputation in the kynges court, understode to hurt Marbochens & his people, because of these two chamberlaynes that were put to death.

The XIII. Chapter.

The copie of the commandment which King Ahasuerus (by the conjuring of Amas) sent out in to all countries, for the destruction of the Jewes. The prayer of Marbochus.

The greete kynge Ahasuerus which raigned first in India vnto Ethiopia, ouer an hundredth and seven and twety londes, sendeth his frendly salutation vnto all the princes and debtyes of the countreys, which be subiecte vnto his deminion. When I was made lord ouer many people, and had subdued the whole earth vnto my deminion, my mynde was not with crueltye and wronge to exalte myself by the reason of my power: but purposed wth equitye allwaye and gentynesse, to gouerne those that be vnder my iurisdiction, and wholy to set them in a peaceable life, and therby to bringe my Kingdome vnto tranquylite, that men might safely go thorow on euery syde, and to reme peace agayne, which all men desyre. I thought when I was my counsellors, how these thinges might be brought to a good ende, there was one by vs, or called in wysdome, whose good wyll, wherby faithfulness hath ofte bene shewed vnto vs (which was also I princypall & next vnto I Kinge Amas by name, which certified vs, how I in all londes there was certain a rebellious folke, I made statutes & lawes agaynst all other people, & haue allwaye despised the proclaimed commandementes of Kinges: and how that for this cause it were not to be suffered, that such rule shoulde continue by you & not to be put downe. Beinge now we put came the same, that this people alone are contrary vnto euery man, vsynge strange and vnderly manner of lawes, & withoute cure statutes and doinges, and go alyque to stablish synned maners, that cure Kingdome shoulde neuer come to good estate and stablishment: Therfore haue we commaunded, that all they that are appointed in my kynge and shewed vnto you by Amas, which is ordeined and set ouer all our bylawes, and the most princypall next vnto the kynge, and in maner as a father shal with their wyues & children be destroyed and roerd out with the sword of their enemies and abusers: & there shalbe no mercy shewed, & no man spare. And this shalbe done I xiiiiij. dayes of the month called Bar, of this yere, that they which of olde (and now also) haue euer bene rebellious, maye in one daye with violence be thrust downe in to the hell, to the intent that after this maner, our countreye maye haue peace and tranquylite.

But Marbochens thought vpon all the wordes and noble actes of I LORDIE, to be his prayer vnto him, sayinge: O LORDIE, thou walcaunt and almightie God (for all thinges are in thy power, and thou wilt helpe and deluyne Israel, there is no man that can withstande thee: for thou hast made heauen & earth, and whose vnderstandinge souer is vnder the heauen: thou art LORDIE of all thinges, and there is no man, that can resiste the O LORDIE) Thou knowest all thinges, thou wotest LORDIE, that it was rather of malice, ner presumption, no for my desyre of glory, that I wolde not become myself ner worshippe yonder proud presumptuous Aman (for I wolde haue bene content, and I with good wyll, if it might haue done Israel any good, to haue left in his handes) but that I dyd it, because I wolde not let the honoure of a man in the stroke of the glorye of God, and because I wolde not shewe none but only I my LORDIE. And thus haue I done in no payre ner presumption.

And therfore O LORDIE, thou God almighty, haue mercy vpon thy people for theye praye how theye maye bringe vs to nothinge, their mynde and desyre is to deluyne and ouerthrowe the people, that hath euer had thine inheritance of olde. O despise my prayer, which thou hast deluynered & brought out of thy pipe for thine owne self. O my prayer, and be mercifull vnto I people, whiche thou hast chosen for an heritage vnto thy self. Turne our complaynte and sorrowe into ioye, that we maye lye O LORDIE, and praise thy name. O LORDIE, suffre not I mouth of them that praise thee, to be destroyed.

All I people of Israel in like manner, and as earnestly as they coude vnto the LORDIE, for their death and destruction stode before their eyes.

The XIII. Chapter.

Of the sorrowe, complaints and prayre of Amas the cher.

When Hester also beinge in the bayl of death, resorted vnto the LORDIE, layed awaye her glorious apparel, and put on the garmentes that serued for sighing and mourninge. In the stroke of piteous oymment, she leached a slye and layd upon his heade: and as for her body, she humbled it, and brought it very lowe. All the places where she was wth her, were filled with her, those filled she with I daye, I daye.

his self. She prayed also vnto the LORDE of God of Israel with these wordes:

O my LORDE, thou onely art oure kynge, helpe me desolace womā, which haue no helpe but y, for my misery and destruction as harte as my hande. Fro my youeth vp I haue kerde one of the tymes of my father, that thou wast Israel from amonge all people (and so haue oure fathers of their fore elders) that they shulde be thy perpetuall inheritance, and loke what thou doste promisseth, thou hast made it good vnto the.

Now well LORDE, we haue sinned besore thee, therefore hast thou geuen vs in to the hendes of oure enemies, because we worshipped that goddes. I LORDE thou art righteous.
Nevertheless it satisfieth thee not, that we are in byer and beyr captiuyte and op-resse amonge them, but thou hast layed thar hondes vpon the hontes of their god-des: that they begyne to take awaye, the thinge that thou wilst with thy mouth hast orde-ned and appoynted: to destroye thyne inheritance, to hure and to stoppe y mouthes of them that prayse thee, to quench the glory and worscipe of thy house and thine altier, and to open the mouthes of the seithen, y they maye prayse the power z vertue of the god-des, and to magnifie the fleshy kynge for euill.

O LORDE, geue not thy cepter vnto the that be nothinge, lest they laugh vs to scoome oure misery and fall: but turne their de-uys vnto them selues, and punish him, that hath begonne the same ouer vs, and set him in an example. Thyke vpon vs O LORDE, and shew thy self in y cyme of oure distres and of oure trouble. Strengthen me O thou kyng of goddes, thou LORDE of all power, geue me an eloquent and pleasaunt speach in my mouth before the Lyon. Turne his hert into y hate of oure enemye, to destroye him, and all such as consen vnto him. But deli-uer vs with thy hande, and helpe me desolate womā, which haue no defence ner helper but onely y. I LORDE thou knowest all thin-ges, thou wost that I lone not the glory and worscipe of the vntighteous, and that I hate and abhorre the bed of the vncircu-mised and of all seithen.

Thou knowest and worest my necessite, y that the token of my pietyntynce z wor-shipe, which I beare vpon my heade, what time as I must shew myself and be seen, z that I abhorre it as an vnclene cloth, and that I were it not with I am quyet and thanky myself. Thou knowest also that I thy honde mayden haue not eaten at Aimas table, and that I haue had no pleasure ner delyste in the kynge's feaste, that I haue not dronke the drynk offeringes, and that I thy honde mayden haue had no ioye sens y daie that I was broughte hither vnto this daie: but onely in the O LORDE. O thou God of Abraham, O thou mightie God aboute all, hear: the voyce of them, that haue none other hope, and deliuer vs out of the hande of y wicked, z deliuer me out of my feare.

The XV. Chapter.

Queene Hester appeareth before the kynge, with an heuy bier for the trouble of hir people, and God tak-eth the kynge hert.

It vpon y thirde daie it happened, that Hester layed awaye y mournynge gar-mices, and put on hir glorious apparell, and deckt hirself goodly as fier: that she had called vpon God, which is the beholder z Sanioure of all thinges) tok e two maytes w her: vpon the one she leant hir self, as one y was tender: the other slored her, and bare the trayne of hir vesture. The shyne of hir beweye made hir face rose coloured. The similitude of hir face was deare full and amiable, but hir hert was fousen full for greate feare. She wente in thotow all the doores, and stode before the kynge. The kynge sat vpon the throne of his kyngdome, and was clothed in his goodly aray, all of golde, and set w precious stones, and he was very terribel. He lift vp his face, that shone in the clearnes, and looked grimly vpon her.
Then fell the Queene downe, was pale and faynt, leant hir self vpon the heade of the mayde that wente with her.

Nevertheless God turned y kynge's myn-de, that he was gentle, that he leape out of his seate for feare, and gat her in his armes, z helde hir vpon yll she came to herself a gay-ne. He gaue her louynge wordes also, z sayde vnto her: Hester, what is the matter? I am y brother, be of good cheare, thou shalt not dye: for oure commaundement condrich the comons, not the. Come nye. And with that he helde vp his golden wand, and layed it vpon hir neck, and embiaced her frendly, and sayde: calke with me. The sayde she: I same the (O lorde) as an angell of God, z my hert was troubled for feare of thy maiesty and cleare esse. For excellent and wonderfull are thou (O lorde) and thy face is full of amye.
But as she was thus speaking vnto him, she fell downe agayne for fayntnes: for the which causeth the kynge was a frayte, and all his seruantes comforted her.

The XVI. Chapter.

A cople of the commandment which King Artaxerxes caused to be proclaimed in all the countreys of his domynion, for the wealthe of the Jewes.

A The greates kynge Artaxerxes, which reigneth fro India vnto Ethiopia, ouer an hundred and xxvij. londes, sendeth vnto the princes & rulers of the same londes, such as loue him, his frendly salutation. There be many, that for the sondrye frendshippes and benefites which are diuersly done vnto them for their worshippe, be enery more proude and hye mynded, and vnderstande not onely to hurte oure subiectes (for pleasure benefites maye they not suffre, and be gylty to ymagin some thinge agaynst those that do them good, and take not onely all merchantfullnes awaye fro men) but in pryde and presumption (as they that be vnmynde full and vnto the full for the good dedes) they go aboute to scape the iudgment of God, by seych all thinges, which iudgment hateth & punyssheth all wickednes. It happeneth oft also, y they which be set in office by the hyer power, and vnto whom the busynes and causes of the subiectes are comyted to be handled, more proude, and desyle the felues with shewyng of innocent bleude, which bringeth them to intollerable hurte. Which also with fals and discentfull wordes and with lying tales, disceale and betraye the innocent goodnes of princes.

Now is it profitable and good, that we take heede, make search there after, and consider, not onely what hath happened vnto vs of olde, but the shamefull, vn honest, and noy some thinges, that the debites haue now taken in hande before oure eyes: and that to be warre in tyme to come, that we maye make the kynngdome quyet & peaceable for all men, and that we mighte some tyme diaue it to a chaunge: and as for y thinge that now is present before oure eyes, to withstande it, and to pacie downe, after the most frendly manner.

Nether 2. a

What tyme now as Aman the sonne of Amabatha y Macedonyan (a stranger vnto the Persians) bleude, and sacre from oure goodnes) was come in amogge vs as an aleume, and had openyed the frendshype that we beare toward all people, so that he was called oure father, and had in hye honoure of every man, as the next and prynci-pal vnto the kynge, he coude not striken him self from his pryde, hath vntaken not onely to robbe vs of the kynngdome, but of oure life.

With many folde disceale also hath he slyed to destroye Macedonians oure kyn and posterite, which hath done vs good in all thinges: and innocent Gesker the liker taker of oure kynngdome, with all his people, for his mynde was (whan he had takethem out of the waye, and robbed vs of them) by this meane to translaue the kynngdome of the Persians vnto the of Macedonians. Thus we fynde, that the Jewes (which were accused of y weideth, y they might be deseryng) are no cuell doers, but vnto reasonable right lawes, and that they be the children of the most hye & myghty God, by whom the kynngdome of vs and oure progenitours had bene well ordred hitherto. Wherfore, as such letteres and commaundmentes, that were put forth by Aman the sonne of Amabatha, ye shall do well, yf ye holde them of none effect: for he that set them vp and intended the hangyng at Susis before the power, with all his kynde, and God (which hath all things in his power) hath rewarded him after his deseryng.

And vpon this ye shall publish and set forth the cople of this letter in all places, that the Jewes maye frely and without hinderance holde them selues a freer than oure statens, and that they maye be helpe, and that vnto y xij. daye of y xij. moneth. What they maye be auenged of them, which in the tyme of their angursh and trouble wolde haue oppressed the. For the God that gouerneth all thinges, hath turned to ioye, the waye vnto in y chosen people shalbe haue persished.

Moreover, amogge the hye solumpntous that ye haue, ye shall holde this daye also of all gladnest: that now and in tyme to come this daye maye be a remembrance to you for all such as loue the prosperite of the Christians: that a remembrance of destruction to those that be sedicious vnto vs.

All cities and londes that do not this daye, shal boynly perish and be destroyed w the pest de and fyre, and shall noe onely be none in habited of men, but be abhorred also of y wide beastes & foules.

The booke of Wisdom.

What this booke comeynteth.

- Cap. I. An exortacion for iudges and rulers to low wysdom. The spere of wysdom hath subtyl, dissimulation and Apocryfic, rebulchyn our belyng of usse and abhorreth wickednes.
- Cap. II. The ymaginacions and thoughtes of the vngodly, how they geue thei selues ouer vnto synne, and persecute all vertue and trouth.
- Cap. III. The felicity and death of godly people, though they be put here to trouble and heynousse: Agayne, what saye shall happen to the vngodly and their children.
- Cap. IIII. To lye charyt or godly witholl, is co[n]menda[n]ble. A wyspysse of the wylde. The honoure of vertuous age. The shamefull death of the vngodly.
- Cap. V. How the iust men shall stode agaynst the wylde, that haue put them here to trouble: and what sorow shall come vpon the vngodly. Agayne, what saye shall happen to the righteous, which haue God himself for their defence.
- Cap. VI. An exortacion vnto such as be in rule and gouernance, to receiue wysdom. A commendacion of wysdom.
- Cap. VII. All men haue life intradecit to the wylde: yet who so calleth vpon God for wysdom, shall haue his benefyte. The profits that cometh by wysdom, respecteth all other thinges.
- Cap. VIII. Wysdom be receiued in youth. She that serueth herself vnto her, shall enjoy the lase of God and men.
- Cap. IX. A prayer vnto God for the gift of wysdom.
- Cap. X. What profit and good come by wysdom in the elderyng.
- Cap. XI. How wysdom leueth the righteous, and how the vngodly are punished thow the mighte hande of God.
- Cap. XII. God is mercifull and sufferech longe, to the synners that synne in thylde comen.
- Cap. XIII. Whyne are they that haue not the knowlege of the hyunge God, but turne vnto the creature: whynne are they that honoure ymage.
- Cap. XIII. The worshippinge of ymages. The power of God. Punishment of them that make ymages, and of such as worshippe them. How ymages came up first. The honoure of ymages is the cause, begynnyng, and ende of all myshete.
- Cap. XV. The faithfull haue respecte vnto God and not vnto ymages.
- Cap. XVI. God punisheth the wylde, but defendeth the godly, or that by greake wonders.
- Cap. XVII. Of the greake hardnesse in Egypte, and vnto the wylde of the vngodly.
- Cap. XVIII. How God destroyed the first borne of Egypte. How the people save the cattel lambe for fully, the Egyptian mouere, God punisheth the wylde, not in the wylde benefyte. How the increase of the people.
- Cap. XIX. Life as the wylde are they synners: more and more, so both the wylde of God receiue, tyll they be destroyed. Of them that were punished in the tyme of Lot.

The first Chapter.

Set your affection vnto wysdom, ye that be iudges of the earth. haue a good opinion of the LORDE, & set him in the syngelesse of her. For he will be soode of them that tempe him not, and appeareth vnto such as put their trust in him. As for frowarde thoughtes, they separate from God, but vertue, yf it be alowe[n]d, reformeth y vnwys. And why: wysdom shall not erre in to a frowarde soule, ner dwell in the body that is fowarde vnto synne. For the holy goost abhorreth fawmed narroure, & with draweth himself fro y thoughtes: that are without vnderstoninge: & where misdeones hath the vpper habite, he fleeth from thence. For the spere of wysdom is lowyng, gentle and gracious, and will haue no pleasure in him that speaketh euill with his lippe. For God is a witnes of his reynes, a true searder out of his here, and an hearer of his tonge. For the spere of y LORDE fylleth the rounde compass of the wylde, and y same that uphildeth all thinges, hath knowlege also of the voyce.

Therefore he that speaketh vnto righteous thinges, can not be hydd, neither may he escape the iudgment of reioyse. And why: iniquity shall be made fo[r] the thoughtes of the vngodly, and the repore of his wordes shall come vnto God, so that his wickednes shall be punished. For the care of gelousy heareth all thinges, and the noyse of his grubynges shall not be hydd. Therefore beware of murmuring, which is noching worth, and refrayne your counte from sladder. For there is no word so hard and secrete, that it shall go for naught, and the mouth that speaketh lyes, slayeth the soule.

Set not your owne death in y erre of your life, destroye not your selues thowt the wylde of your awne handes. For God hath not made death, neither hath he pleasur in the destruction of the luyng.

is unhappy, and as for the hope of such, it is but vanity, their labours unfruitfull, and their mooves unprofitable. Their wyes are misdirected, and their childre most vngodly. Their creature is cursed. Blessed is rather y^e hart of vnbesyde, which hath not knowne the synfull deed: he shall haue frute in the rewarde of the holy soules. And blessed is y^e vnbesyde, which in his handes hath wrought no vnrighteousnesse, nor ymagined wicked things agaynst God. For vnto him shal be giuen y^e speciall gift of faith, and the most acceptable position in y^e temple of God. For righteous is the frute of good laboure, & the ree of wisdom. Shall neuer fade awaye. As for y^e childre of aduersers, they shal come to an ende: the seede of an vnrighteous seed shal be reed out. And though they lye in age, yet shal they be no thinge regardet, & their last age shal be without honoure. If they be haughty, they haue no hope, neither shal they be spoken to in the daye of knowle ge. For horrible is the deathe and ende of the vnrighteous. The liii. Chapter.

How saye is a chaste generation w^o vertue: The memoriall thereof is immortall, for it is knowne w^o God and men. When it is present, me take y^e apple there an: and yf it go awaye, yet they desire it. It is all mane crowned & holden in hono^r, & y^e man y^e remarde of the vnbesyde dancayst. But the multitude of vngodly childre is vnprofitable, and the thinges y^e are planted w^o wisdom, shal eate no depe rooe, nor laye any fast foundation. Though they be greuous in the biansches for a tyme, yet shal they be shate w^o the wynde: for they stonde not fast, & thow the vehemence of the wynde shal be reed out. For the vnprofitable biansch shal be broken, their fruce shal be vnprofitable & some to eate, yet none for nocht. And why: all the childre y^e are borne of the wicked, must beare recorde of the wickednesse agaynst their fathers & mothers, when they be aged. But thow the righteous be mortal, shal eate no depe rooe, nor laye any fast foundation.

Age is an honorable thinge: i neuertheless it stonch not only in the length of tyme, nor in the multitude of yeares: but a mans wyf dome is the graye haire, and an vnbesyde li fe is the olde age. He pleased God, & was beloved of him: so that wher as he lyed among the synners, he traspassed him. For so vngodly was he taken awaye, so the intent y^e wickednesse shal be alter his vnbesydinge, & y^e y^e crafty shal be not beyle his soule. For y^e crafty heart thine of lyes make good thinges bad, & vnprofitable also & wickednes of delicious desire, turns as y^e vnbesydinge of y^e symple. Though he was soone dead, yet fulfilled he moody hymne. For his soule pleased God, therfore chastised he to take him awaye fro amonge y^e wicked. This the people se, & vnbesyde it: not they laye not vpon such thinges in their herce, how y^e folyunge sau^r & mercy of God is vpo his faintes, & y^e he hath respecte vnto his chosin.

Thus y^e righteous y^e is dead, & smothered the vngodly which are luyng: & y^e youth y^e is soone broughe to an ende, & longe life of y^e vnrighteous. For they se y^e ende of y^e wyse, but they vnbesyde not what God hath deuyse for him, & wherfore y^e LORD hath taken him awaye. And why: they se him & besyde him, therfore shal God alio laughe the to scoone: So y^e they the felous shal dye here after: (but without hond y^e in flame amony ge) & dead for euermore. For without any voy ce shal be burst those y^e be put up, & remoue the fro y^e foundacion, so y^e they shal be laied wast vnto the byest. They shal moure, and their memoriall shal perishe. So they beynge & prayd shal remembre their synnes, and their owne wickednesse shal brauayse the. The V. Chapter.

Then shal y^e righteous stonde in grea tressors fastnesse agaynst such as haue dealt extremly w^o the, & take awaye their labours. When they se it, they shal be vexed w^o horrible feare, & shal wonder at the haughtinesse of y^e sodaine health: y^e goinge for very distresse of mynde, & shal saye within then selues (hauyng inwarde sorrow, and mourninge for very anguyshe of mynde):

These are they, whom we somtyme had in derision, & iested vpo. We foolcs thoughte their life very madnesse, & their ende to be without honoure. But lo, how they are counted amonge the childre of God, & their position to amonge the sayntes. Therfore we haue erred from the waye of trouth, y^e light of righteousnesse hath not shyned vnto vs, and the Sone of vnbesydinge rose not vpo vs. We haue erried & felous in y^e waye of wickednesse & destrucion. Tedious wayes haue we gone: but for the waye of the LORD, we haue not knowne it.

What good hath & pryde done vnto vs? O, what profit hath the pompe of riches brought vs? All those thinges are passed awaye like a shadowe, & as a messenger rennyng be for: as a shippe y^e passeth ouer the wayes of the water, which when it is gone by, the trace thereof can not be founde, neither y^e path of it in the floudes. O, as a bye be y^e flyeth choiow y^e ayre, & no man can se eny token where she is flower, but only heareth the noyse of hir weynges, beatinge the lichte wynde, parryinge the ayre thowm the wechance of hir goyng, & flyeth on halynge hir weynges, where as afterwarde no token of hir waye can be soude. O like as whe an arrowe is shotte at a mark, it parrech the ayre, which immediately cometh together agayne, so that a man can not knowe where it wente thowm. Euen so we in like maner as soome as we were borne, beganne immediately to die, and oure ender: haue they red no token of vertue, but are consumed in oure owne wickednesse.

C Such wordes shal they that haue synned, speake in the bell: for the hope of the vngodly is like a drye chifcell flower (or buff) that is blowne awaye by the wynde: like as thynne comme this scattereth abrode wch the storme: like as if smelke which is disperd here & there wch the wynde, & as if remembrance of a stranger yearich for adau, & the departeth.

Dur y righteous shal lyue for evermore: their reward also is wch the LORDE, & their remembrance wch the Ghyest. Therfore shal they receaue a glorious kyngdome & a beuysfull crowne of the LORDS hande: for wch his righte hande shal he court the, & wch his owne arme shall he defende the. His jealousy also shal take awaye the harnesse, & he shal waite y creature to be aue god of y enemies. He shal put on righteousnesse for a bryst plate, & take sure iudgment in steade of an helmet. The insynceable shyfte of equyre shall he take, his cruell wrath shal be sharpe for a speare, & the whole compasse of the worlde shall fyght wch him agaynst the unwyse.

D The shal the thonder boltes go out of y lighninges, & come out of the rayue boome of the cloudes to the place apoynted: out of the hard stony indignacion there shall fall thick hailes, & y water of y fe shall be wroth agaynst the, & the floudes shal renne roughly together. See a nightie wynde shal sobbye up agaynst them, & a storme shall scaer the abode. Thus the vnrighteous dealinge of the shal bringe all the lode to a wyldernes, & wickednesse shall curchewome the dwellinges of the mightie. The VI. Chapter.

Wysdome is better then strength, & a ma of vnderstadinge is more worth the one. y is struge. Heare therfore (O ye Kinges) vnderstande: O lerne ye y be iudges of the iudges of the earth. Oure are ye shule y multitudes, & delite in much people. For the power is geau you of the LORDE, & the strengthe from the Ghyest: which shal crye yo wordes and search out yo ymaginacons: how that ye be yng officers of his kyngdome me, haue not executed ther wyllynge, haue not kepte the lame of righteousness, ne well fed after his will. Horribly & that righte shal he appeare vnto you: for an iudgment shal they haue y beare rule. Mye is graued vnto the symple, but they that be in auerouthe shal be soue punyshe. For the which is L O R D E ouer all, shal excepte no mans personne, nether shal he stande in awe of any mans greatnesse: for he hath made y small and graue, & catched y all alyte. But the mightie shal haue y four penyshment.

When you therfore (O ye Kinges) y speake, y ye maye lerne to wysdome and not to mysse: for they y bepe righteousnesse shal be righteously iudged: and they y are cruel in righteous thinges, shal fynde to made iustice. Wherefore se y luff upon my wordes, & wech, so shal ye come by nure. Wysdome is a noble thinge, & neuer fayreth awaye: she is easely sene of the that loue her, & founde of soch as seeke her. The prynces that y desire her, y she maye first lerne herself to the. Who so awateth vnto her by ryme, shal haue no greates traualle, for he shal fynde her streyng ready at his doore. To that upon her, is parfice vnderstandinge: who so watcheth for her, shal be safe, & that soue. For she goeth aboute, semyng soch as are mate for her, sheweth her selfe cherefully to them in their goynges, & watcheth them wch all diligece. For y remained desyre of reueracion is hir begynnynge care for nure is loue, and loue is the keepinge of hir lawe.

Low the keepinge of y lawe is perfectioun & an vnconuulsiue, & an vnconuulsiue teach a man familiar wch God. And so the desyre of wysdome ledech to y kyngdome of celeste. As y desire be the in royall fauour & ceptere (O ye Kinges of the people) se your luff vnto wysdome, y ye maye raigne for ever more. O loue the lichte of wysdome, all ye y be rulers of the people. As for wysdome, what she is, and how she come up, I wil tell you, and will not hyde the misteries of God from you: but wil seke her out from y begynnynge of the nacynye, and bringe the throulege of her in to lichte, and wil not kepe back the truth. Therfore mul y haue to doo wch mynne enuye, for sech a man shal not be purtaker of wysdome. But the multitudes of the wyse is the welfare of the worlde, and a mysse kyng is the vpholdinge of the people. O receaue noueroute then thowm my wordes, and it shal do you good. The VII. Chap.

I myselfe also am a mortall man, as is all other, & am come of y earth, & generatis of him y was a first mouer, & in my mothers wombe was y fructified.

The boke of Wylsdome.

Wisdom: ryng of em monethes was I brought together in bloude thowen the sede of man, & the comodious appetite of slepe.
When I was borne, I receaued like a yue as other men, & fill upon the earth: which is my nature: crying & weeping at the first, as all other do. I was mappid in swadlinge clothes, & brought up w greute caren. For there is no thinge þ hatþ had eny other begynnynge of bysch. All men thus haue one inraunce into life, oue goinge out in like maner.

Wherfore I desired, and vnderstandinge was graunt me: I called, & the spere of wysdome came in to me. I sit more by her the by kingdomes & royall states, & counted riches nothinge in coparison of her. As for pecciious stone I compared it not vnto her: for all golde is but grauell vnto her, & syluer shalbe counted but claye before hir sighte. I lonco had none wellfare & beutic, & purposed to take her for my lighte, for hir shyne can not be quenchid. All good thinges came to me to her, & innumerable riches thowen hir hades.

I was glad in the all, for this wysdome rose before me, & I knewe not þ she is the mother of all good thinges. For as I myself laced vnto my self, so do I make other men partakers of her, & byde her riches from no man: for she is an infinite treasure vnto men, whom who so vfe, be come partakers of the luzt freeshippe of God, and are accepted vnto him for the giftes of wysdome.

God hath graunted me to calke wysly, & communally to habite the thinges þ he hath graciouly lene me. For it is he, þ l. deth vnto wysdome, & teacheth to vfe wysdome a righte. In his hade are all & d. w. ides: yee all e wysdome, & vnderstandinge & knowlege of all good moites. For he hath graunt me þ true sciece of these thinges: so that I knowe how þ world was made, & the powere of þ el. m. ite: þ begynnynge, endinge & wysdest of þ tymes: how theye tymes alter, how one goeth after another, and how theye are fulfilled: þ course of the yere: the ordinaunces of the sunne, the nature & kynde of beastes: the manusynesse of beastes: the power of þ wyndes: the ymaginacions of men: the deservites of yonge plantes: the vertues of rocces, & all sub. thynge as are creete & not lokid for, hare I lerned. For the workmaster of all thin-ges hath taught me wysdome. In hir is þ spere of vnderstandinge, which is holy, magnifide, one enely, styll, courteous, discret, e ber the all neede thinges: she goeth thowen at an ynerth to all thinges, because of hir clen-nes. For she is þ breth of þ power of God, & a pure cleane expylling of þ clearnes of Al-myghtie God. Therfore can no vnderfyled thinge come in to her: for she is þ byghenes of þ euerlastinge lighte, & vnderfyled mynd of þ manifite of God, & þ ymage of his goodnesse.

And for so much as she is one, she maie do all thinges: & beingested fast herselfe she reuerth all, & amoge of people coueyeth she herselfe in

The VIII. Chapter.

Wysdome reacheth fro one ende to another mightely, & loudly doth she ouer all thinges. I haue lousid her and laboured for her ene from my youth up: I dyd my diligence to marry my self to her, soch loue had I vnto hir beurye. Who so hath þ copany of God, cometh by hir nobilite, yee the LORDE of all thinges himselfe touch her. For she is þ solemnestresse of þ mured of God, & þ chofit out of his workes. As a man wolde desyre riches in this life, what is richer then wysdome, & no other all thinges? (Thou wold saye:) vnderstandinge worketh. What is it amoge all thinges, þ worketh more the wysdome: As a man leue vertue & righte consciens, let him labd for wysdome, for she hath greate vertues. And why: she teacheth sobernes good coucell, & speake confortably vnto me in my carefulness & greife. For hir sake shal I be well and honestly taken amoge the comen & shal I haue sharpe vnderstandinge: so þ I

The Dore of Wyzdome.

whā I ſpake, they ſhal loſe vps me: yf I talke moch, they ſhal laye their handes vpo their mouth. Moreover, by the nicanes of her I ſhal optayne immortallite, and leaue behin be me an euerlaſtinge memorall, amonge the y come after me. I ſhal ſer þ people in orde, & the nacions ſhal be ſubdued vnto me. Horrible cruauces ſhal be aſtrayed, when they do bucheare of me amonge the multitude I ſhal be counted good, & mightie in batayll. Whā I come home, I ſhal ſynce reſt w her: for hir edpany hath no dyternes, & hir felafhipe hath no rediouſteſſe, but myrth & ioye.

C Now when I conſidered theſe thinges by myſelf, & pondered them in my heart, how þ do be ioynd vnto wyzdome is immortallite, & greate pleaſure to haue hir frendſhipe: how y in the woiles of hir bandes are infinite riches: how that, who ſo kepeth company w her ſhal be wyſe: and that he whiche talketh wch her, ſhal come to honoure: I wente aboute ſeking, to gret her vnto me. For I was a ladd of a rype wyte, and had a good vnderſtandinge.

But when I grew to more vnderſtandin ge, I came to an vncorrupt body. Where he les when I perceaued that I coude not kepe myſelf charyt, excepte God gaue it me: & y was a poynt of wyzdome alſo, to knowe whoſe gret it was: I ſtepte vnto the LORDE, and beſoughe him, and with my whole heart I ſayde after this maner:

The IX. Chapter.

God of my fathers, & LORDE of mer cies, (thou y haſt made all thinges w y worde, & orde: nich mā choiow thy wyzdome, þ he ſhalde haue dominio ouer y creature, whiche thou haſt made: þ he ſhalde orde y woilde accordinge to equite & righte ouſnes, & creature iudgmet: w a true heretigur me wyzdome, which is cuer aboute y ſeaie, & put me not out fro amonge y childre: for I thy ſeruaunt & ſonne of y handmayden, am a ſible perſonne, of a ſhoue ryme, and to yd ge to the vnderſtandinge of iudgment and yf lawes. And though a man be neuer ſo perfecte amonge the children of men, yet yf thy wyzdome be not wch him, he ſhal be nothin ge regarded. But thou haſt choſen me to be a kynge vnto y people, and the iudge of thy ſonnes and daughteres.

B Thou haſt commaunded me to buyde a temple vpon y holy mount, & an altace in the cite where in thou dwelleſt: a hidneſſe of thy holy tabernacle which thou haſt prepared fro the beginninge, and thy wyzdome wch y, which knoweſt y woiles: whiche alſo was w y when thou maydeſt y woilde, & knew what was acceptable in thy ſight, & right in thy commaundementes. O ſende her me of thy holy heauens and from the throne of thy maiesty, that ſhe maye be worthy me, y aboute wch me: that I maye be worthy me, y acceptable in y ſight. For ſhe knoweth and vnderſtanderh all thinges: and ſhe ſhal labe me ſoberly in my woiles, and plecture me in hir power. So ſhal my woiles be acceptable, & then ſhal I gouerne thy people righteouſly, & be worthy to ſyte in my ſeate ſaue. For what man is he, that maye be ſeate the counsell of God? O, who can ſpeake what the will of God is: for the thoughtes of mortall men are miſerable, & our ſences are but vncertaine. And whiche mortall and corruptible body is heary vnto the ſoule, and the earthy manſyn kepeth downe the vnderſtandinge þ muſteth vpon many thinges. Verghardly can we diſcern the thinges that are vpon earth, and greata laboure we, or we can ſynce the thinges which are beſore our eyes: Who will then ſete our the greode of the thinges that are done in heaue: O, LORDE, who can haue knowlege of vnderſtandinge and meanings, excepte thou gene wyzdome and ſende thy holy goſpell aboute y: that the wayes of them which are vpon earth maye be reformed: y man maye lerne y thinges that are pleaſant vnto the, and be preſerued thoro v wyzdome.

The X. Chapter.

God made a father of the world, whā he was created alone, brought him out of his offence, cote him out of the moulde of y earth, & gaue him power to rule all thinges. When the vnrighteous man a waye in his wrath from this wyzdome, þ bocherheade perſheþ thoro y wrath of murthur. Agayne, whā y water deſtroied y whole woilde, wyzdome preſerued the righteous thoro a pootre, where ſhe was gouerner herſelf. Moreover whā mid them had gotten y vpperhande, ſo y the nations were puſt vp wch pride, ſhe knewe y righteous, preſerued him ſcareleſſe vnto God and layed vp ſure mercy for his childre. She preſerued the righteous, when he ſub from the vngodly y perſheþ, what ryme as y he ſell dome vpon y n. cities: ſhe as y he þ daye the vn fructuſſull, waſt and ſmokinge: ſhe be geteth teſtimony of their wickedneſſe: the vnrpe and vnrwymely ſittes that grow vpon the creece.

And for a cokel of a remembrance of the vn faithfull ſoule, there ſtanderh a part of ſalc. For all ſoch as regarded not wyzdome, ganne only this harte, that they knewe not the thinges which were good, but also left behinde them vnto me, a memoriall of their foolishnes: so þ in the thinges wherein they sinned, they coude not be hydd. But as for such as take hede vnto wyfdomme, she shal deliuer them from foote.

C When the righteous fled because of his wickednes, wyfdomme led him the right way, shewed him of kyngdome of God, gaue him knowlege of holy thinges, made him rich in his labours, and broughe to passe the thinges that he wente aboute. In y' discarfulnes of sodi as defrauded him, she stode by him, & made him ryche. She saued him from the enemies, and defended him from y' betrayers. She made him stronge in batayles, and gaue him the victory. þ he might know, how that wyfdomme is stronger then all thinges. When the righteous was sold, she faste him not, but deliuered him fro ymman. She wente downe with him in to the bougion, and sayed him not in the baner: yet she had broughe him the creper of y' realm, and power agaynst those that oppresed him. So for euen chat had accused him, she declared them to be lyars, & broughe him to perpetual woofshipe.

D She deliuered the righteous people and landes froe, from the nations that oppresed them. She entred in to the soule of the sinners of God, and stode by him in wordes and tolcens agaynst the horrible kyng. She gaue y' righteous the reward of their labours, & led them forth a maruelous waye: in the daye tyme she was a shadowe vnto them, and a lighte of starres in the night season. She broughe them thowow the reed see, and carid them thowow the greates water. She downed their enemies in the see, and broughe them out of the depe. So the righteous toke the spoyle of the vngodly, and sayed thy holy name O LORD E, and magnified thy victorious had with one a corde. For wyfdomme opened the mouth of y' dumb man, & made y' tongue of babe to speake.

The Xi. Chapter.

She ordered their rootes in the habes of the holy prophet: so þ they wente thowow y' wilderness y' was not inhabited, & priched their cities in y' waist deserte. They stode agaynst their enemies, & were auenged of their aduersaries. Wha they were chistie, they called vps y', & water was geul them out of y' rock, & their thirst stode d'ncid out of y' habes stone. For by y' thinges, where thowow their enemies were punished, were they helped in their nebe. For vnto the enemies thou ganeft mas bloude in steade of synnyng water. And where as they had fearcest in þ rebuete whan the childen were slayne, thou ganeft vnto thine awne a plenteuous water vnto let of þe: declaringe by the thyest þ was at that tyme, how thou woldest bringe thine awne vnto bond, & slaye their aduersaries.

For whan they were tryed & nourtred w' fatherly mercy, they knowledged how the vngodly were iudged, and punished thowow y' warch of God. These hast thou croked as a father, & pioned the: but vnto þ ether thou hast bene a boyfscous kyng, loyed hard to their charge, & condemed the. Whether they were absent or present, their punishment was alyke. For their grese was dubble: namely, moouynge, and þ remediance of thinges past. But wha they perceaued y' their punishmets vnto the good, they thonght vpon the LORD E, & wondered at þ ende. For at the last they helde moch of him, of wds in þ ourcings they thonght soome, as of an abiecte. Neuertheless þ righteous dyd not so when they were chistie: but remittit as þ thonghtes of þ foolish wote, so was also their wickednes. Where as certayne men non thowow erid dyd woofshipe dommesperentes & wayne bestes, thou sendest a multitudine of domme bestes vpon them for a vengeance: þ they might knowe, chat loke where vnto thall a mysymeth, by the same also shal be punished. For vnto thy allmyghty hande, chat made the woilde of naught, it was not v' possible, to sende amonge them an heape of stractes, or woode bys, or cruell bestes of a stractge kynde, sodi as are vnknowne, or spoure fyre, or cast out a smokinge breth, or shote horrible sparkes out of their eyes: which might not only destroye them with horringe, but also y'll them with their horrible sighe. And without these bestes might they haue bene slayne with one winde, beynge persecuted of their awne workes, and scattered abode thowow the bieth of thy power.

Neertheless thou hast outred all thinges in measure, nobie & weighe. For thou hast nerked greates strenght & might, & who maye withstande þ power of thine arme: And why like as þ small thynge þ þ balance weyeth, so is þ woilde before þ: yet as a droppe of þ morning dew, chat fallted downe vpon the earth. Thou hast mercy vpon all, for thou hast power of all thynge: and makest the as though thou sawest not the finnes of me, because they shalbe amended. For thou lovest all the thinges that are, and hatest none of the whō thou hast made neither didest thou giveyne or make any thinge of euill will.

Rom. 4. 1

How might any thinge endure, yf we not y will. O how coude any thinge be preserued, except it were called of y. But thou sparest all, for all are thine, o LORD, thou louer of soules.

The XII. Chapter.

21 LORD, how gracious & swete is thy spate in all thinges. Therfore charcest thou ebon thē measurably that go widge, and warnest them, concernynge the thinges wherein they offende: thou speakest vnto them (o LORD) and exortest thē to leaue their wickednes, and to put their trust in thee. As for those olde inhabitants of thy holy londe, thou mightest not awaye with them, for they commytred abhominable workes agaynst thee: as witchcraft, sozcery and ydo-latri: they slew their owne chyldren without mercye: they ate y mens bowels, and deuou-red the bloude: yea because of sodi abhominacion, mygdalenes & offeringes, thou slewest the fathers of the desolate soules by the handes of ourse fathers: hat y londe whiche thou louest aboue all other, might be a dwel-linge for the chyld of y God.

22 Therfore thou sparest the also (as me) y sentest y four ſinners of thyme hoole, wē hermettes to deſtroye the out by lycle & litle. For y thou wast unable to subdue y godly vnto y righteous in batrayll, or with cruell beskes, or with one rough worde to deſtroye thē together: But y mynde was to dry-ue thē out by lycle & litle, geninge thē time & place to amende: knowinge well, y it was an vnrightheous nacion & wicked of nature, & y their thoughte mighte neuer be altered. For it was a cursed sede from y begynnynge, & ſeared no mā: yea hast thou pardoned their syn-nes. For who wyl ſaye vnto the: why hast thou done y. O who wyl ſtōde agaynst thy iudgēt: O who wil come be fore y face an auēger of vnrightheous mē: O who wil blame y. yf y people perish, whō thou hast made: For there is none other God but thou, y carest for all thinges: y thou mayest declare how y y iudgēt is not vnrigh. There dar-re neither Egipt, ner yraſtē in y sighe requyre a cōspēce of them, whō thou hast deſtroyed.

Exo. 32. d
Deut. 7. d

1. Pet. 1. a

1. Job. b

For so muche thē as thou art righteous y self, thou ouerſt all thiges righteously, & pu-nishest euē hi y hath not deſerued to be punyshed, & takest him for a straunger & an aleaunt in y lōde of y power. For y power is y beginnyng of righteouſnes: and because thou art LORDE of all thinges, therfore art thou grauous vnto all. Whan men thinke y meite of a full strength, thou dearest y power holdy deſpiseſt thou them ouer y fauor:

not. But thou LORD, of power iudgest quēty, and adrests us with grate woorthiness: thou mayest do as thou wilt.

By such woordes now hast thou taught thy people, that a mā also shalbe able to leaunge: and hast made thē chulid to be of a good hope: for euen when thou adrest, thou gucst rowme to amende from synnes. For so much as thou hast punyshed, and e soch diligence deluered y enemies of thy iustice tes, which were woorthy to dye: when thou thou gaucst thē tyme & place of amēdment. y they mighte turne fro their wickednes:
y how grate diligence then punysheth thē thine arme chulid, vnto whose fathers thou hast iuorūe & made couenaentes of good y mises: So where as thou doest but dōmvō, thou punyshest thē enemies by their syn-nes: so y intē y whā we punysh, we shalbe rede y goodnes: & whan we dō silens ar punyshed, so put our trust in thy mercy.

Wherefore where as men haue lynch rauidy & vnrightheously, thou hast punyshed thē sore, eue thō so w y same thinges thō worshipped. For they wence after y weir y waye of serch, & helde y blasphement thē enemies dyspysch: for goddes iudge as chulidens of no vnderſtanding. Therfore hast thou sent a ſournefull punyshment amonge them, as amonge the chyld of y raunce. As for sodi as wolde not be reformed by these scoines & rebukes, the y worthy punysher of God. For y thinges they suffred, they bare thē unpaciffly, but ye not comēt in them but unwilling. And whan they perysch by y same thinges thā they toke for goddes, they knowed thā that there was but one true God, whō fore they wolde not knowe therfore can y ende of thē dampnacion upon them.

The XIII. Chapter.

23 Yea are all men, which haue y knowlege of God: as secrete they out of the good thinges which ar ſene, knowe not him, that of himself is lasting. Neither toke they so much regard of the woordes that ar made, as to know who was the crafterman of them: but toke the frye, ſome the wynde of ayre, y court of y ſtarcles, ſome y water, ſome the ſonne and moone, or the lightnes of heaven which rule y earth, for goddes. But they they had sodi pleasure in their beery, thā they thought them to haue bene goddes.

wherfore they haue knowen, how moch more payne he is that made them. For the mater of beary hath oydened all theſe thinges.
Or if they maruelled at the power and worke of ebe, they ſhulde haue perceaued ther by, yf he which made theſe thinges, is might-ier then they.

B For by the greatneſſe of beuty of the creaure, yf maker therof maye playnely be know-en. For theſe thinges they are the leſſe to be named, that ſoughe God ⁊ wolde haue founde him, and yet myſſid. And why ⁊ for ſo much as they were abſente in his woike and ſoughe after them, it is a cok, that they regarded and helde moch of his woike and ſawe ⁊ howbeit they are not wholly to be proued. For yf their vnderſondinge and knowlege was ſo greate, yf they coude diſcern the woilde and yf creature, they dyd they not rather fynde out of LORDE therof?

But unhappy are they, and amenge the bees is their hope, that call the God which maketh the woike of mens handes: golde, ſiluer and the thinge, that is founde out by conynge, the ſimilitude of beaſtes, or any waye ſome that hath bene made by hander of olde. Or as whan a carpenter cutteth beams a tree out of the woodd, and parcth of the hard of it conyngly: and ſo with the one parte maketh a veſſell to be vſed, and with the other parte that is leſe, which is profitable for nothinge: for it is a crooked pece of woodd and full of knobbes he carneth it diligently thoro his ſawie, and (accordinge to the knowlege of his conynge) he gearth it ſome propoſicion, faſhioneth it after the ſimi-litude of a man, or maketh it like ſome beaſt, ſtitch it ouer with reed and paymenth it, and ſeeth what ſoule ſpoer is in it, he caſteth ſome colour vpon it. Then maketh he a couuerit tabernacle for it, ſettech it in the wall and maketh it faſt with yron, prouydinge ſo for it, left it happel to fall: for it is well know-en, that it can not helpe it ſelf: And why? it is but an ymage, and muſt of neceſſite be helped.

B Then goeth he and offereth of his goo-des as he doth for his children and for his wiſe: he ſettech helpe at it, he gareth counsell at it: he is not aſhamed to ſpeake vnto it yf hee is ſicke: for health, he maketh his pericion vnto him that is ſicke: for liſe, he prayeth vnto him that is deede: he calleth vpon him for helpe, that is not able to helpe him ſelf: to ſende him a good iourneye, he prayeth him that maye not go. And in all theſe thinges yf he taketh in hande (whether it be to optayne any thinge or to woike) he prayeth vnto him that can do maner of good.

The XIII. Chapter.

A Gaine, anotheer mā purpoſinge to ſay ⁊ to beginnyng to take his iourneye thro row yf raginge ſee, calleth for helpe vnto a ſhod, yf ſo farre maker, the yf tre yf beareth him. For as ſo it, couereouſneſſe of ſmonere hath ſounde it out, ⁊ yf creaſina made it with his conynge. But yf prouydinge (O father) gouerneth all thinges fro yf begynnynge, for thou haſt made a waye in yf ſee, ⁊ a ſure path in the myddest of yf waves: be clarin-ge ⁊ herby, yf thou haſt power to helpe in all thinges, yet though a man wente to the ſee withouth ſhippe. Letteth he liſe, yf woike of yf wyfdomme ſhulde not be vaine, thou haſt cauſed an arte to be made: ⁊ therfore do men commytte their luyes to a ſmall pece of woodd paſſinge ouer the ſe in a ſhippe, ⁊ are ſand.

Exo. 14. 4

Gen. 1. 6

Gen. 1. 6

Gen. 1. 6

Gen. 1. 6

For in the olde tyme alſo whā the proude giannes perſhed, he (in robbes the hope was left to increaſe yf woilde) wrote into the ſhip-pe, which was gouerned thoro thy hande, ⁊ ſo left ſide behinde him vnto yf woilde. For happy is yf tre where thoro righteouſneſſe cometh: but curſid is the ymage of woodd, his made w handes, yet both it ⁊ he yf made it: he, because he made it: it, because it was called God, where as it is but a frayle thinge. For the vngodly ⁊ his vngodlynes are both like abſominable vnto God. Euen ſo yf woike ⁊ he yf made it alſo ſhal be puniſhed together.
Therefore ſhal there a plague come vpon the ymages of the heithen: for out of the creature of God they are become an abhominacion, a temptacion vnto the ſoules of men, and a ſnare for the ſete of the vniuſe. And why? the ſettinge out of ymages is the beginnyng of vniuidome, and the bringinge up of them is the deſtruction of liſe. For they roze not from the begynnynge, neither ſhall they decline ſo euer. The welthy vniuidome of men hath founde them out vpon earth, therfore ſhal they come ſhortely to an ende. Whē a father mourned for his ſonne yf was taken awaye ſe him, he made him an ymage in all yf haſt of his deede ſonnet: ⁊ ſo began to weſtore him as God, which was but a deede mā ⁊ oydened his ſeruantes to offre vnto him.
Then by proceſſe of tyme ⁊ thoro longe tyme, this erd was kepte as a laye, ⁊ nyas was compelled me by violence to bond ymages.
As for thoſe yf were ſo farre of, yf mā might not we: ſhippe them paſſently, their picture was broughte fro farre (like the ymage of a kynge

whē they wolde honoure) to the intent that with greates diligence they might worshippe him which was farre off, as though he had bene present. Agayne, the singular comyn be of the craseman gaue the ignorant al so a greates occasiō to worshippe ymages. For the workman willinge to do him a pleasure that see him a worke, laboured with all his comynge to make the ymage of the best fashion. And so (thorow the beauty of the worke) the comon people was diseased, in so much that they colke him now for a God, which a litle afore was but honoured as a man. And this was the erreure of mans life, whan men (ether for to serue their owne affection, or to do some pleasure unto Kinges) ascribed unto stones and stockes the name of God, which ought to be geuen unto no man.

Moreover, this was not ynough for them that they erred in the knowlege of God: but wheras they lyued in the greates warres of ignorance, these many and greates plages called they peace. For ether they slewe their owne children and offred them, or dyd sacrifice in the nyght season, or els helde vnreasona- ble wachtes: so that they repented her life ner marriage cleame: but ether one slewe another to deare maliciously, or els greued his neygh- boure wth aduouringe. And thus were all thinges myxt together: bloude, manslaughter, the fe, dissimulation, corruption, vnfaithful- nesse, sedicion, perjury, disquyetinge of good men, vncharitablenesse, defylinge of soules, chaul- grin ge of synch, vnstedfastnesse of marriage, myschaunce of aduourtie and vnchristi- nesse. And why? the honouyringe of abhominable yma- ges, is the cause, the begynnynge and ende of all euell. For they y^o worshippe Idols, either they are madd whā they be mery, or prophete clye, or lyac vngodly, or els lightly man- sweare them (Idols). For in so much as their trust is in y^e Idols (which haue nether soule ner understandinge) though they sweare falsly, yet they think it shal not hurt them.

These fore cometh a greates plague vpon them, and that was whelley: for they haue an euell opiniō of God, geuynge hede vnto Idols, sweareinge vnwisly to disceane, and dyspy- sin ge righteousness. For their sweareinge is no veracite, but a plage of them that synne, and goeth on with the offence of the vngodly.

Withouten (O & God) art swete, longe sufferinge and true, and in mercy or- drest thou all thinges. Though we synne, yet art we thine, for we knowe thy strenght. If we synne not, then art we iuste, that thou regardest vs. For to knowe the perfecte righteousness: see to knowe y^e righteousnes and power, is the rote of immu- tate. As for the thinge that men haue founde out thorow theyr euell science, it hath no disceaued vs: as the payntinge of the picture (an vnpossible labour, and care) ym- age, with diuers colours, wherof synne maketh the ignorant: so that he honourech and lo- ueth the picture of a deeth ymage, that hath no soule.

Carthelies, they that lonse the good thinges, are worthy of deeth: they that will in them, they that make them, they that loue them, and they that honoure them. The picture also raketh y^e tempereth so fast carth, laboureth it, and greueth it the fashion of a vessel, what so euer ferueth for cure: and so of y^e me pece of claye he maketh some cleane vessel for seruite, and some contrary. But when to euer vessel ferueth, that knoweth y^e power himself. So with his wayne labour he maketh a god of the same claye: this deethen he, which a litle afore was made of earth himself, and within a litle whyle after (whan he dyeth) turneth to earth agayne.

To wrechid synners, he careth not y^e more because he shal laber ner become his life shorte: but stryuethe to ercell goldmynter, y^e syluer, synthesse y^e copper, smelth, and maketh it for an bond to make vayne thinges. In his hert is ashes, his hope is but vaine care: y^e his life is moie vyle then claye: for so much as he knoweth not his amere maketh, he ge- ue him his soule to worke, and buried in his the burth of life. They coume our life to a pastyme, and eare conuersion to be but a market, and that men shulde eare be geun- ge, yee and that by euell meane. Now he of earth maketh fragile vessel and ymages, knoweth himself to offende about all othe- re.

All the enemies of thy people and y^e hol- de them in subieccion, are vnwyse, vnkynde and excedynge proude vnto their owne fa- les: for they iudge all the Idols of the southe to be goddes, which nether haue synthe to, ner nose to smell, ner eare to heare, ner fingers of handes for to grepe: y^e as for that seez, they are to slowe to go. For man maketh them, and he that hath but a doctech iuste, fashioned them. Dure no man can make God like vnto him: for seynge he to be wth tall himself, it is but mortall that he maketh with vnrighteous handes. He himself is bet- ter then they whom he worshippeth, for he lyued though he was mortall, but so v^o knowe they. See they worshippe beysa all which are most miserable: for compare thynge that can not see into them, & they are worse than those. It is there not one of the bestes, that with his sight can beholde any good thinge, neither haue they grauen pleasure thankes unto God.

The XVII. Chapter.

If Or these and such other thinges haue they suffred worthy punishment, & that out of multitude of bestes are they reuolued out. In steade of which punishment thou hast graciously ordred thine owne people, & geuen them their desire that they should see: a new & strange cause, preparing them quales to be their meate: so the intent is by the thinges which were shered and sent vnto them, they were so greedy of meate, might be with drawen from the desire that was necessary. But these within shewe tyme was necessary vnto pouerte, and called a new meate. For it was requisite that without any excuse destruction shoulde come vnto those which used crueltie, & to shewe vnto the other, how their enemies were destroyed. For when the cruell woodnesse of the bestes came vpon them, they perished through the stinges of the cruell serpentes.

B Therefore bindinge & wraich endured not personally, but they were put in feare for a late season, that they might be reformed, hauinge a token of saluacion, to remember the ordinance of thy lawe. For he that is cuer vnto, was not healed by the thinge that he sawe, but by the. O sauour of all. So in this thou shewest thine enemies, that it is thou, which bindest first all euill. As for the when they were bitten by the greeshoppers and flies, they died, for they were worthy to perish by such:

For neither the teeth of dragons met of weny monnes roomes ouer came y children, for thy mercy was euer by them that helpe the. Ther fore were they punished to remember thy wordes, but hastily were they healed againe: lest they shoulde fall in to so depe forgerfulness: that they might not see thy helpe.

C It was neither herbe nor plaster that restored the to health, but thy wordes (O LORDE) which healeth all thinges. It is thou (O LORDE) that hast the power of life & death: thou ledest vnto deathes doore, & bringest vp againe. But man through wickednes slayeth his owne soule, & when his spirit goeth forth, it cannot not againe, neither maye he call againe y soule y is take awaye: It is not possible to escape thy hande. For y ennobly y wel bene knowe y, were punished by y strength of thine arme: w strange waters, halles and raynes were they persecuted, & thowen fyre were they consumed. For it was a wonderous thinge that fyre might do more then water which quencheth all thinges: but y wolde is y curser of the righteous. Some tyme was y fyre so tame, that bestes which were sent to punish y vngodly, burnt not: y because they shoulde see y knowe, that they were persecuted w the punishment of God. And som tyme burnt the fyre in the water on euery syde, that might destroye y unrighteous nation of the carth. Againe, thou hast sed thine awne people w angels sode, & sent the bier ready from heauē: (without their labo) beinge very pleasant & well gusted. And so shewe thy riches y sweetnesse vnto thy childre, thou gauest euery one their desire, so y euery man mighte take what liked him best. But the snowe that ys aboue the violence of the fyre, y melted not: y they might knowe, that the fyre burninge in the hale of rayne, destroyed y frute of y enemies: y y anye other foigate his strength againe, y y righteous might be nourished. For y creature y fewelth y (which are y mater) is feare in punishment y unrighteousnes, but it is easy & gentle to do good, vnto such as put their trust in the. Ther fore dyd all thinges aliter at the same tyme, y were all obedient vnto thy grace, which is y noyse of all thinges, a conuincinge to y desire of the y had neede thereof: y y childre. O LORDE: who thou lovest, might knowe, that it is not nature & the growninge of frutes y feareth me, but y it is y wordes, which prestruech the y put their trust in the. For so he that might not be destroyed w the fyre, as some as it was named w a litle. Some beame, it melted: y all men might knowe, that they ought to be geuen vnto y before y Sommer ys, & y thou oughtest to be worshipped before y daye spryng. For y hope of y vnto hant full shal melt awaye as the wynter ys, & perishe as water, that is not necessary.

The XVII. Chapter.

D Reate are thy iudgements (O LORDE) y thy counsels can not be expressed: ther fore men do erre, that wil not be reformed w thy wyssdome. For when the unrighteous thoughte to haue thy holy people in subiects, they were bounde w the banes of darcknes & longe night, shew vnder y rose, thinkinge to escape y cruel & wretched wyssdome. And why so they thoughte to be hyd in y darcknesse of their synnes, they were careered aboue in y very myddel of the darck coveringe of foules, put to horrible feare & wonderous ly vnto. For the corner where they were, might not kepe them from here: because y some came downe and vexed them: yet many receyved and straunge visions made them asyred.

B Tho power of the fyre might geue them light, neither might the cleare flames of the starres lighte þe horrible night. For there appeared into the a sodane fyre, very dreadful: the y which was than they sawe nothinge: they were so a frayed, that they thought þe thinge which they sawe, to be the moir fearfull. As for the soicery z enchaunteme þe they used, it came to detrisio, and the proude wysdome was brought to shame. For they þe preyed to byge amayc the fearfulness z dyde fro of weake soules, were sicke for feare the selues, and that w soone. And though none of y w dbers feared the, yet w cre they a frayd ne the beleses which came vpon the, as þe hylfynge of the scerpentes: In so much that with cre bling they swerued, z sayde they sawe not þe aye, which no mā yet may escape.

C For it is an heuy charge, whā a mans ewe conscience beareth recorde of his wickednes z condempneth him. And why: a vexed z wounded conscience, taketh euer cruell thinge in hāde. Fearfulness is nothinge do, but a declaringe þe mā seeketh helpe z defence, to answer for him self. And loke how inoch lesse the hepe is with in, the moir is y vncertaynes of the matter, for the which he is punished. But they þe came in þe mightie might, slepe þe slepe y fell vps the fro vnder z fro aboue: somtyme were they a frayd thow w þe feare of þe wonders, z somtyme they were so weake, þe they sweamed with all: for an halye z sodane fearfulness came vpon the. After warde, yf any of the had falle, he was kepece z shurt in prison, but without chayne. But yf any dwelt in a wyllage, yf he had bene an hrad or husbardman, he suffred intollerable necessity: for they were all bounde with one chayne of dartheffesse.

D Whether it were a blasynge wynde, or a sweete sounge of y byrdes amonge the thicke braunches of the trees, or the vehemence of haillie rinyng water, or greate noyse of y fallynge downe of stoncs, or the playenge z rinyng of beastes whē they sawe noe, or y mightie noyse of roatinge bestes, or y sounde y answered a gayne in the hyc mounteynes: it made the swoune for very feare. For all the earth shyned w cleare lighte, z no mā was byndered in his labo. Onely vpon the there fell a heuy night, an ymage of dartheffesse that was to come vpon them. And they were into them selues the most heuy z horrible dartheffesse.

U The XVIII. Chapter.
 Eurtheles chy saymes had a very greate lighte and the memos here their vo yce, but they sawe not the figure of them. And because they suffred not y same thinge, they magnified the: and they were vexed a soie: because they were no hrad now: thanked the, and besoughte y (o God) þe there might be a difference. The first þe they a burnynge playe of fyre to let them in the vntewne waye, z thow gauest them the same for a fre gift without any hrad. For it was, that they shulde want lighte to be put in the prison of dartheffesse, which the chy childre in captiuyte, by whom the corrupte lighte of the lame of y wode was seer to be geuen. Whan they thought to saye the babies of the righteous: one beinge leaue out, and yet preferred to be led vnto the: then brought out the whole multitude of the chulden, and dystroyed the: in the mightie water. Of that they were more fathers certified a soie, that they knowe geue what oother they had geuen erred. ce, mighte of geod deare. Thow they people receaued y health of the righteous, in the engelbe were dystroyed. For like as thou hast hurte euer eremics, so hast thou poynted us whom thou caldest a soie. For the righteous children of the good men offend errectly, z obeyed the lawe of righteousnes to unite: þe the iust shulde be geue geod and euill in like maner, singinge passyons z father of all men. A gayne, there was hrad an unconuenient vo yce of the enemies, z piteous eric for childre that were teneat. The master and the seruaic were poynted alike, the meane man and the kynge suffred in like maner. For they all together had innenerable that dyed one death.

Teacher were y lynyng sufficient to lary y deed, for in y cuninge of an er, the noblest nation of the aye was dystroyed. As o the God helped the a seie, yet wold it not make the beleue: but in y destruction of y first be ne they knowledged, that it was y people of God. For whyle all thinge were full, whē y night was in y myddest of hir consyng: Almightye wode (o LORDE) leaped out fro heant out of y royall throne, no a rough mā of warre, in y myddest of y londe y was dystroyed: z y sharpe swerde performed y strauce comandment, slaying z slaying all thinge to death: yet it stode vps y earth reached vnto the heauen. Then the lighte of the euill dicames vexed them sodenly, and fearfulness came vpon them maner.

D Then laye there one here, another there half dead half quyt, and shewed the cause of his death. For the visions that vexed the, shewed the these thynges a fore: so that they were not ignorant, whyrfore they perished.

The execution of death conched the right also, and amonge the multitude in the myserie the was in resurrection, but they wath enbawd not longe. For the sauleless man went in all the daist, and toke the bat tle upon him, broughe forth the weap of his ministracion: even prayer and 3 cōfōns of each change, set himself agaynst y wraich, and so broughe the misery to an ende: declaiming: that by, that he was thy trairour. For he came not the multitude with bodely power, nor with weapen of might: but with the woode he subdued him that vexed him, puttinge the in remembrance of the ooch 2 counsaile made unto the fathers. For whan the deed were fallen downe by heapes one upon another, he stode in the myddelst, pacified the wraich, and parted 3 waye unto the 2 wayes. And whyr in his longe garnet was all the beay, and in the four corners of the fons was the glory of the fathers graue, and whyr mayntly was written in the crowne of his heade. Omo these the destroyer gaue place, and was a stryde of them: for it was wry temptation worthy of wraich.

I For the wraichly, the wraich came upō them without mercy unto the ende. For he knew before what shulde happē unto them: how that whan they had cōmēd to leze them go, and had sent them out with greate diligence: they wolde repent, 2 folowe upon them. For whan they ro-
U nte mourninge and makinge lamentacion by the graues of the dead, they deuyed another foolhmes: so that they persecuted them in their synge, whom they had cast out a fore of prayer. Worthy necessity also broughe them unto this ende, for they had cleane forgotten the thynges 3 happened unto them a fore. Due the thinge that was wantyng of their penyntment, was requysite so to be fulfilled upon them with comēces: that thy people mighte haue a maruelous passage thow, and that these mighte fynde a straunty board.

The was every creature fashioned agayn of the new a cōdinge to the wyll of their maker, obeyenge thy commandementes, 3 thy children mighte be kept without harme. In the cloude ones shadowed their tentes, the dyre cant appeared, where a fons was water: so 3 in the reed set there was a waye without impement, and the greates depe be came a grene felde: wherethowas all 3 people wome that were de sende with thy hande, kenge thy wonderous 2 maruelous woorkes. For as 3 hoises, so were they fedd, 2 leape like lābes, playfinge the o LORD, which haddest deliuered them. And whyr they were yet myndefull of the thynges, that hadde not whyle they dwelt in the losse: how the grounde broughe forth flies in steade of cat tle, and how 3 ryer scarawd with the multitude of frogges in steade of fyshes.

But at the last they sawe a new creation of byrdes, what ryme as they were disceatēd with lust, and desyred delicate meates. For whan they were speakinge of their ap- peice, the quakes came vp vnto them from the see, and penyntmentes came upon 3 synners, not without the totes which came to passe a fore by the vehemence of 3 streames: for they suffred wraichely a cōdinge to chric wickidnesse, they dealt so abominably 2 churlyshly with straungers. Some receaued no vntowme gestes, some booghe 3 straungers in to bondage: that vnto them good. The fyde: all these thynges there were forme, that not only receaued no straungers with their wylls, but persecuted those also, and byd the moch curll, that receaued the gliably. Ther- fore were they penyshed with byndnesse, like as they that were couered with sodane darcknesse at the doores of the righteous: so 3 every one sought 3 intrance of his doer.

Thus the elemences turned in to them sil- uer, like as whan one rune is chaunged upon an instrument of musick, and yet all the residue kepte their melody: which maye easily be perceaued, by the sighte of the thynges that are come to passe. The dyre lōbe was turned in to a watery, 2 3 thinge that a fons fram me in the water, wente now upon the dyre grounde. The fyr had power in the water (contrary to his awne vertue) and the water forgate his awne kynde to quench. A gayne, the flammes of the nyosome beastes horre not the fleshy of them that were with them, neyther melted they the yse, which els melteth lightly. In all thynges hastidous promoted thy people (o LORD) and broughe them to honoure: thou hast not despyed them, but all maye and in all places hast thou stoude by them.

The ende of the boke of wyfdomme.

Ecclesiasticus called Iesus Syrac

The prologe of Iesus the sonne of Syrac vnto his boke.

Many and greater men haue declared wysdome vnto vs out of y^e lawe, out of y^e prophetes, & out of other that followed the. In the which thinges I haue ought to be commended, by the reason of doctrine and wysdome: Therefore they that haue it reade it, shalbe not onely the scholers be wyse there thorow, but shalbe other also wyllyng to ge and wyslinge.

After that my graund father Iesus had given diligent labour to reade the lawe, the prophetes and other booke that were left vs of oure fathers, and had well exercised himself therein: he purposed also to wyte some thinge of wysdome and good maners, to the ende that they which were wyllyng to lerne and to be wyse, myght haue the more vnderstandinge, and be the more apte to lede a good conuersion.

Wherfore I eposue you to receaue it lowlyngly, to reade it with diligence, and to take it in good worth: though oure wordes be not so eloquent as the famous orators. For the thinge that is wysdom in the hebrewe tonge, soundeth not so well when it is translated in to any other speache. For only this boke of myne, but also the lawe, the prophetes, and other booke sounde farre other wyse, then they do, when they are spoken in their awne language.

Now in the XXXVIII. yeare when I came in to Egypte in the tyme of Ptolomy Kinge, and commended there all my lyfe, I gat libertie to reade and wyte many good thinges. Wherfore I thought it good and necessary, to bestowe my diligence and traualle to inuente this boke. And consideringe that I had tyme, I laboured and byd my best to perfumme this boke, and to bringe it vnto lichte: that the straungers also which are disposed to lerne, myght applye them selues vnto good maners, & tye a cordinge to y^e lawe of y^e LORD.

What this boke comeyneth.

The first Chapter.

Al wysdome cometh of God the LORDE, & hath bene ever w him, and is before all tyme. Who hath nombred y sonde of the see, y droppe of the rayne & the dayes of tyme? Who hath measured the heyth of heauē, y breadth of the earth & the depaith of the see? Who hath soughe out the grounde of Gods wysdome, which hath bene before all thynges? Wysdome hath bene before all thynges, and the vnderstanding of prudence from euerlastyng. (Gods wyde in the heyth is the well of wysdome, and the euerlastyng commandementes are the intrance of her.) Who whom hath y rote of wysdome bene declared? Or who hath knowne his wyte? Who whom hath the doctrine of wysdome bene discovered and shewed? and who hath vnderstande the manyfolde intrance of her? There is one that is the hysse, the maker of all thynges, y Allmightie, y kynge of power (of whom men saughe to stonde greatly in awe) which syteth vpon his throne, beinge a God of dominion: he hath created her thorow y holy goospe: he hath sente her, nombred her, and measured her: he hath poured her out vpon all his woofes, and vpon all flesh accordinge to his gift: he geuech her richely vnto them that loue him. The feare of the LORDE is wisshipe and triuſſe, gladnesse & a ioyfull crowne. The feare of the LORDE maketh a merry heart, geuech gladnesse, ioye and longe life. Who ſo feareth the LORDE, it ſhal go well with him at the laſt, & in the daye of his deatch he ſhal be bleſſed.

C The loue of God is honorable wiſdome: loke vnto whom it appeareth, they loze it, for they ſee what wondrous thinges it doth. The feare of LORDE is the begynnyng of wiſdome, and was made with the faithfull in the mothers wombe: it ſhall go with the choiſen women, and ſhal be knowne of righteous and faithfull. The feare of the LORDE is of right Gods ſeruyce, that pietyeth and iuſtifieth the hert, and geuech mych & gladnesse. Who ſo feareth the LORDE ſhal be happye: and when he hath neede of comforte, he ſhal be bleſſed. To feare God is the wiſdome that maketh rich, and bringech all good with her. She filleth the whole houſe with hir graces, & the garners with her treaſure. The feare of the LORDE is the crowne of wiſdome, and geuech pleneuous peace & healt. He hath ſene her & nombred her: knowlege and vnderſtandinge of wiſdome hath he poured out as a raiſyn, and them that helde her faſt, hath he brought vnto hono^r.

D The feare of the LORDE is the roce of wiſdome, and hir beaunches are longe life. (In the treaſures of wiſdome is vnderſtandinge and deuocion of knowlege, but wiſdome is abhorred of ſynners.) The feare of the LORDE is by waye out ſynne, for he that is without feare, can not be made righteous, & his wylfull boldnes is his owne deſtruction. A pacie man wyl ſuffre vnto the tyme, and th: ſhal he haue of rewarde of ioye. A good vnderſtandinge wil hyde his woordes for a tyme, and many mes lippes ſhal ſpeake of his wiſdome. In the treaſures of wiſdome is the declaration of doctrine, but the ſynner abhorreth the wiſshipe of God. My ſonne, if thou deſyre wiſdome, kepe the commandement, and God ſhal geue her vnto the: for the feare of the LORDE is wiſdome & nureture, he hath pleaſure in faith and louynge himſelfe, and he ſhal fill the treaſures ther of. We noe obſtaine and vnfaithfull to the feare of the LORDE, and come not vnto him with a duble hert. We noe an hypocrite in the ſight of men, and take good hebe what thou ſpeakeſt. Mark well theſe thinges, leſt thou happen to fall and bringe thy ſoule to diſhonour, and ſo God diſconce thy ſecretes, and caſt the downe in the myddelt of the congregacion: becauſe thou wouldeſt not reuolue the feare of God, and becauſe thy hert is full of faynednes and diſceare.

The ii. Chapter.

W Iſonne, if thou wile come in to ſeruyce of God, ſtonde faſt againſt covyſous and feare, & arme thy ſoule to contention: ſaſtele thine here, and be pacie to be rowne thine eare, & ceate the woordes of vnderſtondinge, and ſtand theſe awaye, when thou art enuyſed, ſolde the ſuffe vnto God, ioyne thy ſelf vnto him & juſt, that thy liſe maye encrease at the laſt. What euer happeneth vnto the, receaue it with patience, and be pacie in thy trowble: it is better as golde and ſyluer are tryed in the fire, even ſo are acceptable men in the furnace of aduerſite. Beleeue in God, and be ſhal be the oide thy waie a right, and pur thy truſt in him. Solde faſt thy feare, and growe the in. O ye ſo feare the LORDE, ſtate ſuretye of his mercy: ſtand theſe not awaye from him, that ye fall not. O ye that feare of LORDE, beleeue him, and youre rewarde ſhall not be enuyſed. O ye that feare of LORDE, put your truſt in him, & mercy ſhal come vnto you for pleaſure. O ye ſo feare of LORDE, ſe ye wyl ſerue him, & ye herces ſhal be lightened.

Conſider the olde generacions of men: theye children, and marce them well: mee theſe euer any one confounded, that put his truſt in the LORDE: Who euer conſumed in his feare, and was forſaken: Oe whom theye euer deſpyſe, that called faithfully upon him. For God is gracious and mercifull, he ſiggeueth ſynners in ſ tyme of trowble, and is a defender for all them ſo ſeke him in ſ trowble. We be vnto him that hath a double hert, wicked lippes and euell occupied handes, & to the ſynner ſo geuech two maner of man. We be vnto them that are loyſe of hert, which put not their truſt in God, and theſe ſe ſhal they not be deſerued of him. We be vnto them that haue loſt patience, ſo ſtate in the right waye, and are turned bad in the forward waye. What wyl theye do when the LORDE ſhal begynne to viſite the?

They that feare of LORDE, and nouerlye truſt his woerde: and they that loue him, wyl kepe his commandement. They that feare of the LORDE, wyl ſeke out ſ thinges that are pleaſant vnto him: and they that loue him, ſhal fulfill his lawe. They that feare of LORDE, wyl prepare their herces, and ſhall be ſeales in his ſight. They that feare of LORDE, kepe his commandement, and wyl

11 patient, till they se him self) sayenge: better 12 is for us to fall in the handes of Y LORD 13 then to be in the handes of men: for his mer-14 cy is as greace as his self.

The III. Chapter.

1 The children of wysdome are a cogre-2 gation of the righteous, and their 3 exercise is obedience and love. Heare 4 thy father (as my deare children) and do 5 that after, that ye maye be safe. For the LORD 6 will haue the father honoured of the chil-7 dren: and like what a mother commaundeth 8 her children to do, he will haue it kepte. Who 9 so honoureth his father, his synnes shall be 10 forgiven him: and he that honoureth his mo-11 ther, is like one that gathereth treasure toge-12 ther. Who so honoureth his father, shall ha-13 ue the eye of his arme children: when he ma-14 keth his prayer, he shall be heard. He that ho-15 noureth his father, shall haue a longe life: B 16 he that is obedient for Y LORDES sake, his 17 mother shall haue ioye of him.

1 He that feareth the LORD, honoureth 2 his father and mother, and both them seruy-3 es, as it were vnto the LORD himself. So 4 honoureth thy father in dede, in woide and in all 5 patience: that thou mayest haue his blessin-6 g: for the blessinge of Y father buyrdeth vpon 7 the houses of the children, but the motheres 8 curse reacheth out the foundations. Reioyse 9 not vpon thy father is requoyed, for it is no 10 honoure vnto the, but a shame. For the wor-11 shippe of a mans father is his awne worship-12 pe, and where the father is without honou-13 re, is the dishonesty of the sonne. My son-14 ne, make moche of thy father in his age, and 15 graue him not as long as he lyueth. And yf 16 he vnderstande sayls, haue patience w 17 him, and despyse him not in thy strength. For 18 the good dede that thou shewest vnto thy fa-19 ther, shall not be forgotten: and when thou 20 thy self wostest, it shall be rewarded the 21 (as in thy mothers offence thou shalt be 22 recompensed with good, yet it shall be foun-23 ded in the in righteousness) and in the daye 24 of trouble thou shalt be remembered: thy sy-25 unne also shall melle awaye, like as the yf in Y 26 saye ourne noether.

1 He that feareth his father, shall come to 2 honoure: he that despyeth his mother, is cur-3 sed of God. My sonne, performe Y woordes 4 of louyng mekenesse, so shalt thou be loued 5 above other men. The greater thou art, the 6 more humble thy self (in all thinges) and thou 7 shalt synne sand in the sighte of God. For 8 greace power belongeth onely vnto God, Z 9 he is honoured of the lowly.

Take not out the thinges that are aboue thy capacite, and search not the gronde of soch thinges as are to mightie for the: but loke what God hath commaunded thee, thinke vpon that allwaye, and be not curious in many of his woordes. For it is not needfull for thee, to seke thine eye, Y thinges Y are secrete. Make not then to much search in superfluous thinges, and be not curious in many of his woordes: for many thinges are shewed vnto the already, which be aboue Y capaci-te of men. The meylinge with soch hath begyred many a man, and tangled their wytes in vanite. Let me be that loneth parell, shal per. sh therein.

In harde herte shall saye euell at Y last (an hert that goeth two wayes, shall not prospere: he that is forwarde of hert, wyll euer be laded with sorowes, and Y vngodly synner wyll heape one synne vpon another. The coun-cell of the poude hath no health, for Y plante of synne shall be rooted out in the. The hert of sh in Y hath vnderstanding, shal perceyne hye thinges, and a good care wyll gladly beteue vnto wysdome. An hert that is wyse hath vnderstandinge, wyll abstaene from syn-ne, and increase in the woordes of righteousnes. Water quenchech burnyng fyre, and mercy reconylych synnes. God hath respacted Y to hym Y is thankfull: he thinkech vpon him agaynst the tyme to come: so that when he fallak, he shall fynde a stronge holde.

The III. Chapter.

1 No some, be fraude not the poore of Z 2 his almes, and turne not awaye thi-3 ne eyes from him that hath neede.
4 Despise not an hongric soule, and desye not 5 the poore in his necessity: greue not the hert 6 of him that is helpelesse, and richidraue not 7 the gyfte from Y needfull. Refuse not the pray-8 er of one that is in trouble, and turne not a-9 waye thy face from the needy. Cast not thine 10 eyes a syde fro Y poore, Y thou graue him not 11 occasion to speake euell of the. For yf he com-12 playne of Y in the byterenes of his soule, his 13 prayer shall be heard: and he Y made him, shall 14 heare him. Be courteous vnto Y company of 15 the poore, humble thy soule vnto the elder, Z unto their mother: so shall thou be as an obedient sonne of thy father, and he shall love the more thee for thy fatherly wisdom. Wisdom beareth life in to her children, receaueth thee for her sake, and will go before thee in thy waye of righteousness. He that loveth her, loveth himselfe: for they that love her diligently, shall have grace to ye. They that reuerence her, shall have the heritage of life: for where she encreaseth, there is the blessing of God. They that honour her, shall be for seruantes of the holy one: and they that loue her, are beloved of God. Who so giveth care vnto her, shall indue the heritage: and he that hath respect vnto her, shall dwell safely.

He that beleueth her, shall haue her in possession, and his generation shall endure: for when he shall fall, she shall go with him before all, heare, heare, and remission shall she bring vpon him, and trye him in his doctrine: till he haue so proued him in his thoughts, that he committeth his soule vnto her. They shall she stablish him, bringe the right waye vnto him, make him glad, make him his secretes, and heape vpon him the treasures of knowledge, vnderstandinge and righteousness. But if he go wronge, she shall forsake him, and geue him ouer in to the handes of his enemies.

Uy some, make moche of the tyme, as thoue the thinge is euill, and for thy life shame not to saye thy truth. For there is a shame that bringeth shame, and there is a shame that bringeth reuolte and shame. Accepte no person after thine owne will, that thou be not founded to thine owne decaie. Be not ashamed of thy neighbour in his aduersitee, and keepe not backe thy counsel, when it maye do good, neither shewe thy wisdom in his hurt. For in the charge is wisdom, to knowe, so is vnderstandinge, knowledge and learninge in the talkinge of the wyse, and fastidynesse in the wordes of righteousness. In no wise speake agaynst the word of truth, but be ashamed of the eyes of thine owne ignorance. Shame not to confesse thine error, and submitte not thyselfe vnto every man because of shame. Withstande not the face of the mightie, and stryue not agaynst the stream. But for the truth stryue thou vnto death, and God shall fight for the agaynst thine enemies. Be not haughty in thy tongue, neither slacke and negligent in thy wordes. Be not as a lyon in thine owne house, destroyinge thy household folkes, and oppressinge them: for vnto thee, let not thine hande be stretched out to receaue, and shute vnto them thy mouth.

Truste not vnto thy riches, and saye not: truste, I haue enough for my life. For it shall not helpe in the tyme of vengeance and remission. Solowen the lust of thine owne heart in thy strength, and saye not: truste, how shall I be cast downe because of my wealth: for doubtles God shall auenge it. And saye not: I haue committed no synne, but what will haue happened me. For the Almightie is a patient remerder. Because if thou be great, be not therefore without feare, and heape one synne vpon another. And saye not: truste, the mercy of the LORD is great, he shall forgieue my synnes, be they neuer so many. For like as he is mercifull, so goeth wrath from him also, and his indignacion cometh downe vpon synners.

Make no carriage to tarry vnto thy lord, and truste not of his daye to daie: for shortly shall his wrath come, and in the tyme of vengeance he shall despoile thee. Truste not in wisdom, for they shall not helpe in the daye of punishment and wrath. Be not carid aboute to be wry, and go not in to euery waye: for so doeth the synner that hath a bubble tongue. (Seconde part in the waye of the LORD) Be steadfast in thy vnderstandinge, as by thy word, and solowen the word of peace and righteousness. Be gentle to heare thy word of God, that thou mayest vnderstande it, and make a true answer to thy wisdom. Be swift to heare, but slowe and patient in geuinge answere. If thou hast vnderstandinge, shappe thy neighbour an answer. If no, laye thine hand vpon thy mouth: lest thou be trapped in an vntrue word, and so be shamed. Thou that wast in a mans wyse talkinge, but thy wyse is discreete in his owne discreete. Be not a pury accuser as long as thou lyvest, and be no slauer vnto thy tongue. For shame vnto you goeth ouer the theste, and an euill name ouer him that is a bubble tongue: but he that is a pury accuser of other men, shall be hated and confounded. Be that thou sufficethe small and greates alike.

The VI. Chapter.

Truste not thy neighbours enemye for thy friendes sake: for who so is an enemye shall be thy enemye of rebulke and dishonour, and who so ever beareth enuye and a double tongue, offendeth. Be not proud in the daye of thine owne vnderstandinge, lest thy leaues wither, and thy fruite be destroyed, so that thou be left as a byere. For a wicked soule destroyeth him that hath it, maketh him to be laughing stocke of his enemies, and bringeth him in the pacience of the ungodly. A sweete word is multiplied frendes, and pacifical the y be at variance, and a thankfull conge will be plentiful in a good man, but the frend shi pe of many, nevertheless haue but one coun sell of a thofande.

23 If thou gettest a frende, pacie him first, and be not haustie to geue him credence. For some man is a frende but for a tyme, and wyl not abyde in the daye of trouble. And there is some frende that turneth to enemye, and catcheth parte agaynst the: and yf he knowe my hurt by the, he collecth it out. Agayne, so me frende is but a companion at the table, and in the daye of neede he contrymeth not.
But a sure frende will be unto y euen as thy owne self, and deale faithfully with thy honorable folke. If thou suffer trouble and affliction, he is with the, and yf hee hath not hym self from the. Departe frō thine enemye, yee and beware of thy frendes.

6 A faithful frende is a stronge defence: who so toucheth such one, toucheth a noble trea sure. A faithful frende hath no feare, the might of golde and siluer is not to be com pared to the goodnesse of his faith. A faith full frende is a meane of life, and they y sea reth the LORD, shall fynde him. Who so fear eth the LORD, shall prosper with frendes: and as he is himself, so shall his frende be also.
My sonne, receaue doctrine frō thy youth up, so shalt thou fynde wysdome vntill thou be old. Go to her as one that ploereth, and smeth, and was ye pacificaly for her good fru it. For thou shalt haue but litle labour in her worke, but thou shalt eate of hir fruite right soone. How exceding sharpe is wysi dome to vnderstand men: an vnted fast body wyl not remayne in her. Vnto such she is as a care a touchstone, he casteth her from him in all the haire: for wysdome is to him but in name, there be but few y haue knowle ge of her. (But woe them that knowe her, the abyssh eate vnto y appearinge of God.)

7 One saie (my sonne) receaue my doctryne, and refuse not my counsell. Put thy foete in to hir synnes, and eate hir yocē vpon thy neck: some domme thy synner vnder her, bea n her paciently, and be not weary of hir han de. Come vnto her with y whole heart, and kepe hir wordes with all thy power. Stee as to her, and she shall be shewed the: and whā thou hast her, forsake her not. For at the last thou shalt fynde rest in her, and that shall be tuned to thy greate ioye. When shall hir fea ture be a stronge defence for the, it hir yocē a firmes sayment. For the benefite of life is in her, and hir bandes are the couplinge to gether of saluacion. See a glorious rayme is it, thou shalt put it on, and the same crow ne of ioye shalt thou weare.

My sonne, yf thou wilt eate hebe, thou shalt haue vnderstandinge: and yf thou wilt applye y mynde, thou shalt be wys. If thou wilt dome dome thine eare, thou shalt re ceiue doctryne: and yf thou deliue in hearin ge, thou shalt be wys. Seconde with y mul titude of such elders as haue vnderstand inge, and consente vnto their wysdome with thine heart: that thou mayest heare all godly sinners, and that the worthy sentence of sca pe the not. And yf thou iust a man of discre te vnderstandinge, gett the soone vnto him, and let thy foete treade vpon the stepes of his doctryne. Let thy mynde be vpon the com mandementes of God, and be earnestly occu pied in his lawes: so shall he stablysh y here, and geue y wysdome at thine owne desyre.

The VII. Chapter.

Q no euill, so shall there no harme happen vnto the. Departe awaye from the thinge that is wicked, and no mysfortune shall meete with the. My son ne, some no euill thinges in the forowde of vntighteousnes, so shalt thou not reape the fruites folde. Lade not vnto man for any loth shipe, neither vnto the kyng for the feare of honoure. Justifie not thy self before God, for he knoweth the heart: and desyre not to be reputed wys in the presence of the kyng. Ma ke no labour to be made a iudge, excepte it so were, yf thou couldest mightely put domme wickednes: for yf thou shouldest sitte in a we of y presence of the mightie, thou shalt best saue in geuyng sentence. Offende not in y multitude of the cite, and put not thy self amonge the people. Wynde not two synnes to gether, for in one synne shalt thou not be punysht. Saye not rashly, God wil loke vpon the: multitude of my oblacions, and what I offre to the hiest God, he wil accepte it.

Be not saynt barred when thou makest y prayer, neither slacke in geainge of allmesse.

neither do the same agaynst thy frende. Wye not to make any maner of syle, for the custome therof is not good. Make not many wo mightie hath created. Make not thy boaste in the multitude of thy wisdom, but humble thy selfe from thine heart: and remember that the mouth shall not be longe in taunting, and that the vengeance of the flesh of þe vngodly is a very fyne and woame. Be not ouer thy fronde for any good, ner thy faithfull brother for the best golde.

C Departe not from a discrete and good man, that is fallen vnto the: for thy poicion in the feare of the LORDE, for þe gift of his honesty is aboute golde. Where as thy seruant weetech truly, increate him not euell, ner the hytelinge that is faithfull vnto the. Let a discrete seruante as thine owne seculer, be fraude him not of his libertie, nether let aue him a poore man. If thou haue cattell, loke well to them: and if they be for thy profit, kepe them. If thou haue sommes, bynng them vp in nurture and lernynge, 2 holde the in a me from their youth vp. If thou haue daughters, kepe their body, 2 shew not thy face cherefull towarde the. Marye þe daughter, and so shalt thou persourne a weightie matter: but geue her to a man of vnderstandinge. If thou haue a wise syster thine owne mynde, forsake her not: (but comitee not thy self to the barefull.)

Honoure thy father from thy whole heret, and forgey not the sorefull trauaile that thy moether had w the: remember that thou wast boone thoro them, and how cast thou recompense them the thinges that they haue done for the: Feare the LORDE with all þe soule, 2 honoure his ministers. Let one thy master with all thy strength, and forsake not his seruantes. Feare the LORDE with all thy soule, 2 honoure his prestes. Geue the their poicion of the first frutes and increase of þe carth, like as it is commaunded the: geue the 2 shulders, and the 2 ppointed offeringes, and firstlinges. Reach thine hande vnto the poore, that God maye blisse the with plenteousnes. Be liberal vnto all men lernynge, yet let not be do good euen to them that are deede.

Let not them that wepe be without comforte, but meane with such as mourne. Let it not greue the to wyser the sick, for that shall make the to be beloved. What so euer thou saiest in hande, remember the ende, and thou shalt neuer do amysse.

Stryue not with a mightie man, lest thou chaunserd fall in to his habes. Make no variatō w a riche mā. lest he happen to bringe vp an harde quarrell a-gains þe. For golde 2 silver hath vnderme in ny a man, yet eue þe heres of byng in hande made to fall. Striue not w a man that is full of wordes, 2 laye no stickes vpon his syde. Bepe no company with the vndermed, lest hee ue thy lynesd an euell reporte. Dispyse not a man that turneth himselfe awaye from synne, and cast him not in the tech withall: but remember þe we are fraile creature. Thyng is come of ne mā in his old age, for we maye olde also. Be not glad of the death of thine enemye, but remember that we must be all the soure of vs (and sayne wolde we come in to ioie.) Despyse not the stomons of scholers as haue vnderstandinge, but acquaintance thy self w the wise sentences of them: for of them thou shalt lerne wysdomme and the doctrine of vnderstandinge, and how to be great men without complaynes.

Go not from þe doctrine of the clow, for they haue lerned it of their fathers. For of them thou shalt lerne vnderstandinge, for they maye make answere in þe tyme of neede. Rynde not þe coales of synners, lest they be bent in the fyre flammes of their synne. Resist not the face of the blasphemers, that he laye not waye for thy moere. Let not vnto him that is mightier then thyself: If thou sendest him, counte it but loss. Be not suerrie aboue þe power: if thou be, then thou shalt surely to paye it. Go not to lawe w the wylde, for he wyl indge a cordinge to his owne honoure. Trauaile not by the waye wher þe is biancess, lest he do the euell: for he shall loweth his owne wilfulness, 2 so shalt thou perissh thoro his foly.

Stryue not with him that is angry and cruel, and go not with him in to þe wylde: for bloude is noching in his sighte, and where there is no helpe, he shall murther þe. Take no counsell at foolles, for they looe no thinge but the thinges that please themselves. Make no coucell before a stranger, for thou canst not tell what wyll come of it. Wpset thine heart vnto every man, lest he be vnto full to the, and put the to reprofe.

The ix. Chapter.

Be not gelous ouer þe wyfe of thy bysome, for she shew not thine hard poynte of wretched doctrine vnto the. Geue not the power of thy lyfe vnto a woman, lest she come in þe strenght, and ischa be con founded. Lett not vpon a woman that is desyrous of many men, lest then fall in to his snare. Wee not the company of a woman that is a player and daffler, 2 heare him not, lest thou perissh thoro his enuynges. Bysol be not a mayde, that thou be not hurt in his honore. Caste not thy mynde upon harlottes in any manner of chynge, lest thou destroye both thy self and thine heritage. So not aboute gasinge in every layne of the cite, ne the wyde chere abide in the strettes thereof.

 Come a waye thy face from a beutyfull woman, and loke not upon the faynesse of other.

B Many a man hath perished thorow the trayce of women, for thow in the dysyde is a wyde asie weete a fyne. An aduenterous woman shalke treaden vnder foete as myne, of any one that goeth by the waye. Many a man wonderinge the beutyfe of a straunge woman, haue bene cast out, for his wordes hymke as a fyne. Yett not wch another mans wyf by any meane, lye not with her open rebeld, make no wordes with her at. I wy-lest thine here consente vnto her, so thou with thy bloodes fall in to destruccion. Forsa-thou an olde frende, for the newe shal not be like him.

A new frende is new wyne: let him be olde, thou shalt drynke him with pleasure. Wyftyre þy honoure and riches of a synner, for the newest not what destruccion is for to come upon him. Delyte not thou in the thing that the vngodly haue pleasure in: begyle: that the vngodly shall not be a acceptoun vntill their graue.

C Aspeke from the man that hath power to laye, so nedest thou not to be afrayed of death. And wch thou comest vnto him, make no fauce, lest he happen to take awaye thy life. Remember that thou goest in the myddes of synners, and upon the bulwoikes of þy cite. Bewarre of thy neighbour as myne as thou canst, and medie with soch as be wyfful and haue vnderstandinge. Lett iust men they geites, let thy mynde be in the feare of God, let the remembrance of God be in thy mynde, and let all thyr saynges be in the com-mandementes of the Lorde. In the han-des of craftemen shall the wordes be commended, so that the prynces of the people in the wyrdome of their saynges. A man full of wordes is pelous in his cite: and he that is temerous and pass shame in his talkyn-ge is to be abhoyred.

The X. Chapter.

I Wyf iudge wil orde his people with discrecion, and where a man of vnderstandinge beareth rule, there goeth it well. As the wyf of the people is himselfe, wch are his officers: and let what maner of man the ruler of the cite is, soch are they that dwell therein also. An vnrwise kynge detrogeth his people, but where they that be in succoure are men of vnderstandinge, there the cite prospereth.

The power of the earth is in the hande of God, and when his tyme is, he shal set a profitable ruler vpon it. In the hande of God is the power of man, and vnto the scribes shal he laye his honoure. Remember no wronge of thy neighbour, and medie thou wch no vnrrighteous woikes. Pryde is hatfull before God and men, and all wickednes of the hethen is to be abhoyred. Because of vnrighteous dealinge, wronge, blasphemies and vnequyte dyscete, a realme shal be traslared fro one people to another.

There is nothinge worse then a curvuous man. What prydest thou the, o thou earth and asyles: There is not a more wickid thing, then to loue money. And why? forch one hath his soule to sell: yett is he but fylchlye dege wch he lyueth.

And though the physician steme his helpe neuer so longe, yett in conclusion it goeth after this maner: to daye a kyng, to morrow deeth. For whan a man dyeth, he is the byre offer pntes, beastes and wounes. The begynnynge of mans pryde, is to fall awaye from God: and why? his hert is gone from his maker, for pryde is the original of all synne. Who so taketh holde thereof, shal be fylled with cursingea, and at þy last it shal once thowre him. Therefore hath the LORDE broughte the congregacions of the wicked to dyshonour, and destroyed them vnto the ende.

God hath destroyed the states of pryde prynces, and set vp the meke in their steade.
 God hath wyched the roces of the proude heithen, and planted the lowly amonge them. God hath ouerthorne the loubes of the heithen, and destroyed them out of the grounde. He hath caused them to wyche awaye, he hath broughte them to naught, and made the memorial of them to crasse from out of the earth. (God hath destroyed the name of the proude, and left the name of þy humble of synners. Pryde was not made for man, nether wch fulmes for mens children.
 The fynde of men that feareth God, shal be broughte to honoure: but þy feith which trangresseth the commaundementes of þy LORDE shal be shamed. He þy the ruler amonge bretheren, is holde in honoure amonge them, and he regardeth soch as feare the LORDE.

The glory of the ryche, of the honorable and of the poore is the feare of God.

Despise not thou the iust poore man, and magnifie not a rich vngodly. Greater is the iudge and iudger in hond, yet is there none greater, then he y feareth God. Vnto y feruante that is discrete, shal the ste do seruyce. Ye that are wyse and well nurcourd, will not grudge whan he is reformed, z an igno- rante body shal not come to honoure. De not proude to do thy worke, and dispare not in the tyme of aduersite. Better is he y labour- eth, and hath pleasure inco of all thinges, then he y is gorgious, and wanteth bread.

E My sonne, kepe thy soule in mekenes, and geue her hir due honoure. Who shal iustifie him, that synneth agaynst himself: Who wil honoure him, that dishonoureth his owne life: The poore is honoured for his faith- fulnes and tructh, but y rich is had in reputa- cion because of his goodes. Ye that obteynest thyself honestly in pouerte, how much more shal he behaue himself honestly in riches: And who so obteynest himself vnhonestly in riches, how much more shal he behaue himself vnhonestly in pouerte.

The XI. Chapter.

The wysdome of him y is broughe lowe, shal lift vp his heade, and shal make him to yet among greater me. Commende not a man in his betweye, neither despise a man in his vter appareance. The Deu is but a small beast amonge the fowles, yet is his force exceedinge swete. De not proude of thy rayment, and exalte not thyself in the daye of thy honoure: for y workes of the wysest onely are wonderfull: yete glorious, se- crete and oute nome are his workes. Many cyuantes haue bene sayne to yet downe vpo the earth, z y vnclippy hath worne y crowne. Many ynighe me haue bene broughe lowe, and the honorable haue bene deliuered in to other mens handes. Condemne no man, befo- re thou haue tryed out the matter: and whan thou hast made enquisition, then reforme righteously. Geue no seruce before thou hast herde the cause, but first let men tell out their sayles.

Straye not for a matter that toucheth not thyself, and stonde not in the iudgment of synners. My sonne, meble not with many matters: z yf thou wylt be riche, thou shalt not geue it: and though thou rennist y waye a foie, yet shalt thou not escape. There is some ma that laboureth, and the more he recei- rith himselfe the lesse he hath. Agayne, some man is searsh full, hath nebe of helpe, waiteth strengch, and hath greate pouerte, and Gods eye looketh vpon him to good, setreth him vp from his lowe estate, and lifteth up his he- de: so that many men maruell at him, and ge- ne honoure vnto God.

Prosperite and aduersite, life and death, pouerte and riches come all of the LORD. (Wysdome, marcoure and Knowledge of his we are with God: lowe and y noyes of god are with him. Loue and dardnes inuade for synners: and they that exalte them- selues in euill, waxe olde in euill.) The grace of God remaynech for the righteous, and his good wyl shal geue prosperite for euer. Some man is rich by lyaunge rygardy, and is the porcion of his rewardes, in that he say- eth: now haue I gotten rest, and now wil I eate and drynte of my goodes myself alone. And yet he considereth not, that the pun- dia weth nye, y he must leane all the thinges vnto other men, and bye himselfe. Whan thou fast in thy conuante, and exortest thyself therein, and remayne in the wordes y age. Continue not in the wordes of synners, but put thy trust in God, and put in thine estate: for it is but an easy thinge in y sight of God, to make a poore man riche, and thank- denly. The blessinge of God hasteth to y warde of the righteous, and maketh his riches soone to flourish and prosper. Say me what helpech it me: and what shal I buye of thyre: Agayne, saye noe: I haue myght, how can I wante: Whan thou art in medi- re, forger not aduersite: and whan it com- eth, noe well with it, beane a good hope, thus shal be better, for it is but a small thynge to God, in the daye of deatch to remember y my a coudinge to his waye. The aduente of an houre maketh one to forger all the sure, and whan a man dyeth, his meede is discouered. Praise no body before his deach, for a man shal be knowe in his deach.

Winge not eery man in to thine heu- ly for the discreasfull layeth waxe y vnshy- like as a partrich in a maude, so is the hart of the proude: and like as a speye that lotheth upon the fall of his neygbb. For he wanteth good vnto euell, and slaundereth the dyle. Of one spard is made a greates fyt, and godly ma layeth waxe ye y blame. Beware of the discreasfull, for he synneth in many thinges, to bringe y in to a personal shame. If thou talkest an aleaier vnto y, he shal troye the in vnguarde, and bryue the thine owne waye.

13 Do good vnto the righteous, and thou shalt haue greates reward: though noc of þen yet, no done) the LORDE him self shal reward the. He shideth noc in a good case, that is allway occupied in euill, & geueth no almes: for the hysse hateth the synners, and hath mercy vpon them that shew the wyes of repentance. Wene thou vnto such as fure God, and reuene noc a synner: As for the vngoddy and synners, he shall recompense vengeance vnto them, and kepe them to the daye of wrath. Wene thou vnto the good, and reuene noc the synner: do well vnto him that is lowly, but geue noc to the vngoddy. Let noc the dyed be greued him, that he be noc mightier then thy self therein. For so shal thou receiue curse as much euill, in alle the good that thou doest vnto him: And why? the hysse hateth synners, and shal reuene vengeance to the vngoddy.

B In prosperize a frende shal noc be known. In aduersite an enemy shal noc be hyd. For when a mā is in wealthe, he greueth his enemies; but in heuynes and trouble a man shal knoe his frende. Trust neuer thine ene my, for like as an yon rusteth, so doth his midne. And though he make moch croudinge and endinge, yet kepe well thy mynde, and beware of him. Sett him noc by þe, nether let him see at thy right hande: lest he turne him, gett in to thy place, take thy rowme, and sette thy seate, and so thou at the last remember thy wordes, and be pucted at my saynges.

C Wynde noc two synnes together, for the one shal noc ene be unpunished. Who wil haue pite of the charmer, that is stynged of þe serpent, or of all such as come nye þe beastes? Let so is it w him þe kepeth company with a wicked mā, & lapeth him self in his synnes. Woe season wil he byde w the, but yf thou fumble, he tarieth noc. An enemy is swete in his lippes, he can make many wordes & speake many good thinges: yet he can wepe w his eyes, but in his herte he ymagineth, how to thorne the in to the pytte: & yf he maye fynde oportynite, he wil noc be satisfied w bloude. If aduersite come vpon the, thou shalt fynde him there first: though he pteitende to yf helpe, yet shal he vndermyne þe. He shal shake his heade, & clape his handes oute þe for thy gadance, & wyle he maketh many wordes, he shall dysguyse his countenance.

The xliij. Chapter.

14 So to toucheth pitch, shal be fylled withall, and he that is familiar w yf proud, shal clothe himself with pride. He taketh a burthen vpon him, that accompanyeth a more honorable man then himself. Therefore kepe no familiarite with one that is richer then thy self. How agree the therell & the poore together; for yf þe one be synner a gaynst the other, it shal be too late. The rich dealeth wrighteously, & the poore teacheth withall: but þe poore beinge oppressed and wrogously deale withall, suffreth scarcenesse, & geueth saye wordes. If thou be so: his profite, he wyle thebur yf thou haue nothinge, he shal forsake the. As longe as thou hast any thinge of thine owne, he shal be a good fellowe with the: yet he shal make the a bare man, and not be sory for the. If he haue nede of the, he shall desirande the: (with a pteuy mod) shal he put the in hope, and geue the all good wordes, and saye wnt at wantest thou: Thus shal he shame þe in his meate, vntill he haue suppe the cleane wpp rayse or thryse, and at the last shal he lauge the to scoone. Afterward, when he seeth that thou hast nothinge, he shal forsake the, and shake his heade at the.

B Beware, that thou be noc diseased and be wighte downe in thy synpynesse. Be noc to humble in thy wysdome, lest when thou art broughte low, thou be diseased thorow foolishnes. If thou be called of a mightie man, abstain thy self shal he call the to him the more ofte. Pleasse noc thou vnto him, that thou be noc shotte out: but go not thou faire of, lest he forgett the. Withdawe noc þe self fro his speach, but beloue noc his many wordes. For w moch communicacion shall he tempte the, and w a pteuy mod shal he question þe of thy secretes. The vnicuersall mynde of his shal marce þe wordes, he shal noc space to do yf herte & to put yf in pesson. Beware, & take good heed to þe self, for thou wilt fall in parrell of þe ouerchomyng.

C Know whā thou hearest his wordes, make the as though thou werest in a dreame, & wake up. Loue God all thy life longe, & call vpon him in thy nede. Every beast logeth his life, men so let every man loue his neyghboure. All flesh wil reioyce to their life, and every man wil kepe company with such as he is himself. But as þe wolfe agreeth with the lambe, so doth the vngoddy with þe righteous. What felishippe shuld an holy man haue with a dogg: & how can the ryche and the poore agree together? The wilde asse is the Lyons pray in the wilderness. euen so are poore men the meate of the ryche. Like as the preude maye noc a waye with lowly men, euen so doth the ryche abhorre the poore. If a rich man fall, his frendes see him vp agayn: but when the poore salie, his frendes forsake him. If a rich mā fall in to an error, he hath many helpers: he speaketh proude wordes, and yet men iustifie him.

D But yf a poore man go wronge, he is punished: yet though he speak wisely, yet can it haue no place. When the riche man speaketh, every body holdeth his tēge: and loke what he sayeth, they praise it vnto the cloudes. But yf the poore man speaketh, they saye: What selowe is this? and yf he do amysse, they shal deströye him. Riches are good vnto him that hath no synne in his conscience, and pouerte is a wicked thinge in the mouth of the vn godly. The heart of man chaungeth his countenance, whether it be in good or euill. A chearfull countenance is a token of a good heart, for soe is it an harde thinge to knowe the thoughte.

The XIII. Chapter.

Blessed is the man, that hath not felten with 3 wordes of his mouth, and is not punished with the conscience of synne. Happie is he that hath had no heuines in his mynde, and is not fallen from his hope. It becommeth not a carterous man and a mygarde, to be ryche: and what shulde a mygarde doo wech golde? He that with all his carefulnes heapech together vnrighteously, gathereth for other folkes, and another mā shal make good chere with his goodes. He yf is wicked vnto him self, how shal he be good vnto ocher men? How can soch one haue any pleasure of his goodes: There is no chynne moche, then when one disfaouretch himself, 2 this is a reward of his wickednes. If he do any good, he doeth it not knowinge therof, and agaynst his will, and at the last he be dareth his vngracienesse. A mygarde hath a wicked eye, he turneth away his face, and despiseth his owne soule. A carterous mans eye hath neuer ynough in the portion of wickednes, vntyll the tyme that he wither awaye, and haue lost his owne soule.

B A wicked eye spareth bread, 2 there is scarcenesse vps his table. My sonne, do good to 3 self, as yf thou hast 2 gūe 3 LORDE his due offerings. Remember 3 death tarieth not, 2 how 3 the couenaunte of the graue is shewed vnto the: for the couenaunt of this worlde shal bye the death. Do good vnto 3 frende before thou bye, and a comynge to thy abylyte reach out thine hande, and geue vnto 3 poore. Be not dispoyned of 3 good daye, 2 let not 3 peicion of 3 good daye ouerpaas

the. Shale thou not leaue thy transpoynt laboure vnto ocher men? In the beginning of the heretage geas and calfe, and sanctifie thy soule. Wouste thou righteousnes before thy death, for in yf hell chere is no meate to fynde. All fleish shal fade awaye like grass, 2 like a flouthinge leaue in a grener. Some growe, some are cast downe: men so is yf generacion of fleish and bloude: one cometh to an ende, another is borne.

All transitory thinges shall stytle vnto the last, and the worker therof shal go withall. Eury chosen worke shal be iustified, and he yf mchlech withall, shal haue honoure therein. Blessed is the man yf he spech him in wisdom, and exerceyeth himself in vnderstandinge, 2 with discrecion shal he thynke vpon the seie knowlege of God. Which consisteth yf wayes of wysdome in his heart, hath vnderstandinge in his creature, goeth after her (as one that seeth hir out) 2 comyngeth in hir wayes. He loleth in at hir windowes, 2 hearkeneth at hir doores: He reacheth his nett beynde hir house, 2 strengtheneth his stake in the wall: He shall pitch his tent nye vnto hir hande, and in his tent shal good thinges rest for euermoore: He shal sit in hir chylde, vnder hir coveringe, 2 shal dwell vnder hir banes ches. Vnder hir coveringe shal he be defended from the heate, and in hir glory shal he rest.

The XV. Chapter.

He that feareth God, will do good: and who so specheth the same, shal open vnto wysdome. As an honorable man shal she mete him, and as a wygin shall she receaue him. With 3 bread of life and vnto standinge shall she fede him, and geue him the water of wholsome wysdome to drinke. If he be constant in her, he shall not be moued: and yf he holde him fast by her, he shal not come to confusion. She shall ioyne him to honoure amonge his neighbours, and in the myddest of the congregacion shall she open his mouth. With the spere of wysdome and vnderstandinge shal she fill him, and clothe him with the garment of glory. She shal heape the treasure of myrrh 2 ioy vps vnto him, and geue him an enclafinghe name in heretage. Foolish men wyll not take hold vpon her, but such as haue vnderstandinge, will mete her, for she is farrre from pryde and discrecion. Men that go aboute with lyce, will not remember her: (but men of trouth shall be founde in her, euen when the beholdinge of God.) Praise is not seemly in the mouth of yf vn godly, for he is not iust of yf LORDE.

of God commeth wysdome, & the prayer shall stande by the wysdome of God, and shal be plentiful in a faithfull mouth, and the LORD Eshal geue her vnto him.

- B Saye not thou: It is the LORD Eshal saue me: I am gone by, for thou shalt not do if thou sayest that God hath said: he hath caused me to go wronge, for he hath no need of the vngodly. God hath all abhominacion of erreure, & they that feare God wyl loose no sch. God made man from the begynnyng, & left him in the hande of his counsell. He gaue him his commaundemen-tes and preceptes: yf thou wilt obserue the commaundementes, & keepe a ceceptable faith-fullnes for ever, they shal preserue yf. He hath set water and fyre before the reach our thine hande vnto which thou wilt. Before man is left and death, good and euill: loke what him shalt, shalbe geuen him. For the wysdome of God is greace and mightie in power, and beholdeth all men continually. The eyes of the LORD E are vpon them that feare him, and he knoweth all the workes of man. He hath commaunded no man to do vngodly, nether hath he geuen any man leue to synne.

The XVI. Chapter.

- Like not thou in the multitude of vngodly children, and haue no pleasure in them, yf they feare not God.
Trust not thou to their life, and regarde not their labours: for one sonne yf feareth God is better, the a thousand vngodly. And better it is for a man to dye without childen, the to leaue behynde him such children as are vngodly. For by one yf hath vnderstandyng, maye a whole cite be upholden, but though the vngodly be many, yet shal it be maysted throughe them. Many such thynges hath my-re eyes, and greater thynges then these hath I herde with myne eares. In the congregation of the vngodly shal a fyre burne, & ouercome vnfaythfull people shal the wyche be humbled.
- B The olde iudices obtayned no grace for their synnes, which were destroyed, trustyng to their owne strenght. Neither spared he them, amonge whom Eoch was a straunger: but smote them and abhorred them because of the pryde of their workes. He had no pite vpon them, but destroyed all the people, that were so stout in synne. And for so much as he was aware not the fyre hundred thousand that gathered them selues together in yf hardnesse of their heart: it were maruell yf one byngge harmed, shulde be fyre. For mercy & much is with him: he is both myghty tie to forgoue, and to poure out displeasur.

Like as his mercy is greace, and so is his punyshment also, he indgeth a man according to his workes. The vngodly shal not escape in his spoyle, and the longe patience of him thou seest with mercy, shal not byde behynde.
All mercy shal make place vnto euery man accordinge to the deservyng of his workes, (and after the vnderstandyng of his pilgrymage.)

Saye not thou: I wyl hyde myself from God, for who wyl thynke vpon me from abo-uer: I shal not be knowne in so greace a hea-pe of people, for what is my soule amonge so many creatures? Beholde, the heauen, yet the heauen of heauens, the depe, the earth and all that therein is, shall be moued at his presence: the mounetaynes, the hilles and the foundacions of the earth shal shake for feare, when God wyslyteth them. These thynges booth no here vnderstonde, but he vnderstandeth euery heart, and who vnderstandeth his workes? No man seyth his soule, and the most parte of his workes are secretes. Who wil declare the workes of his righteousnes?
Who shal be able to abyde them: for the covenant is fatte from some, and the cryn-ge out of men is in the fullingunge. He that is humble of heart, thynketh vpon such thynges: but an vnwysse and enuious man casteth his mynde vnto foolish thynges.

My sonne, herten thou vnto me, & lerne vnderstandyng, and marce my workes with thine heart: I wyl geue the a sure doctrine, & plene shal I enstructe the. God hath set his workes in good order from the begynnyng, and parte of them hath he sundred from the other. He hath garnysed his workes from everlastinge, and their begynnynges a-cordinge to their generacions. None of the hyndered another, rather was any of them disobedient vnto his worde. After this, God loketh vpon the earth, and fylled it with his goodes. With all maner of luynges beas-tes hath he covered the grounde, and they all shalbe turned vnto earth agayne.

The XVII. Chapter.

Obspere man of the earth, and turned him vnto earth agayne. He gaue him the nombre of dayes and cer-tayne tyme, yet and gaue him power of the thynges that are vpon earth. He clothed him with strenght, and made him a star his or-nelinesse. He made all fleshy to stonde in awe of him, so that he had the dominion of all beastes & soules. He made out of him an hel-cion and tonge, eyes and eares, and a heart to vnderstande, and fylled them with instruction & vnderstandinge. He created for them also the knowledge of the spere, fylled their heart with vnderstandinge, and shewed them good and euill. He set his eye vpon their herces, declaring vnto them his greates and no ble workes: that they shoulde praysie his holy name together, reioyse of his wonders, & be willinge of his noble aces. Besides this, he gaue them instruction, and the lawe of li fe for an heritage. He made an euerlastinge covenante with them, and shewed them his righteousnes & iudgemente. They sawe his glory with their eyes, and their eares herde the maney of his voyce. And he saide vnto them: beware of all vnrighteous thinges. He gaue euery man also a commandement concerninge his neighbour.

B Their voyces are euer before him, and are not hyd from his eyes. He hath seer a ruler vpon euery people, but Israel is of LORDES poicion. All their workes are as the Sonne in y sight of God, & his eyes are allwaye lo kyng vpon their wayes. All their vnrighteousnesses are manifest vnto him, & all their wickedneses are open in his sight. The mercy of a man sheweth is as it were a purse to him, and a mans good dede preseruet him as the apple of an eye. At the last shall he awake, & rewarde euery man vpon his head as he hath deserued, and shal turne them together in to the nethermost partes of the earth. But vnto them that wil repent, he hath geue the waye of righteousness. As for such as be weake, be comforted the, sufferech them, and sinderch them the poicion of y ve rne. O come then vnto the LORDE, forsake thy synnes, make thy prayer before the LORDE, do the lesse offence, turne agayne vnto the LORDE, forsake thine vnrighteousnes, be an vnter enemy to abhominacion: studie to knowe the righteousness and iudgementes of God, stonde in the poicion that is set forth for the & in the prayer of the most hye God. Go in to the poicion of the holy wordes, with such as be lyuinge and geue thanks vnto God.)

C Who wil praysie the LORDE in the hell: Whye not thou in the ecroure of the vngedly, but geue him thakes before death. As for y beede, thansfulnesse pershech from him as nochinge. Geue thou thanks in thy life, yet while thou art lyuinge & whole shal thou geue thanks, and praysie God and reioyse in his mercy. O how greates is the louyng & byndnesse of the LORDE, and his mercifull goodnes vnto such as turne vnto him: In all thinges maye not be in man: & why: the sonne of man is not immortal, and he hath pleasure in the vanite of wickednes. What is more cleare the the Sonne yet shal y say le. O what is more wisdome, then the thynge that flyeth and bloude hath ymagined: and that same shall be respoyed. The LORDE seyth the power of the hye heaue, and all are but earth and ashyes.

The xviiiij. Chapter.

S E that I saych for euermore, meddel I thinges together. God only is righteous, & rema ynto a victorious ryng for euer. Who shall be able to expell the wyrtues of him: Who hath foughte out the grounde of his noble aces: Who shal dede the power of his greates: O, whowold take vpon him to tell euery mercy: As for the wonderous workes of y LORDE, they maye nothinge be taken from them, nothinge maye be put vnto them, neher maye the grounde of them be founde out. But when a man hath done his best, he must begynne agayne: and when he thynketh he is come an ende, he must go agayne to his labour. What is man: Wherto is he worthy: What good or euill can he do: If the nombre of a mans dayes be almost an hundred yeres, it is litle.

Like as the droppes of raine are vnto y see, and as a granel stone is in comparis on of the sonbe: so are these few yeres in a dayes euerlastinge. Therefore is y LORDE pacient with them, and pouerch ouer his mercy vpon them. He saue and pcerueth the thoughtes and ymaginacions of their heart, that they were euill: then fou heapeh vpon his mercifull goodnes vpon them, and sheweth them the waye of righteousness. His mercy that a ma hath, reacheth to his ney beare: but y mercy of God is vpon all flesh. He chasteneth, he teacheth and nouryseth: yettuen as a shepherde turneth agayne his flock, so doth he all them that receaue chastyng, nurroure and doctrine. Mercifull is he vnto them, that stonde in awe of his iudgementes.

My sonne, when thou dost good, make no grudginge at it: and what so cometh thy geust, speake no discomfortable wordes. Shal not the dew coole the heat: Wher is a worde better then a gift. Is not a few ly worde a good honest gift: but a great man geureth them both. A fool shal call a man in the earth, and that roughly, & a gift of the mygarde putteth out y eyes. Wher righteousnes before thou come to iudgment: Lete befor thou speake, and go to physick in case thou be sicke: examen and indige thy self, befor the iudgment come, and so shalt thou fynde grace in the sighte of God. Sum the chyf saye afore thou be sicke, and in tyme of thy disease theme thy conuersacion. Lete not to paye allowaie, and stonde not in feare to be resourmed vnto death, for the rewarde of God endureth for ever. Before thou payeest, prepare thy soule, and be not as one that tempteth God. Thynde vpon the wretched indig nation that shalbe at the ende, and the bou re of vengeance, wher thou shalt curme a wate in his face. When thou hast ynough, remem ber the tyme of hunger: and when thou art rich, thynde vpon the tyme of pouerte and scarcenesse.

From the morninge vntyll the euenynge the tyme is chaunged, and all such chynges are done done in y sighte of God. A wy se man feareth God in all thinges, and in the waye of transgression he kepeth him self from synne. A discreet man hath pleasure in wysdome, and he that synneth her, maketh moch of her. They that haue had vnderstan dinge, haue beale wysly in wordes, haue vn derstonde the tructh and righteousnes, and haue sougth one wyse remedes and iudgmen ts. Solowe not thy lustes, but turne y from thine owne will. For yf thou geseit thy sou le thy desire, it shal make thine enemies to laugh the to scoome. Take not thy pleasure in greete voluptuousnes, t meble not to moch withall. Make noe to greate cheare of the thinge that thou hast wonne by auanta ge. lest thou fall in to pouerte, and haue no thinge in thy purse.

The XIX. Chapter.

Labourynge man that is gemen vnto bondenenes, shall not be riche: and he that maketh not moch of small thyng shal fall by litle and litle. Wyne and wo men make wyse men renagates, and put men of vnderstandinge to repouere: and he that ac companieth aduocaters shal become a wick ed man. Meeches and womnes shall haue led to heretage, yee he shall be setz vp to a greater example, and his soule shalbe roced out of the nombre. He that is haustie to greue euidence, is lighte mynded, and both agaynst himself. Who so reioyseth in wickednes, shal be punyshed: he that hateth to be resourmed, his life shalbe shortened: and he that at her tish bablinge of wordes, quenched wick ednes, he that offendeth agaynst his owne soule, shal repente: and he that reioyseth in wickednes, shalbe punyshed.)

Rehearfe not a wicked and churlish wor der: wyse, and thou shalt not be hyndered.
 Euen thy se cretes nether to frende nor foe, t yf thou hast offended, tell it me out. For he that thou hast offendid, and marck the: and when he synneth oportunyte, he shall hate the. Yf thou hast herde a worde agaynst y myghbour, let it be deed within thertye daye sure, thou shalt haue no barne the by. A foo le trauaileth with a worde, like as a woman that is payned with bearinge of chyldre. Lik e as an arrowe spott in a dogges eye, so is a worde in a foolles heere. Tell thy frende his faute, lest he be ignoraunt, and saye: I haue not done it, or yf he haue done it, that he do it nomore. Reproue thy myghbour, that he sepe his conge: and yf he haue spott, that he saye it nomore.

Tell thy myghbour his faute, for oft tyme an offence is made, and greue not credite to euery worde. A man falleth some tyme with his conge, but not with his will. For what is he, yf hath not offendid in his con ge: Ceare thy myghbour warnynge, be seare thou threaten him, and geue place vnto the laue of the LORDE. The feare of God is all wysdome, t he that is a righte wyse man feareth the laue. As for the doctrine of wic kednes, it is no wysdome, and the prudenes of synners is no good vnderstoning: it is but wickednesse and abhominacion t a blas phemyng of wysdome. A simple man of small vnderstandinge that feareth God, is better then one that hath moch wysdome, and transgresseth the laue of the Lord.

A craftye soell man can be wyse, but he is vnrigheteous, and with gifte: he wayst eth the open and manyfest laue. A wicked man can behaue himself humbly, and can do well with his head, and yet is he but a dis ceauer within. He hyedeth his face, and dis guyseth it: because he shulde not be know ne, he pueneth the.

And though he be so weake that he can do the no harme, yet when he maye fynde oportunyte, he shall do some euill. A man maye be knowne by his face, and one that hath vnderstandinge, maye be perceaued by the losse of his countenance. A mans garment, laugheth t goynge, declare what he is.

The XX. Chapter.

Some man reproueth his myghbour oft tynes, but not in due season: Agaynst some man holdeth his conge, and he is wyse and discreet. It is moch better to great warrynge and to reproue, then to beare euell will: for he that knowlegeth him self openly, shalbe preserved from hurt and destruction. As it is as when a chamberlayne that row desire and lust desyleth a mayden, euen so is it with him that useth violence and unrighteousnes in y^e lawe: (How good a thing is it, a man y^e is reproued, to shewe openly his repentance: for so shalt thou escape as y^e full synne.)

Some man keepeth silence, and is founde wyse: but he that is not ashamed what he sayeth, is hatefull. Some man holdeth his tongue, because he hath not the understandinge of the language: and some man keepeth silence, to wynte a comenyeit tyme. A wyse man wyll holde his tongue eyll he se oportynite, but a wanton and an indiscrete body shal regarde no tyme. He that useth many wordes, shal hurte his owne soule: and he that talketh auercoore vpo him unrighteously, shalbe hated.

Some man hath oft tymes prosperite in wicked thinges: Agayne, some man getteth moche, and hath harme and losse. There is some gift that is needynge word: Againe, there is some gift, whoset remarde is dubble. Some man getteth a fall for beynge to proude, and some cometh to worshippe from lowe estate. Some man bieth moche for a litle pryce, and must paye for it sevenfold.

A wyse man with his wordes maketh him self to be loued, but the fauours of foolles shalbe poured out. The gift of the unwise shal do the no good, for his eyes are seuen foldes. He shal geue lile, and saye he gaue moche: he openeth his mouth and crieth out, as it were one that crieth out wyne. To daye he lendeth, to morrow he aseth it agayne, and such a man is to be hated. The fool sayeth: I haue no frende, I haue no thanke for all my good dedes: yet euen they that eate my bread, speake no good of me. O how oft, and of how many shal he be laughed to scorn. He talketh a moue perillous fall by such wordes, then yf he fall upon the grounde: euen so shal the folles of wicked men come haistly. In the mouth of him that is unauyght, are many inuention and vniuite wordes. A wyse sentence shall not be allowed at the mouth of the fool, for he speaketh it not in due season.

Some man smytheth not, because he hath not wherwithall, and in his rest he shal be synged. Some man there is that destroyeth his owne soule with shame, and for an unwise bodyes sake befoiretch he is, (and with acceptynge of personnes shal he vndobeyn self.) Some man proumeth his frende a gift for very shame, and getteth an enemy of him for naught. A lye is a wicked thing in a man, yet shall it be cur in the mouth of the unwise. A thefe is better, than a man that is accustomed to synne, but they both shal haue destruction to heretage. The condicions of lyars are vn honest, and their synne is euer with them.

A wyse man shall bringe himself to be knowne with his wordes, and he that hath no understandinge shall be seer by amonge great men. He that clyeth his londe, shal increase his heape of coine: he that worketh unrighteousnes, shall be euailed, but he that pleaseth great men, shall escape moche euill. Repentance and giftes blynde the eyes of the wise, and make him domme, that he can not see his fautes. Wyssdomme that is byde, and treasure that is hoorded vp, what profit is in them boch? Better is he that keepeth his ignorance secrete, then a man that bysheth his wyssdomme.

The XXI. Chapter.

In some, yf thou hast synned, do it no more: but paye for the synne. Remember, that they maye be for gaue the. Yf thou synne, euen as from a sepulchre: yf thou comest to nye her, she wyll bite the. The teeth thereof are as the teeth of a lyon, to slaye the soules of men. The wisdom of man is as a sharpe two edged swerde, which maketh such woundes that they can not be heale.

Strife and wrongeous dealinge shall wast awaye a mans goodes, and the more proude a rich house shalbe brought to nauyge: so the riches of the proude shalbe rote out. The prayer of the poore goeth out of the mouth, and cometh vnto the eares, and his vengeance (or defence) shall come, and y^e haistely. Who so hateth to be reuenged, it is a token of an vngodly person: but he that feareth God, wyll remember himself. A mighty man is knowne a farre of by his language, but he that hath understandinge, perceaueth that he shal haue a fall.

Who so buydeth his house with chert and wynter, is like one that gathereth stones in wynter. The congregation of the ungodly is like stubble gathered to gether, that shall be a flamme of fyre. The waye of the ungodly is farre with stones, but in their ende is hell, darkness, and payne. He that keepeth the lawe, wyll holde fast the iustitias binge thereof, and the ende of the feare of God is wysdome. He that is not wyse, wyll not be caughte in good: but the vnwyse man aboundeth in wickednes: and where by vertues is, there is no vnderstandinge. The knowledge of the wyse shall flowe like mace that runneth ouer, and his counsell is like a fountain of life.

C The hert of a foole is like a broken vessel, he can kepe no wysdome. When a man of vnderstandinge heareth a wyse woode, he shall commende it, and make moche of it. But if a voluptuous man heare it, he shall haue no pleasure therein, but cast it behynde his backe. The callinge of a foole is like an hevy burden by the waye: but to heare a wyse man speake, it is a pleasure. Where a doctore is in the congregacion, it is ased at the mouth of the wyse, and they shall poure his wordes in their eeres. Like as a house that is destroyed, euen so is wysdome vnto a foole: As for the knowlege of the vnwyse, it is harder wordes. Doctore is vnto him that hath no vnderstandinge, euen as fathers abate his sere, and like manicles vpon his right hande. A foole listeth vp his voyce wth laughter, but a wyse man shall scarce laugh secretly.

D A rymge is vnto a wyse man a Jewell of golde, and like an armice vps his righte arme. A foolish mans foote is soone in his neighbours house, but one that hath experience, shall be ashamed at the personne of the mightie. A foole wyll pepe in at a wyndow to the house, but he that is well nouerced, wyll stonde without. A foolish man stondeth here in ymge at the doore, but he that is wyse, wyll be ashamed.

The lippes of the vnwyse wyll be callinge foolish thinges, but if wordes of such as haue vnderstandinge, shall be weyed in the balance. The hert of fooles is in their mouth, but the mouth of the wyse is in their hert. When the vngodly cursech the blasphemer, he is cursech his owne soules. A pious accuser of other men shall besyle his owne soule, and be hated of euery man: (but he that repecth his conge and is discrete, shall come to honour.)

The XXII. Chapter.

A Slouthfull body is moulded of a stone of claie: he that toucheth him, must wash his handes agayne. A mysintendeth is the dishonoure of the father. A foolish daughter shall be little regarded. A wyse daughter is an heritage vnto her husbande: but she that commeth to dishonesty, bringeth hir father in bewynes. A daughter that is past shame, dishonoureth both hir father and hir husbande: the vngodly shall regard her, but they boch shall despise her. The playenge of Musick is not meete where bewynes is, euen so is the counsell to doctryne of wyse dome euer vnto pleasure vnto foole.

Who so teacheth a foole, is euen as one that gleweth a posther together: as one that telleth a taylor to him that heareth him not, and as one that rayseth a man out of an hevy slepe. Who so telleth a foole of wysdome, is euen as a man, which speaketh to one that is a slepe. Who he hath tolde his taylor, he is as a taylor: Who one byeth, lamentacion is made for him, because the light sayeth him: canst thou let me mourne ouer a foole, for he wanteth vnderstandinge. Make but litle weeping because of the deed, for he is come to rest: but the life of the foole is worse then the death. Seven dayes do men mourne for him that is dead, but the lamentacion ouer the vnwyse and vngodly shall endure all the dayes of their life.

Talke not moche with a foole, and go not with him that hath no vnderstandinge. Beware of him, lest it turne the to enuayse, for thou shalt not be besyled with his smite. De parte from him, and thou shalt fynde rest. Thou shalt not be drawen back in to his foolishnes. What is heuier then lead: And what shall be a foole be called els, but lead: Gode, saith a hope of yron is easier to beare, then an vnwyse, foolish, and vngodly man. Like as the band of woodd bounde together in the foundation of the house can not be loosened, euen so is it with that which is stablished in that thought of counsell. The thought of the wyse, shall neether feare nor be offended at any tyme.

Like as a saye playstred wall in a winter house, and hie buyldinge, maye not abyde that wynde: so is a foole here afraid in his ymaginacion: he feareth at euery thinge, and can not endure. He that vnpeth at mans eye, bringeth forth teares: and he that vnpeth the hert, bringeth forth that meangye and thought. Who so casteth a stone at the byrdes, frayeth them a waye: he that blasphemeth his frende, breaketh that frendshippe, though thou be worst a swerde at thy frende, yet buyrpayre not, for thou mayest come agayne to that frende. If he speake lowely, feare not, for ye maye be agreed together agayne: excepte he be so that hath blasphemed him, by daye him, open his secretes and wounde him trowe openly: for all such thinges shall dryue a waye a frende.

12 Be faithfull vnto y^e neyghb^r in his power ce, that thou mayest reioyse with him also in his prosperite. As yde sted fast vnto him in y^e tyme of his trouble, that thou mayest be hey re wth him in his heritage. Like as the vapour and smok^e goeth out at the oven before y^e fyre, euen so euill wordes, rebukes and threate nyngs go before bloodsheddinge. Be not a shamed to defende y^e frende: as for me, I wyl not hyde my face from him, though he shulde do me harme. Who so euer beareth it, shal beware of him. Who shal see a watch before my mouth, & a sure seale vpon my lippes, y^e I fall not wth the, & y^e my conge destroye me not:

 father z God of my life, leave me not in thair ymaginacion. O let me not haue a proude me. Take fro me the lustes of the body, let not the desyres of unclennes take holde vpon me, and geue me not ouer in to an vnshame fast and obstinate mynde.

2 Hear me o ye children. I will geue you a doctryne, how ye shal orde y^e mouth: who so keepeth it, shal not perissh throu his lip pes, ner be hurt throu wicked wordes (As for the synner, he shalbe taken in his owne varite: he that is proude and curst, shal fall therein.) Let not thy mouth be accustomed with swearinge, for in it there are many fal les. Let not the name of God be contin ally in y^e mouth: for like as a strauent which to ofe penyshed can not be without some s re, euen so what so ener he be y^e sweareth and nameth God, shal not be cleane purged fro synne. A man that vseth much swearinge, shalbe fylled with wickednes, and the plage shall neuer go from his house. If she begyle his bocher, his fauce shalbe vpon him: yf he knowlege nocht synne, he maketh a dubble offence: and yf he sweare in vayne, he shall not be founde righteous, for his house shal be full of plagos.

 man that is accustomed with the wordes of

 of his life. To synne twyse is to mede, but the thirde bringeth wrath and destruccie.
 An vboece stema^t can not be quenched (as for he feareth onely the eyes of man, and con sidereth not that the eyes of the LORD are cleaer then the Sonne, beholdinge all y^e for longe life shalbe receaved of him.

Wisdomme shal praise hirself, & be honored in God, & reioyse in myn best of his people: In the congregacions of the chryest shal she open hir mouth, & triumph in y beholdinge of his power: In y myddest of hir people shal she be exalnd, & wonderd at in the holy iustice: In the multitude of the chofen she shalbe commended, & amonge such as be blessed she shalbe praised, & shal saye: I am come out of the mouth of y chryest, first borne before all creatures. I ceas'd yf light yf fayeth not, & aryse in the heauen, & couered all the earth w a cloude. My dwellinge is aboute in y heyr, & my face is in the pillar of the cloude. I myself alone haue gone rounde aboute the compass of heauen, & pearced the grounde of y tpe: I haue walkt in the floures of y tce, these floures in all landes: my demynion is in every place and in every nacion, & wch my power haue I croben downe the hertze of all, both hye and lowe.

In all these chinges also I sought rest, & dwellinge in some perpetuaunce. So yf creatur of all chinges gaue me a commaundment: he that made me, & appoynted me a tabernacle, and saide vnto me: Let thy dwellinge be in Jacob, and thy inheritaunce in Israel, & thou thyself amonge my chofen. I was created from the begynninge and before the worlde, & shal noe leaue of vnto the worlde to come. In the holy habitacion haue I serued before him, and so was I stablished in a city. In yf holy cite rested I in like maner, & in Jerusalem was my power. I took rote in y honorable people, euen in the porcion of y LORD: In his heritaunce, & kepte me in y iustice of the sayntes. I am set up an hye lute a Cedar vpo Libanus, & as a Cypress tre vpon the mount Hermon: I am equalled like a palme tre in Cadan, & as a rose place in Jericho: As a saye olyue tre in the selbe, & am equalled like as a plantayne tre by the water side. I haue geuen a smell in the streets, as yf Cinnamon and Balme, that hath so good a sauour: yee a sweete odoure haue I geuen, as it were Myrr of the best.

I haue made my dwellinges to smell as it were of rosyn, Galbannum, of Clowes and Incense, & as Libanus when it is not beate downe, & mine odoure is as the pure Balme. As the Trechyme haue I stretcht out my banches, and my banches are the brant chous of honoure and louynge sauours. As yf mye haue I broughte forth frute of a sweete saoure, and my floures are y frute of bonde and riches. I am the mother of benyge, of lous, of feare, of knowlege & of holy hope. In me is all grace of life and truct: In me is all hope of life and vertue. Come vnto me, all y that be despyous of me, & fill your selues with my frutes: for my frute is sweeter then hony, & so is my inheritaunce more then the hony combe: the remembraunce of me endureth for euermore. They that care me, shal haue the more honger: and they that drynke me, shal chryste the more. Who so herkeneth vnto me, shal noe come to confuscion: and they that roate in me, shal noe offende. They that make me to be knowne, shal haue euerlastinge life.

All these chinges are the boke of life, the couenaunt of the chryest, and the knowlege of the truct. Moses commaunded the lawe in the precepes of righteousnes for an inheritance vnto the house of Jacob, and comitted y promysse vnto Israel: Out of Dauid his seruante hath opened to raise up a most mightie kinge, synging in the state of honoure for euermore. This filleth with wysdome like as the floude of babilon, & as y floude of Tigris, when the new frutes are a growinge.

This bringeth a plenteous vnderstandinge, like Euphrates: it filleth it up, as Jobans in the tyme of harvest. This maketh naris to breake forth as the light, & as the water Gihon in y harvest. The first hath noe knowme her perfectly, nomore shal the last see out yf grounde of her. For hir thoughte is fuller the see, and hir counsell is profounder then the greete depe.

I wysdome haue cast out floude, I am as a greete waterbroke out of y riuer. I am as the ryuer Donis, and as a water condyte am I come out of the garden of pleasure. I sayde: I will water the garden of my yonge plantes, and fill the frute of my bych. So my waterbroke became exceedinge greete, and my ryuer appoched vnto the see. For I made doctryne to be vnto all me as light as the saye moonyng, and I shall make it to be euer the clearer. (I will pearse throum all the lower partes of the earth, I will lute vpon all such as be a slepe, and lighten all the that put their trust in the LORD.) I shal yet poure out doctryne, like as prophete, and leaue it vnto such as see after wysdome, and their generacions shal I neuer sayle, vnto the holy euerlastinge worlde. Beholde, hoer that I haue not laboured for my self only, but for all them yf see after y truct, & be XXV. Chapter.

All these things here are, if my speche sanometh, which be also a loved be fore the Lord and men: The wyse of brethren, the love of neighbours, and man & wyfe that agree well together.

These things here be which my soule ha-teth, and I wrecly abhore the life of them: A poore man that is proude. A rich mā that is a liar, and an olde body that doeth and is unchaste.

If thou hast gathered nothings in thy youth, what wyse thou fynde the in thine age: How pleasaunt a thinge is it, whā gray headed men are discrete, & whan the eldres can geue good counsell: How cōly a thyn-ge is wyssdome vnto aged men: yet vnderstandinge and counsell is a glorious thinge.
The crowne of olde men is to haue much experience, & y feare of God is their worshippe.

Behold these things, which I haue iudged in my hert to be happye, and the tenth wil I tell forth vnto men with my tonge. A man y whyle he lyueth, hath ioye of his chyldren, and seith y fall of his enemye. Well is him, that dwelleth with an houswife of vnderstō-dinge, and that hath not fallen with his con-ge, and y hath not bene faine to serue such as are vnmete for him. Wel is him, y synbeth a faith full frend: & wel is him, which talketh of wyssdome to an eare y heareth him. How great is he, y synbeth wyssdome & knowlege: yet is he not abowchūm, that feareth the LORDE. The feare of God hath set it self fabous all thinges. Blessed is y man, vnto whō it is graunted to haue the feare of God. Vnto whō shal he be lickened, y repery it fast: The feare of God is the begynnyng of his loue, and the begynnyng of faith is to cleafast vnto it. The heuynes of the hert is all the punishment, and the wickednes of a woman goeth aboue all. All punishment & pla-ge is nothings in comparison of the plage of the hert, cūe so all wickednes is nothings to the wickednes of a woman.

C What so euer happeneth vnto a man, is nothings in comparison of it, y his oull wil-lers do vnto him: and all vengeance is no-thinge to the vengeance of the enemye. The re is not a more wicked heade then the heade of the serpe, and there is no wrath aboue y wrath of a woman. I wyl rather dwell with a lyen and dragon, then to kepe house with a wicked wyfe. The wickednesse of a woman chaungeth hir face, she shal moiffell hir contenaunce as it were a Deer, & as a fact shal she shewe it amonge the neighbours. Hir husbande is brought to shame amonge his neighbours, & whā he heareth it, it maketh him to sight. All wickednes is but lide to the widednes of a woman, y portion of the wryth-ty shal fall vpon her.

Like as to clymme up a sondy waye is to y feare of the age, eue so is a wyfe full of wry-thede to a still quyet man. Loke not to wryth-ty vpon the bewyfe of a woman, lest thou be prouoked in desyre to marie her. The wryth-ty of a woman is dishonoure and greue confused. If a woman gett the maistrā, then is she contrary to hir husbande. A wicked wyfe maketh a sory hert, an heuy countenaunce and a deed wounde. Of the woman came y begynnyng of synne, and thow heretofore all are deed. Geue thy wote no passinge, no not a lide, neher geue a wicked woman her will. If she walke not after thy hande, she shall confounde thee in the sight of thy enmye. Cut her of then from thy flesch, that she do not allwaye abuse thee.

The XXXV. Chapter.

Gappie is the man that hath a vernoous wyfe, for the nobre of his years shalbe vnable. An honest woman ma-keth hir husbande a ioyfull man, & she shall fylly y years of his life in peace. A vernoous woman is a noble gift, which shalbe greet for a good portion vnto such as feare God.
Whether a man be rich or poore, he maye be we cuer a merry hert, & a chearful countenaunce.
There be thre thinges y my hert smyth, and my face is a fraye of the furth. Trisson in a cite, a sedicious people, and wysion tonges, all these are heuwyer then the death.
But whan one is gelous ouer his wyfe, & bringeth payne and sorowe vnto the hert, and a woman that callyeth out all thinges, & a scourge of the tonge. Whan one hath as euill wyse, it is euen as whan an wyllde parr of oxen must dwawe together: he that ge-teth her, getteth a scorpion. A vernoous man is a greates plage, for she cannot cō-ceale hir owne shame.

The whoredome of a woman maye be knowne in the pryde of hir eyes and crys-tyllydes. If thy daughter be not shamed, she holde her straitly, lest she abuse herselfe to row ouer much liberte. Beware of all the dishonesty of hir eyes, and marrell not if she do agaynst thee. Like as one that goeth by the waye and is chynsic, so shall she open hir mouth, and byrte of euery wyrtuete that she maye gett.

By euery bettege shal the sye her burne. I ope hir quynere agaynst euery arrowe. A leuge wyfe reioyseth hir husbande, and fynch his bones with his wysdome. A woman of few wordes is a gife of God, and to a well nurtured mynde maye nothyng be compared.

En honest and manerly woman is a gife above othe giffes, and there is no wayght to be compared, unto a mynde that can rule itself. Like as the Some whan it cryseth, is an ornament in the byc heauen of J^r LORD. So is a vertuous wyfe J^r betweye of all hir houshold. Like as the cleare light is upon J^r holy candlestick, so is the betweye of the face vpon a honest body. Like as the golde pilers are vpon the scaffoldes of syluer, so are the sayre legges vpon a woman that hath a constant mynde. (Perperuall are the foundacions that layde vpon a whole stonye rocke, so are J^r commandementes of God vpon an holy woman.)

There be two thinges J^r greue my heart, and in the thirde is a displeasur come vpon me. When an experie man of warre suffreth surfines and pouerte, When men of vnder standing and wysdome are not set by: And whan one departeth from righteousnes vnto synne. Who so doeth soch, the LORD hath purged him into the swerde. There be two waye of thinges, which me thyncke to be hote and peryleous. A marchaunt can not lightly kepe him from wronge, necher a casemer himself from synne.

The xxvij. Chapter.

Because of ponerte haue many one of struded: and he that seeketh to be riche, turneth his eyes asyde. Like as a nation the wall standeth fast betwixte two stomaches: so both synne sticketh betwixte J^r byer and the seller. If he holde him not diligent in J^r feare of the LORD, his house shall soue be overthrowne. Like as whan one sitteth, the fishynges remaineth in the syde: So, remaineth there some vncleane thinge in the thought of man. The onen proueth the potter vessel, so doeth correction of trouthe: vnto righteous men. The tree of the felde is knowne by his frute, so is the thought of mans heart knowne by his wordes. Prayse no man except thou haue harde him, for a man is knowne by his wordes. If thou shalt see righteuousnes, thou shalt get her, and put her vpon J^r as a sayre garment. And thou shalt dwell with her, and she shall defende the founer, and in J^r daye of knowlege thou shalt haue her for thyne. The byrdes reioyce vnto whan they see the crouneth turme vnto them that be occupied withall. The lyon way-teeth for J^r prayse: so the synners lurke vpon the mooues of wickednes. The callinge of him that feareth God, is nothyng but wysdome: as for a fool, he chaungech as J^r wode. If thou be amonge the vndiscrere, kepe thy wordes to a conuenient tyme, but amonge J^r body as he wyse, speake on hardely. The talkinge of foolles is abheminacion, and their spoire is volupuousnesse and mysurtoare. Much sweareynge maketh the haye to stonde vp, and to stryue with soch, sloppeth the care.

The stryfe of the proude is bloudshedynge, and their blasphemynge is helyo to heare. Who so discouereth secrettes, leseth his creden ce, and synneth no frende after his will. Leare thy frende, and be laide thyself in faulshines with him: but yf thou be mayest his secrettes, thou shalt not get him agayne: for like as the ma is that destroyeth his enemye so is he alle that dealeth falsly in the friendship of his neyghbour.

Like as one that letech a byrde go out of his honde, can not take her agayne: like as thou, yf thou gese one thy frende, thou canst not get him agayne: yet thou canst not come by him, for he is to farr of. He is moode as a Boe escaped out of the snare, for his foote is wounded. As for woundes, they maye be bounde vp agayne, and an euill wounde maye be reconcyled: but who so be mayest the secrettes of a frende, there is no more hope to be had vnto him.

He that wyndeth with the eyes, ymagineth some enell, and no man shal take him from it. When thou are present, he shal bylie commend: and prayse thy wordes: but at the last he shall turne his eayle, and shalder thy sayenge. Many thinges haue J^r hated, but nothyng so euill, for the LORD himself also abhorreth soch one.

Who so casteth a stone an bye, it shal fall vpon his owne heade: and he that synneth with gyle, woundeth himself. Who so diggeth a pyer, shal fall therein: and he that layeth a snare, shal be taken in it himself. Who so greuech a wicked nosyngme counsell, it shall come vpon himself, and he shall not knowe from whence. The proude blasphemie and are scornfull, but vengeance taketh for them as a lyon. They that raouyfe at the fall of J^r righteous, shal be taken in J^r snare, anguyshe of here shall consume them before they dye. Anger and rigorosnes are two abhominable thinges, and J^r vngodly hath them boch vpon him.

All that seek vengeance, shall fynde vengeance of the LORD, which shall surely kepe him his synnes. Feigne thy neighbour the hate that he hath done thee, and so shall chy synnes be forgiven thee also, when thou prayest. A man that beareth hatred agaynst another, how darre he desire forgiveness of God? he that sheweth no mercy to a mā which is like himself, how darre he aske forgiveness of his synnes? Whiche that is but flesh, beareth hatred and keepeth it, who wil increase for his synnes? Remember the ende, & let enmyte passe, which seeketh death and destruction, and abyde thou in thy commaundement. Remember thy commaundement, so shalt thou not be rigorous over thy neighbour. Thyntē vpo the covenante of thyself, and forgive thy neighbours ignorancie. Beware of strife, and thou shalt make thy synnes fewer. For an angry man hymblyeth variance, and the vngodly disquyeteth frende, and putteth discord amonge them that be at peace. The more wroth there is, the more vehement is the fyre: and the mightier the men be, the greater is the wrath: and the longer the strife endureth, the more it burneth.

C An haillie dialynge hymblyeth a fyre, and an haillie strife sheddeth bloude. If thou blowe the spark: it shall burne. If thou speere vpo it, it shall go forth, and both these go out of thy mouth. The slauderer and double tongued is cursed, for many one that be frenche seeketh he at variance. The thirde tonge hath disquyeted many one, and tryuen them from one londe to another. Stronge cities hath he broken downe, and overthrowne the houses of greate men. The thirde tonge hath cast out many an honest woman, and robbed them of their laboure. Who so, hartely vnto sode, shall neuer fynde rest, and neuer dwell safely. The stroke of a rod maketh yobbers, but the stroke of the tonge synneth the bones in funder. There be many that haue perished with the swerde, but many mo thowen the tonge.

D Wel is him that is kepe fro an euell tonge, & commeth not in anger therof: which disquyeteth not the yock of sode, and is not bolde in the bondes of it. For the yock therof is of yron, and a bonde of it of stele. The death therof is a very euell death: hell were better for one, then sode a tonge. But the fyre of it maye not oppresse them that feare God, and y flame therof maye not burne the. Such as soule the LORD, shall fall therein: and it shall burne them, and no man shall be able to quench it. It shall fall vpon the as a Rye, and deuore them as a leoparde. Thou best thy goodes in thome: thy best thou rather make done and barre for thy woe: Thou wiest thy golde and siluer with thy woe: thou not weye thy woodes also vpon the lance: Bewarre, that thou styte not thy tonge, and so fall before thyn enmytes, the laye waite for the.

The XXX. Chapter.

So so wil shewe mercy, is he that is able, let him kepe the commaundement. Lende vnto thy neighbour in time of his neede, and paye thy neighbour in due season. Bepe thy wode, wile faith full with him, & thou shalt alwaye fynde the thinge that is necessary for the. Thou haue bene many, that when a thinge was lent them, reuened it to be founde: and meke them transaile and la boure, that had helped them. Whyle they receaue any thinge, they kepe the handes of sode as grev than, and for their neighbours good they bidde the voyce. But when they sholde paye agayne they kepe it back, and greue euill wordes, and make many excusis by reason of the time: though he be able, yet geneth he sode the half agayne, and reuendeth it ocher to be sode. And yf he witholdeth not his money, he hath he an enemye of him, and that is inferued.

He prayeth him with cursinge and rebulsh, and geneth him euell wordes for his good he do. There be many one which are not glad for to lende, not because of euill, but they feare to lese the thinge that they lende. Thou haue thou patience with the simple, and he holde not mercy from him. Kepe the poore for the commaundement sake, and let him not go emptye from the because of his misse. Lese thy money for thy brother and neighbours sake, and burye it not vnder a stone, wher it rusteth and corrupeth. Gather together a ster the commaundement of thyself, and so shall it bunge the more vnto thy golde. Laye vp the almes in the handes of the poore, and it shall kepe the from all neede. A mans almes is as a price with his god: shall kepe a mans fauoure as the apperill an eye: and afterwarde shall it arys, & paye every man his reward vpon his bedde. It shall fight for the agaynst thine enemies, but ter then the styde of a giant, in the hand of the mightie.

A good honest mā is sicterre for his neighbour, but a wicked personne is better to me to shame. Forgeue not the frendship thy society, for he hath grud his soule for y.

 The nobly best wyse of good dede of his sarris, & the uncharitfull and ignoraunt leaneth his societie in daunger. (Some man promysch for his neyghboure: & whan he hath lost his honestie, he shal forsake him.) Euer-laste hath destroyed many a ryche man, & removed them as the waves in y see. Many six people hath it dryuen a waye, and caused the to wander in straunge conteece. An un-godly man transgressyng the commaunde-ment of the L O R D E, shal fall in to an euill seruyshe: and though he sece himself to goe out, yet shal he fall in to iudgment. Sel-pethy neyghboure out after thy power, and beware, for thou thy self fall not in such dete.
 These chynge that spech in the life, is meate and drid, clothinge and lobginge, to cover the shame.

D Deter is it to haue a poore luyng in a mans owne house, then delicate sayre amonge the strange. Be it like or moch y thou hast, whde the comt: methall (& thou shalt not be blamed as a vagabounde) for a miserable liuis se, to go from house to house: and where a ma is frende, he barre not ope his mouth.
 Though one be looged, and haue meate and drinke, yet shall he be taken as vnworthy, & haue many bytter rough wordes, namely thus: So thy waye thou straunger, and prepare a table (for thy self, and fede me also of that thou hast. Awaye thou straunger (so, that he regardeth his honoure nomore) my husber commeth in to my house, & so he telleth him the necessite of his house. These chynge are heuy to a man that hath vnderstandyng: namely, the foibdyng of y house, that the lorde casteth him in the cech.

The XXX. Chapter.

So so loueth his childe, holdeth him still vnder correccion, that he maye haue ioye of him a fterwarde: and that he trope not after his neygh-bours doct. He y reacheth his soune, shall haue ioye in him, & nede not be ashamed of him amonge his aquauntance. Who so enfourmch & reacheth his soune, greuet y enemie, and before his frendes he maye haue ioye of him. Though the father dye, yet is he as though he were not deed: for he hath left on his soune him that is like him. In his life he saue him, & had ioye in him, & was not sory in his death: (nether was he ashamed before y enemie.) For he left behinde him an enger agaynst his enemies, and a good woer to the frendes. For the life of childis shall binde the woundes together, and his here is greued at euery crye. An vncamed house wybe harde, and a wanton childe wyl be wyfull. If thou byngye up thy soune delicately, he shal make y a frayde: and yf thou playe with him, he shal byngye the to heuy nes. Laugh not with him, lest thou wepe to him also, and lest thy tech be set on edge at the last.

Gene him not libertie in his youth, & ex-ce: not his foly. Bowe downe his necke whyle he is yonge, byet him upon the sydes whyle he is yet but a childe, lest he more stubburne, & geue no more force of y (and so shal thou haue heuynes of soule.) Teach thy childe, & be dilige: therein, lest it be to thy shame. Better is the poore byngye whole & stronge, then a man to be riche, & not to haue his health.
 Health and wel fare is aboute all golde, and an whole body aboute all treasure. There is no riches aboute a soune body, & no ioye abowe the ioye of the hert. Death is tence then a wretched life, or continuall siknes. The good chynge y are put in a clost mouth, are like as whan meate is layed vpon y graue.

What good doth the offeringe vnto an Idoll: for he can nether eate, tast nor smell.
 The se is it also with the riche, whom God maketh sik: he seith it with his eyes, & gro-neth thereafer, and is euen as a gilded man, that lyeth with a vygin and sygheth. Ge-ue not ouer thy mynde in to co heuynes, & were nether thy self in thine owne counsell. The ioye & chearfulness of the hert is the life of man, and a mania gladnes is the prolongyng of his dayes. Loue thine owne soule, and com-forte thine hert: as for sorow and heuynes, drue it farre from y, for heuynes hath slay-ne many a man, and byngyeth no profit. Zele and anger shorten the dayes of the life: care-fulnes and sorow byngye age before the tyme. Vnto a mery hert enty chynge hath a good taste, that he eateth.

The XXXI. Chapter.

Keauyle and carefulness for riches takeeth awaye the slepe, and maketh the fleshy to consume. Whan one lyeth and taketh care, he waketh euer up, like a greate siknes beareth the slepe. The rich hath greate labo in gatheringe his riches together, and then with the pleasure of his riches he taketh his rest & is refreshed. But who so laboureth and prospereth not, he is poore: and though he leaue of, yet is he a beg-ger. He that loueth riches, shall not be insi-ficient: and who so solemeth corrupcis, shal haue mough therof. Many one are come in greate myffortune by the reason of golde, hane founde their destruction be fore them. This is the way of fallinge vnto them that offere it vp, and all such as be foolish fall therein. Blessed is the rich, which is founde without blemish, and hath not gone after gold, nor hoped in money and treasures. Where is the rich one, and we shal commend him, and call him blessed, for greace things boeth he amonge his people. Who so is tryed, & founde perfecte in such thinges, shal be commended and praised. Who mighte offende, & hath not offeided: Who coude do euill, and hath not done it: Therfore shal his good be stablished, and the whele congregacion shal declare his almeses. If thou sye at a greate mans table, open not thy mouth to be opene, and make not many wordes. Remember, that an euell eye is a shew.

B What thinge created is worse then a wicked eye: therfore wipeth it before euery mans face: Laye not thine hand vpon euery thinge that thine eye seeth, and sitte not with him in the byste. Ponder by thy self what thyneighboures wolde sayne haue, & be deserte in euery poynt. Eate the thinge that is set before the, manerly, as it becommeth a man: and eate not to much, lest thou be abhorred. Leauethou be first of all because of miroure, lest thou be he whom no man maye sacrifice, which maye turne to thy decaye. Whā thou syest amonge many men, ready not thine hāde out first of all. O how well cometh to a wyse man to a litle wyne: so y in slepe thou shalt not be seke therof, ner fele any payne. A sweete wolosome slepe shal such one haue, and fele no inward greife. He tryeth vp by tymes in y morninge, and is well at ease in him self. But an vnfaciable carer slepeth in quietly, and hath ache and payne of the body. If thou silest that thou hast eaten to much, arise, go thy waye, cast it of thy stomack, and take thy rest.

C My sonne, heare me, and despise me not: and at the last thou shalt fynde as I haue tolde the. In all thy wordes be diligent and quyet, so shal ther be no sickness happen vnto the. Who so is liberal in dealinge out his meate, many men shall blesse him and prayse him with their lippes: and the same is a sure token of his loue and faithfulness. But he y is vnfaithfull in meates, the whole cite shall complaine of him: and that is a sure certiffic of his infidelite and wickednes. Be not thou a wine beebber, for wyne hath destroyed many a man. The fire proueth y hard yron, even so doeth wyne proue the hertes of the proude, when they be diuident.

Wyne sorely diuident, quyeteth the life of mā. If thou drynest it moste, thou shalt be temperate. Whā list is a, maye coneyne without wyne: Wyne made from the begynnyng to make man glad, and not for diuidentnes. Wyne moste rably diuente is a reioysing of the soule and body. But yf it be diuident with wast, it maketh by excesses and foote me vnto the mynde. Diuidentia fylleth the mynde of the foolish with shame and ruine, mynnyth the strength, and maketh woundes. Reuete not thyneighbour at y wyne, and despise him not in his mynde. Gene him no desparful wordes, and please not vpon him with contrary sayenges.

The XXXII. Chapter.

If thou be made a ruler, pauer note thy self therein, but be thou as one of the people. Take diligens care for them, and loke well thereto: and wā thou hast bene all thy de weye, sye the downe, that they maye be wery with them, and receive a crowne of honoure. Take wryly & honestly, for wysdome becommeth the righte wyllynder not must. Speake not, where the re is no aduync: and poure not sub wysdome out of tyme, as an impostuyn. As so the Carbon clefome shyneth, that is in golde, so doeth a songe garmysh the wyne feast: and as y Sma ragde that is set in golde, so is the sweetness of Mustard by y wryth of wyne.

Thou yonge mā, speake that becommeth the, & that is profitable, and yet care wā thou art wyce ayed. Comprehende much with few wordes. In many thinges be as one that is ignorant, geue care, and holde thy tongue withall. If thou be amonge men of hys auerouce, despise not to compare thy self vnto them: and wā an elder speaketh, make not thou many wordes therein. Be the the thonder goeth lightenyng, and be the nurrore and shame fastnesse goeth low and fauoure. Seede vp by tymes, and be not the last: but get the homespore, & there eat thy passyme, & do wā the thou wilt: so y thou be no euill, and desyre no mā. But for all thy ges geue thankes, vnto him that hath made the, and replenished the with his goodnes.

Who so feareth the LORD, wyl receive his doctryne: and they that get them to him by tymes, shall fynde grace. He that feareth the lawe, shall be fylled withall. So for he y is but sayned, he wyl be offeinded therat. They that feare the LORD, shal fynde the indignem, & their righteouines shal be tryed.

lab as a lighte. An vngodly man will not be reformed, but can blype him self with the example of ocher in his purpose. A man of vnderstandinge despyseth no good counsell: but a wyde and proude body hath no feare. My shame, do nothinge withoute aduysment, so shal it not repte the a ster y deue. So not in the waye where thou mayest fall, nor where thou mayest stumbe againste the stone. Be not as y sell in to a labourous slypery waye, and beware of thine owne children. In all thy workes put thy trust in God from thy whole hart, for that is the keepinge of the commandementes. Who so beleueth Gods word, shall heede to the commandementes: & he that putteth his trust in y LORD, shall wante nothinge.

The XXXIII. Chapter.

I here shall no euill happen vnto him that feareth God: but when he is in temptatione, the LORD shall deliuer him. A wyse man hateth not y laws, but an ypercrite is as a shyp in a raginge water. A man of vnderstandinge getteth credence vs to the lawe of God, and y lawe is faithfull vnto him. Before of the matter, then talke therof: the firste med instructione, the maifest thou geue answer. The heart of y foolissh is like a carthuse, and his thoughtes reme aboute like the azyl etc. Like as a wyde hofe that wryth vnder every one y stretch upon him, so is it with a scornefull frende. Why doeth one daie exall another, seyinge all the dayes of the yere come of the Sonne: The wysdom of the LORD hath so parted them asunder, and so hath he ordered the tymes and seasons feastes. Some of them hath he chosen and halowed before other dayes. And all men are made of the grombe, & out of the earth of Adams.

In the malitiae of science hath y LORD dispersed them, and made their wayes of vnerse fashions. Some of them hath he blessed, made moch of them, halowed them, & clapped them to himself. But some of the hath he cursid, broughte the lowe, & put the out of their estate. Like as y claye in the potters hande, & all the ordynges therof at his pleasure: so are men also in the hande of him y made the, so that he maye geue thyn as it liketh him best. Agaynst euill is good, and agaynst death is lifeso is the vngodly agaynst soch as feare God. Beholde thus all the workes of the wyse, & there are euer two agaynst two, and one see agaynst and the other. I am awaded up last of all, as one that bawtheth after in hartest. In the gifte of God and in his blessinge I am increasid, & haue fylled my wyne presse, like a grape gatherer. Beholde, how I haue not labourid encl y for my self, but for all soch as loue mortone and wysdome.

I care me O ye grauate men of the people, & harden ye yo eares ye rulers of y congregation. Beate not y sonne of y worshiper & frende pouer over the, whyt thou lyuest: & geue not awaye thy substaunce and good to another, lest it repte the, & thou be fayne to begg the faue thy self. As longe as thou lyuest & hast brech, let no man change the. For better it is thy chuldun to praye the, then y thou shuldest be fayne to loke in their hande. In all thy workes be excellent, that thy honour be neuer stained. At the tyme when thou shalt ende thy dayes, and finish thy life, distribute thine inheritaunce. The fodder, the wyppye, and the burden belongeth vnto the Ass: likewise, correccion and woite vs to the seruaunt.

If thou see thy seruante to labour, thou shalt fynde rest. But yf thou let him go ydel, he shall see libertie. The yoc y & wyppye boze downe the neck, but tame thou thy erell seruaunt with bodes & correccion. See he him to labour, that he goe not yole: for ydylissh byingeth moch euill. See him to woite, for that belongeth vnto him and becometh him well. If he be not obdient, bynd his feet: but doe not to moch vnto him in anye wyse, & withoute discrecion do nothinge. If thou haue a faithfull seruaunt, let him be vnto the as thine owne soule, for in blowe hast thou gotten him. If thou haue a seruante, holde him as thy self, for thou hast me de of him as of thy self. If thou increasest him euill, and depest him harde, and makest him to be proude, and to renne awaye from y, thou canst not tell, what maye thou shalt see him.

The XXXIII. Chapter.

In wyse people begyle them selues wth wayne and disceasfull hope, and foolis earnest in dreames. Who so regardeth dreames, is like him that wil take holde of a shadowe, and solowe a fier the wyndes. Men so is it with the appareynges of dreames. Before the face is the likenes of a face. Who can be clenid of y vnclane: Or what erach can be spoken of a lyar: So they sayen ge, wch xra. for cry and dreameing is but wayne: like as when a woma traualyeth by chylde, and hath many fantalysen in hir berce. Where as soch visions come next of God, sit not thine bette vpon them: for dreames haue diseased many a mā, and they sayleb, that put their trust therein.

B The lawe shall be fulfilled without lyes, ⁊ wysdome is sufficient to a faithfull mouth. A wise man ⁊ is well instructe, vnderston-dereth mody: he ⁊ hath good experyence, can talke of wysdome. he ⁊ hath no experyence, knoweth liht: he ⁊ erreth, causeth mody wickidnes. When I was yet in erreure, I lerned mody also: yet I was so lerned, that I coude not expyise it all, and came oft in perill of death therouer, tyll I was deliuered from it. Now I se, that they which feare God, haue the right spere: for their hope stōdeth in him, that can helpe the. Who so feareth the LORDE, stōdeth in awe of no man, and is not a fraue, for the LORDE is his hope and comfort.

C Blessed is the soule of him ⁊ feareth the LORDE: In whō purteth he his trust: who is his strygh ⁊. For the eyes of the LORDE haue respect vnto them, that loue him. he is their mightie p̄uocion, ⁊ strōge grounde: A defence for the heare, a refuge for the booe moone daye, a sicure for stombyng, ⁊ an helpe for fallynge. he seteth vp the soule, and lihteneth ⁊ eyes: he geueth healeth life, and blessinge. he that geueth an offeringe out of vnrighuous good, his offeringe is vsfuld: and the scoonefull dealynge of the vnrighuous please not God, God hath no deliue in the offerynge of ⁊ vnghodly, neither maye synne be reconcyled in the multitude of oblacions. Who so bringeth an offerynge out of ⁊ goodes of ⁊ poore, doth ene as one ⁊ byldech of some befoie ⁊ fathers eyes.

D The bedd of the nedefull is the life of the poore: he ⁊ defraued him therof, as a man, of bloude. Who so robbeth his neyghb of his luyng, doth as greate synne as though he slew him to death. he that defraued ⁊ laborer of his hys, is a bloudy shōdder. Whā one buyleth, and another breaketh downe, what profie haue they then but labour: Whā one prayeth, ⁊ another curseth, whose voyce wyl the LORDE heare: he that wylteth himself because of a deed body, ⁊ then toucheth the deed agayne, what doeth his wasshynge: So is it with a man that fasteth for his synnes, and doeth them agayne: who wyl heare his prayer: O: what doth his fastynge helpe him?

The XXXV. Chapter.

E So so depeth the lawe, byrnyng of ferynges ynough. he that holdeth fast the commāment, offereth the righte healethoffryng. he ⁊ is thanktfull ⁊ recompenseth, offereth fyne floure. Who is mercifull ⁊ geueth allmes, ⁊ is thanktfull thankt offryng. God hath pleasur, whā he departeth frō synne: ⁊ to sojable thankynge. oulines recōdeth vnto him. It hou shal me appeare empeze befoie ⁊ LORDE, for all that is done because of ⁊ commāment. The offeringe of ⁊ righteous maketh ⁊ stōdeth fast, ⁊ a swete smell is it befoie ⁊ hys. The offeringe of the righteous is acceptable vnto God, ⁊ shal neuer be forgouen. Gene God his hond with a chearfull eye, ⁊ kepe not backe the syllynge of ⁊ hande. In all thy gyfte shew a mercy countenance, ⁊ halow thyng: then vnto God wyl gladnes. Gene vnto God, a coruynge as he hath enriched ⁊ prospered ther: lode vnto thine hande is able, ⁊ geueth a chearfull eye: for the LORDE recompenseth, ⁊ geueth ⁊ feul tymes as mochaug.

Gene no vnrighteous gyfte, for soch wyl not be receaue. Bewarre of vnrighteous offerynge, for ⁊ LORDE is a righteous iudge, ⁊ regardeth no mans personne: he accepteth not the personne of the poore, but he heareth ⁊ prayer of ⁊ appyryed. he despyseth the despyse of ⁊ fatherles, ner ⁊ wyddow, whā she poureth out hir prayer befoie him. He that not God se ⁊ reares, ⁊ reme downe ⁊ a cur of the wyddow: O: heareth he not the playner, ouer soch as make hie reue: ⁊ so stoueth God a fier his pleasure, shal accepteth, ⁊ his prayer reacheth vnto the awbes. The prayer of him ⁊ humblych humbly goeth thow ⁊ dōdow, tyll he come vnto. She wyl not be comforted, ner go hir way: tyll ⁊ hys: God haue respect vnto her: geue true sentēce, ⁊ persourme ⁊ iudgme. Whā ⁊ LORDE wyl not be slack in cōmynge, ner ⁊ longer: tyll he haue smytē in sōnder ⁊ haskes of ⁊ vnter off all, ⁊ auenged himself of ⁊. he that wyl heare the awye ⁊ nūitade of ⁊ cruell, ⁊ wylteth the vnter of the vnrighuous: tyll he geue every man a fūst ⁊ workes, ⁊ rewarde them as they haue deserued: tyll he haue delyered his peop, ⁊ mōtēd their cause, ⁊ reuoyd them in his merc. O how saue a thynge is mercy in thē: me of anguys ⁊ trouble: It is like a dōdow of rayne, ⁊ cōmēth in ⁊ tyme of a dōdow.

The XXXVI. Chapter.

G The mercy vpon vs O LORDE, the God of all thynge. haue respect vnto vs (⁊ shew vs the liht of thy mercie, ⁊ sende vs fyre amonge ⁊. he that offereth, how shal seke not after the: ⁊ they may knowe, how ⁊ there is no God but thou: ⁊ they may shew thy wōrd vnto the world.)

Lift up thine hande ouer the ouerlaidsh hel than, if they maye seme to knowe thy might & power. Like as thou art halowed in vs be fore them, so bringe to passe, if thou mayest be magnified alid in them before vs: if they maye knowe the, like as we knowe the. For there is none other God, but onely thou O LORD E. Remue the tokens, & chaunge the wonderous woordes. Shewe thine hate and thy right arme gloriously. Rayse thy indignitation, & poure out thy wrath. Take awaye the aduersary, & smyte the enemye. Make if thou shouldest, remember thy couenaunt, that if wonderous woordes maye be prayesed. Lec the wrath of the fyre consume them, that ly-ue so careles: and let them perish, that do if people hurt. Smyte in fonder the heade of the pryuce, that be oure enemies, and saye: there is none other but we.

B Other all of trybes of Iacob together againe, if they maie knowe, how if there is none other God but onely thou, if they maie shew thy wonderous woordes, and be thy people & heritage, like as from the begynninge.
 O LORD E haue mercy vpon the people if beth if name, & vpo Irael, whom thou hast chosen to a first borne sonne. O be merciful vnto Ierusalem the cite of thy Sanctuary, if cite of thy rest. If all Sion with thy unspeakable vertues, & if people w thy glory. Genuitynes vnto if creature, whom thou may best from the begynnyng, and raise vp the popheteas if haue bene shewed in thy name.
 Remorde them if maye for the, if thy prophetes maye be founde faithfull. O LORD E heare the praye of thy seruantes, a couinge to if blessinge of Aaron ouer thy people: these alleys which dwell vpon earth, maye hoome, that thou art the LORD E the eter-nall God, which is from euerlastinge.

C The hely denoereth all meates, yet is one meate better then another. Like as the con-ge tasteth veryson, so both an hert of understandinge marck falsse woordes. A frower be hart geareth heynnes, but a man of experienece lifeth him vp agayne. The woman reuouch euery man, yet is one daughter better then another. A fayre wife reioysith hir husbande, and a man loueth nothinge better. If she be leuyng, & vertuous withall, thine is not hir husbande like other men. He that hath gotten a vertuous woman, hath a goodly possession: she is vnto him an helpe and pier wher vpon he resteth. Where no helpe is, therethe goodes are spoyled: and where no housewife is, there if fiedles moue and. Like as there is no credence gotten to a robber, if goeth from one cite to another: So is not if man beleued, that hath no iust, and rust turme in, where he maye abyde in the night.

The XXXVII. Chapter.

E Very frende sayeth: I wil be frendly vnto him also. But there is some fren-de, which is onely a frende in name.
 Remauneth there not heynnes vnto death, when a companion and frende is turned to an enemye? Most wicked presumption: fro whence art thou spronge vp, to coner the carth with falsete & disceate: There is some companion, which in prosperite reioysith with his frende: but in the tyme of trouble, he taketh parte agaynst him. There is some copanyon, that mourneth with his frende for the hely sake: but when crooneth cometh, he taketh holde of the shydes. Forge not thy frende in thy mynde, & thynke vpon him in riches. Every counseller bringeth forth his counsell: Leuer theles there is some, if coun-celer, but for his owne profite. Bewarre of if counseller, & be aduysed afore wherto thou wilt vs him, for he wil geue cocell for him self. Left he cast the lot vpon the, if saye to the: Thy waye and purpose is good, and a fterward he stande agaynst the, and loke what shal be come of the.

Are no cocell at him, if suspecteth if for an enemye, & hyde if counsell from such as hate if. Are no counsell at a woman, co cernyng if thinges if she logeth: fornet at a fearful & faynhearted body, in matters of marre: or at a marchant, how deare he wil cheape thy wares towards he: et at a byer, of sel-lunge: Or at an enuoyous man, of charnelgyng: Or at the unmercifull, of louyng kyndes: Or at if slouthfull, of workinge: Or at an hyslyng which hath no house, of po-sic or weale. (An yble body wolde not gladly heare: speake of much labo.) Take no such folkes to cocell, but be diligēt to sele cocel at a vertuous man, if feareth God, such one as thou knowest to be a keeper of if commademētes, which hath a minde after thine owne minde, & is seif for if wba thou stibbest.
 And holde thy counsell fast in thine hert: for there is no man more faithfull to kepe it, then thou thy self. For a māns mynde is som-tyme more disposed to tell out, then seuen watchmen that syt above in an hye place leuyng aboute thim. And above all this praye the hysself, that he wil lede thy waye in faithfulness & cruetly. Before all thy woordes are counsell first: and or euer thou doest any thinge, be well aduysed. There be foure thin ges that declare a chaunged heart, wherout there springeth euill & good, beateh & life, & a master full conge that habileth moche. Some man is apte and well instructed in many thinges, and yet very unprofitable vnto himself. Some man theres, that can geue wyse and prudent counsell, and yet is he hated, & conyured with a benger: for that grace is not geue him of God, to be accepted. Another is rebbed of all wysdome, yet is he wise vnto him self, and the frute of vnderstodding is faithfull in his mourth.

D A wise man maketh his people wise, & of frutes of his wysdome sayle not. A wise man shall be pleasantly blessed of God: & all they that se him, shall speake good of him. The life of man longeth in y^e addite of the dayes, but the dayes of Israel are innumerable. A wise man shall opene faithfulness & credence amonge his people, & his name shall be perpetual. My forme, prync thy soule in thy life: & yf thou se any euell thinge, geue it not vnto her. For all thinges are not profitable for all men, neither hath euery soule pleasure in euery thinge. Be not greby in euery eatynge, and be not so haistye vps all meates. For excess of meates bringeth sickness, and glory cometh at the last to an vnumerable heate. To honore glorye haue many openeth: but he that dycech him self comperly, pooloneth his life.

The xxxviii. Chapter.

Honoure the Physician: honoure him because of necessity. God hath created him: for of the hysell cometh me becyme, and he shall receaue giftes of the kynge. The wysdome of the physician bringeth him to greate worshippe, & in the sight of the greate men of this worlde, he shall be honorably taken. The LORD hath created me becyme of the earth, and he that is wise, wyl not abhorre it. Was not yf byster water ma be swete with a tre: & that men might learne to knowe the vertue thereof. The LORD hath geuen men wysdome & vnderstoddinge, & he might be honoured in his worderis workes. With soch doeth he heale men, & tareth awaye their paynes: Of soch doeth the Apothecary make a confession, yet can no man performe all his workes. For of yf LORD cometh prosperous wealth euer all y^e earth.

Ecc. xi. d. v. R. c. 4

Wisdomme, despyse not this in thy sickness: but praye vnto the LORD, & he shall make the whele. Cause of from synne, & orde thy handes a righte chine here from all wickednes. Geue a sweet floured cstrynge, & yf

Ecc. vi. a. p. 16. c.

synne flour for a colten of remembrance: be the cstrynge fact, as one that geareth the first frutes, & geue ronne to the Physician. For yf LORD hath created him: he maye go from the, for thou hast rece of him. The houre maye come, & the sette maye be by the thoro them, when they playe vnto yf LORD, & he maie recouer, & geue health to synners. He that synneth before his maker, shall fall in to the handes of the Physician.

My sonne, bringe forth thy ronne out of the deede: and begynne to mourne, as yf thou haddest suffred greate harme, as yf thou couer his body after a conyent man, & despyse not his buryall. Lette thy self to wepe, & prouoke thy self to mourne: wite lamentacion expediently, and yf a daye or two, lest thou be euell spoken of: & then sette thy self because of the heuynes. For as the heuynes cometh deache, the heuynes of yf beateh strength. Heuynes and power geuech the hart in contricion & offence. Kith heuynes to here, dryne it awaye, and remember the last thinges. Forget it not, for that is no runnyng agayne. Thou shalt be no good, but hurte thy self. Remember his iudgmente, chine also shall be the wysdome yesterdaye, vnto the to daye. At the remembrance of the deede cease in his rest, and force thy self agayne ouer him, for yf his spire is departed from him.

The wysdome of the scribe is as an nyent tyme of rest: & he yf ceaseth from wyse & labo, shall be wise. He that holdeth yf plough, & hath pleasure in ploughing by wyng yf oren, & goeth aboute wth soch rest, he can speake of oren. He seeth his hart to make foie weas, & is diligente to graue yf he soddert. So is euery carpenter add yf wood master, that labourereth still mighte & daye: yf carnerth, grauerth & cutteth ouer, & his chine is in sondrye conyngge thinges, and his hart yf magineth, how he maye conyngge cast yf ymage, his diligence also & wardingge performeth the woite. The yonnyngge wite maner bydeh by his synthe, & dech his diligence to labour the yron. The vapour of the yre burneth his flesh, and he mafflyge wite the heate of the furnace. The wyse of the hammer soundeth euer in his carnes, and his eyes lete still upon the thinge yf he witeh. He hath set his minde there vpon, but he wyl make out his woite, & the scribe witecheth, how he maie se it eue, and be yf it to an ende.

So doeth the potter se by his woite, he turneth yf whele aboute wth his synthe delight & carefull in all his doynge, & his labour and waite is without nombre. He subtielyth the claye with his arme, and whoso seeke to pereth it. His heart ymagineth how he maye make it pleasaunt, & his diligence is to cleanse the ouen. All these hope in their hiden, & euery one thinketh to be conyng in his waite. Withoute these maye not thynge be maneyned, in habited nor occupied: yet come they not hie in the congregacion: they vnderstande not the counsaunt of y lawe: they can not declare equitye & iudgement: they can not synde out the darke secretes: howe they shal the creature of y waite be maneyned: their praye conceyued only the waite & labo of conyng.

The XXXIX. Chapter.

When y applyeth his mynde to vnderstande the lawe of God, doeth vngently sette out y wysdome of thens of the olde tyme, & exerceyth him self in the prophetes. He breath y sayenge of famous men, and pleaseth to the vnderstandinge of wylde secretes of wysdome. He seeketh out y mystrye of secretes saynges, and exerceyth him self therein continually. He beeth ieruyce amonge greace men, & appeareth before the prince. He goeth in to a strange countree, & traueleth thowre woldes: what good or euill is amoge men, he pionereth it & seeketh it out. He purposeth in his heart, to resoure early vnto the LORDE y made him. & to praye before the highest God. He openeth his mouth in praye, & prayeth for his synnes.

When the greate LORDE wil, he shal be filled with the spere of vnderstandinge, y he maie then poure out wysse sentences, & geue thanke vnto the LORDE in his praye. He shal vnder his deuyce, and lede his thowre lege a right, & geue him vnderstandinge of secretes thynge. He shal shew forth the science of his conyng, & traoyce in the counsaunt of the lawe of the LORDE. The whole congregacion shal conende his wysdome, & it shal not be pas oue. The remembraunce of him shal neuer be forgotten, & his name shal conyng from one generacion to another. His wysdome shal be spoken of, & the whole congregacion shal openly declare his praye. While he liueth, he hath a greacet name thet shal abide beynde: & after his death, the same name remauneth vnto him. Yet will y sprede of mo men of vnderstandinge, for y am full as the Yuoone.

Goeth vnto me (ye holy vertuous childre) byng forth frute, as the rose that is plantid by the brode of the seide, and geue ye a swete smell as Libanus. Blossh as the rose garden, syng a songe of praye. O geue thanke vnto God over all his workes. Geue glory and honoure vnto the LORDE, shew him his praye with your lippes. See euen with the lunge of your lippes, with harpe & playenge, and in geuinge thanke vnto him, saye after this maner: All y wordes of the LORDE are excedyng good, and all his commaundmentes are mete and conuenient in true fraison.

A man nedeth not to saie: what is y: what is that: for at tyme conuenient they shal all be sought. At his commaundment y water was as a rill, & at the word of his mouth y waters stode still. In his commaundment is euery thinge acceptable and reconcyled, and his health can not be minished. The woctes of all flesch are before him, & there is nothinge hidd from his eyes. He seeth from euery thinge to euery thinge, and there is nothinge to wonderfull of hie vnto him. A man nedeth not to saye this, what is this, or that: for he hath made all thinges to be good vnto man. His blessing shall renne ouer as the streame, and moysture the earth like a founteyne of water. Like as he maketh the water fo diueth, so shall his wrath fall vpon the wicked.

His wayes are playne and right vnto y iust, but the vngodly stombe at them. For the good are good thinges created from the begynnyng, and euery thinge for the vngodly. All thinges necessary for the life of man are created from the begynnyng: water, fyre, yron and salt, meel, wheate and hony mylke and wyne, oyle and clothyng. All these thinges are created for the best to the faithfull: but to the vngodly shal all these thinges be turned to hurte and harme. There be spretes that are created for vengeance, and in their rigorosnes haue they siftered their countenances. In the tyme of the ende they shal poure out their strenght, and pacifie y wrath of him that made them. See, haile, hunger and death: all these thinges are created for vengeance.

The reth of wyld noyferme bestes, the scorpions, serpentes, and the furre are created also for vengeance. corbe destruction of the vngodly. They shall be glad to be his commaundmentes: and when nedeth is, they shal be ready vpon earth: and when their houre is come, they shal not ouerpasse the commaundment of the LORDE.

Therfore haue y taken a good courage vnto me from the begynnyng, and thowge to put these things in myrtinge, and to leane the behynde me. All þy woordes of the LORDE are good, and he geureth eueri one in due season, and whan hebe is, So that a man ne be not to saye this is worse then that. For in due season they are all pleasaunt and good: And therfore praye the LORDE with who hee: and moue þy grete thanke vnto his name.

The XL. Chapter.

A Greate trauaile is created for all mē, and an heuy yock vpon all mens children, from the daye that they go out of their mothers wombe, tyll they be buried in (the earth) the mother of all thinges: namely, their thoughtes and ymaginacions, feare of the hur, counsell, meditations, longinge and desyre, the daye of deathe: from the hysell that yerech vpon the glorious seate, vnto the lowest and most synple vpon the earth: from him that is gorgeously arrayed, and weareth a crowne, vntyll him that is but homely and synple clothed. There is nothinge but wraich, yel, fear fulnes, vnquietnes, and feare of deathe, rigorous anger and stryfe. And in the night whan one shalbe rest and slepe vpon his bedde, the slepe chaungech his vnderstandinge and knowlege. A litle as nothinge is his rest, in þy slepe is well as in the daye of labour.

He feareth and is dismayed in the vision of his hart, as one that renneth out of a bat tayll: and in the tyme of health he awaketh, and marvellech that the feare was nothinge. Such thinges happen vnto all flesch, both man and best: but euen soide to the vngodly. In euer deathe, bloodsheddinge, sinne & swerde, oppussion, hunger, destruction and pnyshment: these thinges are all created agaynst the vngodly, and for their siknes came the floods also. All that is of the earth, shal turne to earth agayne: and all waters ebb agayne in to the see. All brybes and vnihteousnes shalbe put awaye, but faith fulnes and trawth shal endure for euer. The substauince and goodes of þy vngodly shalbe dried up and synke awaye as a water floude, and they shal make a sounde like a greate thonder in the rayne.

Like as the righteous reioyseth whan he openeth his hande, so shall the trasgressours be saynt, whan their goodes wanysh and consume awaye. The children of the vngodly shal not optayne many bandes: and þy vnclene renes vnto the hye rockes shalbe roted out before the gras by the water syde & vpon the ryuer bankes.

Frendlynes and liberalite in the iustice, and blessinge of God, is like a paradys garden of pleasure: for mercy also & kinnes endureth for euer. To laboure to be content with that a man hath, is a sweete pleasure like that is to synde a creature aboue all creature. To begge children and to repayre the same, maketh a perpetuall name: but an honest woman is more worth the they both. Wm and mynstrallise reioyse the hart, but the loue of wysdome is aboue them both.

Pynginge and harpyng make a swartyngesse, but a frendly tonge goeth beyonde them both. Thine eye desyreth sawoure and delectation: but a grene side cyme rather the they both. A frende and compaynon come together as oportunitie, but aboue them both is a wife that a gretech with hir husbande. One rather helpeth another in the tyme of trouble, but helmes shal deliuer more then they both. Golde and syluer fasten the seze, but a godd counsell is more pleasaunt then they both. Temporall substauince and strength lift up the mynde: but the feare of the LORDE more then they both. The feare of the LORDE wanteth nothinge, and needeth no helpe. The feare of þy LORDE is as a pleasaunt garde of blessinge, and nothinge so beweryfull as it. My soune, lede not a beggers life, for what it were to dye the to begge. Who so lecheth at another mans table, eateth no thought for his owne lyuynge how to uphold his life, for he feedeth himself with other mens meate. But a wyse and well narrowed man wyl beware thereof. Begginge is sinne in the mouth of the vnshamefast, but in his hart there burneth a fyre.

The XLII. Chapter.

Deathe, how byter is the tyme: a bitternes of the, to a man that sticheth rest and comfort in his substance and riches, vnto the man that hath nothinge to reze him, and that hath present in all thinges, yee vnto him that yet is able to recouere meate: O deathe, how acceptable and good is thy indgement vnto the needfull, and vnto him whose strength synketh: that is now in his last age, and that in all thinges is full of care and fearfulness: wnto him also that is in dyspayre, and hath no hope ner patience: Be not thou a synner of deathe: remember them þy have bene before thee: and þy come after þy this is the indgement of þy LORDE ouer all flesch. And why woldst thou be agaynst this pleasure of þy hart: wher it be ten, an hundred, or a thousand years: death is not how longe one haue liued.

B The children of the vngodly are abhominable children, and so are they that kepe company with the vngodly. The inheritance of vngodly children shall come to naught, and their posterite shall haue perpetual shame and confusion. The children complaine of an vngodly father and why: for his sake they are hated and despysed. Woe be vnto you (O ye vngodly) which haue forsake the lawe of y^e hys^t God: If ye be borne, ye shall be borne cursing: yf ye dye, y^e curse shall be your portion.

L That is of y^e earth shall come to earth againe: so the vngodly also out of y^e curse to destruction. The foem of men is in their body: but y^e name of the vngodly shall be put out, for it is nothing worth. A benediction getteth the good name, for that shall continue siter by the, then a thousand greates meanes of golde. A good life hath a nobbre of dayes, but a good name endureth euer.

My children, kepe wysdome in peace: for wysdome is to hye and a treasure that is not lost, what profit is in the both? A man that hyeth his foolishnes, is better then a man that hyeth his wysdome. Therfore be ye named as my wifes: for it is not good, in all thinges and all waies to be ashamed. True saith must proue and measure it.

Be ashamed of rephordome, before father and mother: Be ashamed of lesynge before the prymer and men of an auocate: Of synne, before the iudge and ruler: Of offence, before the congregacion and people: Of vnrighteousnes, before a company and frēde: Of the selfe before y^e neyghbours. As for the truthe of God and his cōuenant, be not ashamed thereof.

Be ashamed to lye with thynne elbowes upon the bier: Be ashamed to lōke vpoⁿ harlots: Be ashamed to turne away thy face from thy frēde: Be ashamed to talke & not to geue: Be ashamed also to lōke upon another mans wif, and to make many tryfling wordes with hir mayden, or to stonde by hir bedside. Be ashamed to vpbraidethy frēde: and when thou geuest any thinge, cast him not in the tech with all.

The XLII. Chapter.

Beare not a thinge twyse, and disclose not the wordes, that thou hast made in secrete. Be shamefast & well wared in bedde, so shall every man fauoure the. Of these thinges be not thou ashamed, and accept no performe to offende. A name ly, of these thinges be not ashamed: Of the lawe of God, of the cōuenant, of iudgment: to bringe the vngodly from his vngodlines vnto righteousness, and to make him a good man: to deale faichfully wth neyghb^r: a good man: to distribute the heretage vnto y^e tribes: to be diligent to kepe true measure and weight: to be content, whether thou gettest much or little: to deale truly wth temporal gooden in byenge and sellynge: to bringe vp children with diligence: to conuert an euill seruanto: kepe that thine is sth an euill wif: to see a lock where many handes are: what thou deluereest and geuest out to be depte, to sell it, and to weye it: to wyte up all the outguyng and receayng: to encurse y^e vnlearned and vnwys: Of the aged, that are wth gebed of the yonge. If thou be diligent in these thinges, truly thou shalt be learned and wise and accepted of all men.

The daughter maketh y^e father to watch secretly: and the carefulnes that he hath for her, taketh awaye his slepe: yee in the youth, lest she shalde ouergrowe him: And when she hath an husband, lest she shalde be hated: lest she shalde be defyled or raynsed in hir virgynye, or gotten with child in hir fathers house: Or when she cometh to the man) lest she behaue herselfe not rightly, or be contrarye vntrustfull. If thy daughter be wth conon, kepe her straitly, lest the conuylt thine enemies laugh the to scorn, & the wth best cite to geue y^e an euill report, and so thou be sayne to heare thy shame of euery man, and be confounded before all y^e people. Beholue not euery bodie leuetye, & haue n^t much dwellinge amonge women. For like as the wthome and much commeth out of cleuynge, so doth wickednes come of women.

It is better to be with an euill man, then wth a frenly wif: y^e putteth one to shame and rebute. I wysdomendat the wifes of the LORDE, and declare the thinges w^{ch} I haue seene. In y^e wordes of y^e LORDE are his workes. The wthome euer lotheth all thinges w^{ch} his shine, & all his workes are full of y^e clerenes thereof. Hath not the LORDE broughte to passe, that his saymes shalde tell out all his wthodons workes, which the almighty LORDE hath stablyshed: All thinges endure in his glory. He seeth out the grounde of the depe and the hart, and he knoweth all their imaginacion & wysdome. For y^e LORDE knoweth all seynce, and he lotheth in to y^e eden of the t^hme. He declareth the thinges y^e are past and so: to come, & vifideth the thinges that are sthcrete. Wtho thoughte maye escape him, neither maye my woode be hyd from him. He hath garnished the hye excellent woodes of his wysdome, and he is sic everlastinge to everlastinge. Vned him maye nothyng be added, neither can he be mynished, he hath no nede also of any counsell. O how amiable are all his woordes, & as a sparke to loke upon: They lye all, and endure for ever: and whan so ever nede is, they are all obedient vnto him. They are all dubble, one agaynst another: he hath made nothyng that hath fauour or blemish. He hath stablished the goodnes of exhortation: and who maye be satisfiied with his glory, whan he saith it?

The XLiii. Chapter.

The glory of the heyn, is the fayre and cleare firmament, the bewerye of the heauen in his glorious clearnes. The sonne whan it appeareth, declareth the daye in y goinge out of it, a marvelous woode of the syest. He noode it burneth y earth, and who maye abyde for the heate therof? Who so seepeth an ouen whan it is hote, the tymes more doeth the Sonne burne upon y mountaynes, whan it berbeth out the fyre beames and shyneth: with the buyrnes of it, it blyndeth the eyes. Great is the LORDS that made it, and in his commandement he causeth it to reme hastily.

The Moone also is in all, and at convenient season it sheweth the tymes, and is a token of the tyme. The token of the solempne staff is taken of the Moone, a light that mynished and increaseth againe. The Moone is called a ster the Moone, it groweth wonderously in his chaunginge.

The armye of heauen also is in the heyn, in the firmament of heauen it geweth a cleare and glorious shyne. This is the clearnes of the starres, the bewtiful apparall of heauen, the apparall that the LRDE lighteneth in the heyn. In his holy woord they continue in their orde, and nor one of them faileth in his watch. Like upon y rayne borne, and prayse him that made it: very bewtiful is it in his shyne. He compasseth the heauen aboute with his clearnes & glory, the handes of the syest haue beded it. Thow his commandement he maketh the snowe to fall, & the thonder of his iudgement to synne hastily. Thow his commandement the treasures are opened, and the cloudes sic as the foules. In his power hath he strengthened the cloudes, and beded the bayle stones.

The mountaynes mele at y sighe of him, the wynde bloweth accordinge to his will.

The southe of his thonder beareth y ank, and so doeth the storme of the north wynde whiche lyghteth downe as a syer fowle, casteth out and speedeth the fowle broode: and as the gresshoppers that be theye all, so fallerh it to wome. The sea manerh at y bewerye of the wyntereth theye, and the hart is afrayed at the raime of it. He paryeth out the frost upon earth, like salt, and when it is froren, it is as sharpe as the pyre of the thistle.

Whan the colde northwynde bloweth, the harde Chyffall commeth of the water, the lighteth downe upon all the gatherings together of water, and puterh on y mountaynes as a beff platt. He bewourth the mountaynes, and burneth the wyntereth: and loke what is grene, he puterh it outlyre. The mydyane of all these is, whan a dew commeth hastily: and whan a dew commeth upon the heate, it shalbe refreshyng gayne.

In his woode he stylyeth the wynde, in his counsell he seereth the depe, and the LRDE Jesus planced it. They that saye out the see, cell of his parcels and barres: and whan we heare it with oure eares, we manell theras. For there be straige wonderous woordes, by wylde maner of synge bestes and wyll fishes. Thow him are all thynges in good orde and performed, & in his woode all thynges endre.

I speake mynde, but I can not sufficientlye acceyne vnto it, for he himselfe onlye is the perfectione of all woordes. We shalbe puffed in the LRDE after all d power, for he is great in all his woordes. The LRDE is to be praised very greate is he, and marvelous is his power. Prayse the LRDE, and magnifie him as moch as ye maye, yet doth he sum farre excede all prayse. O magnifie him & all ye are power, and laboure earnestly, yete ye in no wyse able sufficientlye to prayse him. Who hath sene him, that he maye saye: Who can magnifie him so greatlye as he is? For there are hyd yet greater thynges whiche these be: as for vs, we haue sene but sum of his woordes. For the LRDE hath made all thynges, and geuen wyrdome to such as sere God.

The XLiiii. Chapter.

A commendacion of the olde vertuous fathers.

Le vs commende the noble fathers men, and the generation of our fathers. Many were gloious actes hath the LORDE bene, and shewen his grete power ouer fens of begynninge. The noble famous men raigned in their kyngdomes, and bare excellent rule. In their wysdome and vnderstonynge, they so loved the counsell shewed in the proph-etia. They led the folke thowen the counsell and wysdome of the scribes of the people.

 Whye latencies are founde in their instruc-cion. They soughe the sweetnes and melody of musick, and broughe forth the pleasaunt songs in scripture. They were riche also, & coude comforte and pacifie these that dwelle with them. All these were very noble and honoureble men in their generacions, and were well respected in their tymes. These haue left a name beynde them, so that their prayer shal alwaye be spok of. A fterwarde the re were sone, whose remembraunce is go-uerned. They came to nauyge and perished, as though they had neuer bene; and became as though they had neuer bene boine, yet z their chyldren also with them.

¶ These bes thes are louynge men, who se ryghteousnes shal neuer be forgotten, but continue by their posterite. Their chyldren are an holy good heretage: Their sede endured no fall in y couenaunt. For their sake shal their chyldre z sede continue for euer, z their praye shal neuer be put downe. Their bodis are buried in peace, but their name lyueth for euermore. The people can speake of their wysdome, z the congregacion can talke of their praye. Enoch walked right z acceptably be fore the LORDE: ether fore was he tras-lated for an example of amendement to y ge-neracions. Noe was a stedfast z ryghteous man: in the tyme of which he became a re-scuinge. Ther fore was he left a remnant vnto the earth, whan the floude came. An everlasting couenaunt was made w him, that all flesch shalde per: the nomeie with y zore.

¶ Abrahā was a greate father of many people, in glory was there none like vnto him. He kepte the lawe of the wyse, z came into a couenaunt with him. He sawe the com-inge in his flesch, and whan he was tempted, he was founde faithfull. Ther fore snew God vnto him with an oath, that he wold be bless all people in his sede, that he wolde multiplye and increase him as the dust of the earth, and to exalte his sede as the star-res: yet and that his sede shulde haue y possession and inheritaunce of the londe from the east to the west, and from the ryuer vnto y borders of the londe.

Which Isaac vnd bestabliß y same counait, for Abrahā his fathers sake. Yet y gracious blessinge and health of all men, and couenaunt vnd he stabliß with Isaac, and made it to rest vpon the heate of Jacob. He knew him, in that he profiered him so well and richly, and gaue him an heretage, and surbered his porcion by it self, and parted it amonge the trowle trybes. Mercifull men broughe he oge of him, which founde fauor before all flesch.

The XLV. Chapeer.

¶ Ofes beloned of God and me, who remembraunce is in hys praye: he hath the LORDE made like in the glory of the sayntes, and magnified him so that the enemies stode in awe of him: to whom his wordes be vnd greate wondres. He made him greate in the sight of y ynges, gaue him commaundement before his people, and shewed him his glorious power. He stablißed him with faithfulness and metenes, and chose him out of all men. For he herde his voyce, and led him in the darke cloude, and there he gaue him the commaunde-mentes, yet the lawe of life and wysdome, that he might teach Jacob the couenaunt, and Israel his lawes.

¶ He chose Aaron his brother also out of y trybe of Levi, exalted him, z made him such like. An everlasting couenaunt made he w him, and gaue him the presthode in the people. He made him glorious in beuissfull a-raye, and clothed him with the garment of honoure. He put perfecte ioye vnd him, and gyded him with strengthe. He decked him with syde clothes and a tuncycle, with an ouerbody cote also and gyrdle. A cunbe aboute made he him belies of golde, and that many: that whan he wente in, the sounde mighte be herde, that they mighte make a noyse in the Sanctuary, and greue the people warnyng. The holy garment was wrought z biuaded with golde, yallow sylke and purple. And in the bueflappe there was a goodly worke, wherein was fastened lighte and perfectnesse.

¶ Vpon y same also there was a worke fast-ned and set with costly precious stones, all bounde with golde: and this he broughe in his mystiracon. The stones also were fast-ned for a remembraunce, after the trowle trybes of Israel. Vpon his myre there was a plate of pure golde, a grauen ymage of holynesse, a famous and noble worke, garnished, and pleasaunt to loke vpon. Beside him were there sene no such saye ornaments, and these it becometh hi allwaye to vse: There mighte none other put them on, but onely his children and his childrens children perpetually. Daylie performed he his burnt offerings two tymes. Moyses fylled his handes, and anointed him wth holy oyle.

This was now confirmed him with an everlasting coenaunt, and to his sede, as y^e dayes of beaunt: namely, that his childe shulde be allwaye mynstre before him, and performe the office of the presthode, and wyshe the people good in his name. Before all menly wynged those he him, that he shulde offre before the LORDE, and make obours for a sweete sauour and remembraunce, that he shulde reconcile the people of the LORDE with him agayn. He gaue him auowite also in his commaundementes and in y^e coenaunt, that he shulde teach Jacob the statutes and testimonies, and to enforme Israel in his lame.

Therefore there stode vp certayne agaynst him, and had envye at him in the wilderness: namely, they that were of Daeban & Abirama syde, and the furious congregacion of Chose. The like LORDE sawe, and he dispicased him, and in his woorthfull indignacion were they consumed. A greate wonder did he upon them, and consumed them with the fyre. Besides this, he made Aaron yet more honoable and glorious. He gaue him an heritage, and parted the first frutes unto him. Unto him specially he appoynted the best for sustenance: for the prestes use of y^e offeringes of the LORDE: he gaue he unto him & his sede. He had he no heritage nee portion in y^e londe and with the people. For the LORDE himselfe is his portion and enheritance.

The thirde noble and excellent man is Phineas the sonne of Eleazar, which pleased the God of Israel, because he had y^e yde & scare of the LORDE. For when the people were turned back, he put himselfe fourth right soone, & that with a good will, to pacifie the wrath of the LORDE towards Israel. Therefore was there a coenaunt of peace made with him, y^e he shulde be the principall amonge the righteous and the people, that he and his posterite shulde haue the office of the presthode for euer: like as there was made a coenaunt with Dauid of the trybe of Iuda, that he amonge his sonnes onely there shulde be a kynge: And that Aaron also & his sede shulde be the heritage, to geue us wysdome in & bert, to iudge his people in righteousness: that his goodnes shulde not come in to fou-getfulnes, and that their honoure mighte dure for euer.

Only & stronge in battail was he: his y^e sonne of Uraue, which in the tyme of Moyses y^e prophet was geuen to be captayne of the people (which cominge unto his name was a greatesignificacion to the glorie of God) to punish the enemies, that rose up agaynst Israel. This man openaue their inheritance. O how noble and excellent was he, when he was in the citee: Who stode so manly before him. For the LORDE himselfe fought in the battail. Stode not the Storme still at his commaundement, and one daye was as long as two: he called upon the heuyl & made night, wherby his enemies pressed upon him and cryed: and the LORDE herde him with a hayle stones. They smote y^e battail: the people mightely, & in fallinge downe they shew all y^e aduersaries, so that the heuyl came from his hoost, and all his defence, that the LORDE himselfe fought agaynst them, so he solow upon the mightie men of them.

In the tyme of Moyses also he and led: the forme of Iephune, dyd a good wyle, which stode agaynst the enemies, which the people from synne, and styled y^e word murmarynge. And o ffire hundred the people of fose, they two were iudged: when they were brought in to the battail, namely, a londe that stoweth with mighte hony. The LORDE gaue strength also unto Caleb, which remayned with him unto his age: so that he wrote vp in to the booke of the londe, and his sede conquered the same for an heritage: that all the childe of Israel mighte se, how good a thinge it is, to be obedient unto the LORDE. And the iudges rulers (euery one after his name) whose lawe wente not a rebowinge, nor departed from the LORDE, and that soughte not the LORDE in faithfully, whose remembraunce hath a good report: The their bones stoweth out of the place, and their name shal neuer be charyng.

Samuel the prophet beloued of the LORDE, ordeined a kynge, and anointed the kynges ouer the people. In the lame of the LORDE ruled he, and iudged the congregacion: the LORDE had respecte unto Jacob. The prophet was founde bligent in his faithfulness: he in his faithfulness was the faithfulness of the nation. Ennoche, he called upon the LORDE the mightie, to haue the ennoche put upon him euery yere, what tyme he offred the suckyng lambe. And the LORDE sheweth from heauen, and mayde his voyce to be herde of a greace noyse. He discorned the pyrrus of Tyre, & all the rulers of the Philistynes. Before his last ende he made intercession in the sight of the LORDE & his anointed, that he toke nerther substance nor good of any man, nor noc so moch as a smert nor manninge accuse him. After this he toke, that his ende was at honde, and shewed the kynge also his ende and death: & from y carth lift he vp his voyce in the pro phetic, & he vngodly people shalbe perishe.

The XLVII. Chapter.

Deer worde in the cyme of kynge Da uid, there rose vp a prophet called Nathan: for like as the sat is taken awaye from the offryng, so was Dauid djo sen out of the dauid of Israel. He toke his pasture by the lions as w byddes, and with beares like as with lambees. Slew he not a gyannt whan he was yet but yonge, & toke awaye the rebate from his people: what ty me as he toke the stone in his hande, & sm w some proude Goliath w the slyng. For he called vpon the byest LORDE, which gaue his strength in his righte hande, so chat he overcame the mighty gyannt in the bat tle: that he mighte set vp the borne of his people agayne.

Dhis broughe he him to worship a bone all pyrrus, and made han to haue a good re port in the prayse of the LORDE, & he shal be wear a crowne of glory. For he destried the enemies on euery syde, roced out the Phi listynes his aduersaries, & brake their borne in sunder, like as it is broke yet this daye. In all his wordes he playsted y byest & holiest, & also ybed the honoure vnto him. With his whole herd vdy he prayse and loue him that made him. He set synners also before the aul ar, and in their tyme he made sweete songes.
 He aduised to kepe the holy daies worship fully, and chat the solempne fastes throug the whole yere shulde be honorably holde, with purgynge the name of the LORDE, & with synnginge by tymes in the mourninge in the Sanctuary.

The LORDE toke awaye his synnes, and traied his borne for euer. He gaue him y co rassant of the kyngdome, and the throne of worship in yfrael. After him there rose vp the wise sonne called Salomon, and for his sake he diouy y enemies awaie sarre of. This Salomon reigned with peace in his tyme in God gaue him rest from his enemies on wayfide, chat he mighte dryde him an hon se in his name, & prepare the Sanctuary for euer like as he was well instructed in his yong y: fylled with wysdome and vnderstandyng, as it were with a water founte. He couer ed and fylled the whole londe with similacres and wise pward sentences.

His name weme adobe in the yee, becau se of his peace he was beloued. All londes maruelled at his songes, piertes, similac res, and at his peace, and at the name of y LORDE God, which is called the God of Is rael. He gathered golde as tynne, & he had as moch syluer as leade. He was moued in vncordinate loue towardes women, and was overcome in affection. He stayned his hon and roostyng, yet his posterite desyred he al so, in bringyng the maysh of the LORDE v pon his children, and folowe after his ioye: so y his kyngdome was deuyded, & yphai tin became an vnfaithfull & an vnconstant kyngdome. Twentye yeres God sofered not his because of his wordes, & he shulde leaue him no posterite.

As for y siede y came vpon him, which he leaue y broughe it not wterly to naughte, but gaue yet a remnant vnto Jacob, and a roce vnto Dauid our of him. Thus rested Salomon with his farbers, and our of his siede he left behynde him a very foolishnes of the people, and such one as had no vnderst dyng of the name, & Robo which turned awaye the people thow his counsell, and Jerobo am y some of y Tabar, which caused y iael to synne, and shewed yphaim the maye of vngodlynes: In so moch that their synnes & mysdedes had the upper hande so sore, chat at the last they were dryuen out of the londe for the same: Rec he sought our & broughe vp all wickednes, till the vengeance came vpon them.

The XLVIII. Chapter.

Esen stode vp Elias the prophet as a fyre, and his worde byt like a craf beer. He broughe an hojjer vpon the and in his sele he made them fe w in nombre.
 (For they might not awaye w the comual demenes of the LORDE.) Thow the wor de of the LORDE he shure the heauen, and the tymes broughe he the fyre vntome. Thus he came Elias honorabile in his wonderous dedes. Who maye make his beoff to be like him: One that was dead raysed he vp from death, & in the worde of y byest he broughe him out of the graue agayne. He cast demes tynges and destroyed them, and the honora ble from their seate. Vpon the moone syns he herde the punishment, & upon hoare the iudgment of the vengeance. He prophesied recompensynge vnto kynge, and ordeyned prophesies a fter him. He was taken vp in the storme of fyre, in a charret of hoies of the LORDE. He was ordeyned in the reprobationes in synne, to pacifie the wrath, to turne f heres of the fathers vnto the children, & to set vp the tribes of Jacob agayne. Blessed were they that saw the, and were garnished in lone: for we lyue in life.

B Elias was cenered in the storme, but Helias was fylled with his mouth. Whyle he lyned he was afrayed of no prync, and no man might reuer come him. There coude no woide disceane him, & after his death his body prophesied. He byd wonders in his life, & in death were as wayles maruelous. For all this, the people amended not, nether departed they from their synnes: yll they were caried awaye prisoners out of the londe, and were scattered abrode in all countrees, so that of them there remayned but a very litle people, and a prync vnto y house of David. Howbe it some of them byd right, & some heaped vp vngoblynes.

Ezechias made his cite stronge, conueyed water in to it, dygged thow in the stony rock with yon, & made vp a well by the water syde. In his tyme came Sennacherib vp, and sent Rabshakes, lift vp his hande agaynst Sion, & defyed them with greate pryde. They tymbled their heres and handes, so y they foroweth like a woman stannaylinge with child. So they called vpo the LORDE, which is mercifull, & lift vp their handes before him. Immediately the LORDE herde the cwe of heauen, and deluyered them by the bande of Isay. He smote the boost of the Assirians, & his angell destroyed the. For Ezechias had done the thinge that pleased the LORDE, & remayned firdfasty in the waye of David his father. Which Isay was greate & faith full in his visions. In his tyme y Some wote backward, & he lengthened the kynge li f. With a righte spire prophesied he, what shalbe come to passe at the last: & to such as were frowfull in Sion he gaue consolacion, wherewith they might cōfote them selues for euermore. He shewed thinges y were for to come to secrete, & euer they came to passe.

A The remembrance of Josias is life as when the Spotecary maketh many precious sweet smellingynge thinges to reether. His remembrance shalbe fixere as hoy in all mountes, and as the playenge of Musick by the wyne. He was appointed to tunic the people agayne, & to take awaye all abhominacions of y vngobly. He turned his hert vnto the LORDE, & in the tyme of the vngobly he set vp the worshippe of the agayne. All kynge: & cetera Dama, & Josias & Josias comitted wickidnes in some of the kynge of Iuda also forsoke y lawe of God. For they ganethen home vnto cetera, the hono & worshippe also to a strange people. Therfore was the cleere cite of the tuary brent with fyre, and the stress they laye besolace & waite: for they increased Jeremy euill, which neuer theles was a people ordeyned from his mothers wombe, that might ree out, breake of, & destroye: the he might brayde vp, & plante agayne. Michael sawe the glory of the LORDE in vision, which was shewed him upon the derer of the Cherubims. For he thought vpon the enemies in y rayne, to be good vnto us as had ordeid their waye a right. In the bones of the twolue prophesies stanneth from one of their pie: for they gaue comfort consolacion vnto Jacob, and deluyered the faith fully. How shall we prayse God, which was as a ringe in the right hande.

So was Jesus also the forme of Josias: these men in their tymes byyded the lawe, & set vp the Sanctuary of y LORDE agayne, which was prepared for an everlasting worshippe. And Nehemias is allme y comended, which set vp for vs the wallis of ierusalem: he was broken downe, made the pines & heres agayne, and busyled ouer houses of the new. But vpon earth is there no man created like Enoch, for he was taken vp strey carry. And Joseph, which was loue of his brethren, & the upholder of his people: his bones were couered & tept. Such a tyme was in greate honoure amonge y people: & so was Adam aboute all the bestes, which was created.

The L. Chapter.

Simon the sonne of Onias the by y piest, which in his life set vp the house of God agayne, & in his dayes made full the temple. The heych of y temple also was founded of him, the dubble buydyng, & the bye wallis of the temple. In his dayes the wellis of water flowed out, and were cōfoundinge full as the see. He toke care for his people, & deluyered them from destruction. He tept his cite & made it stronge, that it shalbe not be seged. He dwelt in honoure and worshippe amonge his people, and enlarged the intrance of the house and the court.

he gleeth light as the mounyng starr in the myddel of the clowdes, and as y Moon when it is full, so shyneth as the Sonne in the temple of God. he is as bright as y raine bowe in y saye clowdes, z flourisheth as the floures and roses in the spryng of y yere, z as the lilies by the ryuere of water: Like as the bianches vpon the mount Li-banus in tyme of Sommer; as a fyre z in cethe is fynbleid: Like as an whole ornament of pure golde, set with all maner of precious stones: and as an olyue tre that is fructfull: z as a Typice tre which groweth vpon a hye.

When he put on the garment of honoure, z was clothed with hall beweye: when he wente to the holy altare, to garnyshe the co-ueryng of the Sanctuary: when he toke y portions out of the prestes hande, he hymself stode by the hertch of the altare, and his bre-thre rounde aboute in oide. As the bianches of Cedre tre vpon the mount Libanus, so stode they rounde aboute him. And as the bianches of the olyue tre, so stode all y son-nes of Aaron in their glory. And y he might suffauntly performe his seruyce vpon the altare, z garnyshe the offeringe of the hyest God, he stretched out his hande and toke of the bynde offeringe, z poured in of the wyne so he poured vpon the botome of the altar a good smell vnto the hyest prync.

Then beganne y sonnes of Aaron to synge, and to blowe with trompettes, z to make a greate noyse, for a remembraunce z praye vnto the LORDE. Then were the people astayed, z fell downe to the earth vpo their sides, to worshippe the LORDE their God, z to geue thankes to Almighty God. They singe goodly also with their voyces, so that there was a pleasaunt noyse in y greate house of the LORDE. And the people in their prayer besoughe the LORDE the hyest, that he wolde be mercifull, z all the honoure of y LORDE were performed. Thus ended they their mynistracion and seruyce.

Then wente he downe, and stretched out his hande ouer the whole multitude of the people of y Israel, that they shulde geue praye for thankes out of their lippes vnto y LOR-DE, and to reioyce in his name. he beganne yet once also to praye, that he might openly shewe the thank of genyngre befoie the hyest, namely thus: O geue prayse z thankes (ye all) vnto the LORDE oure God, which hath our borne noble and greate thinges: which hath increased oure dayes from o mothers wombe, and dealt with vs a cordyng to his mercy: that he wyl geue vs the ioyfaines of here, z peace for oure synnes in y Israel. Which scheyd fully expect his mercy for vs euermore, z all waye deliuereth vs in due season.

There be two maner of people, that I abhorre fro my heretias for the thire, whom I hate, as is no people: They that syr vpon the mountayne of Samaria, the Philistynes, z the foolish people that dwell in Sichonia.

I Ihesu the sonne of Sirac Eleazarus of Jerusalem, haue taken vp these infor-macions and documtes of wysdome and vnderstandinge in this boke, and poured out the wysdome out of my hert. Blessed is he that exerciseth him self therein: and who so taketh such to hert, shal be wysse. If he do the se thinges, he shal be stronge in all. For the light of the LORDE ledeth him.

The Ll. Chapter.

A prayer of Ihesu the sonne of Sirac.

Thanke the LORDE and kynge, and praise the O God my Sauoure.
I wil yelde prayse vnto y name: for thou art my defende and helpe, z hast piesented my body from destruccio, from y sin-ne of cravenous coges, and from the lippes that are occupied with leyes. Thou hast become my helpe, from such as stode vpon agaynst me, and hast deliuered me after the multitude of thy mercy, and for thy holy names sale. Thou hast deliuered me from the roar-yng of them, that persued them selues to be voure me, out of y handes of such as soughe a fier my life: from the multitude of them y troubled me, z wente aboute to sit sye vpon me on every syde, so y I am not bient in the myddest of the fyre: from the deep of hell, from an vndeane cogge, from lyeuge wordes, from the wicked kynge, and from an wring teens conge. My soule shal prayse y LORDE vnto death, for my life diem nye vnto hell.

They copasid me rounde aboute on every syde, z there was no ma to helpe me. I lo-ted aboute me, yf there were any man that wolde secoure me: but there was none. Then thoughte I vpon thy mercy O LORDE, and vpon thy actes that thou hast done euer of olde: namely, y thou deliuerest such as putte their trust in the, and rydest them out of y handes of the zechers. Thus list I vpon y prayer from the earth, and praye for deli-uerance from death. I called vpon the LOR-DE my father, that he wolde not leaue me wout helpe, in the baye of my trouble z in the tyme of the proube. I prayse thy name contynually, yeldyng honoure and thankes vnto Ecclesiasticus.

it: and so my prayer was heere. Thou savedest me from destruction, and deliueredst me fro y vnrighteous tyme. Therfore wil I acknowledge and praise the, and magnifie y me of the LORDE.

C Whā I was yet yonge, or euer I wē ee astraye, I desired wysdome openly in my prayer. I came therfore before the temple, & I sought her vnto the last. Then flourished she vnto me, as a grape that is soone ripe. My heart reioysed in her, then wente my feet the righte waye, yee from youth vp sought I after her. I bowed downe myne eare and recea-ued her. I founde me moch wysdome, and prospered greatly in her. Therfore wil I scribe the glory vnto him, that geueth me wysdome: for I am aduysed to do ther a fter.
I will be gelous to cleue vnto the thinge y is good, so shal I not be confounded. My soule hath wrestled with her, and I haue bene diligent to be occupied in her. I lift vp my-ne hande an lye, then was my soule lightened therow wysdome, that I knowledged my foolishnesse. I obeyed my soule a fter her, she & I were one heart from the begynninge, and I founde her in cleanness. And therfore shal I not be confuted.

D My heart longed after her, and I gaue a good treasure. Therow her y LORDE hath geuen me a new songe, wherwith I wil praise him. O come vnto me ye vnlearned, & dwell in y house of wysdome: withdruwe not your relious from her, but talke & comon of these thinges, for youre soules are very chirstie. I opened my mouth, and spake O come & bye wysdome with out money, howe downe you reuecd under his yoc, and youre soule shall receaue wysdome. She is harde at hande, & is content to be founde. Beholde with your eyes, howe that I haue had but litle laboure, and yet haue founde moch rest. O receaue wysdome, and ye shall haue plenteousnesse of silver and golde in possession. Lete your-re mynde reioyse in his mercy, & be not ashamed of his pay-se. Whyke his worke by tymes, & he shal geue
you your reuorde in due tyme.

of Susanna.

¶ Now when the people came agayn a after noone, Susanna wente into her housh bes orcharde, to walke. The elders spyed this, that she went in daylie to walke, they burned for lust to her, yet they were aliue out of their wittes, & cast downe their eyes, that they shulde not se heauel, nor remembre, y God is a righteous iudge. For they were boch wounded w the loue of her, neither woul one shewe another his greif. And for drede, they durst not tell her their inuentione last, y they wolde sayne haue had to do d by.
¶ Yet they layed waite for her earnestly from daye to daye, that they myghte (at the last) haue a sight of her. And the one sayde to y other: Vp, let us go home, for it is vnto ty me. So they wente their waye from her.

¶ When they returned agayne, they came together, enqueringe out y maner betwix them selues: yet the one tolde y other of his ricorded lust. The a poynted they a waye, whi they might take Susanna alone.

¶ It happened also y they spied out on a uenite tyme, when she wente south to walke (as hir maner was) y no body with her, but two maydens, & thought to walke her self in the garden, for it was an hore season: And there was not one person there, & came the two elders, y had by them felowes, to beholde de her. So she sayde to hir maydenge: se me oyle & sope, y that the orcharde bore, y I maye wash me. And they dyd as she bid them, & that the orcharde bore, & wouent them selues at a backe dore, so for the thought y she had commaunded: but Susanna knew not. y y elders late there byd without. ¶ Now when the maydens were gone sooth, y one eldere gat them vp, & ranne upon her: y genow, the orcharde bore as she thought man can se w we haue a lust woe the, ther fore continue vnto us, and lye with vs.

¶ If thou wilt not, we shall bringe a memoriall agaynst the: that there was a yuge felow with the, and that thou hast awaye thy maydens: sicke the for the first cause. Susanna sighe, and sayde: Alas! am in trouble on every syde. Though I loue youre mynde, it wyl be my death, yf I consent not vnto you, I can not shew yours honours. Wel, it is better for me to in youre honours with out the dede bodye, then to synne in the sight of the LORDE: with that, she cried out with a loud voyce, the elders also cried out agaynst her.

¶ Then ranne there one to the orcharde re, & smote it open. ¶ Now when the separa tes of the house herde y crye in y orchard, ¶ Here dwelle a man in Babilon, cal led Joachim: y take a wife, w ho ter of helchias: a very sayne wo man, & tohene as feared God. Her father & hir mother also were godly peopple, & taught their doughter acordinge to y lawe of Mo ses. ¶ Now Joachim (hir husband) was a greate rich man, & had a sawe: each adre ioy ninge wnto his house. And to him resorted the Iewes cennely, because he was a man of reparation amonge them. The same yre were there made two iudges, sech as the LORDE speaketh of: All the wisdome of Babilon, cometh from y elders: y is: yrem y iudges, which seme to rule the people. The case came to Joachims house, y all such as had any thinge to do in the lawe, came thi ther. vnto them.

they misshew in as the backe done, so se what the matter was. So when the elders tolde them, the firmances were greatly ashamed, for wher there was neuer sode a repore made of Susanna. On the morow a fier came to the people to Joachim his houshoulde, and to two elders came also, full of myshewous miraculous agaynst Susanna, to bringe her vnto death, & spake thus before the people: Susanna is a daughter of hel chance, Joachim his wife. And immediatly they saw for her. So she came wth her father & mother, & her children, & all her kynrede. Now Susanna was a wonderfull person, & maruelous fayre of face. Therfore the wicked men commaunded to take of the clothes from her face (for she was covered) & at the lesse, they might be satisfide in hir beutie. Then hir frendes, wth all they & she wth her, begane to wepe.

These two elders stode vp in the myddest of the people, & laye their bondes vpon the head of Susanna, which wepte, and leted apromerke heanen, for hir herte had a sur-mis in the LORDE. And the elders sayde: As we were walkinge in the orcharde alene, this woman came in wth her two mayds: whom she leueth awaye from her, & spaked of the orcharde doores. With that, a yonge sloue (which there was by) came vnto her, & laye vth her. As for vs, we stode in a corner of the orchard. And wher we sawe this wickednes, we came so hert: perceaued, & they had medled together. But we coude not holde him, for he was stronger then we: thus he opened vth her, & gat him awaye. Now wher we had wth this woman, we axed her, what yonge slew this man: but she wolde not tell vs. This is y^{er} matter, & we be witnesses of y^{er} same.

The common sorte belused them, as those y^{er} were the elders & iudges of the people, & so they condemned her to death. Susanna went out wth a leude voyce, & sayde: O euerlast-ing God, thou searcher of secretes, thou y^{er} knowest all thinges a fore they come to passion: thou woteit, y^{er} they haue borne false wit-nesse agaynst me: & beholde, I must dye, wher-as I neuer dyd any sode thinges, as as these men haue maliciously inuented agaynst me.
And y^{er} LORDE herde hir voyce, for wth he was led forth to death, y^{er} LORDE raised vp y^{er} spise of a yonge childe, whose name was Daniel, which cried wth a loude voyce: I am clement of this bloude. He all y^{er} people turned the rounde him, & saide: Wher means these woedes, y^{er} thou hast spoke? Daniel stode in y^{er} myd-dest of the, & sayde: Are ye sode foolles? O ye childe of Israel: y^{er} eu nre diuines: He has us here condemned a daughter of Israel vnto death, and knowe not the truth: wherfore we sye an iudgment agayne, for they haue spoken false witness agaynst her.

Wherfore the people turned agayne in all the haist. And the elders (that is, the principall heades) sayde vnto him: come sit dow-ne here amonge vs, and shewe vs this matter, seyinge God hath giuen thee as greates honoure, as an elder. And Daniel sayde vnto them: Put these two asyde one from another, and then shal I heare of them. When they were put a iunior one from another, he called one of them, and sayde vnto him: O thou olde cankered carle, that hast used thy wickednesse so longe: thine miraculus deeds which thou hast done a fore, are now come to lighte. For thou hast giuen false iudgements, thou hast oppressed the innocent, and letten the guiltie go free, where as yet the LORDE saith: The innocent and righteous se thou slaye not. Wel than, yf thou hast sene her, tel me, vnder what tre sawest thou them talkinge together? He answered: Vnder a Mulberry tre. And Daniel sayde: very wel, & now thou shalt see vpon this innocent head. Lo the messenger of the LORDE hath receaued the sentence of him, to cut ye in two.

Then put he him asyde, and called for the other, and sayde vnto him: O thou seer of Canaan, but not of Iuda: saymisse hath disceined the, and lust hath subuerted thine herte. Thus deale ye a fore wth the daughters of Israel, and they (for feare) consented vnto you: but the daughter of Iuda wolde not abyde youre wickednesse. Now tel me than, vnder what tre didest thou take them speakinge together? He answered: vnder a pomegranate tre. Then sayde Daniel vnto him: very wel, now thou seyst also euen vth thine head. The messenger of the LORDE stomberd waityng with the foorce, to cut the in two, and to slaye you both.

With that, all the whole multitude ga-ue a greates shoute, and praised God, which allwaye deliuereth them: y^{er} put their trust in him. And they came vpon the two elders, (whom Daniel had commuice wth their owne mouth: that they had giuen false wit-nesse) and deale wth them, euen likewise as they wolde haue done wth their neighbours: see they dyd a cordinge to the lawe of Moyses, and put them to death. Thus the innocent bloude was saued the same daye.

The story of Bel, which is the xiij. Chapter of Da niel after the Latin.

I Here was at Babilon an ymage, called Bel: and there were spent vpon him euery daye, xij. cakes, x. shepes, and sixe greate pottes of wine. And vnto the kynge wooshipe himself, and wente daylie to honde him: but Daniel wooshiped his owne God. And the kynge sayde vnto him: Why doste not thou wooshipe Bel: he answered and sayde: Because I maye not wooshipe thinges, that be made of honde, but the livinge God, which made heaven and earth, and hath power vpon all flesch. The kynge sayde vnto him: thinkest thou not, 3 Bel is a livinge God: Or list thou not, how much he eateth and drynkech euery daye: Daniel smiled, and sayde: O kyn ge, because not thyselfe. This is but made of claye within, and of metall without, neither eateth he euer any thinge.

tell me not why this is, that eateth vp these respous, ye shal dye: But if ye can certifie me, that Bel eateth them, then Daniel shall dye, for he hath spoken blasphemy agaynst Bel. And Daniel sayde vnto the kynge: let it so be, accordinge as thou hast sayde. The prestes of Bel were iij. besyde their wyues and chylde. And the kynge wente with Daniel in to the temple of Bel. So Bela prestes say de: Lo, we wil go out, for thou 3 meate the ues sure enough, for vnder 3 alcare they had made a pery entrance, 3 there was no in euer, and ate vp what there was.

So when they were gone forth, the kynge set meate before Bel. Now Daniel had comanded his seruantes to buye wyne and these he sifted thorow one all the tem ple, that the kynge might se. Then meate they out, 3 sparre the doore, sealinge it with kynge's signet, and so departed. In 3 morn came the prestes with their wyues and chyl dren (as they were wonte to do) and an ad dionte vp all. In the morninge betwixt the break of the daye, the kynge arose, 3 Da niel with him. And the kynge sayde: Daniel, at the stalle whole yet: he answered: My kynge: they be whole. Now as some say had opened the doore, the kynge looke alcare, and cried with a loude voyce: What art thou O Bel, and why the is no deuce.
Then laughed Daniel, and helde the kynge, that he shulde not go in, and sayde: Dese the pavement, marcke well, wher foot pes are these: The kynge sayde: I se the steppes of men, women and chylde.

Then for the kynge was angry, and the prestes, with their wyues and chylde, they shewed him 3 pery doore, wher they came in, 3 ate vp such thinges as were vnto 3 alcare. For the which cause 3 kynge them, 3 deliuered Bel in to Daniels hand, which destroyed him and his temple.

And in that same place there was a grete dragon, which they of Babilon wooship ped. And 3 kynge sayde vnto Daniel: I se thou, if this is but a god of metall, as lieth, he eateth 3 drinketh so 3 thou saye, that he is no livinge God, then woos shipe him. Daniel sayde vnto 3 kynge: I wil wooshipe the LORD my God, he is 3 ynge God: as for this, he is not the God of life. But geue me leaue, O kynge: 3 I wil trye this dragon without fauour in fast.
The kynge sayde: I geue 3 leaue. Then Da niel toke pitch, fatte, and hairie wool, and he seth them together, and made longes of this he put in 3 Dragons mouth, and 3 dragon barst in fonder: and Daniel sayde there is he whom ye wooshipped.

When they of Babilon herde that, they toke grete indignacion, and gathered them together agaynst the kynge, sayinge: The kynge is become a Iewe also, he hath yeb Bel, he hath slayne 3 dragon, and the prestes to death. So they came to 3 gr, 3 sayde: let us haue Daniel, or els we desiro ye the and thine doore.

Now when y^e kynge sawe, that they rus-shed in so fast upon him, & that necessity commained him, he desired Daniel unto them: which cast him in to the Lyons denne, where he was sixe dayes. In the denne there were seuen Lyons, and they had geuen them euery daye two bodies and two shepe: which they were of great cheere, that they might deuore Daniel.

There was in Jewey a prophet called Abacuc, which had made potage, and broker had in a depe plaetter, and was goinge in to the selde, for to bringe it to y^e moore.
But the angell of the LORDE sayde unto Abacuc: go carry the meate that thou hast in to Babilon, unto Daniel, which is in y^e Lyons denne. And Abacuc sayde: LORDE, I neuer sawe Babilon: and as for the denne, I knowe it not. Then the angell of the LORDE toke him by the coppe, and bare him by the hairs of the heade, and (tho' now a mightie wynde) set him in Babilon upon the denne.
And Abacuc cried, sayenge: O Daniel thou servant of God, have, take the breakfast, y^e God hath sent y^e. And Daniel saide: O God, hast thou thoughte upon me: wel, thou never forsest them that loue the. So Daniel arose, & ate: and the angell of the LORDE set Aba-cuc in his owne place againe immediately.

Upon the seventh daye, the kynge wente to to seepe Daniel: and when he came to the denne, he looked in: and beholde, Daniel sat in the myddell of the Lyons. Then cried y^e kynge with a loud voice, sayenge: Great art thou, O LORDE God of Daniel: y^e he drewe him out of the denne. As for those that were y^e cause of his destruction, he dyd cast the in to the denne, and they were deuoured in a moment before his face.

A freeth, more the kynge unto all people, kynnedes and tunges, that dwelt in all countreys, sayenge: peace be multiplied with you. My commaundement is, in all the dominyon of my realme: that men shalre and ston-de in awe of Daniel's God, for he is the Lynyng God, which endureth euer: his kyngdom abydeth vncorrupte, and his power is euerslasting. It is he that can deliuer

Chap. XVI. The faithfulness of Symon his sonne. Ptolomy slayeth them of carnally, and betrayeth the londe.

The first Chapter.

After that Alexander the sonne of Philippe, kynge of Macedonia wente south of the londe of Cechim, and slew Darius kynge of the Persias and Medes:

It happened, that he toke greate warres in honde, wanne very many stronge cities, and slew many kinges of the earth: goinge thow to the endes of the world, and gettinge many spoyles of the people: In so much, that he woulde stode in greate awe of him, that therfore was he poble in his heret. Now whē he had gathered a mightie ströge hooff, & subdued the lodes and people with their prynces, so that they became tributaries unto his: he fullfild. And whē he perceaned that he must needs die, he called for his noble ofstares (which had bene brought up with him of children) & parted his kyngdome amonge them, whyle he was yet alive. So Alexander raygned 14. years, and then dyed.

After his death fell the kyngdome unto his prynces, and they obtayned it euery one in his rowme, and caused them selues to be crowned as kynges: and so by their childre after them many years, & much wickednesse increased in the world. Out of these came yf ungracious roce, noble Antiochus the sonne of Antiochus the kynge (which had bene a pledge at Rome) & he raygned in the 117. year of the raigne of the Cules.

In those dayes wete thre out of Israel wicked men, which moued much people to their couel, sayyng: Let vs go & make a covenante with the heethen, that are rounde aboute vs: for since we departed from them, we haue had much sorow. So this deuyc pleased them well, and certayne of the people toke upon the for to go unto the heethen, which game them licence to do after the custom of the heethen. Then set they up an open place (as Jerusalem) of the lawe of the heethen, and were nomore circumcised: but they kepte holy Testamete, and loyued them lawfully. And so they were cleane solde to do wicked.

So when Antiochus be game to be mightie in his kyngdome, he wente abode to egypte the londe of egypte also, that he might haue the dominion of two realmes. Then this entred he in to egypte with a strong hooff with charrettes, elephants, horses & a greate nombre of shippes, and began to warre agaynst Ptolomy the kynge of egypte. But Ptolomy was a stayed of him, and fled: and many of his people were wounded to death. Thus Antiochus wanne many stronge cities, and toke awaie a greate good out of the londe of egypte.

And after that Antiochus had fynyshyd egypte, he turned agayne in the Cefar, & wente towarde Israel, and came up to Jerusalem with a mightie people: and most piously into the Sanctuary, and toke away the golden altare, the candlestick, and all the ornaments therof: the table of the shewbread, the pouringe vessel, the charygers, the golden spones, the vales, the crownes and golden apparell of the temple, and brake downe all, he toke also the silver and golde, the precious Jewels, and the secretes treasures that he fild. And when he had taken away all together, caused a greate murder of men, and so fullfild his malicious pryde, he departed in to his owne londe.

Thus there arose greates bewynnes and misery in all the londe of Israel. The prynces and the elders of the people mourned, the yegemen and the maydens were desolite, and the sayre beuoye of women was thought the byrdgreame and the byrdet of the mourninge: the londe and the people that were therein, was moued: for all the heuf of Jacob was brought to confusion.

¶ Then two yeares the kynge sent his che-106 ffermenter vnto the cities of Iuda, which came to Iherusalem with a greate multitude of people. speaكية peaceable wordes vnto the, but all was disceate: for when they had gaue him credence, he fell sobely vpon the 107 air, and smote it soe, and destroyed moche people of Iſrael. And when he had spoyled the cite, he set fyre on it, caſtinge downe hou-108 ſes and walles on every syde. The women & their children toke they captiue, and led awaye their cattell. Then buyled they the caſtel of David with a greate and thicke wall, and with mightie towres, & made it a strongholde for them. Desyre all this they set 109 ward people and vngodly men to kepe it, sharpe with weapons and vnto: gaue to the goodes of Iherusalem, and layed the 110 ſtreth: thus became it a thewſy caſtell.

¶ And this was done to laye waite for the people that wente in to the Sanctuary, and for the crall destruction of Iſrael. Thus they shed innocent bloude on every syde of 111 Sanctuary, and defiled it: In ſomoch that the citeſyns were fayne to departe, and the cite became an habitation of ſtraungers, byng deſolate of hir owne ſede, for hir or-112 nnaments were fayne to leaue her. Hir ſanc-tuary was cleue waſhed, hir holy dayes we-113 r returned in to mourninge, hir Sabbathes were had in deſolation, and hir heire broughte to naughte. Loke how greate hir glory was 114 ſhe, ſo greate was hir confuſion, and hir 115 ſtreth in to ſorrow.

¶ Antiochus alſo the kynge ſent out a com-116 miſſion vnto all his kynngdome, that all the people ſhulde be one. Then they left every man his lawe, and all the heithen agreed to the commaundement of kynge Antiochus: For many of the Iſraelites confented there 117 unto, offeringe vnto Idols, and deſyinge the Sabbath. So the kynge Antiochus ſent his meſſengers with his commiſſion vnto 118 Jerusalem, and to all ſ cities of Iuda: that they ſhulde ſolowe ſ lawes of the heithen, and ſhalde eſchew bu-cofferynge, meat-offe-119 ringes, or peace-offerynges: to be made in the temple of God: & that there ſhulde no Sab-120 bath nee hys faſt daye be kepte: but commaunded, that the Sanctuary and the ho-121 ly people of Iſrael ſhulde be deſiled.

¶ He commaunded alſo that there ſhulde be ſet up ocher altares, temples and Idols: to offer up ſwynes fleſh and other vncleane beaſtes: that men ſhulde leaue their children 122 ſacrificed, to deſile their ſoules with all maner of vncleaneſſe & abhominacion:

that they might ſo forget the lawe, and chaunge all the holy ordinaunces of God: and that who ſo ever wolde not do a cōtrary to the commaundement of kynge Antio-123 chus, ſhulde ſuffre death. In like maner commaunded he choiue out all his realmes, and ſet rulers ouer the people, for to com-124 pell them to do theſe thinges, commaundinge the cities of Iuda to do ſacrifice vnto Idols.

¶ Then wente the people vnto the heit-125 hen by heapes, ſo ſode the lawe of the LOR-DE, and committed moche euell in the londes: yee and chaiced out the ſecret Iſraelites, which had hid them ſelues in corners and 126 hidre places. The xv. daye of the moneth Caſeu, in the xlv. yeare, ſet kynge Antio-127 chus an abhominable Idol of deſolation vpon the altare of God, and they buyled altares choiue out all the cities of Iuda on every ſyde, before the doores of the houſes, and in the ſtreets: where they burnt incen-128 ſe, and byd ſacrifice. And as for the boſes 129 of the lawe of God, they brent them in the fyre, and rente them in peeces. What ſo ever he was that had a boſe of the Teſtaments of the L O R D E founde by hym, yee who ſo 130 euer embowed himſelf to kepe the lawe of the L O R D E, the kynngs commaundement was, ſ they ſhulde put him to death. And choiue his anconce they executed theſe 131 thinges every moneth, vpon the people of Iſrael that were founde in the cities.

¶ The fyne and eueryng daye of the mo-132 neth, what tyme as they byd ſacrifice vpon the altare (which ſtoode in the ſteade of the altare of the L O R D E) a cōbryng to the commaundement of kynge Antiochus, they put certayne women to death, which 133 had cauſed their children to be circumciſed: For only that, but they hanged vpon the 134 hill by the neckes choiue out all their hon-135 ors, and ſlewe the circumciſers of them.

¶ Yet were there many of the people of Iſ-136 rael, which detemred in them ſelues, that they wolde not eate vncleane thinges: but choſt rather to ſuffre death, than to be deſ-137 iled with vncleane meates. So becauſe they wolde not breake the blessed lawe of God, they were cruelly ſlayne. And this greates 138 ſtrany increaſed very ſore vpon the people of Iſrael.

The ii. Chapter.

¶ In thoſe dayes there byd ſitte up do-139 ne Machabees the ſonne of Symeon the priest out of the kynne of Iouris) frō Jerusalem, and dwelt vpon the mount of Sion, and had v. sonnes: The called Gaddia: Symon, called Thasi: Judas, other wyfe called Maccabeus: Eleazer, other wyfe called Abaton: and Jonathas, whose surname was Apphus. These same the euell, & was done amonge the people of Iuda and Jerusalem. And Maccathias sayde: Wo is me, alas that euer I was borne, to se this mifery of my people, and y peccours destruccioof the holy cite: & thus to sye so still, it beyng deliuered in to the hondes the enemies, Mac. 1. b. hir Sanctuary is come in to the power of strangers, hir temple is, as it were a man y hath lost his good name, hir precious ornaments are caried awaye captiue, hir olde men are layne in the struce, and hir yonge men are fallen thowen the swordes of the enemies.

What people is it, that hath not some possession in hir kyngdome? O: who hath not gotten some of hir spoyles? All hir glory is taken awaye. She was a Queene, and now she is become an handmayde. Beholde our Sanctuary, oure beweie and honoure is maist awaye, and desyld by the Gentiles. What helpeth it vs then to lyue? And Maccathias rente his clothes, he and his son-nes, and put sack cloth vpon them, & mou-ned very sore.

Then came the men thither which were sent of kyng Antiochus, to compell such as were fled in to the cite of Molebin, for to do sacrifice and to burne incense vnto Idoles, and to forsake the lawe of God. So many of the people of Israel consented and enclined vnto them, but Maccathias and his sonnes remained stedfast. Then spake the commissa-ners of kyng Antiochus, & sayde vnto Maccathias: Thou art a noble man, of hie reparation and greate in this cite, hauinge sauen children and brethren. Come thou therfore first, and fulfill the kynges commaundement, like as all the Greithen haue done, yee and y men of Iuda, and such as remaine at Jerusalem: so shalt thou and thy children be in y kynges fauoure, and enriched with golde, silver and greate rewardes.

Maccathias answered, and spake with a loude voyce: Though all nations obeye the kyng Antiochus, and fall awaie euer y man frō kynges y laue of their fathers: though they consente to his commaundementes, yet will I & my sonnes and my brethren, not fall from the laue oure fathers. God forbid we shalbe what were not good for vs, that we shalbe forsake the lawe and obseruance of God, and to agre vnto the commaundemesof kyng Antiochus. Therefore we will do no such sacrifice, neither breake the staunof s laue, to go another waye. And whil he had spoken these wordes, there came one of the Jewes, which openly in the sight of al, byd sacrifice vnto the Idoles vpon the altar in the cite of Molebin, a cowardlye to the ky-nges commaundement.

When Maccathias sawe this, he gaue him at the here, so that his tymbre flew withall, and his reach kindled for very yle of the lawe. With that he gaue a shrye forth, and fylled the Jewes wth the answe and steeue y kynges commissor, the compelled him to do sacrifice, & despyred the altar at the same tyme: soch a sele had he to the laue of God, like as Phineas had to Zambri the sonne of Salom. And Maccathias cried with a loude voyce thowen y ste, sayenge: Who so is firmen in the lawe, will kepe y commaundement, let him followe me. he and his sonnes fled in to the mountaynes, and left all that euer they had in y cite. Many other godly men also departed in to the wyldernes: with their children, their wyues and their cattell, and remayned there: hid thymself in creeces (so seie vpon them).

Now when the kynges seruantes sawe the host, which was at Jerusalem, the cite of David herde, that certayne men had breken the kynges commaundement, and gone their waye to the wyldernes in secrete places, and that there were many parted after them: they followed vpon to fighe agaynst them in the Sabbath day, and sayde: Will ye yett rebel? Or ye haue & do the commaundement of kyng Antiochus, and ye shall lyue. They answered: We will not goe forth, neither will we do the kynges commaundement, to defile y Sabbath day.
 Then beganne they to fighe agaynst the newertelisse they gaue them noce: they firere, neither cast they one stone at them, nor made fast their piety places, but sayde: we will dye all in oure innocen cy, becauise we shal testifie with vs, that ye put vs to death wrongeously. Thus they fought agaynst them vpon the Sabbath, & slawe both men and cattell, their wyues and their children: the nombre of a thousande people.

When Maccathias and his brethren sawe this, they mourned for them: they sayde one to another: Who seeth us all as oure brethren haue done, and fighe agaynst oure lyues & for oure lawes agaynst the then when shall they the sooner rote vs one of churche. So they cōcluded amonge the felmes at the same tyme, sayenge: What shal we be that cometh to make battayll vs vs upon the Sabbath daye, we will fight agaynst him, & not vnder day, as o' brethren y were murdered so haynously. Vpō this came the Synagoge of the Jewes vnto the strong men of Israel, all such as were feruent in the lawe. And all they that were fled for persecution, came to helpe them, and to stande by them: In so much that they gathe red an host of men, and slew the wicked doers in their gelousy, and the vngodly men in their mach. Some of the wicked fled vnto the helthen, and escaped.

Thus Machabias and his frendes went about, and destroyed the altiers, and circumcised the children, that had not yet receaued circumcision: so many as they found within y coostes of Israel: and folowed mightily vpon the children of pryde, and this aere prospered in their bondes: In so much, that they kepte the lawe agaynst the power of the Gentiles and the Synoges, and gaue no ouer their dominion vnto wicked doers.

¶ After this when the tyme drew on fast, that Machabias shulde dye, he sayde vnto his sonnes: Now is pryde and perfection increased, now is the tyme of destruction and wrath full displeasure: Wherefore (o my sonnes) be ye feruent in the lawe, and iopere youre lynes for the Testament of the fathers: call to remembrance vnto what aces our fathers dyd in their tyme, so shall ye receaue greate honoure and an euerlasting name.

¹²⁴ Remember Abraham, was not he founde

¹⁴¹ like maner Daniel beyng vngodlie, was sa ¹⁴² ued from the mouth of the L. your.

And thus ye maye conside thow to due all ages sene the worde begame, that who so euer put their trust in God, were not ouer come. Feare not ye then the wordes of an vngodly man, for his glory is budonge and womew: to daye is he set vp, and to morow is he gone: for he is turned in to earth, and his memoriall is come to naughte. Wherefore (o my sonnes) take good herce vnto you, and quyte youre selues like men in the lawe for yf ye do the thinges that are commaun ded vnto in the lawe of the L O R D E your e God, ye shal obtaine greate honoure ther in.

And beholde, I knowe that youre brether Symon is a man of wysdome: fe that ye ge ue care vnto him alwaye, he shall be a fa ther vnto you. As for Judas Machabeus, he hath euer bene mightie and strōge from his youth vper: he is your capteyne, and vnto the battayll of y people: Thus shall ye byng vnto you all those that fauoure the lawe, and se that ye auenge the wronge of youre people, and recompence the hel then agayne, and applie youre selues wole to the commaundement of the lawe. So he gaue them his blessinge, and was layed by his father: and dyed in the CLVI, yere at Iudon, where his sonnes buried him in his fathers sepulchre, & all Israel made grea te lamentacion for him.

The lii. Chapter.

¶ Then stode vp Judas Machabees in his fathers steade, and all his brether helped him: and so dyd all they that helde with his father, and fought with de uetyfullnesse for Israel. So Judas gat his peo ple greate honoure: he put on a dyrt place as a gaunte, and arayed him self with his harnesse, and defended the boost with his swearde. In his aces he was like a lyon, as a Lyons whelp roaring at his pryde.
he was an enemy to the wicked, and hūted them our: and burne vpon the, that wered his people: So that his memie fled for feare of him, and all the workers of vngodlynes were put to trouble: soch lucke and prosper ty was in his hande. This greued byuers Eyn ges, but Iacob was greatly reioyced thow his aces, and he gat him self a greate name for cuer.

he wente thow the cities of Juda, des troyng the vngodly out of them, carryng carch. Then Appollonius (a pryncce of Syria) gathered a mightie greate hoost of the heethen z out of Samaria, to fight agaynst Israel. Whiche when Judas perceaued, he wente forth to meete him, foughte with him, slawe him, and a greate multitude with him: the remanente fled, and he toke their substance. Judas also toke Appollonius omne swarte, and foughte wth it all his life longe.

B Now when Seron (another pryncce of Syria) herbe says, that Judas had gathered vnto him the congregacion and church of the faithfull, he sayde: I will get me a name and a prayse thowout the realme: for I will go fighte with Judas and them that are with him, as many as haue despised the Kynges commaundement. So he made him ready, and there wente with him a greate mightie hoost of the victory, to slonde by him, and to be auenged of the childre of Israel. And when they came nye vnto Bethoron, Judas wente forth agaynst them with a small company. And when his people sawe such a greate hoost before the, they sayde vnto Judas: How are we able (beinge so fewe) to fighte agaynst so greate a multitude and so stronge? Iudge we be so weery, and haue fasted all this daye.

Bur Judas sayde: It is a small matter for many to be overcome with fewe: see the re is no difference to the God of heauen, to deliuer by a greate multitude or by a small company: for the victory of the battell stoneth not in the multitude of the hoost, but

C the strenght cometh from heauen. Beholde, they come agaynst vs with a presumptuous and proude multitude: to destroye vs, ouer wyues and oure children, and to robbe vs. But we will fighte for oure lynes and for oure lawes, and the LORDE himself shall destroye the before oure faces: therefore be not ye afrayed of them.

So soone as he had spoken these wordes, he keppe suddenly vpon the. Thus was Se-ron smytten, and his hoost put to flight. Judas followed vpon them beyonde Bethoron vnto the playne felde: where there were layne eight hundred men of them, and the residue fled in to the tonde of the phyllynes. Then all the heathen on every syde were afrayed for Judas and his hartnes: so the tumeure of him came vnto the Kynges cares, for all the Gentiles coude tell of the wartes of Judas.

So when Kyng Antiochus herde these thinges, he was angrie in his mynde: for he seme forth and gathered an hoost of his whole realme, very stronge armie: and opened his treasury, and gaue his hoost yeaeres wages in hande, commaunding them to be ready at all tymes.

Nevertheless when he sawe, that there was net money ynough in his treasury, and that thowout the disorde and persecution, which he made in 3 tonde, to put downe y^e lawes that had bene of olde tyme, his customes and tributes of the tonde were ynysht: he feared that he was not able for to beare the costes and charges any longer, net to haue such grize, to geue so liberally as he dyd afore, moie then the wyngard were before him.

Wherefore he was heary in his mynde, and thoughte to go in to Persiden, for to take tributes of 3 tonde, and so to gather much money. So he lefe Lysias a noble man of the Kynges bloude, to ouersee the Kynges busynesse, from the water Ephrates vnto the borders of Egipte: and to kepe well his owne Antiochus, till he came agayne.

Moreover, he gaue him half of his hoost and elephantes, commaunded vnto him every thinge of his mynde, concerninge that which dwel in Juda, and Jerusalem: that he shulde sende out an army agaynst them, to destroye and to rote out the power of Israel and the remanente of Jerusalem: to put out their memoriall from that place, to set straungers for to inhabit all their quarters, and to parce their tonde amonge them. Thus the Kyng toke the other parte of the hoost, and departed from Antioch (a cite of his realme) ouer the water of Ephrates, iuche hundred and xliij. yeaer, and wente thowout the hie countrees.

And Lysias chose vnto him prynces the forme of Doumimo, Tycanos and Gorgas mightie men, z the Kynges frendes. These he sente with xl. thousande foot men and vii. thousande horsmen, for to go in to 3 tonde of Juda, and to destroye it, as the Kyng commanded. So they wente forth with all their power, and came to Emmaus in to the playne silde. When the machabees herde the rumoure of them, they and their seruantes toke very much siluer and golde, for to breche the children of Israel to be their bondmen. There came vnto them also yet more men of warre on euery syde, out of Syria & the firm of the Palestynes.

¶ Now when Judas and his brethren sawe that trouble increased, and that the hoost beganne vnto their borders: consideringe of such wordes which he commaunded vnto the people namely, that they shulde veterly waite and destroye them: They sayde one to another: Let vs redresse the decaye of oure people, let vs fighte for oure folke and for oure Sanctuary. Then the congregation were sone ready gathered to fighte, to praiue and to make supplication vnto God for mercie and grace.

¶ As for Jerusalem, it laye voyde, and was as it had bene a wyldernes. There wente no man in nor out at it, and the Sanctuary was troden do rone. The alcauntes kepte the castell, there was the habitation of the heben. The nyech of Jacob was taken awaye, the pyne & the harpe was gone from amonge them.

The Israelites gathered them together, and came to Maspha before Jerusalem: for in Maspha was the place where they praye to aser tyre. So they fasted that daye, and put sad clothes vpon them, cast asphes vpon their hodes, rente their clothes, and layde forth the bodies of the lawe: wherout & heiden soughte the lacknesse of their ymagis) and broughte the prestes ornaments, the sollinges and the Tyches. They set there also the abstyners (which had fulfilled their dayes) before God, and cried with a loude voyce towards heauen, sayenge: what shal we do with these? and whither shall we carrye them awaye?

¶ For thy Sanctuary is troden downe and desyle, thy prestes are come to heynnesse and dishonour: and beholde, the heben are come together for to destroye vs. Thou knowest what thinge the ymagin agaisnt vs. how maye we stonde before them, excepte thou o God, be oure helpe?

They blewe oute their cornettes also with a loude voyce. Then Judas ordered captaynes ouer the people: ouer thousandes, ouer hundredes, ouer fiftie, and ouer ten. But as for such as buylded them houses, married wyues, planted them vynyardes, and those that were fearfull: he commaunded them euery man to go home, according to & lawe. So the hoost remoued, and pitched vpon the South syde of Emmaus.

And Judas sayde: Arme your selves, be stronge (o my children) make you ready agaynst tomorrow in the morninge, that ye maye fighte with these people, which are agreed together to destroye vs: oure Sanctuary. Better is it for vs to dye in battayle, then to se oure people and oure Sanctuary in such a miserable case. Therefore best, as v will is in heauen, so be it.

The iiii. Chapter.

¶ Then toke Gorgias fyue thousande men of force, and a thousande of the best hoismen: and remoued by night, to come nye where & James hoost laye, and so to slaye them sodenly. Now the men that kepte the castell, were the cōueyers of them. Then arose Judas to smyte the chefe and principall of the Kinges hoost at Emmaus, for the army was not yet come together. In the meane season came Gorgias by night in to Judas tentes: & when he founde no man there, he soughte them in the moūtaines, and thoughte they had bene fled awaye because of him. But wofull it was to see, Judas shrowed himself in & silde with chie thousande men only, which had nether harnesse nor sweates to their mynbes.

But on the other syde, they sawe that the heiden were mighty and well harnessed, and their hoismen aboue them, and all these well experite in fettes of warre. Then sayde Judas to y men that were with him: Feare not ye the multitude of them, be not affrayed of their valente runninge: remember how oure fathers were deliuered in the red see, when Pharao threatened them with a greate hoost. Euen so let vs also crye now towards heauen: and the LORD shall haue mercy vpon vs, and remember the commaundment of oure fathers, see and destroye this hoost before our face this daye: And all heithen shal knowe, that it is God himself, which deliuereth and saueh Israel.

Then the heithen lift vp their eyes: and when they sawe that they were commynge agaynst them, they wente out of their tentes in to the battaill: and they that were of Judas, blew up the trompettes. So they Mac. d buckled together, and the heithen were discomfited, and fled ouer the playne silde: but the hymn of them were slayne. For they folowed vpon them vnto Baramoch, and in to the silde of Idumea towarde Azot and Jammia: so that there were slayne of them vpon a this thousand men. So Judas turned agayne with his hoost, and sayde vnto the people: Be not grey of y spoyle, we haue ye a battaill to fight: for Gorgias z his hoost are here by vs in the mountaynes, but stande ye fast agaynst our enemies, and ouer come them: then maye ye safelyeate the spoyle.

C As Judas was speakynge these wordes, there appeared one parte of them vpon the mount. But when Gorgias sawe that they of his partie were fled, and the tentes burnt vp: (for by the smoke they might vnderstande what was done) they perceauinge this, were very sore afraied: and when they sawe also that Judas and his hoost were in y silde ready to stryke battaill, they fled euerychome in to the londe of the heithen.

So Judas turned agayne to spoyle the tentes, where they gat moch golde and syluer, precious stones, purple z greate riches. Thus they wente home, and sunge a psalme of thankesguyng and prayed God in heauen: for he is gracious, and his mercy endureth for euer: And so Israel had a greate victory in that daye.

Now all the heithen that escaped, came and tolde Lysias euery thinge as it hapened. Wherefore Lysias was sore afraied and grieved in his mynde, because Israel had not gored such mysfortune as he wolde they shoulde, nether as the kynge commaunded. The nexte yeare folowinge, gathered Lysias aboute the score thousande chosen men of force, and fyue thousande horsmen, to fight agaynst them.

D So they came in to Jewry, and pitched their tentes at Bethon, where Judas came agaynst them with tenthousand men. And when he sawe so greate mightie an hoost, he made his prayer and sayde: Blessed be thou (O sauoure of Israel) which diddest destroye the violent power of the giant te, in the bonde of thy seruant: Dadd, and gaucst the hoost of the heithen in to the hande of Ionathas (the sonne of Sani) and of his recapen bearer.

But this hoost now in to the bonde of y people of Israel, and let them be confuted in their multitude and horsmen. Make them a fray, z discomfite the boldnes of their strength, y they maye be moued thorow their destruccion. Cast them downe the row the swerde of thy loners, then shal all they that knowe thy name, praye the with thankesguyng.

So they stroke the battell, and there was slayne of Lysias hoost, fyue thousand men. Then Lysias seynge the discomfyng of his men, and the mannyesse of the Jews, howe they were ready, ether to lye out by life men: he wente vnto Amioch and dysposed out men of warre: that when they had gathered together, they might come agayne in to Jewry. Then sayde Judas and his brethren beholde, our enemies are discomfited: let vs now go vp, to cliffe and to repyre the Sanctuary.

Upon this, all the hoost gathered them together, and wente vp vnto mount Bethon: when they sawe the Sanctuary loked wastefull, the altar defyled, the doores downe, the shrubbes growinge in the court, like as in a wod or vpon mountaynes, yet sawe that the prestes Calles were broken downe. They rente their clothes, made greate lamentacion, cast asshes vpon their heades, fell downe flat to the grounde, and acried noyse with the trompettes, and acried vnto heauen.

Then Judas apoynted certayne men to fight agaynst those which were in the court, all they had clensed the Sanctuary. So he chose prestes y were undefyled, such as had pleasure in the lawe of God: and they clensed the Sanctuary, z bare out the defyllmentes in to an vnclene place. And so it was as the altar of burnt offerings was with toward, he took advantage, what he might do with all, so he thought it was best to destroy it, lest it should happen to do them any harme for the heathen had beset it, & therefore they broke it downe. As for the stones, they layed them vp upon the mountaine by the house in a convenient place: till there came a prophete to shewe, what should be done with them.

So they took whole stones according to the lawe, and buylded a new altar such one as was before, and made vp the Sanctuary within and without, and halowed the court as. They made new ornaments, & brought of candlestickes, the altar of incense, and the table in to the temple. The incense layed they upon the altar, & lighted the lampes which were upon the candlestickes, that they might burne in the temple. They set the shewbread upon the table, and hanged vp the vails, and set vp the temple, as it was afore. And upon the xx. daye of the ix. month (which is called the month of Caslee) in the C. lviij. yea-re: they rose vp by tymes in the mornynge so to do sacrifice (accordinge to the lawe) vpon the new burnt offeringe altar, that they had made: after the tyme and season that the heathen had beset it. The same daye was it set vp agayne, with songes pipes, harpes andymballes.

And all the people fell upon their faces, worshippinge and thankyng the God of heauen, which had given them the victory.
 So they kept the dedication of the altar viij. dayes, offeringe burnt sacrifices and thank offerings with gladnesse. They decorate the temple also with crownes, and shyldes of golde, and halowed the portes and alkes, and hanged bores upon them. Thus was there very grate gladnes amonge the people, because the blasphemy of the heathen was put awaye.

So Judas and his brethren with the whole congregation of Israel, ordered, that the tyme of the dedication of the altar shoul-be kept in his season from yeare to yeare, by the space of viij. dayes, from the xx. daye of the month Caslee: yee and that with and gladnesse.

And at the same tyme buylded they vp mount Sion with hye walles and stronge towers rounde aboute: lest the heathen shoul-be come and treade it downe, as they dyd afore. Therfore Judas set men of warre in it, to keep it: and made it stronge, for to defende the house: that the people might haue a refuge agaynst the EDOMITES.

The V. Chapter.

It happened also that when the heathen rounde aboute herbe, how that the altar and the Sanctuary were set vp in their olde estate: displeasid them very sore, wherfore they thought to destroye the generation of Jacob that was amonge them: In so much that they beganne to slaye and to persecute certayne of y^e people.
 Then Judas soughte agaynst the children of Esau in Idumea, and agaynst those which were at Arabathane (for they dwelt rounde aboute of Israclites) where he slew a spoyle a greates multitude of the. He thought also vpon the malice and unfaithfullnes of the children of Ben, how they were a sinner and slope vnto the people, and how they layed waite for them in the hie waye: wherfore he shat them vp in to towers, and came vnto them, condemned them, and bent vp their towres, with all that were therein.

Afterwarde wente he agaynst the children of Ammon, wherof he somde a myghty power and a greates multitude of people, with Tymothy their captayne. So he stroke many battayls with them, which were destroyed before him. And when he had slay-ne them, he wanne Gazer the cite, with the towres belonginge thereto, and so turned a-gayne in to Jewry. The heathen also in Galaad gathered them together, agaynst the Israclites that were in their quarters, to slaye them: but they fled to the castel of Da-thiman, and sent letters vnto Judas and his brethren, sayenge: The heathen are gathered agaynst vs on euery syde, to destroye vs, and now they make the for to come and laye siege to y^e castel, wherunto we are fled, & Tymothy is the captayne of their host: come therfore, and deliuer vs out of their hon-der: for there is a greates multitude of vs slayne all ready. Yee and oure brethren that were at Tabin, are slayne and destroyed: welnye a thousande men) and their wyues, their children and their goodes haue the enemies led awaye captiue.

Whyle these letters were yet a readinge, beholde, there came othere messengers from Galilee, with rente clothes: which tolde them the same tydings, and sayde, that they of Prolomais, of Tirus and of Sidon were gathered agaynst them, and that all Galilee was filled with enemies to destroye Israel. When Judas and his people herd this, they came together (a greates congregation) to deuise, what they might do for their brechien, that were in trouble and besieged of their enemies. And Judas sayde vnto Symon his brother: chuse þe our certayne men, and go deliuer thy brethren in Galilee: As for me and my brother Jomachas, we wyl go in to Galaadithim. So he lefe Josephus þe some of Zachary, and Marias, to be captaynes of the people and to kepe the remnant of the hoost in Jeruy, & commaunded them, sayenge: Take the ouersight of this people, and sechate ye make no warre agaynst the Heithen, vntill the tyme that we come agayne. And vnto Simon he gaue the thousande men for to go in to Galilee, but Judas himself had eight thousande in to Galaadithim.

C Then wente Symon in to Galilee, and stroke bynne baretis wth the Heithen: whom he discomfited, and solomned vpon thym vnto the porte of Ptolomais. And there were slayne of the Heithen almost iij. thousande men. So he toke the spoyles of them, and caried awaye the Iudaicas (that were in Galilee and Arabias) with their wyues, their children and all that they had, and broughe thym in to Jeruy with greete gladnesse. Judas Machabees also and his brother Jomachas, wente ouer Iordane, and trauayled iij. dayes iourney in the wyldernes: Where the Nabathees met thym, and receaued thym loyngly, and tolde the every thinge that had happened vnto their brethren in Galaadithim, and howe that many of them were besieged in Darasa, Dofor, Alimie, Casphor, Magerch and Carnaim (all these are stronge walled and mightie greete cities) and þe they were kepte in ocher cities of Saload also: and tomorow they are apoynted to brynge their hoost vnto these cities, to take thym and to wynde thym in one daye.

So Judas and his hoost turned in all the hast in the wyldernes toward Dofor, and wanne the cite, slawe all the males with the swerde, toke all their goodes, and set fyre vpon the cite. And in the night they toke their iourneys from thence, and came to the castell. And by tymes in the moynge when they looked vp, beholde, there was an innumerable people bearynge labers and ocher instrumetes of warre, to take the castell and to ouercome thym.

When Judas sawe that the battayll beganne, and that the noyse therof wente vp and range in to the heauen, and that there was so greete a drie in the cite: he sayde vnto his hoost: fighte this daye for youre brethren. And so came behynde their enemies in this compaign, and blewe vpon thym with speeres, and cried in their praye to God.

But as soone as Tymotheus hoost perceaued that Machabees was there, they fled from him, and þe ocher flewe thens vnto the righte foie: so that there were killed of them that same daye, almost eight thousande men. Then departed Judas vnto Mafpha, layde siege vnto it and wanne it, slawe all the males in it, spoyle it, and set fyre vpon it. From thence wente he and his Captayn, Magerch, Dofor and the ocher ciuitis in Saload.

After this gathered Tymotheus another hoost, which pitched their tentes bynne Ephron beyonde the water. Judas sent to spy the hoost, and they broughe him wordes againe, sayenge: All the Heithen that be rounde aboute vs, are gathered vnto him, and the hoost is very greete: see they haue bynne the Arabians to helpe them, & haue pitched their tentes beyonde the water, and are readye to come and fighte agaynst the. So Judas wente on to meete them.

And Tymotheus sayde vnto the captaynes of his hoost: when Judas and his hoost came nye the ryuer: yf he ouer first, we shall not be able to withstande him: for wyll, he will be to stronge for vs. But yf he barre not come ouer, so that he pitch his tentes beyonde the water: then will we go ouer, for vs shall be stronge ynough agaynst him. Now as soone as Judas came to the ryuer, he apoynted certayne scribes of the people, and commaunded thym, sayenge: se that yeloue name behynde vpon this syde of ryuer, but let every man come to the battayll. So he wente first ouer vnto them, and his people after him.

And all the Heithen were discomfited by fore him, and let their wepens fall, and ranne in to the temple that was at Carnaim. Which cite Judas wanne, and burnt the temple with all þe were in it: So was Carnaim subdard, and mighte not withstode Judas. Then Judas gathered all the Iudaicas that were in Galaadithim, from þe least vnto the most, with their wyues and their children (a very greete hoost) for to come in to the sonde of Juda.

So they came vnto Ephron, which was a mightie, greete and stronge cite, and laye in their waye. For they coude not go by the righte of the righte honde ner of the left, but must go thowrow it. Therefore lest they that were in the cite, wolde not let thym go thowrow, but walled vp the portes with stones.

And Judas sent vnto the with peaceable words, sayenge: Let vs passe thowre your londe, that we maye go in to oure owne countreye: there shal no body do you harme, we wil be only go thowre. But they wolde not let them in.

Wherfore Judas commanded a proclamation to be made thowre out the hooff, that euery man shulde kepe his ordre: and so they dyd their best like valaunte men.

And Judas beseged the cite all that daie and all that nyght, and so wanne it: where they slawe as many as were males, and they royd the cite, and spoyled it, and wete thowre all the cite ouer them that were slayne. Then wente they ouer Iordan in to the plaine silde beside Bethsan. And Judas helpeth those forwarde that came behynde, and gaue the people good exortacion all yf were thowre, till they were come in to the londe of Iuda. Thus they wente vp vnto the mounte Sion, where they offred with much and thankesguyng: because there were none of them slayne, but came home agayne peaceably.

Now whate tyme as Judas and Jonathan were in the londe of Galaad, and Symon their brother in Galilee beside Ptolemais: Then Josiphus the sonne of Zacharias and Alarias the captaynes, bearinge of the actes that were done and of the battels that were frotten, sayde: Let vs go get vs a name also, and go fighte agaynst the heithen that are rounde aboute vs.

So they gaue their hooff a commande-ment, and wente towarde Jamnia. Then came Georgias and his men out of the cite, to fighte agaynst them: Josiphus also and Alarias were chafed vnto y borders of Jewry, there were slayne y daie of y people of Israel ij. iii. men: so there was a greates misfortune of people, and all because they were not obedient vnto Judas and his brethren, but thought they shulde quyre them siluys man fully. Therefore they came not of these feode of these men, by whom Israel was helped. But the men that were with Judas, were greatly commended in the sight of all Israel and all heithen, where so euer their name was herde vps, and the people came vnto them byddinge them welcome.

After this wente Judas forth with his brethren, and foughe agaynst the children of Esau, in the londe y litch towarde the south where he wanne the cite of Sebidon and the townes that lye beside it: and as for the walle and towres rounde aboute it, he bent them vp. Then removed he to go in to the londe of the Philistines, and wente thowre Samaria. At the same tyme were there many prestes slayne in y batesa yll, which wilfully without aduysment wente out for to fighte to get them honoure. And when Judas came to Asot in the Philistynes londe, he brake downe their altares, bent the ymages of their Idols, spoyled the cite, and came agayne in to the londe of Iuda.

Deut. 7.

The VI. Chapter.

When kynge Antiochus transylted thowre the hye countrees, he herde that Elymas in Persia was a noble and plenteous cite in siluer and golde, that there was in it a very rich temple: where as were clothes, cote armoures and stylbes of golde, which Alexander the sonne of Philippe kynge of Macedonia had left behynde him. Wherfore he wente aboute to take the cite and to spoyle it, but he was not able: for y citis were warned of it, and foughte with him. And so he fled, and departed with greates heynesse, and came agayne in to Babilon. Moreover there came one which broughte him tidings in Persie, yf his hooffes which were in the londe of Iuda, were dynen awaye, and howe that Lysias wente forth first with a greates power, and was dynen awaye of the Jewes: howe they had wonne the victory, and gotten greates goodes out of the hooffes that perished: howe they had broken downe the abhominacion, which he set vp vpon the altare at Jerusalem, and senced the Sanctuery with hie walle, like as it was a fore: yre and Bethsura his cite also.

1. Mac. 2. and 4.

1. Mac. 1.

So it chaunced, that when the kynge had herde these wordes, he was a fraied and greued very sore. Wherfore he layed him downe vpon his bed, and fell sicke for very sorrowe and all because it had not happened as he had deuysed. And there continued he longe, for his greife was ever more and more, so þe sawe he must needs dye. Therefore he sent for his frendes, & sayde unto them: þe slepe is gone from mine eyes, for þe very sorowe & vexaciõ of herre þe þave. for when I confide in my mynde þe greate adversitee þe I am come unto and the ploudes of hevynesse which I am in, where as afore tyme I was so merry, and so greatly set by (by reason of my power) Againe, consideringe þe enill þe I have done at Jeru sale, from whence I roote all þe riches of golde and siluer þe were in it, I sent to fetch awaye the inhabitours of Jewry without eny reason why I knowe, þe these troubles are come upon me for the same cause. And beholde, I must dye with greafe sorow in a straunge londe.

Then called he for one Philippe a frende of his, whom he made ruler of all his realme and gave him the crowne, his robe and his rynge: that he shulde call his sonne Antiochus unto him and bringe him up, till he might raigne himself. So the kynge Antiochus dyed there, in the C. xliij. yeare. When Lysias newe that the kynge was dead, he ordered Antiochus his sonne (whom he had brought up) to raigne in his fathers steade) and called him Espator. Now they that were in the castell (at Jerusalem) kepte in the Jewes rounde aboute the Sanctuary, and sought ever still to do them harme, for the strengthenynge of the heichen.

Wherefore Judas thought to destroye them, and called all the people together, þe they might laye sege unto them. So they came together in the C. iij. yeare, and beseged the layenge forth their ordinaunce and instrumentes of warre. Then certayne of them þe were beseged wente forth unto whom some of godly men of Israel ioyued the selues also, and wente unto the kynge, sayenge: how longe will it be, or thou punish and avenge our brethren? We have bene ever mynbed to do the father service, to walke in his statutes, and to obeye his commaundementes: Therefore our people fill from vs, and where þe ever they founde eny of us, they slawe them: and they have not only medled with vs, but with all our countrees: and beholde, this daye are they beseginge the castell at Jerusalem, and have made up the stronge holde in Bethsura: And yf thou dost not puerue them right soone, they will do more then these, and thou shalt not be able to overcome them.

When the kynge herde this, he was very angry, and called all his frendes, the captaines of his fore men and of all his þing men together. The hyed men of warre of our of other realmes and out of the Ier of the sea, which came unto him. And the nombre of his hoost was an hundred thousand, & xxxij. Elephanes wold exa cast to battell. These came thither Iudaea into Bethsura, and beseged it a longe season, and made by force instrumentes of warre against it. But the Jewes came out and burnt them, and sough the life men. Then departed Iudas from the castell at Jerusalem, and returned þe hoost towarde Bethsura our agaynst the kynges armye.

So the kynge arose before the day, and brought the power of his hoost in to Iudaea to Bethsura, where the hoostes mette them to the battayll, blowing the trumpetes. And to prouoke the Elephanes for the fight, they shewed them the sappe of red grapes and molberies. And beynd the Elephanes amonge the hoost, so that by contrary Elephante there stode a III. men without rest, and helmettes of stele upon their heades: Rec unto every one of the Elephanes also, were ordered v. C. bowmen of the best, which waited of the Elephante, goinge the re so ever he wente, and departed not from him. Every Elephant was covered with a large cover of red, where upon were xxxij. Seleucian men with wepens to fight, & which was a man of Jude to take the best.
